

1379/13

A COMPLETE ENGLISH PEERAGE.

CONTAINING

A Genealogical, Biographical, and Historical Account

OF THE

PEERS OF THIS REALM.

TOGETHER WITH

The DIFFERENT BRANCHES of each FAMILY,

INCLUDING

A particular RELATION of the most remarkable TRANSACTIONS of those, who have eminently distinguished themselves in the Service of their COUNTRY, both in the FIELD and in the CABINET, from the Conquest down to the present Time.

To which is prefixed,

A SUCCINCT HISTORY
OF THE HOUSES OF
BRUNSWIC, BRANDENBURGH, SAXE-GOTHA, and MECKLENBURGH.

Hi proprium decus, & partum indignantur honorem;
Ni teneant———

VIRGIL.

By the REVEREND

ALEXANDER JACOB,

CHAPLAIN IN ORDINARY TO HIS MAJESTY,

And CHAPLAIN to his Grace the Duke of CHANDOS.

VOL. II.

LONDON,

Printed for the AUTHOR;

And Sold by J. WILSON and J. FELL, in Pater-noster-row; and J. ROBSON, in New Bond-street.

MDCCLXVII.

A COMPLETE
ENGLISH PEEBAGE

CONTAINING
A Genealogical, Biographical, and Historical Account

OF THE
PEERS OF THIS REALM.

TOGETHER WITH
THE DIFFERENT BRANCHES OF EACH FAMILY.

AND INCLUDING A PARTICULAR HISTORY OF THE HOUSES OF THOSE WHO HAVE SIGNED THE GREAT CHARTER, AND THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN IN THE SERVICE OF THE COUNTRY FROM THE FIRST OF THE CONQUEST DOWN TO THE PRESENT TIMES.

By AUGUSTINE HISTORY
OF THE HOUSES OF
BRUNSWICK, BRANDENBURG, and COLOGNE, and MECKLENBURG.

By
J. G. BURTON, Esq.
of the Inner Temple, Esq.

By ALEXANDER LEITCH, Esq.
of the Inner Temple, Esq.

VOL. II.

LONDON:
Printed by G. G. and J. H. N. H. N.

1807.

A COMPLETE
ENGLISH PEERAGE.

CONTAINING
A GENEALOGICAL, BIOGRAPHICAL, and HISTORICAL ACCOUNT of the PEERS of this REALM.

LUMLEY SAUNDERSON, Earl of SCARBOROUGH.

HIS noble family derive their name from Lumley, situated on the bank of the river Were, near Chester on the Street, in the bishopric of Durham; and their descent both on the male and female side from no less ancient than illustrious ancestors.

Liulph, lord of Lumley-castle (son of Osbert de Lumley,) married Algitha, daughter of Aldred, earl of Northumberland, by Edgina, younger daughter of king Etheldred II. which Liulph lived in the time of Edward the Confessor; and was at length murdered by means of Leofwin, chaplain to Walcher, bishop of Durham. From this match issued four sons, of which the eldest,

UCHTRED, assumed the surname of Lumley, and had a son,

SIR WILLIAM DE LUMLEY, a baron in Durham, who marrying Judith, daughter of — Hefildene, of Hefildene, in the same county, was father of another

SIR WILLIAM DE LUMLEY, whose son,

WILLIAM DE LUMLEY, married a daughter and coheir of Sir Walter de Audre, of Morton Audrey, in the county of Durham, knight; and had a son,

ROGER DE LUMLEY, who married Sibil, a daughter and coheir of Hugh de Morewic, a baron in Northumberland; and had issue two sons, Robert and Roger, both knights; from the latter of which the Lumleys of Harleston and Clipstow, in the county of Northampton, derive their descent. Their mother, after the decease of Roger de Lumley, her husband aforesaid, married, secondly,

Laurence de St. Maur; but surviving him, died in 1298, when the eldest son,

SIR ROBERT DE LUMLEY, succeeded to the manors of West-Chivington, Morewike, Bamburgh-castle, &c. in Northumberland; and marrying Isabel, eldest daughter of Sir Marmaduke de Thweng, a great baron, and lord of Kilton-castle, in Yorkshire, and sister and coheir to her brothers, William, Thomas, and Robert, had issue three sons, of which the eldest,

SIR MARMADUKE DE LUMLEY was prior of St. John of Jerusalem, (commonly called Kilmainham) in Ireland, and succeeding to the inheritance of his mother, took her arms, which were the same which the family bear to this day. He married Margaret Holland, and had issue five sons, of which the eldest,

SIR ROBERT DE LUMLEY, his successor, died unmarried on the twelfth of December, A. D. 1374, and the manors of West-Chivington, Roveley, &c. devolved upon his next brother, SIR RALPH DE LUMLEY, then twenty-one years of age, who, in the ninth of Richard II. being a knight, was in that expedition then made into Scotland, in the retinue of Henry de Percie, earl of Northumberland; and in the tenth of Edward II. was made governor of Berwick upon Twede, in which he continued in the eleventh of Richard II. but in the following year was taken prisoner by the Scots. Three years after which he was deputy governor of Berwick under Henry de Percie, then earl of Northumberland.

In the sixteenth of Richard II. he obtained licence to make a castle of his manor-house at Lumley;

Lumley; and having been summoned to parliament from A. D. 1385 to A. D. 1400 he then joined Thomas de Holland, earl of Kent, and other his confederates in that insurrection made by them for the restoring of king Richard, then deposed; by which means he suffered an attainder, and his lands were seized, himself being slain in a skirmish at Cirencester. He married Eleanor, daughter of John, lord Nevil, of Raby, by his wife Jane, daughter of John Gaunt, grandson to king Edward III. and by her had issue five daughters.

1. Elizabeth, married to Adam Tirwhit, of Kettleby, in Lincolnshire.
2. Margaret, married Sir John Clervaux, knight, of Crofts, in Yorkshire.
3. Catherine, married Sir John Chideocke, knight.
4. Matilda, married to Sir Henry Thirkill, knight.
5. Eleanor, who died unmarried.

Also four sons,

1. Thomas de Lumley, } successively possessed of
2. John de Lumley, } the family lands, &c.
3. William de Lumley.
4. Marmaduke de Lumley, was a man of great eminence in the church. In 1429, he was master of Trinity-hall, in Cambridge, and chancellor of that university; and the year following, he was elected bishop of Carlisle. In 1447, he was treasurer of England; and in 1450, the year before he died, he was translated to the see of Lincoln.

The eldest of these brothers,

THOMAS DE LUMLEY, who was attainted with his father, died under age, and unmarried, on the last day of May, A. D. 1404, being then seized of the castle and manor of Kilton, with the manors Lythum, Cotum, Thwenge upon the Wolds, Octone-Juxta-Swathorpe, Octone-Holme, in Houldernefs, and Haddeston, in Northumberland, as also of the castle of Lumley Parva, and manors of Stanley, Strauton, Riclesden, and Beautrone, in the bishopric of Durham, leaving his brother,

Sir JOHN LUMLEY, knight, his heir, who in 1407, doing his homage, had livery of all the castles, manors, and lands, whereof the said Sir Ralph, his father, was seized, at the time of his attainder; and in the thirteenth of Henry IV. being fully restored in blood, (tainted by the conviction of the said Ralph, his father, and Thomas his brother) was slain in the battle of Baugy, in France, A. D. 1421.

He married Felicia, daughter of Sir Matthew Redman, governor of Berwick, and by her had issue an only son,

Sir THOMAS DE LUMLEY, who in the tenth of Henry VI. had livery of his lands; and in the thirty-third of that reign, being then a knight, was made governor of Scarborough castle for life. In the fifth of Edward IV. he was one of the commissioners, appointed to treat with James, king of Scotland, touching the marriage of that king, with some person of the king of England's allegiance; as also concerning certain wrongs which had been done by the subjects of both nations to each other, contrary to the articles of truce. About that time also, he was at the siege of Bamburgh castle, in Northumberland, then defended (with some other garrisons in the North) by the Lancastrians. Upon petition, the attainder of his grandfather and uncle was reversed, and he had summons to parliament, from the first of Edward IV. to the twelfth of Henry VIII. inclusive. According to Dugdale, this indulgence was shewn him, in regard that he had married a natural daughter of king Edward IV. but other authorities say, that his wife was Margaret, daughter of Sir James Harrington, knight, brother to William, lord Harrington.

His issue were three daughters, as in the table, and dying A. D. 1485, was succeeded by an only son, Sir GEORGE DE LUMLEY, who married Elizabeth, one of the daughters and heirs of Roger Thornton, esquire, a very wealthy merchant, of Newcastle upon Tyne, by whom he had the lordships of Witton, in the county of Northumberland, Lulworth, and the isle in the bishopric; which Roger founded the house of White-Friers, in Newcastle. But after this marriage, possessing those lands in right of his wife, there happened a sharp contest between Giles Thornton, a natural son of the aforefaid Roger and him, concerning the inheritance of them; in which quarrel this George killed the said Giles in the ditch of Windfor castle. He was sheriff of Northumberland, in the years 1462, 1463; and from 1468, to 1472 inclusive; and was made knight banneret, in Hooton Field, on the twenty-second of August, A. D. 1480. He died A. D. 1508, having had issue three sons.

1. Sir Thomas de Lumley.

2. Roger Lumley, who married a daughter of Sir Richard Ratcliffe, and had a son of his own name.

3. Ralph Lumley.

Sir THOMAS LUMLEY, the eldest son, died A. D. 1487, in the life-time of his father. Dugdale is silent as to this knight's wife; but other authorities give unto him, Elizabeth Plantagenet, natural daughter of Edward IV. by lady Elizabeth Lucy. His issue were, three daughters, as in the table, and four sons, Richard, John, George, and Roger, the youngest of which was married, and had three daughters; and the eldest,

RICHARD DE LUMLEY, succeeding his grandfather, had summons to parliament in 1509, and married Anne, daughter to Sir John Conyers, of Hornby castle, in Yorkshire, knight of the Garter, sister of William, first lord Conyers, and by her had issue two sons,

John de Lumley, } of whom and their de-

Anthony de Lumley, } scendants distinctly.

JOHN DE LUMLEY, the eldest son, succeeded his father at his decease, on the twenty-sixth of May, A. D. 1511, and had summons to parliament in 1515. He married Joane, daughter to Henry, lord Scroope, of Bolton, by whom he had issue a son,

GEORGE DE LUMLEY, who being concerned in an insurrection with lord D'Arcy, and others, was committed to the Tower of London; and in 1538, being arraigned at Westminster, was found guilty of high-treason, and suffered an attainder, and death, in the life-time of his father. He married Jane, second daughter and coheir of Sir Richard Knightley, of Faulley, in Northamptonshire, by Jane, his wife, daughter of Sir John Spencer,

Spencer, knight, and had issue two daughters and a son,

Sir JOHN LUMLEY, successor to his grandfather, who was restored in blood, by an act of parliament, in the first of Edward VI. and a new barony of Lumley, created and limited by express words to the said John, in tail male, the ancient barony being merged in the crown, in consequence of the attainder of George his father. He was made knight of the Bath on the twenty-ninth of September, A. D. 1553, two days before the coronation of queen Mary. In the twenty-ninth of Elizabeth, he was commissioned with other lords, for the trial of Mary, queen of Scots, and, in the year ensuing, joined with those other commissioners, in giving sentence upon secretary Davyson, by reason he had sent the queen's warrant for putting the queen of Scots to death without her knowledge. In the forty-fourth of the same reign, he was one of the peers that sat upon the trial of Robert Devereux, earl of Essex. He died on the eleventh of April, A. D. 1609, having been twice married; first, to Jane, daughter and coheir of Henry Fitz-Allan, earl of Arundel, by whom he had issue Charles, Thomas, and Mary, who all died infants. By his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of John, lord D'Arcy, of Chicke, he had no issue; so that this new created barony of Lumley expired with him. We now proceed with ANTHONY LUMLEY, (second son to Richard de Lumley, and younger brother to John de Lumley, of whom) we promised to treat, and who was ancestor to the present earl of Scarborough.

He married a daughter of Richard Gray of Northumberland, esquire, and by her had an only son,

ROGER LUMLEY, who, by Ann Kurstwick, had a numerous issue, of which the eldest son,

Sir RICHARD LUMLEY, succeeded his father, and being chief heir male of the family, after the decease of the said John, lord Lumley, inherited Lumley castle, and a great part of the estate of his ancestors, by deed of settlement, and the last will and testament of the said lord Lumley.

On the nineteenth of July, A. D. 1616, he received the honour of knighthood. He was much in favour with Charles I. by whom he was created an Irish peer, on the twelfth of July, A. D. 1628, by the title of viscount Lumley, of Waterford, in the kingdom of Ireland. He espoused the royal cause, during the troubles of that reign, and made Lumley castle a garrison. Afterwards when tyranny had usurped the name of protection, he was very assiduous in forming plans for the Restoration, and was one of those loyal peers who subscribed that memorable declaration, just before the meeting of the parliament, which produced that happy event.

He married Frances, daughter of Henry Shelly, of Warminghurst, in the county of Sussex, a younger branch of the baronet's family of that name, seated at Michaelgrove, by whom he had issue a daughter, Julia, married, first, to ——— Germain, esquire; and secondly, to John Shuckburgh, of Barton, in the county of Warwick. Also a son,

John Lumley, who died before his father, and was buried at St. Martin's, in London; he married Mary, daughter, and at length coheir to Sir Henry Compton, (youngest son of Henry, lord Compton) by Cecily his wife, daughter of Robert Sackville, earl of Dorset. Their issue were three daughters; Elizabeth, the eldest, married Richard Cotton, of Watergate, in Sussex, knight; Frances and Anne both died unmarried. Also two sons.

1. Richard Lumley, successor to his grandfather.

2. Henry Lumley, who in the reign of king William, served in several campaigns abroad, and once was the only means of saving his majesty from being taken prisoner. He served also in the reign of queen Anne, under the great duke of Marlborough. He obtained the rank of lieutenant-general, on the twenty-fourth of February, A. D. 1702-3. He was afterwards appointed general of horse and colonel of the king's regiment of horse; and on the nineteenth of April, A. D. 1703, was constituted governor of Jersey. He departed this life full of honour, as a nobleman and as a soldier, on the eighteenth of October, A. D. 1722, and was interred in a vault belonging to the church of Sabridgeworth, in Hertfordshire. He married, first, Elizabeth, daughter of ——— Thimbleby, of Lincolnshire, but by her had no issue. By his second lady, Anne, daughter of Sir William Wiseman, of Canfield-hall, in Essex, baronet, who surviving him, died on the fourth of March, A. D. 1736; he had an only daughter, Frances, who was born in 1713, and died on the thirteenth of October, A. D. 1719. His elder brother,

(First Earl.) RICHARD LUMLEY, succeeded his grandfather, as viscount Lumley, in the kingdom of Ireland; and having all the advantages of education, both at home and abroad, rendered himself so acceptable from his first setting out in the world, that he was particularly taken notice of by king Charles II. and distinguished among the most polite men of the age. The first opportunity that offered of serving his country, was in the year 1680, when an expedition was intended against the Moors, and to raise the siege of Tangier, which long voyage and dangerous enterprize his lordship readily undertook, and on the twelfth of June, the same year, was actually embarked at Portsmouth, to go on that service under the earl of Mulgrave, (afterwards duke of Buckinghamshire) who was appointed commander in chief. But other measures being concerted, and the expedition laid aside, his lordship returned to court, and soon after, on the eleventh of September, A. D. 1680, was appointed master of the horse to queen Catherine, consort to king Charles II. Soon after which, in consideration of his great merit, approved fidelity, and his descent from noble ancestors, ancient barons of this kingdom, he was advanced to the dignity of a baron of this kingdom, by the stile and title of baron Lumley, of Lumley castle, in the county palatine of Durham; and the patent, which bore date, May 31, A. D. 1681, extended not only to the heirs male of his body, but, in default of such heirs, to his brother Henry Lumley, and the heirs male of his body. But no parliament sitting during the remainder of Charles II. his lordship was not introduced till the nineteenth of May, A. D. 1685, in the first year of the reign of James II. having received his summons on the fourteenth of February preceding.

On the insurrection raised by the duke of Monmouth in the West, he had the command of a regiment of horse, and being sent into those parts, had a principal share in gaining the victory at Sedgemore; and the duke of Monmouth, with the German count who accompanied him, and the lord Grey, were by his vigilancy discovered, and surrendered themselves prisoners to his lordship. Nevertheless, when he observed king James's design was to introduce popery, and that our religion and laws were in danger of being subverted, by the arbitrary measures then took, he forsook the court, appeared on the behalf of the seven bishops at their trial, and was among those of the chief nobility, who had the courage to consult with Mons. Dykvelt, (whom the prince of Orange intrusted to manage his affairs in England) and to concert with him such advices and advertisements, as might be fit for the prince to know, whereby he might govern himself; and often met at the earl of Shrewsbury's, where they consulted how to proceed, and drew the declaration, on which they advised his highness to engage. It also appears, that he was principally intrusted by the earl of Orford, who went over to Holland, and had the prince's direction for the management of the grand affair of the Revolution.

When matters were concluded on, his lordship, with the duke of Devonshire, and the earl of Danby, undertook for the North; and retiring into their several counties, the lord Lumley, by his interest and friends, secured the important town of Newcastle, which declared for the prince soon after his landing. He was afterwards no less instrumental, by his interest and arguments in the house of peers, in gaining the vote that the throne was vacant, as also that the prince and princess of Orange should be declared king and queen of England. For which services, on the day after their majesties were proclaimed, (14 February, A. D. 1688,) he was sworn of the privy-council, and declared one of the gentlemen of the king's bedchamber. Also before their coronation, 10 April, A. D. 1689, was advanced to the dignity of viscount Lumley of Lumley castle; and finally, on the 15th of April, A. D. 1690, to the title of earl of Scarborough; and was likewise constituted captain and colonel of the first troop of horse-guards. In the year 1690, he attended king William into Ireland, was at the battle of the Boyne; and afterwards waited on his majesty at the great congress of princes at the Hague, and came back with him to England.

In the year 1691, he returned again to Holland, and waited on the king in his several campaigns in Flanders, till the conclusion of the peace of Ryswick, and was declared lieutenant-general of his forces. His majesty had a peculiar esteem for his lordship, and in February, A. D. 1692, when he went to Portsmouth to view the fleet, lay at the earl's seat in Sussex, and hunted with him there several days. Being in waiting on the king at his decease, he, and the lord Lexington, had the care of the king's body. His lordship, in that reign, was likewise lord-lieutenant of the county palatine of Durham, county of Northumberland, and custos rotulorum of the same, as also lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne, and vice-admiral of the sea-coasts of Durham and Northumberland. In which posts he was continued by her late majesty queen Anne; who, on June 24, A. D. 1702, appointed his lordship lord-lieutenant of the counties of Durham and Northumberland; he was constituted one of the commissioners to treat of an union between the two kingdoms of England and Scotland; and, pursuant to that act, was sworn of the privy-council at Kensington, 18 Aug. 1708.

On the accession of king George I. his lordship was found to be among those peers, intrusted by his majesty with the government of these kingdoms, till his arrival. On March 9, A. D. 1715-16, his lordship was appointed chancellor of the dutchy and county palatine of Lancaster, which he resigned in May, A. D. 1717; and thereupon had the office of vice-treasurer, receiver-general, and paymaster-general of all his majesty's revenues in the kingdom of Ireland, with the power to act by sufficient deputies. And his lordship, having no intention to go over, procured an act of parliament, which passed the royal assent, on the sixth of July, A. D. 1717, to enable him to take, in Great-Britain, the usual oath to qualify himself for the said office. He departed this life on the 17th of December, A. D. 1721, and was buried with his ancestors in the church of Chester in the Street, in the bishopric of Durham; and having married Frances, only daughter and heir of Sir Henry Jones of Aston, in com' Oxon. and of his wife Frances, sister to Thomas, earl of Falconberg, had issue seven sons and four daughters.

The former were,

1. Henry, called viscount Lumley, who in the seventh of queen Anne, sat in parliament for the borough of Arundel, but dying of the small-pox, on the twenty-fourth of July, A. D. 1710, was buried near his grandfather, in the church of St. Martin's in the Fields, London.

2. Richard, his successor.

3. William Lumley, who was slain in the Mediterranean, in the service of his country, on the ninth of April, A. D. 1709.

4. Thomas, after his brother Richard's decease, successor to the family honours.

5. Charles Lumley, who was appointed groom of the bedchamber to George II. on the twenty-second of December, A. D. 1727, and served in parliament for Chichester, and died on the eleventh of August, A. D. 1727, unmarried.

6. John Lumley, who was equerry to his majesty George II. and afterwards groom of the bedchamber to Frederic, prince of Wales. In 1727, he was chosen member of parliament for Arundel; and in November, 1731, he was appointed to a company in the Coldstream regiment of foot-guards. On the twenty-third of April, A. D. 1734, he was made avener and clerk-martial of the king's stables; and two years after, gentleman of the horse to the king. He died A. D. 1739, and was buried in the church of St. Martin's in the Fields, London.

7. James Lumley, upon the death of his brother John, made avener and clerk-martial of the king's stables, and joint commissioner with colonel Berkeley, for executing the office of master of the the horse to the king. He was also groom of the bedchamber to Frederic, prince of Wales, and died unmarried.

The daughters were,

1. Mary, married to George Montagu, earl of Halifax. She died December 10, A. D. 1726.

2. Barbara, married, first, Charles Leigh, of Leighton, in Bedfordshire, brother to Thomas, lord Leigh of Stonely, in Warwickshire. She died without issue on the fourth of January, A. D. 1755.

3. Ann, married to Frederic Frankland, esq; she died in February, A. D. 1739-40.

4. Henrietta, died unmarried on the sixth of November, A. D. 1747.

The mother of these children was a lady of the bedchamber to queen Mary, and afterwards to queen Anne, and departed this life in March, A. D. 1737, universally lamented, as she had lived universally beloved.

The earldom, &c. upon the demise of the first earl, devolved upon the second, but eldest surviving son, (Second Earl.) RICHARD LUMLEY. He served in three parliaments during the reign of queen Anne; one for East Grinstead, and the other two for Arundel. On the twenty-first of September, A. D. 1714, he had the honour of being appointed gentleman of the bedchamber to George, prince of Wales, upon the accession of the illustrious house of Hanover to the throne of Great Britain; and soon after was constituted master of the horse to his royal highness, and colonel of the first troop of grenadier guards. On the tenth of March following, he was called up by writ to the house of peers, as baron Lumley, and took his rank according to the patent of his grandfather's creation.

In 1722, his father then dead, he was appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne; as also of the county of Northumberland. On the twenty-second of June, A. D. 1722, he was constituted colonel of the second regiment of foot-guards. On the ninth of June, A. D. 1724, he was elected a knight companion of the most noble order of the Garter, and installed at Windsor, on the twenty-eighth of July following.

After the accession of his royal highness to the throne, he still continued his place of master of the horse, and was re-appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of Northumberland, and appointed vice-admiral of the county of Durham. In 1733-4, he resigned his place of master of the horse; and dying on the fourth of February, A. D. 1739-40, unmarried, his remains were deposited in the family vault, in Audley street chapel, London, and his honours, &c. devolved upon (Third Earl.) Sir THOMAS LUMLEY SAUNDERSON, who assumed the last of these surnames, pursuant to the will of James Saunderson, earl of Castleton, in Ireland, by act of parliament.

On the eighteenth of November, A. D. 1721, he was appointed envoy-extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the king of Portugal, from whom he returned in July, 1723, but the following year was again at that court in the same capacity; and on the seventeenth of June, A. D. 1725, was installed a knight companion of the most honourable order of the Bath.

In May 1738, he was appointed treasurer of the household to his royal highness, Frederic, prince of Wales. He served in two parliaments, the one summoned in 1727, and the other in 1734. In the latter, as knight of the shire for the county of Lincoln, in the former, as representative of the borough of Arundel.

He married Frances, second daughter of George Hamilton, earl of Orkney, lady of the bedchamber to the princess of Wales, an honour which her ladyship still enjoys, by whom he had issue two sons.

1. Richard Lumley Saunderson.

2. George Lumley, who died on the eleventh of December, A. D. 1732.

And three daughters.

1. Frances, who in June, 1753, was married to Peter Ludlow, of Ardfallagh, in the county of Meath, in Ireland, esquire, created lord Ludlow, in Ireland.

2. Anne.

3. Harriot, who died on the sixth of November, A. D. 1747.

His lordship departed this life on the fifteenth of March, A. D. 1752, and was succeeded by his only surviving son, (Fourth, and present Earl.) RICHARD LUMLEY SAUNDERSON, who is one of his majesty's right honourable privy-council, deputy earl marshal of England, and cofferer of the king's household; to which last honour he was appointed in July, 1765.

On the twelfth of December, A. D. 1752, he married Barbara, sister to Sir George Saville, baronet, by whom he has issue five sons.

1. George Augustus Lumley Saunderson, born Sept. 22, A. D. 1753.

2. Richard Lumley, born April 3, A. D. 1757.

3. Thomas Charles Lumley.

4. John Lumley.

5. Frederic Lumley.

And two daughters.

1. Frances Barbara, born Feb. 25, 1756, who died young.

2. Mary Arabella.

(TITLES.) Richard Lumley Saunderson, earl of Scarborough, viscount and baron Lumley, of Lumley castle; also viscount Lumley, of Waterford, in Ireland.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Lumley, of Lumley-castle, (in the bishopric of Durham, May 31, 1681, (33 Charles II.) viscount Lumley, of Lumley-castle, April 10, 1689, (1 William and Mary) and earl of Scarborough, April 15, A. D. 1690, (3 Will. and Mary.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, fess, ruby, between three parrots, emerald, each gorged with a plain collar of the second.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a nest proper, and therein a pelican, pearl, vulned, ruby, feeding her young.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two parrots with wings expanded, emerald, beaked and membered, proper.

(MOTTO.) "Murus æneus, conscientia sana."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Sandbeck, in Yorkshire, and at Standsted, in the county of Suffex.

NASSAU,

NASSAU, Earl of ROCHFORD.

HENRY FREDERIC, of the house of Nassau, prince of Orange, grandfather to king William of England, had a natural son,

FREDERIC NASSAU, who, by gift from his father, became lord of Zulestein, and was general of foot in the service of the States-general, when his country was invaded by the French, in 1672. He married Mary, daughter of Sir William Killegrew, of the county of Cornwall, baronet, by whom he had issue a son and heir, (First Earl.) WILLIAM HENRY NASSAU, who was one of the chief persons confided in by the prince of Orange, with whom he came into England. After their majesties king William and queen Mary had been proclaimed, he was appointed one of the members of their first privy-council, in 1688-9, and at the same time constituted master of the robes to the king. On the twelfth of September, A. D. 1690, he was appointed lieutenant-general of horse and foot, and was continually attendant upon his royal master both in Ireland and Flanders. Besides the particular favour of the sovereign, the singular services he performed at the battle of Landen, on the twenty-ninth of July, A. D. 1693, rescuing his majesty, at a time when he was surrounded by the enemy, and in the most imminent danger, at the expence of several wounds, and with the loss of his own liberty, were the foundations of peerage to this noble family: for the king revolving in his mind this, and many other marks of his loyalty and affection, did, by letters patent, bearing date the tenth of May, A. D. 1695, advance him to the dignity of a peer of this realm, by the styles and titles of baron of Enfield, in the county of Middlesex, viscount Tunbridge, in Kent, and earl of Rochford, in the county of Essex.

Whenever his majesty visited Holland, the earl was in his retinue: and so far was his lordship advanced in the royal favour, that in 1697, the king finding himself ill, went to Zulestein, and continued with him till his recovery.

Upon the death of his royal master, the earl of Rochford immediately formed a resolution of passing the remainder of his days in his own country, and continued in England only so long as was necessary to the settling of his affairs. In prosecution of this design, he arrived at the Hague from England, on the twenty-third of August, A. D. 1702. He died at Zulestein, (having never after, except in 1705, paid a visit to England) in 1708, leaving behind him a most amiable character, both in his public and private capacity; in the former, he had given no less convincing proofs of ability, honour, and integrity, than he had in the latter, of his attention to the social duties of life, having been, confessedly, an indulgent husband, a tender father, and a compassionate superior.

He married Jane, daughter of Sir Henry Wroth, of Durans, in Enfield, Middlesex, and of Loughton-hall, in Essex, great grandson of Sir Robert Wroth, knight, by his wife Mary Sidney, eldest daughter of Robert, earl of Leicester; which Sir Robert Wroth was son and heir of another Sir Robert, and Susan, his wife, sole heir of John Stonard, of Loughton, in the county of Essex, esquire, and of Sir Thomas Wroth, by Mary his wife, daughter to Robert, lord Rich, by whom he had four sons and four daughters.

The latter were,

1. Anne, who died unmarried, and was interred in St. Michael's chapel, Westminster-abbey, on the fifteenth of February, A. D. 1700.

2. Mary, who married Heer Hawelt, one of the chief nobles of the province of Guelderland, second son to the famous general Godert de Ginckell, earl of Athlone, in Ireland.

3. Elizabeth, who died unmarried, A. D. 1722.

4. Henrietta, who married Godart Christiaan, earl of Athlone, elder brother of Heer Harvelt, who married her other sister.

The sons were,

1. William Henry, } successively earls of Roch-
2. Frederic, } ford.

3. Maurice Nassau, who died A. D. 1722, a colonel of foot in England.

4. Henry Nassau, who died unmarried, in April, 1741, and was buried at Easton, in Suffolk, where his father had purchased the seat and estate of Sir William Wingfield.

The eldest son,

(Second Earl.) WILLIAM HENRY, succeeded his father. In 1702, he was volunteer under the duke of Ormond, and then, as well as afterwards, under the duke of Marlborough, he behaved with a bravery that honoured his rank, at the same time that it signally served the cause in which he was engaged.

After his father's decease, he came into England, and was well received by her majesty queen Anne, by whom, on the tenth of May, A. D. 1710, he was appointed colonel of a regiment of dragoons, and raised to the rank of a brigadier-general, in which capacity he served a campaign in Spain, A. D. 1710, and was slain at the battle of Almanza, on the twenty-seventh of July that year. Dying unmarried, his lordship was succeeded by his brother, (Third Earl.) FREDERIC NASSAU, born A. D. 1682, who was at that time one of the nobles of the province of Utrecht. Allured by these English

Handwritten text at the top of the page, possibly a title or address, which is mostly illegible due to fading and bleed-through.

Handwritten text at the bottom of the page, possibly a signature or date, which is mostly illegible due to fading and bleed-through.

lish honours, his lordship came over, and spent the greatest part of his time in this country, chusing indeed a retired, but at the same time practising an exemplary life.

He married Bessy, daughter of Richard Savage, earl Rivers, and by her, whose father died on the eighteenth of August, A. D. 1712, and by his will bequeathed to her his estate, he had issue two sons,

1. William Henry Nassau.
2. Richard Savage Nassau, born June 1, A. D. 1723, who served in parliament for Colchester. He married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Edward Spencer of Rendlesham, in Suffolk, esquire, widow of James, duke of Hamilton and Brandon, and had issue by her,
 1. Lucy, born November the third, A. D. 1752, who died unmarried.
 2. William Henry Nassau, born July the twenty-eighth, A. D. 1754.
 3. George Nassau, born September the fifth, A. D. 1756.

This third earl of Rochford, died on the fourteenth of June, A. D. 1738, and was succeeded in his honours, &c. by his eldest son, (Fourth Earl.) WILLIAM HENRY NASSAU, born September the seventeenth, A. D. 1717, who was immediately upon his father's death appointed lord of the bedchamber to his late majesty, and was constituted vice-admiral of the coasts of Essex. In 1749, he was appointed envoy-extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the king of Sardinia, at whose court his lordship behaved with honour to himself, did service to his country, and gave satisfaction to that monarch. In 1754, he returned to England, and arrived on the twenty-sixth of April. In September that year, he returned again to Turin, but was recalled in February, A. D. 1754-5; and on the second of March following, was appointed groom of the stole to his majesty; and on the twelfth of the same month, was sworn of the privy-council. On the twenty-sixth of April following, he was appointed one of the lords justices for the administration of the government during the king's stay beyond the seas; in 1756, he was appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of Essex; and in 1763, was constituted ambassador extraordinary, and minister plenipotentiary to the court of Spain. Being recalled thence, he was appointed, on the first of July, 1766, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the most Christian king, in the room of his grace the duke of Richmond, appointed secretary of state, on the twenty-third of May preceding.

He married Lucy, daughter of Edward Young, of Durnford, near Sarum, Wilts, maid of honour to the princess of Wales; but as yet has no issue.

(TITLES.) William Henry Zulestein de Nassau, earl of Rochford, viscount Tunbridge, and baron of Enfield.

(CREATIONS.) Baron of Enfield, in the county of Middlesex, viscount Tunbridge, in Kent, and earl of Rochford, in Essex, May 10, A. D. 1695. (7 Will. III.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly; first, sapphire, semee of billers, and a lion rampant, topaz, for Nassau; secondly, topaz, a lion rampant guardant, ruby, crowned with a ducal coronet, sapphire, for Deitz; thirdly, ruby, a fess, pearl, for Vianden; fourthly, two lions passant guardant, in pale, topaz, for Cartznelboge. Over all, an escutcheon of pretence, ruby, charged with three zules, pearl.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, topaz, a pair of bucks horns, ruby.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two lions, erminois, ducally crowned, sapphire.

(MOTTO.) "Ne supra modum sapere;" formerly, "Spes durat avorum."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Easton, in the county of Suffolk; at St. Olyth, in the county of Essex; and at Zulestein, in Holland, fifteen miles from Utrecht.

KEPPEL, Earl of ALBEMARLE.

THE ancestors of this noble family were seated in Guelderland, and had a castle there, considerable both for its privileges and antiquity. The first we find was,

WOLTER VAN KEPPEL, lord of Keppel, who was living in 1179 and 1231; and is remarkable for having been the founder of a monastery at Bethlehem, near Doetinchem. By his wife Beatrix, he was father of two sons; the elder of which, Derek Van Keppel, was lord of Keppel; and the younger,

WOLTER VAN KEPPEL, held the lordship of Verwoelde, under his elder brother; which, however, continued to his posterity; for we find that his younger son, Hendrick Van Keppel, was seated at Westerholt, near Lochum; and the elder,

DEREK VAN KEPPEL, became lord of Verwoelde. He was living in 1326, and had a son of his own name, (besides other children)

DEREK VAN KEPPEL, who held the lordship of Verwoelde, as a fief of his cousin, lord Sweder Van Voorst, lord of Voorst and Keppel, in the year 1362. His eldest son, WOLTER VAN KEPPEL, lord of Verwoelde, married Roode, Van Heeckeren, daughter of Evert de Roode Van Heeckeren, and Bartha Van Arafpen; and his eldest son,

DEREK VAN KEPPEL, lord of Verwoelde, was present at a general convention for the province of Guelderland, held at Nimeguen, A. D. 1436, with Harman Van Keppel, and other gentlemen and nobles of Zutphen. His son, WOLTER VAN KEPPEL, lord of Verwoelde, was also in 1458, lord of Wefenberg, in the province of Overysel, and knight of Zutphen, in the years 1469 and 1474. He married Wichmoet Van Ittersum, daughter of Johan Van Ittersum, and Agnes Van Campferbeeck, and had issue several sons and daughters: of which we shall only note three, the youngest of which, Wolter Van Keppel, was seated at Kerfenberg; the second, Harmen Van Keppel, was the person from whom the Keppels of Dieuxhoft were descended; and the eldest son, DEREK VAN KEPPEL, became lord of Verwoelde, and upon his father's death, A. D. 1495, was vested in the fief of Wefenberg, which feudal tenure was renewed in 1498 and 1521. He married two wives.

By his first lady Cunicunda Van Heeckeren, surnamed Rechteren, daughter of Otto Van Heeckeren, surnamed Rechteren, and of Stephaina Van Rutenborch, he had four daughters and a son, named Frederic Van Keppel, whose only daughter and heir, Cunigunda, married Alert

Van Haeften, and carried with her the lordship of Verwoelde.

He married, secondly, Joanna Herman Van Woelbeck, surnamed Kepped, by whom he acquired the lordship of Woolbeeche. She bore to him two sons, the youngest of which, Dereck Van Keppel, was seated at Oelde, and the eldest, JOACHIM VAN KEPPEL, became lord of Woolbeeche, and by his wife Angele Van Loon, daughter of Jurnen Van Loon, had issue three sons.

1. Derek Van Keppel.

2. Jurien Van Keppel, from whom are descended the Keppels of Oddwick, Mallum, and Campferbeck.

3. Harmen Van Keppel, from whom are descended the Keppels of Molecateu.

The eldest son,

DEREK VAN KEPPEL, succeeded his father at Woolbeeche, and marrying Alyt Vander Voorst, of the Voorst, and Oefwolda Van Delen, he obtained the lordship of Voorst. He had issue two sons, of which the eldest, Evert Van Keppel, succeeded to the lordship of Woolbeeche, whose descendants still remain there; and the youngest,

OESWOLT VAN KEPPEL, obtained of his father, Voorst. He married Mechtelt Vander Capelle, daughter of Gerrit Vander Capelle, and Geertruyd Van Hoenen; but this lady dying in 1610, he married, secondly, in 1611, Willemina de Ruiter, daughter of Henric de Ruiter and Gertrude Vander Hell. By this last lady, who died A. D. 1633, he had no issue; but by the former was father of an only son,

DEREK VAN KEPPEL, of the Voorst, who in 1645, purchased T'Velde. In 1635, he married Theodora Van Sallant, daughter of Wynant Van Sallant, of the Pol, and of Gerberic Van Lynden, and dying in 1646, left issue a minor, OESWOLT VAN KEPPEL, of the Voorst, who married Reiniza-Anna-Gertruyde-Van-Lintello tot de Mars, daughter of Johan Van Lintello tot de Mars, and of Agnes Reiniza Van Schebe tot Welwelt, by whom he had issue,

(First Earl.) ARNOLD JOOST VAN KEPPEL, lord of Voorst, A. D. 1692, admitted into the knighthood of Zutphen, and afterwards into the knighthood of Holland and West Friesland.

In 1688, he attended the prince of Orange, as page of honour in his English expedition; and after his accession to the throne, was appointed groom of his bedchamber, and master of the robes. On the twenty-fifth of March, A. D. 1691, he was sent from the Hague, to compliment the elector of Bavaria on his arrival in Flanders. He seldom failed in his attendance on the king in his several several campaigns, and by that means had an opportunity of exhibiting a degree of merit, which could not but catch the observation of his royal master. In return therefore for his courage and fidelity, he was, by letters patent, bearing date February 10, 1695-6, created baron Ashford, of Ashford, in Kent, viscount Bury, in the county palatine of Lancaster, and earl of Albemarle, of a town and territory, in the dukedom of Normandy, which formerly belonged to Stephen, the son of Odo, descended from the earls of Champagne, whom William the Conqueror made earl of Albemarle, as being the son of his half-sister by the mother's side, and gave to him, for the further maintenance of his estate, the territory of Holderness, in Yorkshire; and when his issue failed, the kings of England honoured others, who had greatly deserved of them, with the same title, although they had long since lost their estate in Normandy.

His lordship was a major-general before the year 1697, and was present that year, and serviceably employed in his majesty's camp at Promelles. In the year following he was appointed colonel of the first troop of horse-guards.

On the fourteenth of May, A. D. 1700, he was elected a knight companion of the most noble order of the Garter, and was at that time a lord of the king's bedchamber. He was installed at Windsor, on the fifth of June following, being the thirteenth knight in the tenth stall, and on the plate was inscribed as follows:

"Du tres noble et puissant seigneur, Arnold Juste de Keppel, Comte d'Albemarle, Vicomte de Bury, Baron Ashford de Ashford, capitaine de la premiere compagnie de gardes du corps du Roy et maitre de ses robes, collonel general de Suisses et Grisons, au service des provinces unies du Pays-Bas; chevalier du tres noble ordre de la Jarriere, installé au chateau de Windsor le V Juin, an. 1700."

Upon the death of king William, the friendship and esteem which he had for this noble lord became more conspicuous; for in a codicil annexed to the will of this monarch, the lordship of Brevoort, and two hundred thousand guilders, were allotted for this service; and this was the more extraordinary, as there was no other legacy, nor any other part of the effects, which his majesty had at his disposal, which was not bequeathed to the prince of Nassau Friesland.

His lordship was with the forces abroad when he heard of the death of his royal master, immediately after which he arrived in England, and paid his duty to the queen, from whom he obtained leave to retire to his native country. On his arrival in Holland he took his seat as a member of the nobles in the assembly of the States-General.

He was appointed general of the Dutch forces, in consequence of which he joined the army on the seventh of August, A. D. 1702. In 1705, he paid a visit to England, and attending the queen to the university of Cambridge, he had the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws; soon after which he returned again to Holland, and left the Hague on the eleventh of June, that year, to join the army under monsieur Auberquerque; and was also at the forcing of the French lines near Tirtlemont.

In 1707, he was at the battle of Ramellies, and took up his quarters at Brussels. On the twentieth of April, A. D. 1708, he was declared, by the States-General, general of horse; and in that year, was in the memorable battle of Oudenard; after which we find him deeply concerned in the memorable campaigns of the great duke of Marlborough.

His lordship (as has been observed) was a member of the nobles of Holland; as also deputy-forrester, general of the horse, and of the Swiss; governor of Boileduc, colonel of a regiment of carabiners; and of a regiment of Swiss.

He married in the year 1701, in Holland, Gertrude de Quirina Vander Duin, daughter of Adam Vander Duin, lord of St. Gravemoer, in Holland, governor of Bergen-op-Zoom, colonel of horse in the service of the republic of Holland, and master of the buck-hounds to king William III. He was a descendant of Frederic, son of Alphert, ninth lord of Brederiden, who descended from Sigifried, son of Arnolph, count of Holland, who died anno 993.

By her ladyship, he had issue a son and a daughter, Sophia, born at Tournay, on the second of July, A. D. 1711, who married colonel John Thomas, brother to Sir Edmund Thomas, of Wenwol-castle, in the county of Glamorgan, baronet, and departing this life at the Hague (where he was interred) on the thirtieth of May, A. D. 1718, was succeeded in his honours, &c. by his only son, (Second Earl.) WILLIAM ANNE, so named from her majesty, queen Anne, who, in person, graced his baptism. He was born at White-Hall on the fifth of June, A. D. 1702.

In 1717, he was by king George I. favoured with a company in the second regiment of foot-guards; and in October, A. D. 1723, he was appointed lord of the bed-chamber to the prince of Wales. In 1725, he was made knight of the Bath; and on the thirty-first of March, A. D. 1727, he was appointed aid de camp to the king.

On the accession of George II. his lordship was continued in the bed-chamber; and on the twenty-second of November, A. D. 1731, was appointed colonel of a regiment, then stationed at Gibraltar. On the fourth of June, A. D. 1733, he was made colonel of the third troop of horse-guards; and four years after was constituted governor of Virginia. On the twentieth of February, A. D. 1741, he was constituted major-general of the king's forces. In June, A. D. 1743, he gave singular proofs of undaunted bravery in the battle of Dettingen, being then lieutenant general; and in October, the following year, he was made colonel of the second regiment of foot-guards. In 1745, he was at the battle of Fontenoy, and there wounded; from whence he returned to England, with his royal highness the duke of Cumberland; and on the sixteenth of April, A. D. 1746, had the command of the right wing of the army at the battle of Culloden; and on his royal highness's leaving Scotland, he was constituted general and commander in chief of all his majesty's forces there, August 23, A. D. 1746. In 1747, he was with the duke of Cumberland at the battle of Vall. In 1748, he again went over with his royal highness, highness, and soon after the conclusion of the peace, he was appointed ambassador and plenipotentiary to the French court, being then general in chief of the forces in Scotland. On the twelfth of July, A. D. 1750, his lordship was installed at Windsor knight of the Garter by his proxy Sir Charles Eggleton, knight, and arriving in England, he was on the twelfth of July, A. D. 1751, sworn of the privy-council, being then groom of the stole to his majesty. On the thirtieth of March, A. D. 1752, he was appointed one of the lords justices for the administration of the government during his majesty's stay in his German dominions.

His lordship died at Paris on the twenty-second of December, A. D. 1754; and his remains were brought over to England, and deposited in Audley-street chapel. His lordship's character, both in England and France, was such as his surviving lady and numerous issue cannot but reflect upon with a degree of complacency that must ever do honour to his memory.

He was married on the twenty-first of February, A. D. 1722-3, at Caversham near Reading (a seat belonging to the earl of Cadogan) to Anne, daughter to Charles, first duke of Richmond; and by her ladyship, who was of the bed-chamber to queen Caroline, and is now living, had issue eight sons, and seven daughters; the latter were,

1. Sophia, born February 18, A. D. 1729; who died A. D. 1741, and was interred in Audley-street chapel.

2. Elizabeth Mary, born May 6, A. D. 1731, who died A. D. 1740, and was interred in Audley-street chapel.

3. Anne Susanna, born November 8, A. D. 1732; who died January 28, 1754; and was interred in Audley-street chapel.

4. Nassau, (so named from his highness the prince of Orange, her godfather) born November 18, A. D. 1733; and dying an infant, was also buried at Audley street chapel.

5. Caroline, born August 20, A. D. 1737; who was married in 1759 to Robert Adair, esquire, and has issue.

6. Elizabeth, born November 15, A. D. 1739; who was married on the ninth of June, A. D. 1764, to Francis Russell, commonly called marquis of Tavistock.

7. Emelia, born November 2, A. D. 1745; who died young.

The sons were,

1. George Keppel.

2. Augustus Keppel, born April 2, A. D. 1725; who was early a candidate for honour in the naval service. He was with commodore (afterwards lord) Anson in the South-Seas, and at the taking of Paita, where he narrowly escaped death from a cannon-ball, which took off part of a jockey-cap, then on his head. In 1746, he had the command of the Maidstone man of war, and took several privateers from the enemy. In 1751, he was commodore of a squadron in the Mediterranean; at which time he was of singular service in settling the differences between the English merchants and the dey of Algiers; and was no less successful in concluding treaties with the states of Tripoli and Tunis; the former signed September 20, A. D. 1752, and the latter October 19,

A. D. 1752. On the third of January, A. D. 1759, being then on board his majesty's ship the Torbay, he took the isle of Gorée from the French: and on the twentieth of November following, he was with admiral Hawke in that memorable battle with monsieur Conflans; and he there, at a second broadside, sunk a French ship of war of seventy-four guns, and seven hundred and eighty men. In 1762, he accompanied his brother, the present earl of Albemarle, and was not only present, but greatly instrumental, at the taking of the Havannah. He is now rear-admiral of the blue, and groom of the bed-chamber to his present majesty. In 1755, he was chosen member of parliament for Chichester, in the room of his brother, who then took his seat in the house of lords.

3. James Keppel, born April 29, A. D. 1726; who died an infant, and was buried at St. Martin's in the fields, Westminster.

4. William Keppel, born November 5, A. D. 1727; who was gentleman of the horse to his late majesty, and is equerry to the present king. On the twenty-first of December, A. D. 1757, he was made captain in the first regiment of foot-guards, with the rank of lieutenant colonel. In January, A. D. 1762, he was appointed colonel of the fifty-sixth regiment of foot. On the tenth of July, A. D. 1764, he was raised to the rank of major-general; and in June, A. D. 1765, was appointed colonel of the fourteenth regiment of foot.

5. Frederic Keppel, born January 19, A. D. 1728, was educated at Christ-church, Oxon. He was admitted into holy orders, and appointed chaplain in ordinary to his majesty, and afterwards deputy clerk of the closet, in both which stations he continued after the accession of the present king. On the twenty-third of April, A. D. 1754, he was appointed canon of Windsor. In 1762, he was consecrated bishop of Exeter; and since that, 1766, has been appointed dean of Windsor. On the thirteenth of September, A. D. 1758, he married Laura, daughter of Sir Edward Walpole, knight of the Bath, by whom he has issue two daughters, Anna Maria, born 1760, and Laura, born on the fourteenth of March, 1765; also a son, Frederic, born on the twelfth of November, A. D. 1762.

6. Thomas Keppel, born February 1, A. D. 1734; who died young, and was buried at Audley-street chapel.

7. Edward Keppel, born May 4, A. D. 1736; who died 1745, and was buried at South-Mims, in Middlesex.

8. Henry Keppel, born August 11, A. D. 1741, a captain in the army. The eldest son, (Third Earl.) GEORGE KEPPEL, born April 5, A. D. 1724, succeeded to the honours of the family. His lordship took early to arms. On the seventh of April, A. D. 1743, he was appointed captain-lieutenant in the second regiment of foot-guards; and on the fourth of June, A. D. 1745, a captain in the same regiment, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel; and the same year was aid de camp to the duke of Cumberland, and attended his royal highness at the battle of Fontenoy. His lordship also attended at the battle of Culloden; and was the person commissioned to inform the king of the defeat of the rebels, for which his majesty made him his aid de camp. In August,

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
1892

August, A. D. 1746, he was elected member of parliament for Chichester, and in the two succeeding parliaments for the same place.

On the fourth of November, A. D. 1749, he was appointed successor to lord George Sackville, then preferred, in his regiment of foot. On the eighteenth of March, A. D. 1755, he was constituted a major-general of his majesty's forces; and on the first of April, A. D. 1759, lieutenant-general.

In 1762, he was honoured with the command of his majesty's forces at that most important siege of the Havannah, fresh in the memory of every Englishman, and which must demand such a conspicuous place in the annals of this reign, as will ever reflect honour upon this noble family.

His lordship was of the bed-chamber to the late duke of Cumberland, with whom he enjoyed a kind of intimacy, that is seldom to be contracted with a prince; and his royal highness, in his last will, gave the world a convincing proof that his professions of friendship to this nobleman were sincere; and that the opinion he entertained of his integrity and honour was raised upon too firm a foundation to admit of any variation.

This earl is of the king's privy-council; governor of Jersey; and has the command of the third regiment of dragoons. He was elected knight of the Garter in 1766.

(TITLES.) George Keppel, earl of Albemarle, viscount Bury, and baron of Ashford.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Ashford, of Ashford, in Kent; viscount Bury, in the county of Lancaster; and earl of Albemarle in the dutchy of Normandy, in France, February 10, A. D. 1696. (8 William III.

(ARMS.) Ruby, three escallop shells, pearl.

(CREST.) Out of a ducal coronet, topaz, a swan's head proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two lions ducally crowned, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Ne cede malis."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Durhams, near Barnet, Middlesex; at Bagshot, in Surry; and at Voorst and Loo, in Holland.

COVENTRY, Earl of COVENTRY.

THAT the study and practice of our common law has raised many men to great wealth and honour, the records of former times and daily experience sufficiently testify. Of all examples of this sort, there are perhaps none more striking than these of Thomas Coventry, the father, and Thomas Coventry, the son; the latter of which was the first peer in this noble family.

Their descent is, by Sir William Dugdale, and other the best established authorities, deduced from WILLIAM COVENTRY, of the city of Coventry, whose son, JOHN COVENTRY, was sheriff of London with Robert Whittington, in 1416, and lord mayor of that city in 1425, as also one of the three executors of Richard Whittington, four times lord mayor of London, and founder of Whittington college. This John was buried in the church of St. Mary le Bow, in Cheapside, London, where a monument was erected to his memory, with the following inscription:

Magnificus sed justificus

miseris & amicus,

Vir speciosus, Vir

generosus, virque pudicus

Et peramabilis, et venerabilis, atque piarum

Vis, dux, lex, lampas, flos Maior Landoniarum.

In terræ ventre jacet

hic John rite Coventre

Dictus, quem necuit

veluti decuit lue plenus

Bis Septingenus

tricens si trahis unum

Martius in sole

tricens si trahis unum,

Virginis a partu carnis

modo mortuus artu

Vivus erit Cœ tuba

clanxerit ut Gabrielis, Amen.

Although it is universally acknowledged, that this gentleman is the direct ancestor of the noble family now enrolled among the peers of England, yet records have not preserved, nor have antiquaries been able to recover, the intermediate names between him and

VINCENT COVENTRY, of Cassington, near Yarn-ton, in Oxfordshire, (from whom we have no interruption in the line) whose son and heir, RICHARD COVENTRY, by a daughter of — Turner, had two sons; of which, John, the eldest, succeeding his father at Cassington, married and had a family.

The younger son,

THOMAS COVENTRY, became a member of the honourable society of the Inner-Temple, London, and was so great a proficient in his studies there,

D

that,

that, in the thirty-eighth of Elizabeth, he was chosen reader of that house for the autumn lecture; though at that time he was prevented performing the task, by reason of a great plague which then raged in London, so that he did not read till the Lent following.

Ascending still higher in esteem, in respect of his eminent knowledge, he was elected to the state and degree of a serjeant at law, upon that call in Easter term, in the first of James I. as also in the third of that reign, to be the king's serjeant. And in Hillary term, (before the end of that year) being constituted one of the justices for the court of Common Pleas, sat on that bench till the time of his death, which was the twelfth of December, A. D. 1606. He was buried at Croome d'Abitot, where a monument is erected to his memory, with the following inscription:

"Sub hoc Tumulo quiescit Corpus Thomæ Coventrye, unius Justitiariorum de Communi Banco. Qui in Adolescentiâ bonarum artium Studiis in Academiâ Oxoniensi Clarus, Postmodum legibus Patriis operam dedit, in quibus ita meruit, Ut post alios jurisprudentiæ Ordines summa dexteritatis, industriæ, fidesque laude transactis, tandem ad statum, & gradum Servientis ad legem, & postmodum in judicis sedem præfectus fuit, in quâ cum per undecim menses maximum integritatis, justitiæ, & gravitatis exemplum præbisset 49^o ætatis anno firmissimâ fidelis, & Misericordis Redemptoris fiduciâ vitam mutavit 12^o Decemb. Anno Dom. 1606. Regni Jacobi Regis 4^o."

He had issue by Margaret his wife, daughter and heir to ———— Jeffreys, of Earles-Croome, alias Croome d'Abitot, in Worcestershire, three sons;

1. Thomas his son and heir.
2. William, who left a family, seated at Ridmarley in Worcestershire; and
3. Walter, ancestor to the present earl of Coventry.

As also four daughters,

1. Margaret.
2. Joan, married to ———— Rogers, of the county of Surry, esquire.
3. Catherine, espoused to William Child, of Northwick, in Worcestershire, esquire; and
4. Anne, wedded to George Frampton, of Dorsetshire, esquire.

(First Lord.) THOMAS, son and heir of the last-mentioned Thomas, born at Croome d'Abitot, in Worcestershire, in 1578, became at the age of fourteen, a gentleman-commoner of Baliol college in Oxford, where he continued three years, and then was entered a member of the Inner-Temple; where pursuing his father's steps in the laudable studies of the municipal laws, he was chosen autumn reader of that society, 14 Jac. I. and the same year, on the seventeenth of November, was elected recorder of the city of London; also on the fourteenth of March following, constituted solicitor-general; and received the honour of knighthood two days after at Theobalds.

In 18 Jac. I. he was made attorney-general; and from thence was advanced to that eminent office of lord-keeper of the great seal of England, by king

Charles I. on the first of November, A. D. 1625. On the tenth of April, A. D. 1628, he was dignified with the degree of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Coventry, of Aylesborough, in Worcestershire, the preamble setting forth these weighty reasons for his advancement:

"Rex, &c. Archiepiscopis, Ducibus, &c. ad quos præsentis literæ provenerint Salutem. Officio & curæ Regali nihil magis arbitramur convenire, quam virtutum præmia Viris Illustribus rite disponere, ac illos Honoribus attollere qui de Rege & Republicâ optime meruerunt: Perspicimus enim Coronam nostram Regiam quamplurimum honorari, & locupletari, cum viros cordatos consilio, prudentiâ, virtutibus, illustres, ac præsertim in administrandâ Justitiâ strenuos & insignes, ad Honoris & dignitatis gradus vocamus & erigimus. Nos igitur in personâ prædilecti & perquam fidelis Consilarii nostri Thomæ Coventry Militis, Custodis Magni Sigilli nostri Angliæ, gratissima & dignissima servitia qua idem Consiliarius noster, tam præcharissimo Patri nostro, Jacobo Regi beatæ memoriæ, per multos annos, quam nobis ab ipsis Regni nostri primis auspiciis fidelissimè & prudentissimè præstitit & impendit, indiesque impendere non desistit: Nec non circumspeditionem, prudentiam, strenuitatem, dexteritatem, & fidelitatem ipsius Thomæ Coventry Militis, erga nos & Coronam nostram Animo benigno & Regali intimè recolentis pro gratiæ nostræ, erga præfatum Consiliarium pignore. Nec non virtutum & benemeritorum ejusdem encomio posteris suis relinquendum, ipsum, in Procerum hujus Regni nostri Angliæ numerum ascribendum, decrevimus, Sciatis itaque, &c."

He died at Durham-House in the Strand, in London, on the fourteenth of January, A. D. 1639-40; and the seventeenth of February, was conveyed from thence, with great funeral solemnity, to his interment at Croome d'Abitot, by his father, on the first of March following, after he had continued in that great post of lord-keeper for the space of about sixteen years, with universal reputation for his exact administration of justice: he had a venerable aspect, but was neither haughty nor ostentatious; and his attendants were disposed so agreeably, as to shun both envy and contempt; which was the more taken notice of, as Bacon, viscount St. Albans, and Williams, bishop of Lincoln, whom he succeeded, had been censured on that account. The earl of Clarendon, in his History of the Rebellion, says of him, "That he discharged all the offices he went through with great abilities, and singular reputation of integrity; that he enjoyed his place of lord-keeper with an universal reputation (and sure justice was never better administered) for the space of about sixteen years, even to his death, some months before he was sixty years of age: which was another important circumstance of his felicity; that great office being so slippery, that no man had died in it before for near the space of forty years: nor had his successors for some time after him much better fortune. And he himself had use of all his strength and skill (as he was an excellent wrestler in this kind) to preserve himself from falling in two shocks: the one given him by the earl of Portland, lord high-treasurer of England; the other by the marquis of Hamilton, who had the greatest power over the affections of the king, of any man of that time.

"He was a man of wonderful gravity and wisdom, and understood not only the whole science and mystery of the law, at least equally with any man that had ever sat in that place; but had a clear conception of the whole policy of the government both of church and state; which by the unskilfulness of some well-meaning men, juttled each the other too much.

"He knew the temper, disposition, and genius of the kingdom most exactly; saw their spirits grow every day more sturdy, inquisitive, and impatient: and therefore naturally abhorred all innovations; which, he foresaw, would produce ruinous effects. Yet many, who stood at a distance, thought he was not active and stout enough in opposing those innovations: for though by his place he presided in all publick councils, and was most sharp-sighted in the consequence of things; yet he was seldom known to speak in matters of state, which, he well knew, were, for the most part, concluded before they were brought to that public agitation: never in foreign affairs, which the vigour of his judgment could well have comprehended: nor indeed freely in any thing, but what immediately and plainly concerned the justice of the kingdom; and in that, as much as he could, he procured references to the judges. Though in his nature he had not only a firm gravity, but a severity and even some morosity; yet it was so happily tempered, and his courtesy and affability towards all men so transcendent, and so much without affectation, that it marvelously recommended him to men of all degrees; and he was looked upon as an excellent courtier, without receding from the native simplicity of his own manners.

"He had, in the plain way of speaking and delivery, without much ornament of elocution, a strange power of making himself believed (the only justifiable design of eloquence) so that though he used very frankly to deny, and would never suffer any man to depart from him with an opinion that he was inclined to gratify, when in truth he was not; holding that dissimulation to be the worst of lying: yet the manner of it was so gentle and obliging, and his condescension such, to inform the persons whom he could not satisfy, that few departed from him with ill-will and ill-wishes.

"But then this happy temper, and those good faculties, rather preserved him from having many enemies, and supply'd him with some well-wishers, than furnished him with any fast and unshaken friends; who are always procured in courts by more ardour and more vehement professions and applications than he would suffer himself to be entangled with: so that he was a man rather exceedingly liked, than passionately loved; inso-much that it never appeared that he had any one friend in the court, of quality enough to prevent or divert any disadvantage he might be exposed to. And therefore it is no wonder, nor to be imputed to him, that he retired within himself as much as he could; and stood upon his defence, without making desperate sallies against growing mischiefs; which, he knew well, he had no power to hinder, and which might probably begin in his own ruin. To conclude; his security consisted very much in his having but little credit with the king; and he died in a season the most opportune, in which a wise man would have prayed to have finished his course, and which in truth crowned his other signal prosperity in the world."

His lordship was twice married; first to Sarah, daughter to Sir Edward Sebright, of Besford, in Worcestershire, knight: secondly, to Elizabeth, daughter to John Aldersey, of Spurstow, in Cheshire; and widow of William Pitchford, esquire.

By the former lady he had issue,

1. Thomas Coventry, his successor.
2. Elizabeth, married to Sir John Hare, of Stow-Bardolph, in Norfolk.

By the latter lady he was the father of four daughters.

1. Anne, married first to Sir William Saville, baronet, to whom she bore a son George, afterwards created marquis of Halifax: secondly, to Sir Thomas Chichley, of Wimple, in the county of Kent. She was buried at Croome-D'Abitot.

2. Joan, (or Mary) married to Henry Frederic Thynn, of Longlete, in Wiltshire, esquire, ancestor to the present earl of Weymouth.

3. Margaret, the first wife of Anthony, earl of Shaftesbury. She had no issue.

4. Dorothy, married Sir John Packington, of Westwood, in Worcestershire, baronet. She was a lady of that incomparable understanding, as well as piety, as to be esteemed the author of The whole Duty of Man.

Also four sons,

1. John Coventry, who married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of John Colles, of Barton, in Somersetshire, esquire, and widow of Sir William Doddington, of Bremer, Hants; and had issue Sir John Coventry, of Pitminster, in the county of Somerset, knight of the Bath; a member of what was called the Long-Parliament for Weymouth, and of all other parliaments in the time of Charles II. This Sir John is remarkable for having given the name of the COVENTRY ACT to an act of parliament made in his time against maiming, &c. &c. which an incident * in his own

* Bishop Burnet, in the History of his own Times, and other relations, gives us this account of it. "Sir John Coventry was one of those members of the house of commons, who struggled much against the giving money; and it being then usual, after such bills had failed in the main vote, for those who opposed, to endeavour to lay the money on funds unacceptable and deficient; it was proposed to lay a tax on the play-houses, which were then deemed nests of prostitution. This was opposed by the court: It was said, "The players were the king's servants, and a part of his pleasure." Whereupon Sir John Coventry asked, "Whether did the king's pleasure lie among the men, or the women that acted?" This was carried with great indignation to the court. It was said, "This was the first time that the king was personally reflected on: if it was passed over, more of the same kind would follow; and it would grow a fashion to talk so. It was therefore fit to take such severe notice of this, that no body should dare to talk at that rate for the future." The duke of York told bishop Burnet, "He said all he could to the king to divert him from the resolution he took; which was, to send some of the guards, and watch him in the streets where Sir John lodged, and leave a mark upon him." The fact, by bills of indictment was found own life had given rise to. He died unmarried. There were also two younger children, the produce of the last named marriage; Thomas and Elizabeth. The former died unmarried, and the latter in her infancy.

2. Francis Coventry, who married three wives; first Elizabeth, daughter and coheir to John Manning, of Warbleton, in Essex, esquire; and widow of Robert Cesar, esquire, one of the six clerks in Chancery: secondly, the widow of Sir Edward Hoskins; and, thirdly, Margaret, daughter of — Waters, esquire, of Surry. He had issue only by the former, as follows: 1. Francis Coventry, seated at Crawle, in Sussex, who died unmarried, A. D. 1681. 2. John: and, 3. Charles, both died young. 4. Elizabeth, the wife of Sir William Keyt, of Ebrington, in Gloucestershire, baronet. And, 5. Utricia, the wife of Sir Lucon William Child, knight.

3. Henry Coventry had his education in All-Souls college, in Oxford, where he was created both master of arts, and bachelor of law: he afterwards suffered greatly for his loyalty during the rebellion; so that soon after the restoration of king Charles II. he was made one of the grooms of his bed-chamber, and on the fourth of September, A. D. 1664, was sent envoy extraordinary to Sweden, where he continued near two years, arriving at Whitehall the twenty-first of June, A. D. 1666. The year following, he and Denzil, lord Hollis, were sent ambassadors extraordinary to Breda, where they concluded a peace with France, Denmark, and the States-General. In the year 1671, he went again ambassador to Sweden; and on his return from thence, was on the third of July, the year following, constituted one of his majesty's principal secretaries of State, and sworn of the privy-council; in which eminent office he behaved himself with much honour and integrity; but declining in his health through the necessary fatigue of that employment, he sought a release; of which this public notice was given in the Gazette, N° 4185; Whitehall, February 11, A. D. 1679. His majesty was this afternoon pleased to declare in council, that Mr. Secretary Coventry has long solicited him, on account of his infirmity of body, for his leave to resign his place of one of his principal secretaries of State; that his majesty had at last been prevailed upon to grant it, though with some unwillingness, because of the great satisfaction his majesty had always had in his services; and that his intention was he should ever continue of his privy-council. After this, he never accepted of any public employment, but lived retired to his death, which happened at his house in the Hay-Market, near Charing-Cross, in Westminster, on the seventh of December, A. D. 1686, in the 68th year of his age. He died unmarried.

4. Sir William Coventry. At fourteen years of age he became a gentleman-commoner of Queen's-college, in Oxford; where, after he had continued some time, he travelled beyond the seas, and at his return, adhering to king Charles II. was made secretary to the duke of York; also secretary to the Admiralty; and elected a burges for the town of Great Yarmouth, in Norfolk, to the parliament which met at Westminster, the eighth of May, A. D. 1661; also two years after he was created Doctor of the civil-law at the university of Oxford. He was sworn of the privy-council, and received the honour of knighthood on the twenty-sixth of June, A. D. 1665, and made one of the commissioners of the treasury on the twenty-fourth of May, A. D. 1667; being, as bishop Burnet relates, "A man of great notions and eminent virtues; the best speaker in the house of commons, and capable of bearing the chief ministry, as it was once thought he was very near it, and deserved it more than all the rest did." However, as he was too honest to engage in the designs of that reign, and quarrelling with the duke of Buckingham, a challenge passed between them; upon which he was forbid the court, and retired to Minster-Lovel, near Whitney, in Oxfordshire, where he gave himself up to a religious and private course of life, without accepting of any employment, though he was afterwards offered more than once the best post in the court. He died unmarried at Somerhill, near Tunbridge-Wells, in Kent (where he had gone for the benefit of the waters) and was buried at Penshurst, in the same county, under a monument erected to his memory, and the inscription recites, that he died the eighth calends of July, A. D. 1686, aged sixty.

(Second Lord.) THOMAS COVENTRY, only son of the last lord, by his first marriage, succeeded to the peerage in 1639. He married Mary, daughter to Sir William Craven, knight; and sister to William, earl of Craven, by whom he had issue two sons, and two daughters, who died infants.

The sons were,

1. George, his successor.
2. Thomas, the first earl of the family.

His lady died in child-bed, on the eighteenth of October, A. D. 1634, in the twenty-ninth year of her age. He surviving her, at length died in Lincoln's-Inn Fields, London, October 27, A. D. 1661. The were both buried at Croome-D'Abitot, where, on a monument erected to their memory, is the following inscription:

found to be committed by Sir Thomas Sandys, knight, Charles Obryan, esquire; Simon Parry and Miles Reeves, who were fled from justice, not daring to abide a legal trial. As Coventry was going home, they drew about him; he stood up to the wall, and snatched the flambeau out of his servant's hands, and with that in one hand, and his sword in the other, he defended himself so well, that he got great credit by it. He wounded some of them; but was soon disarmed, and then they cut his nose to the bone, to teach him (as they said) to remember what respect he owed to the king; and so they left him, and went back to the duke of Monmouth's, where Obryan's arm was dressed. That matter was executed by orders from the duke of Monmouth; for which he was severely censured, because he lived then in professions of friendship with Coventry; so that his subjection to the king was not thought an excuse for directing so vile an attempt on his friend, without sending him secret notice of what was designed. Coventry had his nose so well needed up, that the scar was scarce to be discerned. This put the house of commons into a furious uproar: they passed a bill of banishment against the actors of it; and put a clause in it, that it should not be in the king's power to pardon them; and that it should be death to maim any person. This gave great advantages to all those that opposed the court; and was often remembered, and much improved by all the angry men of those times."

Candide & Constanter

D. O. M.

S.

Thomas Dominus Coventrye, Baro Coventrye de Allesborough, Patèrni nominis, honoris, opum, & virtutum, Hæres et promotor;
Inconcussæ erga Deum, Principem et Patriam fides,
Æquissimæ in arduis, & bonis rebus mentis,
Magnificus elegantiarum cultor.
Erga suos Pater-familias vigilantissimus,
Erga Clientelas Dominus æquus, et bonus,
Erga pauperes benignus,
Erga omnes justus,
Ubique inculpatus.

Hic

Juxta Clarissimam Conjugem
Gulielmi Domini Craven
Illius Herois sororem,
Sepulturæ Majorum suorum additus
Ætatis Lv.
Anno Christi 1661.

In obitum

Clarissimæ mulieris Mariæ, Thomæ Coventrye filii natu maximi Thomæ Baronis Coventrye de Allesborough Domini, Custodis magni sigilli Angliæ, piæ Uxoris; Fæmina equidem admodum admiranda, Cui formæ, (et quæ sexui rarior) Vir-tutis prodigus Deus. Vultus ultra fœmineum, venusti animi ultra masculum Generosi, famæ il-libatæ, vitæ integerrimæ, fœlicis acuminis, judi-cii nervosi, eloquii facilis, linguæ bene modera-tæ, passionum tranquilla victrix. Dotum deni-que omnium non tantum prudens, sed et tran-quilla moderatrix, quatuor liberorum fœcunda Mater. Ad ultimum fatale invenit puerperium filium, invitâ Lucinâ, potius ad funus quam vitam enixa, quocum dum dividere tentat vitam perdit, ipsaque brevi post Infantem intervallo, communi comitata luctu fato cessit.

Obiit 18^o Octobris 1634, Ætatis suæ 29.

His eldest son,

(Second Lord.) GEORGE COVENTRY, on the third of June, A. D. 1660, was constituted custos rotularum of the county of Worcester; and married on the eighteenth of July, A. D. 1653, Margaret, daughter of John, earl of Thanet, by whom he had issue three sons;

1. John, who succeeded him.

2. Thomas, born the twenty-seventh of August, A. D. 1659, and died the seventeenth of January, A. D. 1660; and,

3. William, born the sixth of July, A. D. 1661, who died the fourteenth of July, A. D. 1664.

Also two daughters;

1. Anne, born the twenty-eighth of July, A. D.
1656, who died young; and,

2. Margaret, born at Hothfield-House, in Kent, the fourteenth of September, A. D. 1657, married to Charles, earl of Wiltshire, (then son and heir to Charles, marquis of Winchester) after duke of Bolton, and died without children, in the fourth year of her marriage, and in the twenty-fourth year of her age, A. D. 1683.

His lordship died at his house in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, on the fifteenth of December, A. D. 1680, being then fifty-two years of age, and was buried in the south-isse of the parish church of Crome d'Abitot. To whom succeeded,

(Third Lord.) JOHN COVENTRY, his only surviving son, born at Crome d'Abitot, on the second of September, A. D. 1654; who dying unmarried in the thirty-third year of his age, July the twenty-fifth, A. D. 1685, was buried in the church of Crome d'Abitot, where a monument is erected to his memory, with the following inscription, which shews his excellent virtues and great worth.

Sacrum est hoc Marmor

Johanni Domino Coventrye.

Nil opus est sculpsisse Baronem Coventrye de Allesborough:
Custodem Rotularum, Regnantibus Carolo & Jacobo secundis;

Et vanam multorum honorum pompam.

Non egit titulis, aut epitaphio,

Ad famam, aut luctum faciendum.

Dicto tam charo nomine

Fluent lacrymæ, nascetur veneratio:

Et qui norunt vivum è vivis præreptum lugebunt

Defideratum Cromæ numen adorabunt,

Nam supra artem, et omni Nobilitate efficacius,

Defuncti. immortalitati consecrabunt

Viventis notissimæ virtutis.

In Deum, Ecclesiam, parentes non ficta, sed vera pietas.

Inexpugnabilis erga Regem, nullis illecebris tentanda, nullis artificiis vicenda fidelitas.

Castitas (heu) nimium severa,

In sui, amicorum, familiæ, et sæculi detrimentum,

Temperantia ita quotidianis periculis exercitata, et probata, Ut nullo modo sollicitanda videretur; nec unitis epularum, vini, aut ingenis viribus superanda.

Venusti corporis amplitudinem mirum in modum illustrabat

Animi magnitudo non Vulgaris,

Incomparabili morum suavitate, et candore perfusa.

Unde familiarium suffragio, facile pronunciabatur, sicut revera fuit,

Mortalium Optimus, & Maximus.

Datam hominibus fidem sanctissimè colebat.

Singularem exhibuit sacerdotibus honorem;

Et rebus sacris justissimam reverentiam.

Sanabat ille spoliata gementisque Matris Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ vulnera;

Quacunque enim per terras ipsius ingruerat sacrilegium,
(Authoribus ipsis, aut auctorem nepotibus semper lethale:)
Ut primum innotuit sagaci patrono, virus expulit, hæreditatem lustravit;

Et lætus, lubensque restituit infame lucrum et fatale.

Regendis affectibus tam egregius Artifex fuit, et Magister,
Ut non magis famulorum dominus æstimaretur, quam sui.
Juramento, vel imprecatione nè semel unquam vitia vitia labra.

Nullis ille simultatibus vexatus,

Nisi quas justissimus arbiter cognovit aliorum gratia;

Et fœliciter composuit litigantium beneficio.

Illum unum ornare conspirabat simul omne gentilitium decus;

Judicis integritas,

Custodis sapientia.

Hospitalitas Avi,

Charitas Patris.

Sic immortalium Gloriæ maturus, in cælum evectus est;

Ob has Clarissimas virtutes.

Diedemate purissimi luminis, Æternum Coronandus.

Anno ætatis 33^o Julii 25 1687.

Suis sumtibus erexit optima Mater ornatissima Margareta, Domina Coventrye Dotaria Marito cunctisque liberis Mæritissima superstes:

E

Jo-

Johannis Tufton Comitiss de Thanet filia Nati Maxima :
Georgii Coventrye Baronis Coventrye de Alleborough Uxor.
Pietate verò Nobilior quam genere,
Et bonis operibus illustrior quam fortuna.

The title and estate devolved for want of issue upon his lordship's uncle,

(First Earl.) THOMAS COVENTRY, second son of the second lord. He was seated at Snithfield, in Warwickshire, and was elected member of parliament for Warwick, in the reign of king James II. By the favour of king William, he was by letters patent, bearing date the twenty-sixth of April, A. D. 1697, created viscount Deerhurst, and earl of Coventry, with limitation of those honours to the younger branch of the family, descended from Walter Coventry, youngest brother to the first lord Coventry. He was lord-lieutenant of the county of Worcester, and dying on the fifteenth of July, 1699, in the seventieth year of his age, he was buried at Crome d'Abitot.

He was twice married; first, to Winifride, daughter of Pierce Edgecomb, of Mount Edgecomb, in Devonshire; but this lady dying on the eleventh of June, A. D. 1694, he married, secondly, in July, 1695, to Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Graham, esquire. This last lady surviving him, married, in 1700, Thomas Savage, of Elmley castle, in Worcestershire, esquire, in the church whereof she erected a noble monument to the memory of her deceased lord, with the following inscription:

Candide et Constanter

M. S.

Prænobilis Domini Thomæ
Comitis Coventriæ, Vicecomitis Deerhurst, Baronis Coventrye de Alleborough,
Hujus Comitatus Custodis Rotulorum,
Necnon Decani & Capitalis Ecclesiæ Vigornien.
Et Burgi de Evesham Primarii senascalli
Tho. Baronis Coventry filius fuit natu secund.
Georgii Baronis Frater, Johannis Patruus,
Et ejusdem, sine prole decedentis,
In avita dignitate, successor.
Varia Reipublicæ munia
Tum Militaria tum Civilia præstitit.
Familiam Censu jam Celebrem, pluribus fundis
Et Comitiss et Vicecomitis Titulis, Regnante Gulielmo III. ornavit et auxit.
E Priori Coniuge, Winifreda Piercei Edgecombe
De Mount-Edgecombe in Com. Devon. Arm. Filia
Liberos superstites reliquit Thomam
Honorum hæredem Dignissimum et Gilbertum.
Pietatem, Justitiam, Liberalitatem,
Animique Constantiam semper & enixe coluit.
Dierum tandem et Gloriæ satur
Sese à seculo quasi subduxit, Ut solutus cæteris curis Deo ac sibi vacaret.

Sic Cœlos anhelans,

Immortalitatem maturam

Efflavit animam.

xv Julii An^o

MDCXCIX.

Æt. LXX.

Elizabetha Comitissa ejus Dotaria
E Nobili Grahamorum Familia prognata

Ricardi, filii Ricardi Graham de Com. Norf.
Armi' pro Rege Carolo Primo
Strenue Dimicantis Capitanei, Filia;
Hoc amoris sinceri, summæ Observantiæ
Gratitudo demum animi Pignus,
Pro tenerrimo Domini & Mariti erga se affectu
Nulla licet beata prole, Mœstissima posuit;
Et post obitum Corpus suum
Cum Dilectissimo Marito hic recondi voluit.

Obiit Die Ann. Dom. MDCC.

His lordship had issue by his first lady,

1. Thomas Coventry.
2. William Coventry, who died without issue.
3. ——— Coventry, who died without issue.
4. Gilbert Coventry.

The eldest,

(Second Earl.) THOMAS COVENTRY, succeeded his father, and marrying on the fourth of May, A. D. 1691, Anne, daughter to Henry, duke of Beaufort, had issue two sons,

1. Thomas Coventry.
2. John Coventry, born August 23, A. D. 1705, who died the day following.

His lordship dying in August, A. D. 1710, was succeeded by his only surviving son, (Third Earl.) THOMAS COVENTRY, born April the seventh, A. D. 1702, who died at Eton college, on the twenty-eighth of January, 1711-12, and the titles, &c. devolved upon his uncle,

(Fourth Earl.) GILBERT COVENTRY, fourth son of the first earl. He married twice; first, Dorothy, daughter of Sir William Keyt of Ebrington, in Gloucestershire, baronet, by whom he had an only daughter, Anne, married afterwards to Sir William Carew, of Anthony, in Cornwall, baronet, which lady Carew died in January, 1733-4. He married, secondly, Anne, daughter of Sir Streinsham Masters, knight, but dying without issue male, on the twenty-seventh of October, A. D. 1719, the honours of the family devolved upon the representative of

WALTER COVENTRY, youngest brother to the first lord, of whom, and his descendants, we must now treat. He married a daughter of ——— Harvey, esquire, of Chigwell, in Essex, by whom he had a son of his own name,

WALTER COVENTRY, who married Anne, daughter of Simon Holcomb, of Devonshire, esq; by whom he had issue four sons,

1. Walter Coventry, who died without issue on the fifth of April, A. D. 1677.
2. William Coventry.
3. Thomas Coventry, who was twice married, and had issue as in the table. He died in 1751, and his eldest surviving son, Thomas Coventry, is a barrister at law, director of the South Sea Company, and member in the present parliament for Bridport. He is also married, but has no issue.

4. Henry Coventry, who married Anne, daughter of Mr. Coles, of Oxford, and had issue a son of his own name, who died in 1753, unmarried.

Also four daughters,

1. Anne, married to Sir Dewey Bulkeley, of Burgate, Hants.

5

2. Susannah,
3. Judith,
4. Frances,

died unmarried.

We now proceed with the eldest surviving son of the last named Walter, (Fifth Earl.) WILLIAM COVENTRY, who, by virtue of the limitation in the patent of creation, successor to the last mentioned earl of Coventry. He was elected member for the borough of Bridport, in Dorsetshire, in the three last parliaments of queen Anne, and in all the parliaments of George I. till he became earl. On the fifteenth of April, A. D. 1717, he was appointed one of the clerks-comptrollers of the green-cloth in his majesty's household. On the twenty-second of March, A. D. 1719-20, he was sworn of the privy-council, and constituted lord-lieutenant of the county of Worcester, and custos rotulorum thereof. Upon the accession of George II. he was re-appointed to the lieutenancy, &c. of the aforesaid county.

He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Allen, of Westminster, esquire, and by her, who died A. D. 1738, had issue,

1. Thomas Coventry, born March the twenty-seventh, A. D. 1721, who died in his father's lifetime, A. D. 1744, being then by courtesy called viscount Deerhurst.

2. George William Coventry.

3. John Bulkeley Coventry, born March the twenty-first, A. D. 1724, who has, by act of parliament, taken the additional name of BULKELEY, so that his stile at present is, John-Bulkeley Coventry Bulkeley.

His lordship departed this life on the eighteenth of March, A. D. 1751, and was succeeded in his honours, &c. by his eldest surviving son, (Sixth, and present Earl.) GEORGE-WILLIAM COVENTRY, born April the twenty-sixth, A. D. 1722. On the seventeenth of June, A. D. 1751, he was appointed lord-lieutenant of the county and city of Worcester, in which his lordship was continued after the accession of his present majesty.

On the fifth of March, A. D. 1752, his lordship married Maria, daughter of John Gunning, esquire, by Biddy, daughter of John, viscount Mayo, in Ireland, and by her ladyship, who died in September, A. D. 1760, had issue,

1. Elizabeth Anne, born January the thirty-first, A. D. 1753, who died August the twenty-second, A. D. 1756.

2. Maria Alicia, born December the ninth, A. D. 1754.

3. Anne Margaret, born March the eighteenth, A. D. 1757.

4. George, commonly called viscount Deerhurst, born May the sixth, A. D. 1758.

He married, secondly, on the twenty-seventh of September, A. D. 1764, Barbara, daughter of John, lord St. John, of Bletshoe, by whom he has issue a son, John Coventry, born June the twentieth, A. D. 1765.

His lordship was lord of the bedchamber to the late king, and is continued in the same honourable post by his present majesty.

(TITLES.) George William Coventry, earl of Coventry, and viscount Deerhurst.

(CREATIONS.) Viscount Deerhurst, in the county of Gloucester, and earl of Coventry, in the county of Warwick, April the twenty-sixth, A. D. 1697, (9 Will. III.)

(ARMS.) Diamond, a fess, ermine, between three crescents, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a garb, topaz, and thereon a dunghill cock perched, ruby, his comb, wattles and legs, as the garb.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two eagles with wings expanded, pearl, beaked and membered, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Candide & Constanter."

(CHIEF SEAT.) Crome, in Worcester-shire.

VILLIERS,

VILLIERS, Earl of JERSEY.

THIS ancient and noble family is descended from the house of Villiers, seignors of Lisle Adam, in the duchy of Normandy; of which house was that renowned Pierre de Villiers, who in the year 1390, was grand master of France under king Charles VI. of that realm; and in the same reign lived Jacques de Villiers, provost of Paris, and marshal of France; but the founder of this noble family was,

PAGAN DE VILLIERS, who soon after the Conquest, was lord of Crosby, in the county of Lancaster, having received the same, most probably, as a gift from the Conqueror, whom he attended in his expedition into England.

He had a son,

GILBERT (OF ROGER) DE VILLIERS, whose son,

ROBERT DE VILLIERS, was the father of

WILLIAM DE VILLIERS, the father of

JOHN DE VILLIERS, whose son, ALEXANDER DE VILLIERS, was lord of Brokesby, in the county of Leicester, and father of Sir NICHOLAS DE VILLIERS, knight, a great soldier, who attended king Edward I. in his wars in the Holy Land, and bore for his arms, sable, three cinquefoils, argent; which he changed for the cross of St. George, charged with five eschallop shells, or; which is now the paternal coat of this great family. He married Maud, daughter and coheir to Sir Thomas Hyde, of Hyde-hall, in the county of Hertford, widow of Thomas Jocelyn, esq; ancestor to the lord chancellor Newport, and had two sons.

Sir FRANCIS, the eldest, served the kings Edward I. and II. in their wars; but dying without issue, the younger son,

GEOFFRY DE VILLIERS, succeeded to Brokesby, and in the twenty-sixth of Edward III. was knight of the shire for the county of Leicester. He had two sons, of which Sir Pagan Villiers, the youngest, married Margaret Foliambe, of Derbyshire; and the eldest,

JOHN DE VILLIERS, became lord of Brokesby, upon the death of his father. He married two wives; the name of the latter was, Margaret; of the former, Joane, sister and heir of Simon Pakeman, of Kirby, in Leicestershire. The last-mentioned lady made him father of three sons and a daughter, Beatrix, married to ——— Bagot. Of the two younger sons, William and Alexander, we know nothing; but the eldest,

RICHARD VILLIERS, succeeded his father, and dying A. D. 1392, left by his wife, Elizabeth, a son and heir,

JOHN VILLIERS, who married Joan, daughter to William Meeting, and had two sons, John and William, whereof the eldest dying without issue, the youngest,

WILLIAM VILLIERS, became lord of Brokesby; in 1416, he married Joan, daughter and coheir to John Bellers, of Kirby Bellers, in the county of Leicester, and had two daughters,

1. Ellen, who married John Fitz-Williams, of Gainspark.

2. Joane, who married Ralph Woodford, of Ashby Folville, in Leicestershire.

Also two sons,

1. John Villiers.

2. Bartholomew, who married Margaret, daughter to Thomas Holland, earl of Kent, and coheir to her brother Edmund. He died March 20, A. D. 1442, and was buried at Wyssendine, in the county of Rutland.

JOHN VILLIERS, the eldest son, dying before his father, left issue by Elizabeth, daughter to John Southill, of Everingham, in Yorkshire, four sons, of which, the second, Thomas, and William, the fourth, died unmarried, as did also Christopher, the third son, (who was seated at Buntal, in Leicestershire) on the fifth of August, A. D. 1538.

The eldest son,

Sir JOHN VILLIERS, in 1480, succeeded his grandfather. In the years 1491, 1495, and 1500, he was sheriff of the counties of Leicester and Warwick, and received the honour of knight-hood at the marriage of prince Arthur, on the fourteenth of November, A. D. 1501, six years after which he departed this life, leaving a numerous issue by his wife Agnes, daughter of John Digby, of Colshill, in Warwickshire, eight sons and one daughter, Winifrede.

The sons were,

1. Sir John Villiers, who was sheriff of the counties of Leicester and Warwick, in the years 1532, and 1538, and dying on the third of December, A. D. 1545, was interred at Brokesby, having had issue by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of John Wingar, an only daughter and heiress, who married Francis Brown.

2. George Villiers, who married Joan, daughter to John Harrington, of Bagworth, in the county of Warwick, esquire, by whom he had Richard, his heir, who died unmarried, on the twelfth of October, A. D. 1558, and Elizabeth, the wife of Sir Edward Waterhouse, of Helmsted Bury, in the county of Hertford. The father died on the twenty-ninth of August, A. D. 1546.

3. Thomas Villiers, seated at Welby, succeeded his nephew at Brokesby, but having had issue by his his wife, a son, Thomas, who died young, and a daughter, Dorothy, married to William Smith of Leicestershire, he bequeathed what was in his power to his said daughter; but the entailed estate devolved upon the next brother,

4. William Villiers, of whom hereafter.

5. Edward Villiers, seated at Flowre and Howthorpe, in Northamptonshire. He married two wives. By Elizabeth Wake, the first lady, he had issue, Clement Villiers, and Elizabeth, which Clement was seated at Howthorpe; and by Jane, daughter of Thomas Saunders, had issue four sons, of which the three youngest, Robert, William, and George, died without issue; and the eldest, Edward Villiers, died on the twenty-fifth of March, A. D. 1602, leaving three coheiresses; Mary, married to Calcot Chambre, of Williams-cot, in Oxfordshire; Jane, married — Denham, of the same county; and Elizabeth, married George Bathurst. Edward Villiers, afore-said, father to Clement, had also a second wife, Jane, daughter of Thomas Roos, of Dowsby, in Lincolnshire, and widow of — Tempest, by whom he had issue one son, Anthony Villiers, and a daughter, Dorothy; which Anthony, seated at Dowsby and Groby, dying on the third of March, A. D. 1547, left issue by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of John Lane, of Kettering, in Northamptonshire, a son, Edward Villiers, who died unmarried, and a daughter, Anne, married to John Rigden, of Chartham.

6. Anthony Villiers, seated at Colness, in Yorkshire. He died A. D. 1547, unmarried.

7. Leonard Villiers, } of whom we know

8. Bartholomew Villiers, } nothing.

The fourth son,

WILLIAM VILLIERS, continued the line, and was at length seated at Brokesby, the ancient family estate. He married Coletta, daughter and heir to Richard Clarke, of the county of Buckingham, esquire, and widow to Richard Beaumont, of Cole Orton, in Leicestershire, esquire. He died on the first of November, A. D. 1558, leaving an only son,

SIR GEORGE VILLIERS, born A. D. 1544, who was sheriff of the county of Leicester, in 1591; and having received the honour of knighthood, departed this life on the fourth of January, A. D. 1605. He married two wives; first, Audrey, daughter and heir to William Saunders, of Harrington, in the county of Northampton, which lady dying on the first of May, A. D. 1587, he married, secondly, Mary, daughter of Anthony Beaumont, of Glenfield, in Leicestershire, who surviving him, was married to Sir William Rayner, whom she also survived; and marrying, thirdly, Sir George Compton, knight of the Bath, she died on the nineteenth of April, A. D. 1632, having been created countess of Buckingham, on the first of July, A. D. 1618. This lady bore issue to her first husband, as follows:

1. Susan, who became the wife of William Fielding, earl of Denbigh.

2. John Villiers, created baron Villiers, of Stoke, in the county of Buckingham, and viscount Purbeck of Purbeck, in the county of Dorset, by letters patent, dated 1619. Having married two wives, Frances, daughter of Sir Edward Coke, lord chief-justice, and Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Slingsby, of Kippax, in Yorkshire, baronet; he nevertheless died without issue, on the eighteenth of February, A. D. 1657, and was interred at Charlton, near Windsor, in Buckinghamshire.

3. Sir George Villiers, of whom distinctly.

4. Christopher Villiers, gentleman of the horse to king James I. By letters patent, bearing date the eighteenth of April, A. D. 1623, in the twenty-first year of that monarch's reign, he was created a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Daventry, as also to the dignity of an earl, by the title of earl of Anglesey. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Seldon, of Houby, in Leicestershire; and departing this life, upon the twenty-fourth of September, A. D. 1624, left issue, CHARLES, his son and successor in that honour, who married Mary, daughter of Paul, viscount Banning, widow of William, viscount Grandison, but died without issue, A. D. 1659; as also a daughter, Anne, married to Thomas, viscount Savile, afterwards earl of Sussex.

We must now speak of the third son,

SIR GEORGE VILLIERS, who was born at Brokesby, on the twenty-eighth of August, A. D. 1592, and from the age of ten years to the age of thirteen, was educated at Billesden school, in that county, where he also learned the grounds of music. At this time his father dying, he was taken home by his mother to her house at Godeby. She trained him up in dancing, fencing, and such manlike exercises, (wherein he became a great proficient) and at the age of eighteen travelled into France, where having improved himself in those accomplishments, he returned to England after three years residence in that kingdom. It was about this time that Car, earl of Somerset, began to decline in the favour of James I. a prince, who of all others, was most delighted with beauty of person and elegance of dress; so that Mr. Villiers no sooner appeared at court, than those advantages recommended him to the king's favour. He first entertained him, in 1613, as his cup-bearer at large, and the next summer admitted him in ordinary, by which he was, of course, to be much in his majesty's presence, and so admitted to that conversation and discourse with which that prince always abounded at his meals. He continued but very few weeks in that station before he was preferred; and in one day, the twenty-third of April, A. D. 1615, was both knighted and made one of the gentlemen of the bedchamber, with an annual pension of a thousand pounds, payable out of the court of wards. Soon after this, the earl of Somerset being convicted of the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, Sir George Villiers began to reign unrivalled in the king's favour, and was advanced to new honours; for in 1616, he was made master of the horse, knight of the Garter, and a baron and viscount of the realm, by the styles and titles of baron Whaddon, and viscount Villiers. And on the fifth of January, A. D. 1616-17, he was created earl of Buckingham, in the presence-chamber at Whitehall; and on the succeeding New-Year's-day, his lordship was raised to the dignity of a marquis, being stiled marquis of Buckingham, but without any other solemnity, than the delivery of the patent.

On the thirtieth of January, A. D. 1617-18, he was constituted lord admiral of England, and shortly after, chief justice in eyre of all the parks and and forests south of Trent, master of the King's-Bench office, high-steward of Westminster, constable of Windsor-castle, and elected chancellor of the university of Cambridge. With these great honours and employments, he was likewise the sole dispenser of the king's favours, in the distribution of which he was guided more by the rules of appetite than judgment, and so exalted almost all his own numerous family and dependants. In the mean time he so failed in his duty to prince Charles, that he was at one time very near striking his highness, who had therefore conceived the greatest indignation against him; but he had the art thoroughly to remove this, and entirely fixed himself in his favour, by being the sole contriver of that most extraordinary journey which they took into Spain, in 1623. While they continued in that kingdom, the Spaniards disrelished him for the great familiarity he used towards the prince, which, together with his personal animosity against the duke of Olivarrez, the sole favourite of the Spanish court, was the reason that this journey had no other effect, than entirely to dissolve the Spanish match, so many years in agitation. During his abode in Spain (on the eighteenth of May) he added to his other titles, those of earl of Coventry and duke of Buckingham; and on his return from thence, he was made lord-warden of the cinque ports, and steward of the manor of Hampton-court. The prince's safe return to England was not only infinite delight to the king, but was accompanied with the most universal rejoicing through the kingdom, that the nation had ever been acquainted with; in which the duke had so full a share, that the imprudence and presumption in carrying the prince into Spain, were totally forgotten or not remembered with any reference to him, and the merit and obligation in bringing him home, highly magnified every where. However, the undertaking of this journey had been so contrary to the king's inclination, that afterwards he never really affected the duke, but retained as sharp a memory of it as his nature was capable of. His majesty's indisposition towards him was exceedingly encreased during the sitting of the parliament, soon after the prince's return from Spain, in which the duke endeavoured to appear very popular; and having gained the leading men of both houses to espouse his interests, engaged the king in a war with Spain, and totally ruined the earl of Middlesex, lord-high-treasurer of England, who presuming upon his majesty's displeasure against him, had dared to dispute his commands.

After the death of that monarch, the duke continued in the same degree of favour with Charles I. which he had enjoyed for many years under his father; and in May, 1625, was sent to France, to conduct into England, the queen, Henrietta Maria; in which embassy he had the ambition to fix his eyes upon, and dedicate his most violent affection to Anne of Austria, the queen of France, and to pursue it with most importunate addresses. But being disappointed in that affair, he took all opportunities to incense the king against France, and to dispose him to assist the Protestants of that nation against their prince; and at the same time to alienate his majesty's heart from his young queen. After his return from France, he was employed in conjunction with the earl of Holland, at the Hague, for entering into a league with the States of the United Provinces, against the emperor and king of Spain. But the same year, finding himself attacked in parliament, as the public grievance of the nation, he persuaded his majesty to an abrupt dissolution of that assembly. At the coronation of the king, on the second of February, A. D. 1625-6, he was lord-high-constable for the occasion; but being impeached in the parliament, that sat four days after, of high crimes and misdemeanors, in thirteen articles, the king impatient of all proceedings against him, immediately dissolved it, though at a crisis when he was actually engaged in a war with Spain; and though within a month after the dissolution, a new war was entered into against France, in which the duke being employed both as admiral and general, proved very unsuccessful in the descent upon the Isle of Rhee, in August, 1627. To repair the disgrace of this, he resolved upon a second expedition against the French, and accordingly in August the year following, he came to Portsmouth, to see that all things were put in order for the service, and intended to embark there for the relief of Rochelle, then besieged by the French king; but while he was there, one John Felton, born in Suffolk, and bred a soldier, but of a melancholy constitution, being lieutenant in Sir James Ramsey's regiment, pressed into an inner chamber, where he was at breakfast with Monsieur Soubiez, Sir Thomas Fryer, and divers other persons of quality. Whence, expecting his passage through a lobby betwixt that and the next room, where there staid many expecting him, in his passage through this lobby, (which was somewhat darker than the other room) Sir Thomas walking by his side, and discoursing with him: in the very moment that they parted, Felton, with a back blow, stabbed him in the left side, leaving the knife in his body; which the duke himself immediately pulled out, but directly sunk down and expired. Which sudden act so much amazed all that were at hand, that no man took notice of the assassin, so that he might easily have passed away undiscovered; but that glorying in what he had thus done, he freely revealed himself.

This happened on the twenty-third of August, A. D. 1628, when he had fully completed his thirty sixth year and three days more: his duchess in the house in an upper room, scarce out of bed, and the court not much more than six miles distant. His grace's remains were brought to Walingford-house, in Westminster, and were honourably interred in King Henry VIIIth's chapel, (on the north side) where he has a most noble monument erected to his memory. And the unhappy perpetrator of this horrid tragedy, at his trial, became a great penitent, acknowledging that he had no other inducement, or encouragement, to commit the fact, than what the melancholy of his nature, and the belief that he should do God and his country good service, by destroying an enemy to both, had suggested to him.

His grace was of a noble and generous disposition, and of such other endowments, as made him capable of being a great favourite to a great king; and he understood the arts of a court, and all the learning that it professed there exactly well. He had obtained a quick conception and apprehension of business, and had the habit of speaking very gracefully and pertinently. He was of a most flowing courtesy and affability to all men who made any address to him; and so desirous to oblige them, that he did not enough consider the value of the obligation, or the merit of the person whom he chose to oblige; from which, much of his misfortune resulted. He was of a courage not to be daunted, which was manifested in all his actions, and his contests with particular persons of the greatest reputation, and especially in his whole demeanor at the Isle of Rhee, both at landing, and in the retreat; in both which no man was more fearless, and more ready to expose himself to the most imminent dangers. His zeal for his friends was very vehement, and his enmities equally strong. His single misfortune was, (which indeed was productive of many greater) that he never made a noble or worthy friendship with any one man so near his equal, that he would frankly advise him for his honour and true interests, against the torrent of his impetuous passions. Such is the character given of him by lord Clarendon.

He married in June, 1621, Catherine, daughter and sole heir to Francis, earl of Rutland, by whom he had three sons and one daughter. The latter, whose name was Mary, had by letters patent, bearing date August the thirty-first, A. D. 1628, the title of duchess of Buckingham limited to her in case of failure of issue male, to her father. She was first married to Charles, lord Herbert, eldest son of Philip, earl of Pembroke; secondly, to James Stuart, duke of Richmond and Lenox, by whom she had a daughter, Mary, married to Richard Butler, earl of Arran, but died without issue. She married, thirdly, Thomas Howard, brother to Charles, earl of Carlisle.

Of the sons, James Villiers, the eldest, died young, in 1626; and the youngest, Francis Villiers, was slain in the service of king Charles I. in an encounter with the parliament forces, at or near Kingston upon Thames, on the seventh of July, A. D. 1648, unmarried.

The second, but eldest surviving son,

GEORGE VILLIERS, succeeded his father as DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, &c. and in right of his mother Catherine, the only child of Francis, earl of Rutland, claimed the title of lord Roos, and was allowed it. He married Mary, daughter and heir of Thomas, lord Fairfax, of Cameron, the famous parliament general, by his wife, daughter and coheir to Horatio, lord Vere, of Tilbury, and died without issue, in a poor cottage, in Yorkshire, on the sixteenth of April, A. D. 1687.

His grace was installed knight of the Garter, on the fifteenth of April, A. D. 1661, and was master of the horse to his majesty Charles II. as also lord-lieutenant of the county of York. He was remarkable for a continual flow of wit and humour; but the ill nature and indecency which occasionally hurried away his muse, gave general offence. He began life with all the advantages of fortune and person which a nobleman could covet, and afterwards, by the favour of Charles I. had large opportunities of making himself as considerable as his deceased father had been. But he miserably wasted his estate, forfeited his honour, damned his reputation, and, at the time of his death, is said to have wanted even the necessaries of life, and not to have had one friend in the world. The many scenes of life which his grace went through, would furnish ample matter for history, but no entertainment: we shall therefore leave this younger branch of the Villiers family extinct in him, and follow the descendants of

Sir GEORGE VILLIERS, by his first wife already mentioned. The issue of that marriage were, three daughters,

1. Elizabeth, who married John, lord Butler, of Bramfield.

2. Anne, who married Sir William Washington, of Packington, Leicestershire.

3. Frances.

And two sons; the first of which,

Sir WILLIAM VILLIERS, succeeded his father at his decease, on the fourth of January, A. D. 1605. He was sheriff of the county of Leicester, in the sixth of James I. On the nineteenth of July, A. D. 1619, he married, first, Anne, daughter of Sir Edward Griffin, of Dingley, in Northamptonshire, by whom he had no issue; and marrying, secondly, Anne, daughter of Richard Fines, lord Say and Sele, and widow of Henry Cave, he had also no issue; but by his third wife, a daughter of Robert Roper, of Hever, in Derbyshire, he had a son and successor, Sir GEORGE VILLIERS, baronet, whose son, Sir WILLIAM VILLIERS, of Brokesby, baronet, dying on the twenty-seventh of February, A. D. 1711, without issue, that honour became extinct. The mother of this Sir William was Penelope, daughter of Sir John Denham, of Blechingley, in the county of Oxford.

The second son of Sir George Villiers, by his first wife, was

Sir EDWARD VILLIERS, knighted at Windsor, 1616. In 1620, he was sent ambassador to Bohemia; and on the twenty-seventh of May, A. D. 1625, was, by the interest of his half-brother, the duke of Buckingham, made president of Munster, in Ireland. He married Barbara, daughter of Sir John St. John, of Lydiard Tregore, Wilts, and niece of Oliver St. John, who was created viscount Grandison, in Ireland, with limitation of that honour to her posterity. He died on the seventh of September, A. D. 1626, lamented by the whole province, wherein he had lived justly and hospitably since the time of his appointment as governor, and was buried in the earl of Cork's chapel, at Youghall, where these lines are inscribed to his memory:

Munster may curse the time that Villiers came
To make us worse, by leaving such a name;
Of noble parts, as none can imitate
But those whose hearts are married to the state:
But if they press to imitate his fame,
Munster may bless the time that Villiers came.

The issue of this incomparable pair (for the lady was no less eminent in works of piety, &c.) were four sons and three daughters.

1. Barbara, married to Thomas Wenman, son and heir to Philip, viscount Wenman; and after his decease to James Howard, earl of Suffolk.

2. Anne.

3. Ellen.

3. Ellen. The four sons were,

1. William Villiers, who succeeded his great uncle, Oliver St. John, as viscount Grandison, A. D. 1630. Upon the breaking out of the rebellion he espoused the royal cause, and signalized himself in the service on several occasions; but at the siege of Bristol, on the twenty-sixth of July, A. D. 1643, was unfortunately wounded, from whence he was carried to Oxford, where he died in the August following, in the thirtieth year of his age; and has a noble monument erected to his memory in the cathedral of Christ-Church, where he was buried by Barbara, duchess of Cleveland, his only daughter and heir by his wife Mary, daughter of Paul, viscount Banning, who after his death married Charles Villiers, earl of Anglesey. For the descendants of the above-named Barbara Villiers, see the account of the Cleveland family.

2. John Villiers, who succeeded his brother as viscount Grandison. He married Catherine, daughter of John Clarke, of Ardington, in the county of Buckingham, esquire; but, dying without issue, was succeeded in his Irish honours by his next brother,

3. George Villiers, whose grandson was created earl Grandison, in Ireland, by George I.

4. SIR EDWARD VILLIERS, knighted for his loyalty to Charles II. April 7, A. D. 1680. He was knight-marshal to that king and his successor. He was also colonel of the duchess of York's regiment; and governor of Tinmouth-castle. He married Frances, youngest daughter to Theophilus Howard, earl of Suffolk: and dying in June, 1689, had sepulture in Westminster-Abbey. His issue were two sons, of which the youngest, Henry Villiers, was under his father in the duchess of York's regiment; afterwards governor of Tinmouth-castle; and at length an officer of great distinction.

Also six daughters.

1. Elizabeth, married to George, third son of William, duke of Hamilton.

2. Catherine, married A. D. 1685, first to Lewis de Puissar, marquis of Puissar, in France; secondly, to William Villiers, son of George, viscount Grandison.

3. Barbara, married John Berkeley, viscount Fitzharding.

4. Anne, married William Bentinck, earl of Portland. She died, 1689.

5. Henrietta, married, A. D. 1695, John, earl of Breadalbin, in Scotland. She died February 1, A. D. 1720.

6. Mary, married to William, earl of Inchiquin; and died A. D. 1753.

(First Earl.) SIR EDWARD VILLIERS, the eldest son, succeeded his father in the office of knight-marshal; and was thereupon knighted. He had the honour of waiting upon the princess Mary into Holland, after the marriage with the prince of Orange, with whom he came into England, in 1688. The success which attended that expedition proved the ennobling of this elder branch of the Villiers's family: for king William and queen Mary were no sooner proclaimed, than he began to reap some benefit from their favour, being appointed master of the horse to the queen in the first arrangement of her majesty's household. By letters patent, bearing date the twentieth of March, A. D. 1691, he was created baron Villiers, of Hoo, and viscount Villiers, of Dartford, in Kent. In 1695, he was sent envoy extraordinary to the Hague, where he supported the honour of the king at a congress; and in his private capacity displayed a species of munificence that reflected honour upon his country.

In April, A. D. 1697, he was appointed one of the lords justices of Ireland; and about the same time was constituted one of the plenipotentiaries for the treaty of Ryswick. On the twenty-ninth of October, that year, he was appointed ambassador extraordinary to the States-General, having been created sixteen days before, by letters patent, earl of Jersey. Returning from the States-General, he was sworn of the privy-council on the twenty-fifth of November, that year; and in 1698, he was appointed ambassador extraordinary to the court of France; and arrived at Paris, making a most magnificent public entry on the fourth of January, A. D. 1698-9. On the fourteenth of May following, having finished his embassy, he was appointed one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state. He was several times one of the lords justices in his majesty's absence. On the fourth of October, A. D. 1699, he arrived at Loo, pursuant to an order from the king; and that year was appointed one of the plenipotentiaries for the second treaty of partition; and on the twenty-fourth of June, A. D. 1700, he became lord-chamberlain to the king's household. In which last capacity he acted under her majesty queen Anne upon her accession, by whom he was also named of the privy-council. He continued in these offices till A. D. 1704, when he resigned his chamberlain's place, and was not after that in the public service. About A. D. 1711, affairs took another turn, and he was to have been appointed lord privy-seal on the twenty-sixth of August, but his death upon that very day rendered her majesty's intentions abortive. He died in the fifty-sixth year of his age.

He married Barbara, daughter to William Chiffinch, esquire, closet-keeper to king Charles II. by whom he had two sons and a daughter, Mary, married first to Thomas Thynn, of Old Windsor, in Berkshire; and, secondly, George Granville, lord Landsdown. She died January 17, 1734-5. The younger son, Henry Villiers, died in May, A. D. 1743, without issue; and the elder, (Second Earl.) WILLIAM VILLIERS, succeeded as earl of Jersey, &c. In 1705, he was elected knight of the shire for the county of Kent. He married Judith, daughter of Frederic Hern, of the city of London, member of parliament for Dartmouth in the reign of queen Anne; and by her, who surviving him, died in July, A. D. 1735, and was interred at St. Bridget's church, London, he had issue two sons and a daughter; Barbara, married in 1725 to Sir William Blacket, of New-castle upon Tyne, baronet, who dying on the twenty-seventh of August, A. D. 1728, she on the thirteenth of March following married Buffy Mansel, esquire, afterwards lord Mansel, who died November 29, A. D. 1750, leaving an only daughter, Barbara, his sole heir, and the barony became extinct. Of the younger son, THOMAS VILLIERS, created BARON HYDE, we shall speak in his proper place as a peer.

His lordship dying on the thirteenth of July, A. D. 1721, was buried at Westerham, in Kent, and

POWLETT, EARL of POWLETT.

25

and the family honours, titles, &c. devolved to his eldest son,

(Third, and present Earl.) WILLIAM VILLIERS. On the twenty-third of June, A. D. 1733, he was appointed lord of the bed-chamber to Frederic, late prince of Wales; and on the twelfth of May, A. D. 1740, he was appointed lord chief justice in eyre, south of Trent, which he afterwards resigned. His lordship is of the king's most honourable privy-council.

He married in June, A. D. 1733, Anne, daughter to Scroop, duke of Bridgewater, and widow of Wriothesly, duke of Bedford; and by her ladyship, who died in June, A. D. 1762, had issue two sons.

1. Frederic William, called viscount Villiers, born A. D. 1734, who died Oct. 2742.

2. George Buffy, now called viscount Villiers, born June 9, A. D. 1735. In June, 1756, he was elected member of parliament for Tamworth, and served in the present parliament for Aldborough, in Yorkshire. In July, 1765, he was appointed vice-chamberlain to the king, and sworn of the privy-council.

(TITLES.) William Villiers, earl of Jersey, viscount Villiers, of Dartford, and baron Villiers, of Hoo.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Villiers, of Hoo, in Kent, and viscount Villiers, of Dartford, in the said county, March 20, A. D. 1690, (3 William and Mary) and earl of the Island of Jersey, Oct. 13, A. D. 1697, (9 William III.)

(ARMS.) Pearl on a cross of St. George, ruby, five escallop shells, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a lion rampant; pearl, and ducally crowned; topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two lions, pearl, crowned with ducal coronets, topaz, each having a plain collar, ruby, charged with three escallop shells, as in the coat.

(MOTTO.) "Fidei Coticula Crux."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Middleton Stony; Oxfordshire.

POWLETT, Earl of POWLETT.

SIR JOHN POWLETT, of Gotehurst, in Somersetshire, who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of William Credi, had two sons, as may be seen in the account of his grace the duke of Bolton's family, where also the reader may trace the origin of this ancient family. From the younger son the duke is lineally descended. The earl Powlett is certainly the elder branch, and claims his descent from the elder of these two sons.

SIR THOMAS POWLETT, who was seated also at Gotehurst. He married Alice, daughter of William Powlett, of Beer, by whom he had a son,

JOHN POWLETT, who married Idonea Cale, of Somersetshire, and was succeeded by an only son,

SIR THOMAS POWLETT, who by his wife Margaret, daughter and heir of Henry Burton, esq; had issue two sons and a daughter, Elizabeth, married, first, to Robert Burton, esquire, and secondly, to William Bygberie. Of the sons, John, the youngest, was seated at Gotehurst; and the eldest,

SIR WILLIAM POWLETT, succeeded to all the rest of the family possessions. He was married to Elizabeth, daughter and heir to John Deneband, of Hinton St. George, by whom he had issue two daughters; Elizabeth, married to Sir John Powlett, knight of the Bath, ancestor to the duke of Bolton, and Anne, to Sir William Carey, of Cockington, ancestor of the lords Falkland and Hunsdon; also one son and successor,

SIR AMIAS POWLETT, who was knighted for his gallant behaviour at the battle of Newark; when the earl of Lincoln and Lambert Simnel were defeated. In the reign of king Henry VII. when cardinal Wolsey was only a schoolmaster at Lymington, Sir Amias, for some misdemeanor, clapped him in the stocks, which the cardinal took all ways to resent, when he grew into favour. He re-edified the gate of the Middle-Temple, of which he was treasurer, and dying A. D. 1538, was buried at Chercomb.

He married, first, Margaret, sister to that Sir John Powlett, who had wedded his sister Elizabeth, but by her had no issue. By his second wife, Lora, daughter of Sir William Kellway, of Rockborn, in the county of Southampton, he had issue one daughter, Elizabeth, married, first, to John Sydenham, esquire, afterwards knighted; secondly, to John Carlswell, esquire, and thirdly, to Henry Coppleston, of Coppleston, in Devonshire, esquire. The sons were, Hugh, John, and Henry, of which, the eldest,

SIR HUGH POWLETT, was knighted for his services in the French wars, was made governor of the Isle of Jersey, and of Mount Orguil castle; also governor of Havre de Grace. He married, first, Elizabeth Blount; but she dying without issue, he married, secondly, Philippa, daughter of Sir Lewis Pollard, of King's Nimpton, in Devonshire, knight, by whom he had issue, Joane, married to Christopher Coppleston, of Coppleston, in Devonshire, and three sons, Amias, Nicholas, and George;

George, of which the eldest son, in 1571, at his father's demise,

Sir AMIAS POWLETT, succeeded to the government of the Isle of Jersey. He was chancellor of the order of the Garter, one of the privy-council to queen Elizabeth, and with Sir Dru Drury, knight, in 1582, had the charge of Mary, queen of Scots, some time before, and when she suffered death shortly after. In 1576 he was ambassador in France, and we find him enrolled as custos rotulorum of the county of Somerset. He died A. D. 1588, and was buried at St. Martin's church in London. He married Catherine, daughter and heir of Anthony Harvey, of Columb John, in Devonshire, and had issue three daughters; Joane, the wife of Robert Haydon, of Bowood, in Devonshire; Sarah, to Sir Francis Vincent, of Stoke d'Abernon, in Surry, knight; and Elizabeth, who died unmarried.

Also three sons,

1. Hugh Powlett, who died in his infancy.
2. Anthony Powlett.
3. George Powlett, of Gotehurst, in Somersetshire, in right of his wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Edward Powlett, esquire, lineally descended from John Powlett, of Gotehurst, before mentioned.

Sir ANTHONY POWLETT, eldest surviving son of Sir Amias, was appointed governor of the Island of Jersey, in the room of his father, and captain of the guard to queen Elizabeth, from whom he received the honour of knighthood. He died in 1603, leaving issue by Catherine, sole heir to Henry, lord Norris, whom she married in 1583, a daughter, Margery, married to John Sydenham, of Combe, in the county of Somerset, and two sons, John and Philip; from the latter of which (who by some is called Henry) the family at Preston is descended.

The eldest son,

(First Lord.) JOHN POWLETT, was seated at Hinton St. George, as his predecessors had been. Fuller says of him, that he was a very accomplished gentleman, of quick and clear parts, and a bountiful housekeeper. By letters patent, bearing date the twenty-third of June, 1627, he was created a baron of the realm, by the stile and title of baron Powlett, of Hinton St. George. His loyalty to king Charles I. began to exert itself with the troubles of that reign; and he was so much in that monarch's confidence, that he was commissioned to raise a regiment of fifteen hundred foot for his majesty's service.

In 1644, he was one of the principal commanders that besieged Lyme, in Dorsetshire, which after many vigorous attacks, had the fortune to be relieved by the earl of Warwick, in regard to provision; and afterwards more materially supported by the earl of Essex, who raised the siege. Upon this occasion, the parliament voted one thousand pounds per annum, out of this nobleman's estate, in recompence to the oppressed inhabitants of that place. The same year he met the king a mile from Exeter, in order to conduct him to that city; and on the thirtieth of September following, had the honour to entertain him at his seat at Hinton St. George. The following year, his majesty proving unsuccessful in all his undertakings, and the kingdom being reduced to the obedience of the parliament, his lordship began to think of compounding for his estate, which, at last, with much difficulty, was effected within three years. The mulct upon this occasion was four thousand two hundred pounds, and his son at the same time paid three thousand seven hundred and sixty, as a composition for his.

He died on the twentieth of March, A. D. 1649, having married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Christopher Kenn, of Kenn Court, in Somersetshire; and by her, who surviving him, married, secondly, John Ashburnham, of Ashburnham, in the county of Suffex, esquire, he had issue five daughters.

1. Florence, married Thomas Smith, of Long Ashton, in Somersetshire, ancestor to Sir John Smith, of the same place, baronet; and after his decease, secondly, colonel Thomas Pigot, of Ireland.
2. Margaret, married, first, to Dennis Rolles, of Stephenson, in Devonshire, esquire; and, secondly, Sir Richard Cholmley, of Grosfont, in Yorkshire, knight banneret, governor of Oxminster, for Charles I. and, thirdly, to colonel Edward Cook, of Highnam, in Gloucestershire.
3. Julian, or Susan, married to Sir Michael Wharton, of Beverly, in Yorkshire, knight.
4. Helen, who married William, son and heir to Sir George Wilmot, of Charlton, Berks, knight.
5. Elizabeth, married first, to William Ashburnham, of Ashburnham, in Suffex, esquire; and, secondly, to Sir William Hartop, of Rotherby, in Leicestershire.

Also three sons,

1. John Powlett.
2. Francis Powlett, who married Catherine, daughter of Dr. Robert Creighton, bishop of Bath.
3. Amias Powlett.

(Second Lord.) Sir JOHN POWLETT, (the eldest son) received the honour of knighthood in his father's life-time. In 1640, he was elected knight of the shire for the county of Somerset. He had the command of a regiment of foot after the rebellion broke out in Ireland, and served some time in that kingdom; and afterwards attended his regiment, in 1643, from Munster to the West. In 1645, he was besieged in the castle of Winchester, (where lord Ogle was commander in chief) by Oliver Cromwell, who first summoned them to surrender; but being refused, the castle was battered so long with great guns, that at length a breach was made in the walls; upon which the garrison surrendered, and both officers and soldiers were carried to Woodstock. He lived to see the Restoration, but without meeting with any rewards for his loyalty, notwithstanding the singular services performed, and the severe hardships endured by his father and himself, in support of the royal family.

He married, first, Catherine, daughter and co-heir of Horatio, lord Vere, baron of Tilbury, and widow of Sir John St. John, by whom he had issue two sons;

1. John Powlett.
 2. Horatio Powlett.
- And three daughters,

1. Elizabeth,

1. Elizabeth, married to Sir John Sydenham, of Brimpton, in Somersetshire, baronet, who dying, A. D. 1669, was buried at Brimpton.

2. Vere, died unmarried.

3. Catherine, married to ——— Johnston.

By his second lady, Anne, daughter and coheir of Sir Robert Brown, of Walcot, in Northamptonshire, he had issue two sons;

1. Amias Powlett.

2. Charles Powlett.

Also four daughters;

1. Anne,

2. Florence, } who all died young.

3. Mary,

4. Margaret, married to Francis Fulford, of Fulford, in Devonshire.

His lordship dying at his manor house of Court de Weeke, in the county of Somerset, on the fifteenth of September, A. D. 1665, in the fiftieth year of his age, was buried at Hinton St. George. The titles, honours, &c. devolved upon his eldest son, (Third Lord.) JOHN POWLETT, of whom in a public capacity, we have only to say, that on the sixth of July, A. D. 1674, he was appointed lord-lieutenant of the county of Dorset. He married, first, Essex, daughter of Alexander Popham, of Littlecote, in Wiltshire, by whom he had two daughters.

1. Catherine, who became the second wife of William, lord Lempster.

2. Letitia, married to Sir William Monson, of Broxburn, in Hertfordshire, baronet.

His lordship married, secondly, Susan, daughter of Philip, earl of Pembroke, by whom he had an only son and heir, (First Earl.) JOHN POWLETT, who, upon the death of his father, A. D. 1680, succeeded to the barony. He was of the privy-council to queen Anne, and in 1706, was one of the commissioners for the treaty of Union. By letters patent, bearing date December the twenty-ninth, that year, he was created viscount of Hinton St. George, and earl Powlett. On the eighth of August, A. D. 1710, he was appointed first commissioner of the treasury; and on the thirteenth of June, A. D. 1711, having resigned that office, he was constituted lord-steward of her majesty's household. He was lord-lieutenant of the county of Devon, and was appointed custos rotulorum of Somersetshire, on the second of March, A. D. 1712-13. On the fourth of August following, he was installed knight of the Garter, having been elected to that honour on the twenty-sixth of October the preceding year. Retiring latterly from public employ, he spent the greatest part of his time in the country. He departed this life on the twenty-eighth of May, A. D. 1743, in the eighty-first year of his age.

He married Bridget, daughter and coheir to Peregrine Bertie, esquire, brother to Robert, earl of Lindsey, by whom he had four daughters;

1. Bridget, born March 1, A. D. 1702, married on the twenty-first of May, A. D. 1724, to Pollexfen Bastard, of Ketley, in Devonshire, esquire.

2. Catherine, born March 23, A. D. 1706, married on the twenty-sixth of June, A. D. 1725, to John Parker of Burrington, in the aforesaid county, esquire. She died August 16, A. D. 1758.

3. Susannah, born April 17, A. D. 1714.

4. Rebecca, born April 9, A. D. 1716; who died unmarried on the third of March, A. D. 1765, and was buried at Hinton St. George, in Somersetshire.

Also four sons; the two eldest twins, born December 10, 1708.

1. John Powlett, his successor.

2. Peregrine Powlett, who was member of parliament for Bossiney in 1737; and for Bridgewater in 1747. He died August 26, A. D. 1752, and was buried at Hinton St. George.

3. Vere Powlett, the present earl.

4. Anne Powlett, born July 11, A. D. 1711.

The eldest son,

(Second Earl.) JOHN POWLETT, succeeded his father, having been summoned up by writ to the house of peers on the seventeenth of January, A. D. 1733-4. He was appointed lord of the bed-chamber to his late majesty, which post he resigned in March, A. D. 1755. He was constituted lord-lieutenant of the county of Somerset on the twenty-first of March, A. D. 1743.

His lordship died unmarried on the fifth of November, A. D. 1764, and was buried at Hinton St. George. For want of issue the honours of the family fell to (Third, and present Earl.) VERE POWLETT, born May 18, A. D. 1710, who was member of parliament for Bridgewater; and is now recorder of Bridgewater. His lordship married in 1754, Mary, daughter of Richard Butt, of Arlingham, in the county of Gloucester, by whom he has issue,

1. John Powlett, called viscount Hinton, born in April, A. D. 1756.

2. Vere Powlett.

(TITLES.) Vere Powlett, earl, viscount, and baron Powlett, of Hinton St. George.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Powlett, of Hinton St. George, in the county of Somerset, June 23, 1627. (3 Charles I.) viscount of the same place, and earl Powlett, December 24, 1706. (5 of queen Anne.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth, diamond, three swords in pile, their points to the base, pearl, pomels and hilts, topaz, for Powlett. Second and third, party per cross, ruby and topaz, in the first quarter, a mullet, pearl, for Vere.

(CREST.) On a wreath, an arm embowed and brandishing a broad sword, all proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side a savage man, on the sinister, a woman, both of the last wreathed about their temples and loins, with ivy, emerald.

(MOTTO.) "Gardez le Foy."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Hinton St. George, in the county of Somerset; and at Buckland, in the county of Dorset.

CHOLMONDELEY, Earl of CHOLMONDELEY.

IT is universally allowed that the antiquity of this noble family in Cheshire was equal, if not superior, to most others; and it is very certain that they assumed their surname from the lordship of Cholmondeley (written then Calmundele*) which, together with the barony of Malpas, and many other large possessions †, came to them by a marriage with Letitia, sole daughter and heir to Robert, baron of Malpas, son of Hugh, lord of Malpas. This lady became the wife of William le Belward, whose father, John le Belward (the first we meet with of the family) lived in the time of William I. and was seated at Depinbeeche, or Malpas. The barony, &c. descended to the son of this marriage,

WILLIAM LE BELWARD, who married Beatrix, daughter of Hugh Kiveliock, earl of Chester, and coheir to her brother Ranulph. The issue of this marriage were three sons,

1. David, from whom descended Sir Richard Egerton, knight, whose natural son, Thomas, lord Ellesmere, was ancestor to the earls and dukes of Bridgewater ‡.

2. Robert, who received from his father the lordship of Cholmondeley, and was the first who assumed that surname.

3. Richard was seated at Dukenton; and had also Colgrave and Oberton from his father.

From the second son,

ROBERT DE CHOLMONDELEY, lineally descended, SIR HUGH COLMONDELEY. For the intermediate continuators of the male line, their respective marriages, deaths, and issue, we refer to the table, having nothing material in an historical way to offer, more than that they were always men of weight and property, and for the most part beloved by their country. This Sir Hugh was born in 1512; and at the age of twenty-one was knighted at Leith for his valiant behaviour in an expedition made into Scotland under the direction of the duke of Norfolk. In the reign of Philip and Mary, when the Scots invaded England, A. D. 1557, and threatened to besiege Berwick, he joined the earl of Danby, at the head of an hundred able bodied men, raised at his own expence, in order to repel them.

He was a person of great honour; and for his admirable gifts of wisdom, temperance, continency, liberality, hospitality, and godly departure at his end, left few who were his equals; and his death was lamented by all sorts of people, having for fifty years together been esteemed the father of his country, by the good offices he did to all who applied themselves to him, which appears from many arbitrations on record, that were left to his determination. He was five times sheriff of Cheshire, as also sheriff of Flintshire, for some years, and a long time one of the two only deputy-lieutenants of Cheshire; and for a good space vice-president of the marches of Wales, in the absence of the famous Sir Henry Sidney, knight, lord-deputy of Ireland. He departed this life in the eighty-third year of his age, on the sixth day of January, A. D. 1597, seized (as the inquisition taken after his death shews) of the manor of Cholmondeley, and of twenty-two messuages, four cottages, two water-mills, and one wind-mill, &c. in Cholmondeley; as also of the manor or barony of Wich-Malbank, with all the rents, reversions, services, &c. the manor of Barksford, alias Basford, with the appurtenances, and the several manors of Moldsworth, Bickley, Norbury, with Alhurst, Aston, juxta Mondrem, Church-Minsule, two parts of the manor of Copenhurst, the manors of Newbald and Edleston juxta Wich-Malbank, and the fourth part of the vill of Burwardley; with divers lands and tenements in Henhull, alias Hendle, Barton, Houghton, Horton, Tilston, Rowton, alias Row-Christleton, Wirfwall, Bradley, Boughton, Haslington, Badington, Chowley, Plumley, two messuages and two salt-works in North-Wich, and lands in Worleston, Wrenbury, Frith, Egerton, Church-Shocklack, and Shocklach-Oyat, Audlim, Swanbach, Golbourne, Bellow juxta Tattenhall, Church-Copenhall, Monks-Copenhall, Woodbanke, alias Rough-shot-wicke infra Great Saughall, Bebyngton, St. Ann's Heys, in the parish of Plumstall, &c. Backford, Newhall; and of one capital messuage called Cholmondley-house, in the parish of St. John Baptist in the suburbs of the city of Chester. Also of the manors of Hinton and Madford in Somersetshire, and lands in Shropshire and Flintshire. He lies buried in the chancel belonging to the family in the church of Malpas, and a noble monument is erected there, his effigies, with his lady by him, lying thereon.

He married two wives: by Mary his last lady, daughter to Sir William Griffith, of Pentrim, relict of Sir Randle Brereton of Malpas, he had no issue. His first lady was Anne, daughter and co-

* This name has been written twenty-five different ways, Chelmundele, Chelmundelly, Chelmonsligh, Chelmundelegh, Chelmonleigh, &c. &c.

† The manors of Bedesfeld, Burwardstone, Hurdinebury, Tillestone, Christleton, Eghe, Hantone, Lawchedone, Doc-trinton, Cetelea, Broffe, Overtone, Cuntitone, Sochelicke, Tufgeham, Bicheley, Bieretone, Burwardesley, Creuhalle, Tidnislane, Bristone, Bolebery, Tevertone, Spurestowe, Fenton, Sudetone, Butelege, and Ceneche.

‡ See page 432.

heir to George Dorman, of Malpas, by Agnes, his wife, daughter and heir of Thomas Hill, of Malpas, son of Humphry Hill, and of Anne, his wife, daughter and coheir of John Bird, of Chorlton, by Catharine, his wife, aunt and heir of David de Malpas, of Hampton and Bickerton, in Cheshire; and the said Humphry Hill was lineally descended from Hugh Hill, who in the reign of king Edward the Third, married Eleanor, daughter and coheir of Hugh de Wloukeshlow, lord of Wloukeshlow, in Shropshire; and the coats of arms of these heiresses, the present earl of Cholmondeley has a right to quarter. Sir Hugh had issue (by the aforesaid Anne) three sons and a daughter; Frances, married to Thomas Wilbraham, of Woodhey, in Cheshire, esquire, father (by her) of Sir Richard Wilbraham, knight and baronet, whose heirs were the late earl of Bradford, and present earl of Dyferr. Of Sir Hugh's three sons, only the eldest left issue, who was named after his father, Hugh. Which

HUGH CHOLMONDELEY, of Cholmondeley, was knighted in the life-time of his father, in the memorable year of the Spanish invasion, A. D. 1588, and at his father's decease, in 39 Elizabeth, was forty-six years of age and more. He was heir to his virtues, as well as to his estate, and gave many proofs of an honourable benevolence, and a steady adherence to the protestant religion, and the interests of his country. Before he was twenty-one years of age, he headed one hundred and thirty men, raised by his father's interests and expence, and marched with them for the suppression of that rebellion in the North, begun in the twelfth year of queen Elizabeth, under the leading of the earls of Westmorland and Northumberland, for restoring the Romish religion: and the queen's forces having put them to flight, those earls, with other of the conspirators, were attainted in parliament. He was the queen's escheator of the county of Chester, from 1591 to 1599, as also sheriff of the same county; and in the forty-second of Elizabeth, was in a special commission with the lord chancellor Egerton, Thomas, lord Buckhurst, lord treasurer of England, and others, for the suppression of schism. He increased his estate by his marriage, and by divers purchases, as appears by the inquisition after his death, in 43 Elizabeth, which shews that he departed this life on the twenty-third of July, the same year; and that Robert Cholmondeley, esquire, was his eldest son and heir, and of the age of seventeen years, on the sixteenth of June last past. He lies buried with his ancestors in the chancel of the family, in the church of Malpas, where his lady had also sepulture, who surviving him, died on the fifteenth of August, A. D. 1626. Her name was Mary, and she was sole daughter and heir of Christopher Holford, of Holford, esquire, by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter and coheir of Sir Randle Manwaring, of Pever and Badeley, in Cheshire, elder brother to Philip Manwaring, esquire; of whom descended Sir Thomas Manwaring, knight and baronet. The said Christopher Holford was grandson and heir to Sir John Holford, and of Margery, his wife, sole daughter and heir of Ralph Brereton, of Escoyd, second son of Randle Brereton, grandson and heir of Sir Randle Brereton, of Malpas, knight, and of Alice, his wife, daughter and coheir to William de Ipston, by Maud, heir to Sir Robert Swynerton, knight, by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter and coheir to Sir Nicholas Beake, and of Jane, his wife, only daughter of Ralph, earl of Stafford, by his second wife, Catharine, daughter and coheir of Sir John de Hasting, of Chebsey. And this family of Cholmondeley, by the marriage of the Holfords, with the daughter and heir of Brereton, is also maternally descended from Alice, fourth daughter of David, earl of Huntington third son of Henry, earl of Huntingdon, and king of Scotland; the earldom of Huntingdon being for some time in the royal line of Scotland. And the said Alice was also, by her mother, descended from the earls of Chester, she being eldest daughter of Hugh Kivilock, earl of Chester, and sister and heir of Randle, earl of Chester.

The said lady, Mary Cholmondeley, had a great contest with George Holford, of Newborough, about the lands that descended to her by the death of her father, Christopher Holford, esquire, which after it had continued for above forty years, was at length, by the mediation of friends, composed; and on the partition, she had the manors and lordships of Holford, Bulkley, and other large possessions. This lady in her widowhood resided at Holford, which she rebuilt and enlarged; and, by conducting with spirit the great suit before-mentioned, was stiled by king James I. "The Bold Lady of Cheshire." She had issue by Sir Hugh Cholmondeley, six sons and three daughters;

1. Mary, married to Sir George Calveley, of Ley, in com. Cestr. knight.

2. Lettice, wife to Sir Richard Grosvenor of Eaton, knight and baronet, ancestor by her to the present lord Grosvenor; and

3. Frances, wedded to Peter Venables, baron of Kinderton. Of the sons, three died unmarried; the others were,

1. Robert, Cholmondeley; who being a well-deserving person, and enjoying an ample estate, was, upon the twenty-ninth of June, (1611) 9 Jac. I. advanced to the dignity of a baronet, being the thirty-sixth in order of creation; also by king Charles I. was advanced to the degree of a viscount of the kingdom of Ireland, by the title of viscount Cholmondeley, of Kellis, in the province of Leinster in that realm, A. D. 1628. And afterwards, "in consideration of his special service, in raising several companies of foot in Cheshire, in order to the quenching those rebellious flames which began to appear A. D. 1632, and sending many other to the king, then at Shrewsbury (which stood him in high stead in that memorable battle of Kinton, happening soon after) as also in raising other forces for defending the city of Chester, at the first siege thereof by his majesty's adversaries in that county; and courageous adventure in the fight at Tilston-Heath; together with his great sufferings, by the plunder of his goods, and firing his houses;" was by letters patent, bearing date at Oxford, 1 Sept. 21 Car. I. created a baron of the kingdom of England, by the title of lord Cholmondeley, of Wiche-Malbank (commonly called Namptwiche) in Cheshire. And by other letters patent, bearing date on the fifth of March next ensuing, was created earl of the province of Leinster, in Ireland. When the royal power was at an end, and the whole kingdom was under the obedience of the parliament, he was suffered to compound for his estate, but paid no less a fine for the enjoyment of it, than seven thousand seven hundred and forty-two pounds. He was revered for his liberal hospitality, his conduct in the government of his country, and other virtues. He married Catharine, daughter of John, lord Stanhope, of Harrington, but died without lawful issue, on the second of October, A. D. 1659, and was buried by his lady (who deceased June 15, A. D. 1657,) on the eighth of the same month, in the chancel of the family at Malpas. Whereupon Robert, his nephew, son of Hugh, his brother, became heir to his estate.

2. Hugh Cholmondeley, esquire, married Mary, daughter of Sir John Bodville, of Bodville-castle, in Carnarvonshire, and aunt to the lady viscountess Bodmin, mother to the right honourable Ruffel Roberts, earl of Radnor: he departed this life at Bodville, on the eleventh of September, A. D. 1655, and was buried with his ancestors at Malpas, having had issue two sons and three daughters, but none of them left issue, except Robert, his eldest son.

3. Thomas Cholmondeley, seated at Vale Royal, in Cheshire. He died on the third of January, A. D. 1653, and was buried at Minshull; having married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Minshull, of Minshull, in Cheshire, he had issue, and thereby became ancestor to the Cholmondeleys now seated at Vale Royal.

We now proceed with

ROBERT CHOLMONDELEY, who, succeeding his uncle, lord Cholmondeley, and earl of Leinster, was, for his own great merits, no less than the services of his ancestors, dignified with the title of viscount Cholmondeley, of Kellis, in Ireland, formerly enjoyed by his said uncle, by letters patent, bearing date the twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1661, in the thirteenth year of king Charles II. He married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of George Cradock, of Caverswell castle, in Staffordshire, esquire; by whom he had issue one daughter, Elizabeth, who became the wife of John Egerton, of Egerton, and Oulton, in Cheshire, eldest son and heir of Sir Philip Egerton, second surviving son of Sir Rowland Egerton, of Egerton, knight and baronet, and of his lady Bridget, daughter of Arthur, lord Grey, of Wilton.

Also four sons,

1. Hugh Cholmondeley.
2. Robert Cholmondeley, who died young, in 1678.
3. George Cholmondeley.
4. Richard Cholmondeley, who died young, A. D. 1680.

Robert, the father dying in May, 1681, was succeeded in his Irish honours by his eldest son,

(First Earl.) HUGH CHOLMONDELEY, who strenuously joined the opposition to the measures of king James II. and bore no very inconsiderable part in effecting the revolution. The sense which king William and queen Mary had of his attachment, was immediately upon their accession, disclosed to all the country, by creating him a peer of England, by the title of lord Cholmondeley, of Nampwich. The letters patent bear date April 10, A. D. 1689, and the honour, for default of male issue, was limited to his brother George and his issue. His lordship was high in queen Anne's favour, into whose privy-council he was sworn on the twenty-ninth of March, A. D. 1705, and by whom, on the twenty-seventh of December, the following year, letters patent were issued forth, creating him viscount Malpas, and earl of Cholmondeley, with the same limitation as before was annexed to the barony.

On the twenty-second of April, A. D. 1708, he was appointed comptroller of the queen's household. On the tenth of May, following, he was sworn of the new privy-council, nominated pursuant to the articles of the Union; and on the sixth of October next ensuing, he was constituted treasurer of her majesty's household. In that reign he was lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Chester, and lord-lieutenant of North-Wales. But his lordship, with all his merit, could not bear up against faction; for he was removed from his employments, together with many others, in 1713. However, his majesty, George I. well knowing the integrity of the earl of Cholmondeley, immediately upon his accession re-instated him in all those honours and employments, from which his attachment to the Hanover succession, had perhaps occasioned his dismissal.

His lordship died unmarried on the eighteenth of January, A. D. 1725; the titles and honours devolved, according to the limitation of the patents, upon his next surviving brother, (Second Earl.) GEORGE CHOLMONDELEY. He was groom of the bedchamber to king William immediately upon his accession. This nobleman betook himself early to a military life; in 1685 he was appointed cornet of horse, and served in all the wars of that reign, and particularly commanded the horse grenadier-guards, at the battle of the Boyne, in Ireland. On the third of August, A. D. 1692, he was with his majesty at the battle of Steenkirk, and gave many marks of singular valour, but was unfortunately wounded. On the seventeenth of July, A. D. 1697, he was appointed brigadier general of horse; and on July the first, A. D. 1702, was by queen Anne, constituted major-general of her forces, and governor of the forts Tilbury and Gravesend; also, on the first of January, A. D. 1703-4, he was declared lieutenant-general.

On the accession of George I. he was continued in his government of the forementioned forts, as also in his regiment of horse-grenadiers. On February the eleventh, A. D. 1714-15, he was constituted captain and colonel of the third troop of horse-guards; and on the fifteenth of March following, created baron of Newborough, in the county of Wexford, in Ireland, being the first peer of that kingdom, created by George I. And his majesty taking further into consideration his great merits and services, was pleased to advance his lordship to the peerage of this kingdom, by the title of baron of Newburg, in the isle of Anglesey, by letters patent, bearing date the second of July, A. D. 1716. On succeeding his brother in his estate and titles, his majesty, majesty, on the twentieth of March, A. D. 1724-5, was pleased to appoint his lordship lord-lieutenant of the county of Chester, and of the city of Chester, and also custos rotulorum of the said county of Chester; and likewise lord-lieutenant of the counties of Denbigh, Montgomery, Flint, Merioneth, Carnarvon, and Anglesey. His lordship was also constituted on the twenty-fifth of March, A. D. 1725, governor of the town and fort of Kingston upon Hull; and on the fifteenth of April, A. D. 1727, made general of the horse; likewise in October, 1732, appointed governor of the island of Guernsey. He died May 7, 1733.

His lordship married Elizabeth, daughter to the Heer Van Baron Ruytenburgh, by Anne-Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Lewis de Nassau, lord of Beverworth, and niece to Henry de Nassau, seignior de Auverquerque, velt-marshal of the forces of the States-General, and father of Henry, late earl of Grantham. The said Elizabeth was naturalized by act of parliament, which had the royal assent on the twenty-first of January, A. D. 1703-4, and by her, who died on the sixteenth of January, A. D. 1722, his lordship had issue three sons and three daughters;

1. Henrietta, born November the twenty-sixth, 1701.

2. Elizabeth, born May the twenty-eighth, A. D. 1705, married in January, A. D. 1731, to Edward Warren, of Poynton, in Cheshire, esquire.

3. Mary, born March the ninth, A. D. 1713-14.

The sons were,

1. James Cholmondeley, born November the thirtieth, A. D. 1700, who died young.

2. George, successor to the honours, &c.

3. James Cholmondeley, born April the eighteenth, A. D. 1708. On the twelfth of May, A. D. 1725, he was appointed a major in the army, in which capacity he continued till the sixth of April, A. D. 1731, when he was constituted second lieutenant-colonel in the third troop of horse-guards; and on the seventeenth of January, A. D. 1740-1, he was appointed colonel of a regiment of foot, then to be raised. In July, 1745, being then in Flanders, at the head of a regiment of foot, late lord James Cavendish's, he was raised to the rank of a brigadier-general of his majesty's forces. Soon after which, among other general officers, he was called over to oppose the rebels in the North of England. He was present at the battle of Falkirk; but his constitution was obliged to yield to the rigour of the season, which deprived him for some time of the use of his limbs. On the twenty-third of September, A. D. 1747, he was constituted major-general; and on May the second, A. D. 1754, was raised to the rank of lieutenant-general, which he now enjoys. In 1731, he was constituted deputy-governor of Chester castle. In the first parliament of George II. he was member for Boffiney; in the second for Camelford; in the third, for the town of Montgomery. He has now the command of the sixth regiment of dragoons. He married Penelope, daughter of James Barry, earl of Barrymore, but has no issue.

(Third, and present Earl.) GEORGE CHOLMONDELEY, eldest surviving son of the late earl, was born January the second, A. D. 1702-3. He was a member of the house of commons in two parliaments, before he succeeded his father; first, on the decease of John Smith, esquire, in 1724, for the borough of Eastlow, in Cornwall; and was chosen for Windsor, in the succeeding parliament, summoned to meet November the twenty-eighth, A. D. 1727. On the first institution of the most honourable order of the Bath, he was, June the seventeenth, A. D. 1725, installed one of the knights companions; and on May the thirteenth, A. D. 1727, appointed master of the robes to his majesty. On the accession of George II. he was constituted one of the commissioners of the admiralty, and governor of Chester. And on the establishment of the household of his royal highness the prince of Wales, was appointed master of his horse. His lordship succeeding his father, was also constituted, November the second, A. D. 1727, lord-lieutenant of North-Wales, and lord-lieutenant, and custos rotulorum of the county of Chester, also chamberlain of Chester. In May, 1735, (having resigned his post of master of the horse to the prince) he was constituted one of the commissioners of the treasury; and in May, 1736, was appointed chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaster, and sworn of the privy-council. On the tenth of December, A. D. 1743, his majesty having been pleased to grant to his lordship the office of keeper of his majesty's privy-seal, he was three days after sworn into the said office at St. James's, his majesty being present in council, and took his place at the board accordingly. And on resigning it, his lordship was on December the twenty-seventh, A. D. 1744, appointed joint vice-treasurer, receiver-general, and paymaster-general of Ireland, and treasurer of war in the same kingdom. In 1745, at the breaking out of the rebellion in Scotland, his lordship raised a regiment of foot for his majesty's service. He married September the fourteenth, A. D. 1723, Mary, only daughter to the most noble and right honourable Sir Robert Walpole, late earl of Orford, by whom he had issue three sons,

1. George Cholmondeley, commonly called viscount Malpas, born on the seventeenth of October, A. D. 1724. In 1745 he served as a volunteer in Flanders, and was present at the battle of Fontenoy, immediately after which he was appointed aid-de-camp to Sir John Ligonier, and in a short time had a company in Howard's regiment of foot. He was also, about that time, appointed lieutenant-colonel of the regiment raised by his father, and already mentioned. In 1754, his lordship was chosen member of parliament for Bramber, in Sussex; and in 1761, to the present parliament for Corfe-castle, in Dorsetshire. He married on the nineteenth of January, A. D. 1746-7, Hester, daughter and heir to Sir Francis Edwards, of Shrewsbury, baronet, by whom he had issue a son, George, and a daughter Hester. He died in 1764.

2. Robert Cholmondeley, born November the first, A. D. 1727. He served abroad as an ensign of the guards, but quitting the army, he took holy orders. He married Miss Mary Woffington, and by her has had issue.

1. George-

1. George-James, born April the twenty-second, A. D. 1752.

2. Elizabeth, born January the thirty-first, A. D. 1753, who died young.

3. Horatio, born February the eighteenth, A. D. 1753, who died young.

4. Mary-Henrietta, born April the fourth, A. D. 1754.

5. Robert-Francis, born June the twenty-fourth, A. D. 1756.

6. Elizabeth, born October the twenty-second, A. D. 1758, died young.

7. Margaret, born July the eighth, A. D. 1761, died young.

8. Esther Frances, born July the eighth, A. D. 1763.

His lordship had also a daughter, Charlotte, born January the eighth, A. D. 1729-30, who died young.

(TITLES.) George Cholmondeley, earl of Cholmondeley, viscount Malpas, baron Cholmondeley, of Wiche Malbank, or Namptwich; baron of Newburgh, in the Isle of Anglesey, and baronet; also viscount Cholmondeley, of Kellis, and baron Newburgh, in Ireland.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, May the twenty-second, A. D. 1611, (9 James I.) viscount Cholmondeley, of Kellis, in the county of East-Meath, in Ireland, March the twenty-ninth, A. D. 1661, (13 Charles II.) baron Cholmondeley, of Wiche Malbank, alias Namptwich, in the county of Chester, April the tenth, A. D. 1689, (1 William and Mary) viscount Malpas, and earl of Cholmondeley, both in the county of Chester, December the twenty-seventh, A. D. 1706, (5 Anne) baron of Newburgh, in the county of Wexford, in Ireland, March the fifteenth, A. D. 1714-15, (1 George I.) baron of Newburgh, in the Isle of Anglesey, July the second, A. D. 1716, (2 George I.)

(ARMS.) Ruby, two helmets in chief, proper, garnished, topaz, in base, a garb of the last.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a demi griffon rampant, diamond, beaked, winged, and membered, topaz, holding an helmet, as those in the coat.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a griffon diamond, its beak, wings, and fore-legs as the crest. On the sinister, a wolf, topaz, gorged with a collar perlew, vair.

(MOTTO.) "Cassis tutissima virtus."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Cholmondeley, near Malpas, in Cheshire.

HARLEY, Earl of OXFORD.

ALTHOUGH the ancestors of this noble family are generally esteemed to have been persons of great authority in Shropshire, even before the Norman conquest, we are not able to make a lineal deduction earlier than from that period. Doubts have arisen among the antiquaries, both of France and England, whether the family of Harlai, in the former kingdom, and the English Harley, had the same origin; but these scruples have never been sufficiently exploded, and we must be thought to advance what is commonly conjectured, rather than what is certainly known, when we say, that the French HARLAI is a younger branch of the English family. The name was certainly taken from the town of Harley*, in Shropshire, where, before and in the time of William the Conqueror was seated

SIR JOHN DE HARLEY, lord of that and several other manors. By his wife, Alice, daughter of Sir Titus de Leighton, by Letitia his wife, daughter of Hugh Le Brune, brother to William de Valence, earl of Pembroke, he had a son,

SIR WILLIAM DE HARLEY, who succeeded to the lordship, &c. He was one of the adventurers in the first memorable expedition to the Holy Land in the year 1098; and was at the conquest of Jerusalem; in honour of which the knight-hood of the sepulchre was founded, into which order he was admitted: he however returned safe to England, and dying, was buried in Pershore-Abbey, in the county of Worcester, where his tomb is still remaining. He married Catherine, daughter of Sir Jasper Crofts, who was also knight of the sepulchre; and by her had issue,

NICHOLAS HARLEY, whose great grandson †,

ROBERT DE HARLEY was father of two sons. The youngest of which was Malcolm de Harley, chaplain to king Edward I. and much in his favour, being employed in the management of the revenues of that monarch, to whom he was

* From Hurfla, a barbarous Latin word signifying a wood, comes Hurley, and that was easily changed into Harley.

† For the intermediate persons, and their respective wives, see the table.

escheator on this side Trent, an office of great honour and trust in those days. He built the house now called Clifford's-Inn, behind St. Dunstan's-Church, in Fleet-Street, which being seized by the king for certain debts due from the said Malcolm, it was granted in the third of Edward II. to Robert de Clifford, lord Clifford, who made it his habitation; and it had thence the name of Clifford's-Inn, Isabel, the wife of the said Robert, having demised it to the students of the law. But though that house was seized, yet his estates were sufficient to discharge all his debts; for it is certain that some of his lands devolved upon his brother and dependants. He died A. D. 1298. Of the elder brother, SIR RICHARD HARLEY, we must observe that in the fourteenth of Henry III. he was one of those of the county of Salop, who holding lands in capite by knights service to the value of fifteen pounds per annum, and not being a knight, was summoned to take that degree, or fine for the same. He was greatly serviceable to king Edward I. both before and after he ascended the throne, in the former instance by being greatly instrumental in rescuing him, then a prisoner in Hereford-castle; in the latter by attending him in his wars, and particularly in his expedition against the Scots. In 1272 he was coroner of Shropshire. In 1300 he was chosen one of the representatives of the county of Salop, in the parliament then held at Westminster; and in the following year he was sheriff of that county: at which time there is great reason to think that he was made knight-banneret when in the field against the Scots. In 1305, 1306, and 1307, he served in parliament for Shropshire, and had his expences allowed him.

After the accession of Edward II. in 1311, 1312, 1315, and 1316, he was returned to parliament as knight of the abovenamed county. He died in 1320. He married Burga, daughter and heir of Sir Andrew de Willey, son and heir of Warren de Willey, by Petronella his wife, daughter and heir of Robert, son of Odo, lord of Kinlegh, in Shropshire; and by this lady became possessed of diverse lordships, viz. Willey Gretenton, Walderhope, Walle under Eywood, and Rushbury, &c.—His issue were five sons.

1. Robert, his successor.
2. Malcolm Harley.
3. Henry de Harley, who was appointed to the deanery of Bridgenorth, but never got possession, there appearing afterwards to have been no vacancy.
4. Philip de Harley, who was parson of Stircheley A. D. 1336; and parson of Rushbury, A. D. 1368.

The eldest son,

SIR ROBERT HARLEY, by means of his uncle Malcolm de Harley, in 1296, obtained in marriage, Margaret, eldest daughter and coheir of Brian de Brampton; and in 1309, on proof that his said wife was then of full age, the king commanded Walter de Gloucester his escheator beyond Trent, to deliver them full seisin of those lands that were in his province, viz. the manor of Brampton, and the hamlet of Weston, with their appurtenances, in the marches of Wales; the manor of Buxton, with the appurtenances; thirty-three shillings rent, with the appurtenances in Stowe, in the same marches; lands in the park of Kenlet, in the county of Salop; and the manor of Ashton, with the appurtenances, in the county of Hereford.

Brian de Brampton, father of the said Margaret, died on the 14 kalends of June, 21 Edward I. and her only sister, Elizabeth, was married to Sir Edmund de Cornwall, grandson of Richard, earl of Cornwall; king of the Romans, brother to king Henry III.

As from this match he acquired a great estate, and their seat of Brampton-Castle having since been the chief seat of the descendants of the said Sir Robert Harley, we presume some account of the antient and noble family of Brampton, or Bramton, as it is now wrote, will not be unacceptable to our readers.

The before-mentioned Brian de Brampton was the only son and heir of Sir Walter de Brampton, eldest son and heir of Sir Brian de Brampton, lord of Brampton, Drayton, Buxton, Pedwardyn, Wiston, Hermeiston, Aylton, Kynlet, Foxcot, Walton, and Adrington, by hereditary succession; and in right of Alice, his mother, was lord of Botteley and Candover. He was usually called the noble Brian, in respect of his noble descent, and qualities. He married Emma, daughter of Thomas, lord Corbet, baron of Caus. And he was the son of Brian de Bramton, stiled senior, by Alice his wife, daughter and one of the heirs of Walter de Remenyle, lord of Botteley and Candover, in the county of Salop. This Brian de Bramton, senior, was of such eminence, that in 17 Henry III. the king requiring hostages of the barons marches for their fidelity, Ralph de Mortimer delivered him Henry, son and heir of this Sir Brian, for his faithful demeanor, and he was thereupon committed to the custody of William de Stutevil; and it may be, he died under confinement; for Walter was at length the heir of the said Sir Brian, who, in 39 Henry III. had a grant of free warren in his manors and lands of Brampton, Buxton, Stanage, Weston, Pictes, and Ashton, in the county of Hereford and Salop; also at Wauton, in Somersetshire. He made his will on the vigils of the apostles Simon and Jude, in 46 Henry III. and is therein stiled senior. He was the son of Brian de Bramton, by Alice his wife, daughter of Walter de Nova Meinil, who gave with her in free marriage, four virgates of land in Foxcott, in the territory of Idelburi; to which were witnesses, Edward, bishop of Hereford, Hugh de Mortimer, William de Mortimer, Philip de Mortimer, William de Burley, and others. John de Brampton was his father; and, by Maud, his wife, was related to most of the great men of that age; she being the widow of Roger Mortimer, lord of Wigmore, and the daughter of William de Breos, lord of Brecon (now wrote Brecknock) by Eva his wife, daughter and coheir of William Marshal, earl of Pembroke, by Isabel his wife, daughter and heir to Richard Strongbow, earl of Pembroke, who married Eva, daughter and sole heir of Dormack Mac-Morrough, king of Leinster, in Ireland. And the said Richard Strongbow was the son of Gilbert de Clare, grandson of Richard Fitz Gilbert, earl of Brion, in Normandy, and of Rose his wife, sister and heir to Walter Gifford, earl of Buckingham. And the before-mentioned William de Breos was the son of Reginald de Breos, by Grifold, daughter and coheir to William Brewer, lord of Torbay; and he, of William de Breos, son of Philip de Breos, by Berta, second daughter, and at length coheir to Walter, earl of Hereford, son of Walter, earl of Hereford, and of Sibil his wife, daughter and sole heir of Bernard Newmarch, lord of Brecon (by conquest, and by gift of William Rufus) and of Neaft, daughter to Traham ap Cradock, king of North-Wales. And the last mentioned Philip de Breos, was grandson and heir of William de Breos, lord of Breos, in Normandy, and of Brember, in the county of Suffex, who married Agnes, daughter to Waldron, earl of St. Clare.

By the foregoing account it appears, how nobly Sir John de Brampton was related by Maud his wife; and Sir Brian de Brampton, his father, had to wife Maud, daughter and heir of Sir John de St. Vallerie, lineally descended from Reginald de St. Vallerie, at the time of the conquest. And the said Sir Brian, was son of Brian son of Bernard de Brampton, surnamed Vnspec, lord of Kinlet, in the county of Salop, in the reign of king Henry I.

We now return to Sir Robert Harley, who, by his lady aforesaid, was not only allied to the before-mentioned noble families, but she was also near in blood to the great family of Mortimer; being lineal heir to Sir John de Bramton, and Maud his wife, one of the heirs of William de Braose, or Brewes, lord of Brecknock; who had for her first husband Roger Mortimer, lord of Wigmore, by whom she had issue Edward Mortimer, lord of Wigmore, father of Roger, earl of March, the great favourite of queen Isabel, mother of king Edward III.

In 11 Edward II. this Sir Robert Harley had the following remarkable grant: "Sachee nous Roger de Mortimer Seigneur de Wygemore avoir donne & grante a nostre chier Bachiler, monsieur Robert de Harley, pour son bon service et pour cent livres de Argent, la gard du Corps Gilbert filz et heir Sir Johan de Lacy, ensembent ove le mariage mesmes celuy Gilbert deyns age esteant en nostre Garde, &c. Donne à Pebrugge l'an du Regne le Roy Edward Filz le Roy Edward unzyme." Camden, in his Britannia, fol. 176, makes a question whether these batchelors were not of a middle degree, between knights and esquire. In pat. 8. Richard II. p. 4. m. 4. John de Chauvou is stiled Bacclarius Regis. And the word is used 13 Richard II. stat. 2. cap. 1. where it signifieth the same with knight-bachelor.

In 14 Edward II. he had livery of the lands of which his father died possessed; and in 17 Edward II. he is stiled Chevalier in two fines, the one between Hugh de Bramton, of Ludlowe Quer. and the said Robert and Margaret his wife Deforc. concerning a messuage in Ludlowe, the right of the said Hugh, and the heirs of Margaret. The other was between Robert de Harley, Chevalier, and Margaret his wife, Quer. and Joan, who was the wife of Gilbert de Lacy, Deforc. who grants to the said Sir Robert and Margaret, for life, the manors of Bramton and Bukton, and after their decease to remain to Brian, son of the said Sir Robert and Margaret, and the heirs of his body; and if the said Brian dies without heir male, to remain to the heirs of the bodies of the said Robert and Margaret, remainder to the right heirs of the said Margaret.

In the same year all knights, and others, who bore antient arms from their ancestors, were returned into Chancery; and, in the list of those for Shropshire, are Sir Robert Harley, and Malcolm Harley, his brother, from which it may be inferred, that his chief residence was then at the castle of Harley, no mention being made of him in Herefordshire.

In 18 Edward II. he was appointed to array those forces raised in Shropshire, for the service of the king, against the French in Gascony: and was one which that king chiefly confided in, for suppressing the Knights Templars.

Soon after the accession of king Edward III. Roger Mortimer, earl of March (to whom he was of kin) coming to a violent death, we presume it might some way affect him, for we find no mention of him till 12 Edward III. when he was elected one of the knights for Shropshire, in the parliament then held: in the same year, the king commissioned him to march fifty archers, and fifty pikemen to Ipswich, being the quota that John de Warren, earl of Surry, as lord of Bromfield and Yale, was to furnish for the king's service. And, by another commission of the same date, he was appointed by the king to muster those forces, and to see that they were well clothed all in a livery, and well armed.

He was again elected one of the knights for Shropshire, to the parliaments held in 13 and 15 Edward III. In 16 Edward III. by a fine levied between him and Margaret his wife, and Philip de Harley, he settled the manors of Bramton, and Buckton, with the appurtenances, after the decease of himself and Margaret his wife, on his son Brian and his heirs, with remainder to the right heirs of the said Robert and Margaret. In 18 Edward III. Joan, who was the wife of Gilbert de Lacy, by a fine then levied, settled messuages, lands, and rents, in Ashton, in the county of Hereford, on this Sir Robert Harley and Margaret his wife for their lives, remainder to Walter, son of the said Robert and Margaret, and the heirs of his body, remainder to the heirs of the said Robert and Margaret, remainder to the right heirs of the said Margaret.

In 21 Edward III. on the death of Beatrix, wife of Peter, lord Corbet of Caus, who died seized of the barony of Caus, the manors of Munsterley, Yokethul, Wentenouse, Shelve, Bynneweston, Foxton, Chelme, Over-Gother, Nether Gother, and Baghetrese, in the county of Salop, it was found that Thomas Corbet, ancestor to the said Peter, died seized of the said manors, and left a son Peter, and three daughters, Alice, Venice, and Emme; likewise that the said Peter had issue Peter his son and heir, who married her the said Beatrix. And that the before mentioned Alice became the wife of Robert de Strafford, who had issue by her, Nicholas, his son and heir, and he Edmund, and he Ralph, then lord Stafford (viz. at the time when the inquisition was taken) and that Emme the other sister had issue Walter de Brampton her son and heir, and he Brian, who left two daughters his coheirs, Margaret the wife of Sir Robert de Harley, and Elizabeth, wife of Edmund de Cornwall, and were next heirs to the before-before specified Peter, lord Corbet, Ralph, lord Stafford being then thirty-two years of age, Margaret forty-six, and Elizabeth forty-two. The said Peter, lord Corbet, in 27 Edward I. was found by inquisition to be one of the next heirs of Roger de Valletort, a great baron in the West; and died the year following, seized of the barony of Caus, with its members; which barony by the death of Peter, son of the said Peter, as before-mentioned, has been ever since in abeyance between the families of the lords Stafford (whence branched the dukes of Buckingham) this family of Harley, and that of Cornwall. And in 21 Ed. III. the coheirs came to an agreement; Ralph, lord Stafford, had for his purparty the castle of Caus, entirely with the appurtenances; the knights fees being likewise parted amongst them. Sir Robert Harley had for his share the manors of Yokethul, also Yokelton, Wentnore, Stretton, Chelme, with a moiety of two water-mills, and one fulling-mill, and of the fourth part of the manor of Byn-Weston. He died in 23 Edward III. A. D. 1349, possessed of the manors of Harley, Willegh, and divers other manors, leaving Robert, his son and heir; and had also two other sons, Brian and Walter, as the authorities before-mentioned make appear; and one daughter, Joan, married to Gilbert de Lacy, lord of Frome castle, in Herefordshire, who was in wardship to him, and was son and heir of Sir John de Lacy and Joan his wife.

It is also probable that Andrew Harley was one of his sons, and had that name from his mother's father. It is certain, that Andrew Harley was one of the knights of the shire for the county of Hereford, in the seventh of Richard II. as also in the ninth of Richard II. when he is stiled chevalier.

Sir ROBERT HARLEY, eldest son of the last named Sir Robert, and Margaret his wife, is stiled Fatuus. He was lord of Harley and Willey, and marrying Joan, daughter to Sir Roger Corbett, of Morton Corbett, in Shropshire, knight, had an only daughter and heir, Alice, married to Sir Hamond de Peshall, of Staffordshire, knight. This heiress carried with her the castle and lordship of Harley, with a large estate, which devolved upon her only daughter Elizabeth, who was married, first, to Henry Grendon, and secondly, to Sir Richard Lacon, who had issue by her William Lacon, of Willey, in right of his mother, from whom descended the Lacons, at Willey and Kinlet, Thragland, Holloway, and Monslow, in Shropshire. This Sir Robert Harley dying, as has been observed, without male issue, in 1375, we proceed with his next brother,

Sir BRIAN HARLEY, already mentioned, as second son to Sir Robert Harley and Margaret, his wife, who being in the wars with France, there received the honour of knighthood; and was a person of such eminence, that Edward, the Black Prince, recommended him to his father king Edward III. to be chosen a knight of the Garter, but he died before his election. He married Eleanor, daughter to Sir Roger Corbett of Morton, sister to his eldest brother's wife; and, by agreement with his brother, divided the inheritance of the family. We have before mentioned that the paternal estate in Shropshire went away with his brother's daughter and heir. And by the said agreement, this Sir Brian was heir to his mother's estate, viz. Brampton, Buxton, Byton, and other lands in Wigglesmoreland. He left issue one son, Bryan Harley, and a daughter, Eleanor, married to Sir John Bromwick, of Bromwick castle, in Herefordshire, knight; Eleanor, his wife, was secondly married to Thomas Cotes.

BRYAN HARLEY, esquire, succeeding his father, was denominated of Brampton castle, in Herefordshire; he was governor of Montgomery and Dolverin castles, in the reign of king Henry IVth. which he bravely defended against that famous rebel Owen Glendour, who was forced by his valour to return from them; in memory whereof he changed his crest, which was a buck's head proper, to a lion rampant, gules, issuing out of a tower, tripple towered, proper. He married Isolda, second daughter of Sir Ralph Lyngayne, of Stoke, knight, by whom he had issue two sons, Richard and Jeffery. But the said Richard dying unmarried, was succeeded by Jeffery his brother and heir. Which JEFFERY HARLEY, of Brampton castle, esquire, married, first, Joan, daughter of Johan ap Harry, of Poston, esquire, by whom he had issue Margaret, wife of Hugh Wolley; and secondly, married Julian, daughter of Sir John Burley, of Burley, knight, nephew and heir to Sir Simon Burley, warden of the cinque-ports, constable of Dover, lord-chamberlain, and of the privy-council to king Richard the Second, and knight of the most noble order of the Garter; whose brother Sir Richard Burley was also knight of the Garter, as was also Sir John Burley their father; and it is remarkable, that the father and sons were knights of the Garter at the same time. From this marriage proceeded two sons, John, and Brian killed at Brampton, on Palm-Sunday, by certain felons of Radnorshire. The said Jeffery Harley, by his last will, bearing date January the tenth, A. D. 1448, 26 Henry VI. bequeathed to his eldest son John, his manors of Brampton, and Buxton; and to his younger son Brian, his manor of Byton, and to his daughter Joan several legacies.

Sir JOHN HARLEY, his eldest son, engaging on the part of the house of York against that of Lancaster, was knighted in the field of battle, at Gaston, near Tewksbury, by king Edward the Fourth, in the eleventh year of his reign. He was sheriff of Shropshire, in 1482. He died A. D. 1496, and was buried in Brampton church, where a monument was erected to his memory, and that of his son Richard, with their statues of alabaster, but defaced in the civil wars, in the reign of king Charles the First.

He married Joan, daughter of Sir John Hackluit, of Eytton, knight, by whom he left issue Richard, his son and heir, and had also a daughter, Alice, wife of Richard Monington, esquire, and secondly, of William Tomkins, of Monington. The son,

RICHARD HARLEY, esquire, in 1499, was sheriff of the county of Salop. He married Catharine, daughter of Sir Thomas Vaughan, of Tre-tower castle, in Brecknockshire, who was beheaded at Pomfret, with the earl of Rivers, and others, A. D. 1483, for their fidelity to the young king, Edward the Fifth, by which marriage he became related to most of the best families in Wales; the Welch genealogists deriving the said Sir Thomas Vaughan, from the antient British princes princes of Hereford, Brecknock, and Radnor, before the Norman, or Saxon conquests; and from the noble families of the Clares, and Mortimers, as also from all the princes of Wales.

By the inquisition taken at Wigmore the twenty-seventh of June, 21 Henry VIII. after the death of the said Richard, it appears, that Sir John Harley, knight, in consideration of a marriage between the said Richard his son, and heir apparent, and Catharine, daughter of Sir Thomas Vaughan, knight, made a settlement of the manor of Brampton, the town of Bucton, parcel of the said manor, the manor of Over-Pedwardyne, and divers messuages, &c. in Over-Pedwardyne, Nether-Pedwardyne, Walforde, and Borysforde, six burgages, and certain lands and tenements thereto belonging, in the town or borough of Wigmore, together with divers other messuages, lands, and tenements in Lengthalle-Erlys, Alfortune, Kyntone, and Leyntwardin, in the lordship of Wigmore, in trust for the use of him the said John Harley, knight, and Joan his wife for their lives, remainder to the use of Richard Harley, his son and heir, and the heirs of his body, remainder to the right heirs of the said Sir John; and that he died on the eleventh of March, 1530, leaving John Harley, his son and heir, thirty-eight years old and upwards; and had also two other sons, William, and Thomas, and a daughter, Catharine, married to Roger Hopwood, esquire. The said

JOHN HARLEY, esquire, born A. D. 1491, was in his father's life-time a commander in the wars against the Scots, and signalized himself in the battle, when James the Fourth, king of Scotland, was killed at Flodden-field. He married in 1520, Anne, daughter of Sir Edward Crofts, knight, by whom he had issue;

1. John Harley.
2. Thomas Harley, rector of Brampton.
3. William Harley.
4. Edward Harley.
5. Margaret, wife of Thomas Adams, of E-lection, in Shropshire.
6. Joyce. And
7. Elizabeth.

After her decease he married Anne, daughter of Sir Edward Rouse, of Worcesterhire, knight, by whom he had issue, Alice, wife of Simon Macklew.

He died on the sixth of August, A. D. 1542, and was succeeded by his eldest son, JOHN HARLEY, born October the twenty-ninth, A. D. 1521, who was in ward to the king ten weeks, and being at full age on the twenty-ninth of October, A. D. 1542, 33 Henry VIII. there-upon sued out a special livery of all the manors and lands his father died possessed of.

He married Maud, daughter of Richard Warncomb, of Hereford, esquire, and coheir to her brother James Warncomb, at whose decease she became possessed of the manors of Aylton, and Pickfley, with lands in Bodenham, Webton, Gothermet, Leyntall, Starks, and Elton, and several houses in Hereford, and Leominster. The issue of this marriage were,

1. John Harley, slain in the French wars, unmarried.
2. Thomas Harley, who continued the line.
3. William Harley.

4. Richard Harley.

Also three daughters.

1. Catherine, married, first, to John Cresset, of Upton, and afterwards to John Cornwall, baron of Burford.

2. Elizabeth, married to Giles Nanfan, of Birch Morton, in Worcesterhire.

3. Jane, married to Roger Minors, of Triago, in Herefordhire.

The father of these children was sheriff of Herefordhire; and in 1549, and 1561, and in the reign of queen Elizabeth, A. D. 1568, was constable of Conway castle. He died 1606, and was succeeded by his eldest surviving son, THOMAS HARLEY, of Bramton, esquire, born in 1548, who was seated during his father's life-time, at Wigmore castle; he was in the commission of peace, 1585, high sheriff of Herefordshire, in the thirty-sixth of Elizabeth, as also in the last year of that queen, and in the first of king James. In which year he had a grant from that king of the honour and castle of Wigmore: was likewise in this reign, of the council to William, lord Compton, president of Wales. He was very considerable in his time for his affluence of fortune, and great abilities; and distinguished his sagacity by the counsel he gave king James I. foretelling the mischiefs which would overtake the measures then in pursuit, and that they would involve his majesty, or his son, in a war with his people; which accordingly came to pass, though above twenty years after, and he lived not himself long enough to see his predictions verified. After this sincere delivery of his sentiments, he retired from the court, and service of the state, though not without marks of honour and favour from king Charles I. and employed his plentiful fortune in acts of hospitality.

He lived to a great age, dying in March, 1631, and was buried the nineteenth of the same month, at Bramton.

He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Andrew Corbett, of Morton-Corbett, knight, by whom he had issue Sir Robert Harley, knight of the Bath. And, surviving her, he married, secondly, Anne, daughter to Walter Griffith, of Burton-Agnes, in Yorkshire, esquire, sister to Sir Henry Griffith, knight, by whom he had issue James Harley, and Thomas, baptized at Brampton, September the sixth, A. D. 1601, who was buried at Leintwarden the same year. The said James married, October the tenth, A. D. 1610, Anne, daughter and coheir to John Gardiner, esquire, of Brampton, by whom he had issue Anne, baptized at Brampton, July the sixteenth, A. D. 1615. He buried his wife there June the eighteenth, A. D. 1618, and dying himself at Berrington, soon after, was buried near her the fourteenth of July following; and their daughter aforesaid, on the twenty-seventh of March, A. D. 1619.

Sir ROBERT HARLEY, only surviving son of Thomas Harley, was baptized at Wigmore castle, (where he was born) on the first of March, A. D. 1579. After having been carefully instructed in every necessary branch of literature, so far as was requisite for his years, by the able Richard Harley, his uncle, he was admitted at Oriel college, in Oxford; where having continued four years, he took the degree of bachelor of arts. When he left the university, he became a member of the society of the Middle-Temple, London, where he continued till 1603, in which year, on the twenty-fifth of July, he was made a knight of the Bath. On the sixteenth of July, A. D. 1604, he was appointed forester of Bringwood forest, in Herefordshire, with the office of the pokenhip, and custody of the forest or chace of Prestwood, for life. In 1624, he was elected knight of the shire for the county of Hereford; and in 1625, was put into the commission of the peace for the said county. On the twelfth of September, A. D. 1626, he had a grant of the office and offices of master and worker of monies to be coined in the Tower of London during life; and on the eighth of November following, an indenture was made between the king and Sir Robert Harley, knight of the Bath, for coining the monies of silver and gold, according to his letters patent. The salary annexed to this office was four thousand pounds per annum. But after the murder of king Charles, refusing to coin with any other stamp than that of the king, he was dismissed from his office.

He was thrice married; first, to Anne, daughter of Charles Barret, of Belhouse, in Aveley, in Essex, esquire, by whom he had a son named Thomas, who died young, and she was buried at Cuxton, near Rochester, in Kent, where there is a handsome monument erected for her. Secondly, he married Mary, daughter to Sir Francis Newport, of High Ercal, in com. Salop, afterwards lord Newport, and aunt to the earl of Bradford, by whom he had issue John, born at Brampton castle, October the eighteenth, in 1607, and afterwards buried at Bucknel; also eight children more, who all died young. This lady Mary, their mother, was buried at Brampton Brian, the fifth of August, A. D. 1622. He took to his third wife, on the twenty-second of July, A. D. 1623, Brilliana, second daughter of Edward, viscount Conway, (one of the greatest men of that age, both in camp and state) by Dorothy his wife, daughter to Sir John Tracy, of Todington, in com. Gloucester, knight, sister to Mary, wife of that great general, Sir Horace Vere, lord Vere, of Tilbury; by which he became related to the Veres, earls of Oxford, Holles's, earls of Clare, and several other noble families. By her he had issue,

1. Sir Edward Harley.
2. Sir Robert Harley, knight, who married on the eighth of February, A. D. 1670, Edith, daughter of — Pembrugge, and widow of major Hinton, but dying without issue, was buried at Brampton, on the eighteenth of November, A. D. 1673.
3. Thomas Harley, seated at Kinsham court, in Herefordshire, who by Abigail, his wife, daughter of Sir Richard Saltinstall, knight, had four sons, who all died issueless.

Also four daughters,

1. Brilliana, the wife of James Stanley, second son of Sir Robert Stanley, knight, who was second son to William, earl of Derby.
2. Dorothy, the wife of William Mitchell, in the county of Norfolk.
3. Margaret, } died unmarried.
4. Elizabeth, }

His lady Brilliana, so christened, because born while her father was governor of the Brill, was highly celebrated for her prudence and valour in the civil wars; having so heroically defended her husband's castle of Brampton, against the powerful army which invaded it, that they were, after many attacks, obliged to raise the siege, merely through her skilful management of treaties with the adversaries, and exemplary courage, which animated the defendants; well becoming a descendant from her warlike ancestors. This siege of Brampton was begun on the twenty-sixth of July, A. D. 1643, and lasted seven weeks, in which time most of the town was burnt; and this gallant lady dying in October following, the castle was a second time besieged. And then, after a long and brave defence, though made by Sir Robert Harley's servants only, and the enemy's cannon having laid all the walls and outworks in ruin, it was surrendered and burnt, as was also his castle of Wigmore, (the ancient seat of the Mortimers) together with the church of Brampton; also his two parks and warren laid waste; besides above forty dwelling-houses destroyed. And as the family has been ever addicted to the love of literature, as well as the exercises of arms, an extraordinary library of manuscript and printed books, which had been collected from one descent to another, also perished in Brampton castle, at the said demolition and sack thereof; the whole loss amounting, as it has been computed, to above fifty thousand pounds. Sir Henry Lingen's estate (who had besieged the castle, and burnt the town of Brampton, &c.) was afterwards laid under sequestration, and the profits thereof ordered to make satisfaction for those great damages; yet so honourable, so compassionate was colonel Harley, that, after an inventory had been taken of all the personal estate and goods, he waited on the lady Lingen, (Sir Henry being dead) and having asked, "whether that was a perfect inventory, and she had signed the same," he presented it to her, with all his right thereto. Sir Robert Harley wanted not fortitude, hereditary and acquired, to sustain these disasters, living several years after them; and at last died of those infirmities, the stone and gout, to which the old age he arrived at is most commonly incident, on the sixth of November, and was interred with his ancestors at Brampton Brian, on the tenth of December following, A. D. 1656. His funeral sermon was preached the day of his interment, by the reverend Mr. James Froyfeld, who, soon after publishing the same, dedicated it to his son, colonel Edward Harley; we refer thereto for his further deserved praise. Among other hardships in his old age, he was imprisoned by the army, on the following occasion. The sixth of December, A. D. 1648, he and his son, colonel Edward Harley, having voted, "That the king's answer to the propositions from both houses was a ground for them to proceed upon, to the settlement of the kingdom's peace," the army the next morning seized on one and forty of the principal members then sitting; and Sir Robert, with his son, colonel Harley, being two of them, were conveyed into their great victualling-house, near Westminster-hall, called Hell, where they kept them all night, without any beds, and were after driven as prisoners (through snow and rain) to several inns in the Strand, and there confined under guards of the soldiers. See Dugdale's View of the Troubles, p. 362.

EDWARD HARLEY succeeded his father, as his eldest son and heir, in his estate and virtues: and, being a man of great integrity, was deservedly advanced to great honour. He was baptized at Wigmore, October the twenty-first, A. D. 1624, and was educated at Magdalen hall, in Oxford, though he did not continue long there. He was one of the knights of the shire for Hereford, with his father, in the last parliament called by king Charles I. and, upon the eruption of the civil war, he was colonel of a regiment which he raised himself. In one of his first engagements, in the year 1642, he was shot with a musket ball, which he bore in his body fifty-eight years, even to his grave. He exemplified his valour and expertness in arms, in several battles; and in the year 1644, was made governor of Monmouth; also, the year after, of Cannon-Frome, a garrison between Worcester and Hereford. In 1647, he was one of the eleven members in the house of commons, who, by reason of their firmness in promoting a peace with the king, were impeached by the army of high treason: 'for that, by their power in the house, the ordinance for disbanding the army did pass;' and threatened, if they were not expelled, they would march up to Westminster, whereby the rest of the members became so intimidated as to exclude them the house. But, being some time after again admitted, he, with his father, Sir Robert Harley, were, by the army, made prisoners, December the seventh, A. D. 1648, as has been already mentioned. In 1656, being chosen by the county of Hereford one of their representatives in parliament; and Oliver Cromwell having secluded him with several other members, who would not be subservient to him, he was one of those who signed and published a remonstrance, 'that they would not be frightened or flattered to betray their country, and give up their religion, lives, and estates, to be at his will, to serve his lawless ambition.' And, in very pathetic terms, set forth the depredations of the said protector, and the power he had assumed; protesting, that the assembly at Westminster was not the representative body of England; and 'that all such members as shall take on them to approve the forcible exclusion of other chosen members, or shall sit, vote, or act by name of the parliament of England, while, to their knowledge, many of the chosen members are so by force shut out, ought to be reputed betrayers of the liberties of England, and adherents to the capital enemy of the common-wealth.'

In the parliament which restored king Charles II. he was one of the members for the county of Hereford. He approved himself such a faithful assertor of the royal cause, and was so instrumental to the restoration, that meeting the king at Dover, upon his first return to his dominions, his majesty made him governor of Dunkirk, and he went directly to take possession of it, that the town might not fall into the hands of the French, as general Monk told him otherwise it would.

During the short space of time he held this government, he recruited the garrison to above nine thousand men, and began many fortifications, which were afterwards, when the town was sold to the French, perfected by the purchasers. When he returned to England, his accounts, which he submitted to the examination of the council, were allowed to be unexceptionable, and he declared to the king, that the guns, stores, and ammunition he left at Dunkirk, when he was superseded by Rutherford, were worth more money than the French were to give for the place, which was seven hundred thousand pounds. He also told the king, that he should leave him one thing more, which his majesty might not think of, and that was ten thousand pounds he had saved in an iron chest, against a siege, or any other exigencies which might happen.

At the restoration this gentleman had the offer of a peerage, which honour with great modesty and duty to the king he declined, and gave this reason for it, 'lest his zeal and his services for the restoration of the ancient government, should be reproached, as proceeding from ambition, and not conscience.' And it is said, that when he was made knight of the Bath, it was done without his knowledge.

He served in all the parliaments of Charles II. either for the town of Radnor, or the county of Hereford: he was always heard with attention, and generally closed the debates in the house of commons. He served for the said county in the several parliaments called by king William to the time of his death, December 8, A. D. 1700. His remains were interred at Bramton.

On the twenty-sixth of June, A. D. 1654, he married Mary, daughter of Sir William Burton, of Park-Gate, in Devonshire, by his second wife the daughter of Arthur Escot, of Tetocote, in the same county; and by her had issue four daughters: Of which the two youngest, both named Mary, died young; the second Martha, married Samuel Hutchins, of London, merchant; and the eldest, Brilliana, married Alexander Popham, of Tewkesbury, in Gloucestershire.

By his second wife, Abigail, daughter of Nathaniel Stephens, of Effington, in Gloucestershire, he had four sons, and one daughter, Abigail, born A. D. 1664, who died unmarried on the fourth of October, A. D. 1726.

The sons were,

1. Robert, his successor.
2. Edward Harley, grandfather to the present earl of Oxford.
3. Nathaniel Harley, baptized March 6, A. D. 1665. He died a merchant at Aleppo, in January, A. D. 1719-20.
4. Brian Harley, who died an infant.

The eldest son, (First Earl.) ROBERT HARLEY, was born in Bow-Street, in the parish of St. Paul, Covent-Garden, on the fifth of December, A. D. 1661; and was educated at Shilton, near Burford, in Oxfordshire, under the reverend Mr. Birch.

He was by his personal services greatly instrumental in accomplishing the revolution, and together with his father, actually raised a troop of

* It is somewhat remarkable that seminary, although dignified by no other title than that of a private school, produced at the same time, a lord-high-treasurer, a lord-high-chancellor, and a lord-chief-justice of the common-pleas; and ten members of the house of commons, who were all contemporaries as well at school as in parliament.

horse, at their own expence, with which they marched to Worcester, where he was governor by the appointment of the gentlemen of that county.

He was returned to the first parliament called by king William for Tregony, in Cornwall; and he afterwards served for the town of Radnor till he was called up to the house of peers. The many constitutional motions he made in the house of commons, and the strong arguments with which he was able to support them, raised him high in the opinion of all his countrymen, and especially the members of the house of commons, who were continually witnesses of his powers, insomuch, that on the eleventh of February, A. D. 1700-1, he was chosen their speaker, as he was also in the succeeding parliament, which assembled in December following. And the same honour was conferred upon him in the first parliament of queen Anne.

On the seventeenth of April, A. D. 1704, he was sworn of her majesty's privy-council; and on the eighteenth of May next ensuing, was sworn one of the principal secretaries of state, being at the same time speaker of the house of commons. In 1706, he was appointed one of the commissioners for the treaty of union with Scotland, which took effect. In February, A. D. 1707-8, he resigned his office of secretary of state.

On the tenth of August, A. D. 1710, he was appointed a commissioner of the Treasury, as also chancellor and under-treasurer of the Exchequer: and having three days after been sworn again of the privy-council, he was of the committee at Whitehall, appointed for the examination of the marquis of Guiscard, a French papist; and by him was stabbed with a pen-knife. Those who interfered wounded the marquis in turn, and he died in Newgate nine days after he had made this attempt upon Mr. Harley's life. Whereupon an act of parliament passed, making it felony without benefit of clergy to make an attempt upon the life of a privy-counsellor in the execution of his office; and a clause was inserted, "to justify and indemnify all persons who, in assisting in defence of Mr. Harley, chancellor of the Exchequer, when he was stabbed by the Sieur de Guiscard, and in securing him, did give any wound or bruise to the said Sieur de Guiscard, whereby he received his death."

The wound Mr. Harley received confined him for some weeks; but when he returned to the house he met with congratulations from all quarters, and particularly from the members of the house of commons, by the voice of their speaker. And having formed a scheme to satisfy all public and national debts and deficiencies, by establishing the company, now called the South-Sea company, her majesty determined to reward his many eminent services, and was pleased to advance him to the peerage of Great-Britain by the style and titles of baron Harley, of Wigmore, in the county of Hereford, earl of Oxford and earl Mortimer, with remainder, for want of issue male of his own body, to the heirs male of Sir Robert Harley, knight of the Bath, his grandfather. The letters patent bear date May 24, A. D. 1711, the preamble to which is as follows, expressive of his many rare and eminent endowments.

"Whatever favour the equity of a prince can bestow on a gentleman descended from an illustrious and very antient family, framed by nature for great things, improved by education in all manner of learning for greater, exercised by long experience in business, versed in very different employments of the commonwealth, with extraordinary reputation, and not without danger: such has our trusty and well-beloved counsellor Robert Harley justly deserved of us: he being the only man, who, by a full house of commons, was chosen speaker for three successive parliaments; and, at the same time that he held the chair, was one of our principal secretaries of state: his capacity fitting him for the management of those two important offices, which, though they seemed to disagree in themselves, were easily reconciled by one who knew how, with equal weight and address, to temper and turn the minds of men; so wisely to defend the rights of the people, without derogating from the prerogative of the crown; and who was thoroughly acquainted how well monarchy could consist with liberty. Having run through these two employments at the same time, after some breathing-while, he took care of our Treasury, as chancellor of our Exchequer; put a stop to the growing embezzlement of the public money, which was spreading far and wide, like a contagion; provided for the settling a new trade to the South-Seas; and having, with wonderful sagacity, very lately, and in a very good time, retrieved the languishing condition of our Exchequer; and thus restored the public credit, merited the applause of the parliament, filled our citizens with joy, and us (for our interest is ever the same with that of our people) with no small satisfaction: for these reasons, we determine to confer on a gentleman, who has deserved so well of us, and all our good subjects, those honours which were long since due to him and his family; being induced thereto by our own inclination, and the general voice of all Great-Britain. Since therefore the two Houses of parliament have declared, that the fidelity and affection he has expressed in our service, have exposed him to the hatred of wicked men, and the desperate rage of a villainous parricide; since they have congratulated his escape from such imminent dangers, and put us in mind that he might not be preserved in vain, we willingly comply with their desires, and grant him, who comes so honourably recommended by the hearty votes of our parliament, a place among the peers; to whom, by the noble blood, and long train of his ancestors, he is so nearly allied; and that, with all felicity, he take his title from the city, where learning flourishes in so high a degree, himself the ornament of learning and patron of learned men. Know ye, &c."

On the twenty-ninth of May, A. D. 1711, her majesty conferred upon him the important office of lord high treasurer. On the fifteenth of August following he was chosen governor of the South-Sea company. On the twenty-sixth of October, the year ensuing, he was elected a knight companion of the most noble order of the Garter, and entailed at Windsor on the fourth of August, A. D. 1713. His lordship was also one of the governors of the Charter-House; and custos rotulorum of the county of Radnor. He resigned his office of high treasurer on the twenty-seventh of July, A. D. 1714, five days before the death of his royal mistress.

On

On the tenth of June, A. D. 1715, his lordship was impeached by the house of commons of high-treason, and high crimes and misdemeanors, and was committed to the Tower by the house of lords on the sixteenth of July, that same year, where he suffered a severe and long confinement till the first of July, 1717, when after a public trial, he was unanimously acquitted by his peers.

He married first Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Foley, of Whitley-Court, in the county of Worcester, esquire, and sister to Thomas, lord Foley, by whom he had issue two daughters; Elizabeth, who, married Peregrine-Hyde, duke of Leeds, to whom she bore an only son, the present duke of Leeds. She died November 20, A. D. 1713. The second daughter was Abigail, the wife of George Henry, earl of Kinnoul in Scotland, and baron Hay of Ped-Warden, in England, to whom she bore many children; among the rest, Thomas, the present earl, &c. She died July 15, A. D. 1750. Also a son and successor.

He married, secondly, Sarah, daughter to Thomas Middleton, esquire, a son of Sir Hugh Middleton, baronet; but by her had no issue.

His lordship was not only an encourager of literature, but the greatest collector, in his time, of all curious books in print and manuscript, especially those which concerned the history of his own country, which were preserved and augmented greatly by his son.

It is with great justice said of him, that "during the time he was prime minister, notwithstanding such a weight of affairs rested on him, he was easy and disengaged in private conversation; he was endowed with great learning, and was a great favourer and protector of it. Intrepid by nature, as well as by the consciousness of his own integrity, he would have chosen rather to fall by an impeachment, than to have been saved by an act of grace; sagacious to view into the remotest consequences of things by which all difficulties fled before him. He was a courteous neighbour, a firm and affectionate friend, and a kind, generous, and placable enemy, sacrificing his just resentments, not only to public good, but to common intercession and acknowledgments. He was a despiser of money, and, what is yet more rare, an uncorrupted minister of state, which appeared by his not having made the least accession to his fortune.

(Second Earl.) EDWARD HARLEY, only son of the first earl, succeeded to the honours of the family. This nobleman made a most valuable addition to the manuscripts collected by the lord treasurer, his father, especially in the history and antiquities of England, both ecclesiastical and civil. Besides which he collected a curious treasure of original letters and papers of state, written by the greatest princes, statesmen and scholars as well of foreign nations as of Great-Britain; which invaluable collection was after his lordship's decease preserved by his lady at her house in Dover-Street, till overcome by the intreaties of the public, she consented that the parliament should purchase them in 1754.

He married Henrietta Cavendish Holles, daughter and heir of John Holles, duke of Newcastle, and by her had issue a son, Henry Cavendish Harley, who died young; and a daughter, Margaret Cavendish, who married in 1734, William, duke of Portland.

His lordship departing this life on the sixteenth of June, A. D. 1741, was buried in Westminster-Abbey. For want of male issue, the honours, &c. devolved upon (Third Earl.) EDWARD HARLEY, son to Edward Harley, already mentioned as the next brother to the first earl of Oxford. We must first speak of the father.

EDWARD HARLEY, esquire, seated at Eywood, in Herefordshire, whose character and eminent virtues, in public and private life, cannot be more justly set forth, than by inserting the inscription placed on his monument in the churchyard of Titley, in which parish his seat of Eywood is situated.

Under this STONE,

By his own Appointment, Lye humbly interr'd
The Reliques of the honourable Edward Harley, Esq.
Of Eywood, in the County of Hereford, second son of Sir Edward Harley, Knight of the Bath, of Bramton
Brian, in the same County, and Brother to the Right Honourable Robert, Earl of Oxford: He married
Sarah, third Daughter of Thomas Foley, of Witley, in the County of Worcester, Esq. by whom he had three sons and one daughter.

He was Recorder of Leominster, above forty years,
And Represented that Borough near 30 Years in Parliament,
In which his Skill in the Law,
An unwearied Application to Business,
And extensive Knowledge of public Affairs,
Join'd with a calm and unprejudic'd Judgment,
A steady and unbiass'd Adherence to the Constitution,
And a disinterested Zeal for the Good of his Country,
Made him justly esteemed,
One of the great Supports and Ornaments of it,

In 1702, He was advanced by Queen Anne,
To be one of the Auditors of the Imprest.
Which important Place he executed to his Death,
With great Care, Integrity, and Ability;
And, by his Regulation of the National Accounts,
His Service to the Public remains after his Death.
Yet his Assiduity in Civil Employments,
Neither lessen'd his Attention to Religion,
Nor interrupted his daily Course of Devotion;
The Discharge of his Duty, as a Christian,
Was the Source and Center of all his Desires.

His Hospitality was Great,
His Liberality Greater,
His Charity private and without Ostentation,
Nor ever made known but where it cou'd not be conceal'd.
He augmented several small Livings
In this County, and in Monmouthshire;
He maintain'd several Charity Schools in Both;
And endowed one for ever at Brampton Brian,
The Place of his Birth.

From his known Zeal to promote Christian Knowledge,
And particularly the Instruction of Youth,
In the Year 1725
He was chose Chairman of the Trustees
For the Charity Schools in London.

The

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
LIBRARY
CHICAGO, ILL.
1911

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
LIBRARY
CHICAGO, ILL.
1911

The whole Tenor of his Life was strictly Moral, Without Dissimulation, Pride, or Envy;
 His Deportment Affable and Humble,
 His Conversation Cheerful and Instructive.
 He was faithful and constant to his Friends,
 Charitable and Forgiving to his Enemies,
 Just and Beneficent to all,
 And the great Example of Piety and Religion,
 (Which shone thro' his Life, and was most conspicuous on his death Bed;
 Is the great Consolation and Blessing,
 He has transmitted to his Posterity.
 He was born the 7th of June, 1664,
 And died on the 30th of August, 1735.

The three sons, mentioned in the above epitaph, were the earl, of whom we are going to treat; secondly, Robert Harley, who died young; and, thirdly, Robert Harley, who is a barrister at law, and member in the present parliament for Droitwich, in Worcestershire. And the daughter was Abigail, who became the wife of John Verney, esquire, master of the Rolls; and was mother to lord Willoughby de Broke. The eldest of these three sons, as we have observed, became EARL OF OXFORD, &c. upon the decease of his first cousin the second earl.

His lordship before his accession to the peerage in 1727, was elected knight of the shire for the county of Hereford; as also again in the years 1734 and 1742. In 1745 he was elected high-steward of Hereford, in the room of the duke of Beaufort, deceased; and on the twelfth of April, A. D. 1748, was in convocation at Oxford, presented with the degree of Doctor of Laws.

In March, 1725, he married Martha, eldest daughter of John Morgan, of Tredegar, in Monmouthshire, and by her ladyship had issue,

1. Edward Harley, his successor.
2. Robert Harley, born Sept. 10, A. D. 1727, who died Jan. 12, A. D. 1760.
3. John Harley, born Sept. 29, A. D. 1728, who took holy orders, and is at present archdeacon of Shropshire, &c.
4. Thomas Harley, born Aug. 24, A. D. 1730, who is a merchant in the city of London; as also an alderman of the same, and is one of the four representatives of his brother citizens in the present parliament. He married on the fifteenth of March, A. D. 1754, Ann, the daughter of Edward Bangham, esquire, deputy-auditor of the imposts, and by her has issue, as hereafter will be mentioned.
5. William Harley, born May 30, A. D. 1733, who took holy orders, and is at present one of the prebendaries of Worcester, &c.

Also two daughters.

1. Sarah, born A. D. 1731, who died on the twenty-eighth of April, A. D. 1737.
2. Martha, born Nov. 23, A. D. 1736, who married in May, 1764, Charles Milborne, of the Priory, near Abergavenny, in Monmouthshire.

His lordship dying on the eleventh of April, A. D. 1755; the eldest son, (Fourth, and present Earl.) EDWARD HARLEY, succeeded. His lordship was born Sept. 2, 1726; and on the eleventh of July, A. D. 1751, he married Susannah, eldest daughter of William Archer, of Welford, in Berkshire; but as yet has no issue. His lordship was, soon after the accession of his present majesty, appointed lord of the bedchamber; and in 1766, constituted lord-lieutenant of the county of Radnor, which honours he yet retains.

The issue of his lordship's brother, Thomas Harley, are as follows:

Two sons.

1. Thomas Harley, born April 28, A. D. 1758, who died Jan. 17, A. D. 1763.
2. Edward Harley, born April 1, A. D. 1762; And six daughters.

1. Henrietta, born Jan. 7, A. D. 1755, who died July 4, A. D. 1759.
2. Martha, born May 1, A. D. 1757.
3. Anne, born May 13, A. D. 1759.
4. Sarah, born Oct. 19, A. D. 1760.
5. Elizabeth, born April 6, A. D. 1763.
6. Margaret, born July 4, A. D. 1765.

(TITLES.) Edward, earl of Oxford, and earl Mortimer, and baron Harley, of Wigmore.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Harley of Wigmore, in the county of Hereford, earl Mortimer, (the name of a family) and earl of the city of Oxford, May 23, A. D. 1711, (10 Q. Anne.)

(ARMS.) Topaz, a bend cottized, diamond.

(CREST.) On a wreath a castle pearl, tripple tower, with a demi lion rampant, ruby, issuing from out of the battlements of the middle-tower.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two angels habited in long robes, their hair and wings topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Virtute & fide."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Eyewood, in the county of Hereford.

SHIRLEY, Earl FERRERS.

THIS noble family is confessedly of English extraction, claiming their descent from SASUVALO, a man of great eminence at the time of the Conquest; being possessed of lordships, manors, and divers other lands in the several counties of Warwick, Lincoln, Northampton, and Derby. He founded and endowed the church of Nether Etendon in Warwickshire, where we are informed, he was at that time seated. He had issue two sons, Henry, who stands upon record at Kenilworth, in Warwickshire, as a benefactor to the canons there, and died in 1140. His second son,

FULCHER continued the line, and also became heir to the large estates, &c. He gave Idenbroc to the monks of Bildwas, in Shropshire. He had issue two sons, Fulcher, and Sewall; the youngest of which

Sir SEWALL DE ETENDON, assumed that name from the place of his residence, and being constituted heir to his father and uncle, by fine levied in the fourth of Richard I. de Baronis Fulcheri & Henrici, as the record testifies; he accordingly, in due time succeeded to their estates and honours. He married Maud, daughter of ——— Ridel, of Haloughton, in Derbyshire, and had issue

HENRY DE ETENDON, who attended William, earl Ferrers, A. D. 1202, 4 John, in that king's service into Poitiers; and in 7 John was restored to the manor of Edensoure in Derbyshire, of which he had been deprived when he was on that voyage. He founded a chantry in the church of Etendon, and was succeeded by

SEWALL DE ETENDON, his son and heir, who died 1260, leaving issue

JAMES DE ETENDON, who first assumed the surname of Shirley, and by that name had free warren granted to him in all his demesnes at Shirley, in Derbyshire and Etendon. He was afterwards knighted, and having married Agnes de Wauton, had issue by her, Ralph. Which

RALPH SHIRLEY, in 7 Edward I. held the manor of Etendon, in Warwickshire, of Edmund, earl of Lancaster, the king's brother, by the service of two knights fees. In 1281, he was of full age. In 1300, he had the custody of the counties of Salop and Stafford, with the castle of Shrewsbury, committed to his charge; and was sheriff of the counties of Derby and Nottingham, in the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth, and thirtieth of Edward I. In 29 Edward I. he was summoned to attend the king at Berwick upon Tweed, on Midsummer-day, well-appointed with horse and arms, to march against the Scots. In 3 Edward II. he was constituted one of the justices in the county of Warwick for the gaol-delivery; and 5 Edward II. served in two parliaments, held that year, as a representative for that county. In 6 Edward II. he was discharged from the office of coroner, on account of his ill state of health; but in 8 Edw. II. he was governor of Horston castle, in Derbyshire; and in 16 Edward II. a commissioner for levying a fifteenth in Warwickshire. The next year he was in the list of those knights and men at arms, whose names were then certified in the Chancery.

He married Margaret, daughter and one of the coheirs of Walter de Waldefhef, butler to king Edward II. and dying in 1326, left issue

RALPH SHIRLEY, his son and heir, a commissioner for assessing and collecting a fifteenth and tenth, granted in 11 Edw. III. and in the twelfth, was appointed to collect the scutage due to the king for the Scotch expedition. In 14 Edward III. he served as one of the knights of the shire for the county of Warwick; and to him succeeded his son and heir,

Sir THOMAS SHIRLEY, knight, who dying in 1362, left issue by Isabella, daughter of Ralph, lord Bassett, of Drayton,

Sir HUGH SHIRLEY, who was knighted in 1400, and master of the king's hawks. He was made chief warden of Higham-Ferrers park in Northamptonshire, by John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster; and in 22 Richard II. constable of Donnington-castle, by Henry, duke of Lancaster, (afterwards king Henry IV.) He married Beatrix, sister and heir to John de Brews, of West-Neston in Suffex, and was killed on the eve of St. Mary Magdalen, in 4 Henry IV. in the battle of Shrewsbury, fighting on the king's part. He left issue,

Sir RALPH SHIRLEY, his son and heir, then twelve years old, who in 3 Henry V. was retained to serve the king in person in his army in Guyen, with six men at arms and eighteen archers; and the next year with eight men at arms and sixteen archers, and was about that time knighted; for in 8 Henry V. being then sheriff of the counties of Nottingham and Derby, he was stiled a knight. He married Joyce*, daughter and sole heir to Thomas Bassett of Brailsford, esquire, by whom he had issue,

* Mr. Edmondson gives him a second wife, Alice, daughter of Thomas Blount.

RALPH SHIRLEY, who died on St. Stephen's day, 1420; having had issue by his second wife, Elizabeth, sister to the lord Montjoy Ralph, from whom descended those of the name in Sussex; and by his first wife Margaret, daughter and coheir of John de Staunton, of Staunton-Harold, in Leicestershire.

JOHN SHIRLEY, his son and heir, who married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Hugh Willoughby of Middleton, in Warwickshire, and Wollaton, in Nottinghamshire, and died the eighteenth of May, 1485, leaving

SIR RALPH SHIRLEY, his son and heir, twenty-six years old, who for his valour in the battle of Stoke, in Nottinghamshire, June the sixteenth, 2 Henry VII. was made a banneret; to which battle he brought forces to the king's aid, when the earl of Lincoln was slain. In 7 Henry VII. he was retained to serve that king in his wars beyond sea for one year; and died on the sixth of January, A. D. 1516. By his last will and testament, which bears date four days before his death, writing himself SIR RAUF SHIRLEY, of Staunton-Harold in Leicestershire, knight, he orders his body to be buried at the discretion of his executors, and that one thousand masses be said the day of his burial, or shortly after, for the health of his soul, and all Christian souls; also that alms be distributed among three thousand poor people. He bequeaths to Jane his wife, his manors of Shirley and Brailesford, with the lands, rents, and services as also other lands, in full of her jointure and dower, for term of her life: and his manor of Barnham to the monastery of Grendens, for the term of fifty years.

It also appears by his will, that he had five brothers, and that he was possessed of the manors of Staunton-Harold, Rakedale, and Willowses, Burton, Long-Whatton, Rateliff, Dunton, Esterleyke, Sutton, Bonyngton, and Newton-Regis. And bequeathed lands in Melbourne and Worthington, to the chantry of St. Catherine, in St. Michael's church, in Melbourne, for ever, to pray for his soul; also to Lincoln church ten shillings, and to every house of friars in Leicester ten shillings. He bequeaths all his household furniture, plate, &c. to his wife and his son Francis, to be divided equally between them; and ordains executors, his cousin Sir Richard Sackvil (to whom he bequeaths a cross of gold, hanging at his chain) his brother Robert Hasylyrg (husband to Elizabeth his sister) Sir James Smith his priest, and Thomas Herbert.

He married four wives, but had no issue by his first and third*; and by his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter and coheir to Thomas Walth, of Wanlip, in Leicestershire, had only a daughter, Anne, married to Sir Thomas Poultney, of Misterton, in Leicestershire, knight. By his last wife Jane, daughter to Sir Robert Sheffield, knight, ancestor to the late duke of Buckingham, he had

FRANCIS SHIRLEY †, his son and heir before-mentioned, who was sheriff of the counties of Warwick and Leicester, in the fourth of Philip and Mary; and having lived to an advanced age, famous for his charity and hospitality, died on the twenty-seventh of July, A. D. 1571, 14 Elizabeth, and was buried in the church of Breedon on the Hill, in Leicestershire, where a monument was erected to the memory of him and Dorothy, his wife, who survived him but a short time, as appears by her last will and testament, bearing date the ninth of August, A. D. 1571, and the probate thereof the sixteenth of May following. She was daughter of Sir John Gifford of Chillington, in Staffordshire, knight, and married to her first husband, John Congreve, esquire, but had issue by the said Francis Shirley, three sons,

1. John Shirley, esquire, hereafter mentioned.
2. Edward, who died young; and
3. Ralph. Also three daughters;
 1. Cassandra, married to Walter Powtrel, of West-Hallum, in Derbyshire, esquire.
 2. Elizabeth, to Thomas Cotton, of Conington, in Huntingdonshire, esquire, father by her to the famous Sir Robert Cotton, baronet, the great collector of the records, now repositied in the library that bears his name; and
 3. Anne, married to John Broke, of Madley, in Shropshire, esquire.

JOHN SHIRLEY, eldest son and heir, died in the life-time of his father, and was buried in the church of Breedon before-mentioned, where a monument is erected to his memory, having the following inscription:

Memoriæ sacrum

"Johannis Shirlii Ar. de Stanton-Harrauld, qui postposita propria salute ut suo munere erga patriam fuit gerebat in ipso ætatis flore patre superstite, cum ex lectissima fœmina sola filia & hæreda Thoma Lovetti Armigeri, filios quinque, filias vero tres suscepisset, non sine suorum omnium dolore & magno reip. detrimento 35 tantum annos vi. dies Domino tandem requievit."

Georgius filius natu maximus natura & beneficiis hoc pietatis & observantiæ suæ monumentum mœrens mœstusque posuit, ob. Anno Salutis 1570.

GEORGE SHIRLEY, esquire, (son and heir of John) succeeded his grandfather in his estate, and was created a baronet the twenty-second of May, A. D. 1611, 9 Jac. I. on the first erection of that dignity, being the fourth in order of precedency. He married Frances, daughter to Henry, lord Berkeley, ancestor to the present earl of Berkeley, a lady, who to her noble descent, added many extraordinary virtues; and dying in the thirty-first year of her age, on the twenty-ninth of December, A. D. 1595, was buried in the church of Breedon, where a monument is erected by her affectionate husband; who married, secondly, Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Wroughton, of Wilcot, in Wiltshire, esquire, and relict of Sir Henry Umpton, of Farringdon, in Berks, knight; but by her had no issue. He had by his first wife four sons and one daughter, Mary, who died unmarried.

* For their names see the table.

† Mr. Edmondson calls his name Thomas, but the will sufficiently determines that point.

1. John Shirley, } died young.
2. George Shirley, }
3. Henry Shirley, succeeded his father; and
4. Thomas Shirley, the youngest son, received the honour of knighthood at Whitehall, the twenty-second of May, A. D. 1622, and is characterized by Sir William Dugdale, to have been "a great lover of learning, and especially affected to antiquities, in the study whereof he attained to much knowledge, and thereby gave no small lustre to his ancient and worthy family." He married Mary, daughter to Thomas Harpur, of Rushall, in the county of Stafford, esquire.

Sir GEORGE SHIRLEY, baronet, departed this life at Stanton-Harold, on the twenty-seventh of April, A. D. 1622, 10 Jac. I. and was buried at Breedon. To whom succeeded Henry, his eldest surviving son and heir. Which

Sir HENRY SHIRLEY, baronet, (who was sheriff of Leicester the last year of James I.) married in 1615, Dorothy, youngest of the two daughters of that great but unfortunate favourite to queen Elizabeth, Robert, earl of Essex, and sister and coheir to Robert, earl of Essex, her brother, by whom he had two sons, Charles and Robert; also a daughter, Lettice, married to William, earl of Clanrickard, in Ireland. By the inquisition taken at Leicester, on the eighteenth of April, A. D. 1633, it appears, that he died on the eighth of February, A. D. 1632, seized of the manors of Astwall Falcot, Billingham manor, alias Giffords manor, Brookes manor, alias Mamsfey manor; also of the manors of Stanton-Harold, Syleby, and Ragdale, with the impropriation, the manor of Willows, and rectory, all in Leicestershire; the manor of Etenton, Oxhill, Fulridie, and Whatcoate, in Warwickshire; the manors of Sutton, and Bunnington, in Nottinghamshire, and the manors of Shirley, and Bray Jefford, in Derbyshire: all which devolved on his son and heir,

Sir CHARLES SHIRLEY, baronet, born on the ninth of September, A. D. 1623, who dying without issue, in 1646, was succeeded by his brother,

Sir ROBERT SHIRLEY, baronet, who appeared very zealous, and no less useful in the cause of his sovereign, Charles I. which naturally drew upon him the resentment of Oliver Cromwell and his party, by whose direction he was sent to the Tower of London, where he was supposed to be poisoned. Dying however under his confinement, he left issue by Catherine, his wife, daughter to Humphry Okeover, of Okeover, in the county of Stafford, two sons and two daughters. The latter were,

1. Catherine, married to Peter Venables, of the county of Chester, commonly called baron of Kinderton; and

2. Dorothy, married to George Vernon, of Sudbury, in Derbyshire, esquire.

The sons were,

1. Sir Seymour Shirley, who succeeded his father as baronet at his decease, A. D. 1656, and by his wife Diana, daughter of Robert Bruce, earl of Ailesbury, had a son and heir, Sir George Shirley, who succeeded, upon his demise, A. D. 1684, as baronet; but dying without issue, that honour devolved upon his uncle,

2. Sir Robert Shirley; which

Sir ROBERT SHIRLEY, was born at East Sheen, in Surry, during his father's confinement in the Tower by Oliver Cromwell; and on the fourteenth of December, A. D. 1677, was summoned to parliament, by the title of lord Ferrers, of Chartley; which title, by the death of Robert Devereux, the last earl of Essex of that family, was immersed in the issue of his two sisters and coheirs, and so continued till king Charles was pleased to restore that title with the precedency thereunto belonging to this Sir Robert Shirley, grandson and heir of Dorothy, the youngest of those two sisters. He was introduced into the house of peers on the twenty-eighth of January, A. D. 1677, and took his seat according to the ancient writ of summons, viz. February 6, A. D. 1298.

This nobleman was master of the horse and steward of the household to Catherine, the consort of Charles II. and was sworn of the privy-council to king William, on the twenty-fifth of May, A. D. 1699. He was also sworn of the privy-council to queen Anne (according to the act for the union of the two kingdoms) and on the third of September, A. D. 1711, was raised to the dignity of a viscount, as also to that of an earl, by the titles and titles of earl Ferrers, (by reason of his descent from the ancient and noble family of Ferrers) and viscount Tamworth.

His lordship was twice married; first, to Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Laurence Washington, of Garesdon, in Wilts; secondly, to Selina, daughter of George Finch, of London, esquire. By the latter lady he had five sons and five daughters.

1. Selina, married to Peter Bathurst, of Clarendon park, in Wiltshire, brother to lord Bathurst.

2. Mary, married to Charles Tryon, of Bullwick, in the county of Northampton.

3. Anne, married to Sir Robert Furness, of Waldersnare, in Kent.

4. Frances.

5. Stuarda.

The sons were,

1. Robert Shirley, born May 27, A. D. 1700, and chosen member of parliament for Stamford, in 1727. He died in July, 1738.

2. George Shirley, died an infant.

3. George Shirley, born A. D. 1705, who was a captain in the first regiment of foot-guards, and by his wife, whose surname was Sturt, had issue a son of his own name, born at Lower Etington, in Warwickshire, his father's seat, and baptized on the twenty-ninth of November, A. D. 1750.

4. Sewallis Shirley, born A. D. 1709, who was member in two parliaments for Brackley, and in the last for Callington. On the twenty-fifth of May, A. D. 1751*, he married Margaret, countess dowager of Oxford. He died Oct. 31, 1765, being then comptroller of the household to her majesty.

5. John Shirley.

By the former lady, who died Oct. 2, 1693, his lordship had issue seven daughters.

1. Elizabeth, } died infants.

2. Catherine, }

3. Elizabeth, married Walter Clarges, esquire, half brother to Sir Thomas Clarges, baronet.

4. Anne Eleanor, died A. D. 1754.

5. Catherine, died unmarried in October, 1736.

* See Keith's Register from May-Fair Chapel, deposited now in St. George's Church, Hanover-square, London.

6. Dorothy, married John Cotes, of Woodcote, in Shropshire.

7. Barbara.

Also ten sons.

1. Robert Shirley, born September the fourth, A. D. 1673, died in the life-time of his father, leaving surviving issue an only daughter, who inherited the barony of Chartley. For the marriages of this gentleman, &c. see the account of the present baroness Ferrers.

2. Washington Shirley, successor to his father.

3. Charles Shirley,

4. Lewis Shirley,

5. George Shirley,

6. Charles Shirley,

7. Ferrers Shirley,

8. Walter Shirley,

} died unmarried.

9. Henry Shirley, successor to his brother in the earldom.

10. Laurence Shirley, who married Ann, daughter of Sir Walter Clarges, baronet, and had issue Laurence and Washington, successively earls Ferrers, after the death of their uncle, earl Henry; a third son, Robert Shirley, (who by Catherine, his wife, daughter of ——— Cotton, of Etwell, in Derbyshire, has issue three sons, Robert, Laurence Rowland, and Washington Shirley) a fourth son, Walter Shirley, in holy orders, and a fifth, John Shirley, who died young; also six daughters, Anne, Mary, and Mary, who died young; Elizabeth and Anne, now living, and Jane, who died an infant.

THE FIRST EARL FERRERS died on the twenty-fifth of December, A. D. 1717, and was succeeded in his titles, honours, &c. by the second, but eldest surviving son of the first marriage.

(Second Earl.) WASHINGTON SHIRLEY, born on the twenty-second of June, A. D. 1677. On the twelfth of April, A. D. 1725, he was constituted lord-lieutenant of the county of Stafford, and fifteen days after custos rotulorum of the same. He was re-appointed to both those offices soon after the accession of George II. on the seventeenth of November, A. D. 1727.

He married Mary, daughter to Sir Richard Levintz, baronet, one of the judges of the King's Bench, in Ireland, and by her, who died in France, in January, 1739-40, left issue three daughters, and coheiresses.

1. Elizabeth, married on the twenty-fourth of June, A. D. 1725, to Joseph Gascoigne Nightingale, of Enfield, in the county of Middlesex, and bore to him a son and a daughter, of the latter of which she died in child-bed, in August, A. D. 1731, and was interred in Westminster-abbey.

2. Selina, married June 3, A. D. 1728, to Theophilus, earl of Huntingdon.

3. Mary, married on the twenty-ninth of June, A. D. 1730, to Thomas Needham, lord viscount Kilmurry, of the kingdom of Ireland.

His lordship dying without issue male on the fourteenth of April, A. D. 1729, the honours, &c. devolved upon his brother,

(Third Earl.) HENRY FERRERS, born on the fourteenth of April, A. D. 1691. In May, 1731, he was appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Stafford, in the room of his deceased brother.

His lordship departed this life unmarried, in August, 1745, and was succeeded in his honours, &c. by his nephew, (eldest son of his younger brother, Laurence Shirley, deceased.)

(Fourth Earl.) LAURENCE SHIRLEY, who on the sixteenth of September, A. D. 1752, married Mary, the youngest daughter of Amos Meredith, of Henbury, in Cheshire, esquire; which lady, induced by a series of unaccountable barbarities, laid her case before parliament, and obtained an act in her favour, whereby she became separated from her lord, and had a proper maintenance. Attempts were also made in parliament to prove his lordship insane, which were foiled by his own presence in the house, and his behaviour upon that occasion. In January, 1760, he shot Mr. Johnson, his own steward, through the body, of which wound he afterwards died. Being taken into custody for the perpetration of this horrid crime, he was, by an order from the house of peers, committed to the Tower, and after having enjoyed the privilege which his elevated station entitled him to, of a fair trial before that august assembly, he was condemned to be hanged, and his body ordered to be anatomised, as the law directs in cases of murder, which sentence was accordingly executed on the fifth of May following. At his decease without issue, the next brother, (Fifth, and present Earl.) WASHINGTON SHIRLEY, succeeded as earl Ferrers. His lordship is captain in the royal navy, and a fellow of the Royal Society.

(TITLES.) Washington Shirley, earl Ferrers, viscount Tamworth, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, May 22, A. D. 1611, (9 James I.) viscount Tamworth, in the county of Stafford, and earl Ferrers, Sept. 3, A. D. 1711, (10 queen Anne.)

(ARMS.) Paly of six, topaz and sapphire, a canton, ermine

(CREST.) On a wreath, the bust of a saracen, side-faced and couped, proper, wreathed about the temples, topaz and sapphire.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a talbot, ermine, his ears topaz, and his ducal collar ruby. On the sinister, a rein deer, of the last attired pearl, ducally gorged, and semée of billets.

(MOTTO.) "Honor virtutis præmium."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Stanton Harold, in the county of Leicester; at Astwell, in the county of Northampton; at Chartley castle, in the county of Stafford; and at Shirley, in the county of Derby.

WENTWORTH, Earl of STRAFFORD.

ALL Genealogists seem to agree, that the name of this noble family is of Saxon original, and was assumed from the lordship of Wentworth, in the county of York, where Reginald de Winteworde, as the name is written in Doomsday Book, resided at the time of the Norman Conquest. From this Reginald down to his lordship, the present earl of Strafford, we have a correct pedigree, which the reader will find in our table; the earliest part of which was drawn up and attested in 1558, by William Flower, norroy king at arms, and was approved and deduced somewhat farther by Robert Glover, Somerset herald, and Robert St. George, norroy king at arms. But as we find nothing interesting upon record, relative to the ancestors of this family, we shall begin our account here, with.

Sir WILLIAM WENTWORTH, who in the twenty-fourth of Elizabeth, was sheriff of the county of York, and on the twenty-ninth of June, A. D. 1611, was by king James created a baronet. He married Anne, daughter and heir of Sir Robert Atkinson, of Stowell, in Gloucestershire, and by her, who died in 1611, had eight sons and three daughters.

1. Margaret, married to Sir Richard Hutton, of Goldsborough, in the county of York.

2. Anne, married Sir George Savile, of Thornhill, in the same county.

3. Elizabeth, married James Dillon, earl of Roscommon.

The sons were,

1. John Wentworth, who died in the life-time of his father, unmarried.

2. Sir Thomas Wentworth, of whom hereafter.

3. Sir William Wentworth, ancestor to the present earl.

4. Robert Wentworth,

5. Michael Wentworth,

6. Mathew Wentworth,

7. Philip Wentworth,

} all died unmarried.

8. Sir George Wentworth, who was general of the king's forces in Ireland, and one of the privy-council there. His descendants, till the male line became extinct, may be seen in the table.

Sir WILLIAM WENTWORTH, the father of these children, dying A. D. 1614, was buried at Wentworth, (where also lay his wife) and was succeeded by his eldest surviving son,

(First Earl.) Sir THOMAS WENTWORTH, who was born April 13, A. D. 1593, in Chancery-lane, London, in the house of Mr. Atkinson, his grandfather, and educated in St. John's college, in the university of Cambridge. In 1611, he married Margaret, eldest daughter of Francis, earl of Cumberland, and was knighted; and about November, the same year, travelled into France. He returned to England, in February, 1612-13, and was chosen to serve in parliament, as knight of the shire for the county of York. In the latter end of 1614, having succeeded his father as baronet, he was appointed custos rotulorum of the West Riding in Yorkshire. In 1622 his lady died; and on the twenty-fourth of February, A. D. 1624-5, he married Arabella Holles, younger daughter of the earl of Clare, and eminent for the accomplishments of her person and mind. In November, 1625, he was made sheriff of Yorkshire, in order to prevent his serving in parliament, where he had before constantly appeared in opposition to the interests of the court; and in May, 1627, was committed prisoner to the Marshalsea, by the lords of the council, for refusing the royal loan; and about six weeks after this imprisonment, he was confined at Dartford, in Kent, but released about the Christmas following. In the parliament, which began March 17, A. D. 1627-8, he served again as knight for his own county, where he exerted himself with great vigour against the administration of the government, insisting upon the petition of rights, and proposing what passed into a resolution of the house, that the redress of grievances, and the granting the supplies should go hand in hand.

However, at the end of that parliament, in June following, he was reconciled to the duke of Buckingham, and consequently to the measures of the court, to which he became firmly attached, and was the greatest zealot for advancing the power of the crown, the lord-treasurer Weston having been the instrument of this change in his public conduct. On the 22d of July, that same year, he was advanced to the title of baron Wentworth, of Wentworth Woodhouse; and on the tenth of December following, to that of viscount Wentworth. He was likewise appointed lord-president of the North, and one of the privy council; and in January, 1631-2, lord-deputy of Ireland. His lady's death, in October, 1631, was a sensible loss to him; but in the same month, the year following, he privately married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Godfrey Rhodes.

He entered upon his government in Ireland, in July, 1633; and the year following summoned a parliament there, who granted three subsidies; by virtue of which, and his prudent management thereof, he paid an arrear of eighty thousand pounds due before his arrival, and all the salaries civil and military, without any charge to England, besides what else he advanced to his majesty's purse. He continued in Ireland till June, A. D. 1636, when he came over to England, and gave the king in full council at Hampton-court, an account of his administration in Ireland, concerning the restitution of the rights of the church, the establishing of English laws, the reformation of the army, the king's revenue and discharge of his debts, the securing the seas, and the advancement of trade, &c. with some future designs for his majesty's service in that kingdom. His lordship's conduct in all these respects being highly approved, he returned to his government of Ireland in the end of November, where he continued till September, A. D. 1639; when having secured the northern parts of that kingdom against the designs of the Scots there, he came over to England by his majesty's order, who wanted his assistance in the perplexed state of his affairs arising from the jealousies of his subjects. His lordship, however, gave so satisfactory an account of the situation of Ireland, during his administration, as lord-deputy, that he was advanced to the dignity of lord-lieutenant; and was by letters patent, bearing date the twelfth of January, A. D. 1639, created baron of Raby, in Durham, with limitation in failure of issue male, to his younger brothers; also earl of Strafford. His advice now to his majesty was, for a parliament in Ireland, which was immediately summoned; and afterwards for a parliament in England, against the beginning of the next year. In Lent following he returned to Ireland, where he continued about a fortnight, in which time he sat in parliament; had four subsidies given there; appointed a council of war; and gave orders to levy eight thousand foot in Ireland, who, together with two thousand foot, and a thousand horse, which was the standing army in Ireland, and five hundred horse to be joined with them, were to be sent into Scotland under his lordship's command, at the same time that the earl of Northumberland was to be general of the English forces. In April he came over into England, arriving at London before the meeting of the short parliament; after the dissolution of which, and upon the indisposition of the earl of Northumberland, he was made lieutenant-general of the English forces, and sent into the North, where the English army was; but before he reached them, they were defeated at Newborne, under the command of lord Conway. However, the earl's conduct was so highly approved of by his majesty, that on the twelfth of September, A. D. 1640, he was elected a knight of the most noble order of the Garter. But this distinction was a very short-lived satisfaction to him; for upon the meeting of the parliament, in November following, the leading members, secretly confederating with those whose principles were anti-monarchical, and whom nothing could please but the absolute extirpation of the religion established, and the total ruin of the government, whereby they might share the revenues of both church and king, attempted the removal of every thing that they thought would impede their designs. They first began with this incomparable nobleman, exhibiting a charge of high-treason against him; whereupon he was brought to a trial before his peers: but when they came to the particulars of proof, although they searched into all the actions of his life, from the first time that he had any public employment of trust, and found nothing that amounted to a considerable misdemeanor; nevertheless, by certain unjustifiable devices, they at length passed a special bill of attainder, but with this particular clause, (resulting from a self-conviction of their base proceedings) that the like should never be drawn into practice again.

And having so done, by sundry other indirect practices, they extorted from that good king, his royal assent thereunto, and then beheaded him at Tower-hill, on the twelfth of May next ensuing. (1641) An act so truly unjust and cruel, that not only some of those who had been seduced to concur with them herein, when they themselves came afterwards to be destroyed by the hands of the common executioner, infinitely bewailed and repented thereof; but which lay heavy upon the conscience of that most pious and devout martyr, (the king himself) when he suffered death by that barbarous generation; in whose destruction they had designed the utter ruin and extirpation of this formerly flourishing and famous monarchy. His lordship's body was buried at Wentworth.

He was extremely temperate in his diet, drinking, and recreations, but naturally very choleric, an infirmity which he endeavoured to controul; though upon sudden occasions it broke through all restraints. He was sincere and zealous in his friendships. Whitlocke assures us, that for natural parts and abilities, and for improvement of knowledge, by experience in the greatest affairs, for wisdom, faithfulness, and gallantry of mind, he left few behind him that might be ranked equal with him. Lord Clarendon acknowledges indeed, that the earl in his government of Ireland, had been compelled, for reasons of state, to exercise many acts of power, and had indulged some to his own appetite and passion; and as he was a man of too high and severe a deportment, and too great a contemner of ceremony to have many friends at court, so he could not but have enemies enough. But he was a man, continues that noble historian, of great parts, and extraordinary endowments of nature, not unadorned with some addition of art and learning; though that again was more improved and illustrated by the other; for he had a readiness of conception, and a sharpness of expression, which made his learning thought more than in truth it was. He was, no doubt, of great observation and a piercing judgment both in things and persons; but his too great skill in persons, made him judge the worse of things: for it was his misfortune to live at a time wherein very few wise men were equally employed with him, and scarce any but the lord Coventry, (whose trust was more confined) whose faculties and abilities were equal to his. So that upon the matter, he relied wholly upon himself, and discerning many defects in most men, he too much neglected what they said or did. Of all his passions, pride was most predominant, which a moderate exercise of ill fortune might have corrected and reformed, and which the hand of heaven strangely punished, by bringing his destruction upon him by two things that he most despised, the people, and Sir Henry Vane. In a word, the epitaph which Plutarch records, that Sylla wrote for himself, may not unfairly be applied to be applied to him, "That no man ever did exceed him, either in doing good to his friends, or in doing mischief to his enemies;" for his acts of both kinds are notorious.

His lordship's issue by his last wife were, a son and a daughter, Thomas and Margaret, who both died unmarried.

By his second lady he was father of two daughters; Anne, married to Edward Watson, lord Rockingham, and Arabella, married to Justin Maccartie, second son of Donagh, earl of Clincartie; also a son and heir, (Second Earl.) WILLIAM WENTWORTH, born June 8, A. D. 1626, who was on the first of December, A. D. 1665, by letters patent, restored to all his father's honours, having been installed knight of the garter, on the fifteenth of April, A. D. 1661. He was of the privy-council to king Charles II.

He married, first, Henrietta Maria, daughter of James Stanley, earl of Derby, who was beheaded by the rebels. She was widow of Richard, lord Molineux. By this lady, who died on the twenty-seventh of December, A. D. 1685, and was buried in York minster, he had no issue. His second lady, (Henrietta de Roye de la Rochefoucauld, daughter to Frederic Charles de Roye de la Rochefoucauld, earl of Rouci and Roye, knight of the most noble order of the Elephant, and generalissimo of the armies of the king of Denmark) died issueless on the eleventh of November, A. D. 1732.

His lordship dying on the sixteenth of October, A. D. 1695, left the bulk of his estate to his sister's son, Thomas Watson, esquire, third son of Edward, lord Rockingham, by the lady Anne, his eldest sister, who thereupon changed his name to Wentworth, whose son was created marquis of Rockingham, as we have already set forth in our account of that noble family. This branch thus expiring, and with it all the honours of the peerage, except the barony of Raby, which Thomas, earl of Strafford had taken out, with limitation for want of heirs male, to his younger brothers; we now return to Sir WILLIAM WENTWORTH, of Ashby, in the county of Lincoln, third son of the first baronet of this family. Having been knighted, he took up arms for king Charles I. and was commander of those forces under William Cavendish, marquis of Newcastle, who were besieged in York three months; and at the breaking up of the siege, this Sir William was slain on the third of July, A. D. 1644. He married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Thomas Saville, of Northgate-head, in Wakefield, (founder of Wakefield school) in Yorkshire, by whom he had issue two sons, William and Thomas, the latter of which died young, and a daughter, Anne, married to Edward Skinner, of Thornton college, in Lincolnshire, esquire.

The eldest son,

Sir WILLIAM WENTWORTH, was a knight, and lived at Northgate-head, in Wakefield. He married Isabella, daughter of Sir Allen Apsey, knight, treasurer of the household to the duke of York, by whom he had issue six daughters. She died July 31, A. D. 1733, aged eighty years.

1. Elizabeth, who died young.

2. Frances Arabella, maid of honour to queen Mary, consort to king James II. married Walter, lord Bellew, of the kingdom of Ireland.

3. Anne, maid of honour to the princess of Denmark, (after queen Anne) married James Donolan, of the kingdom of Ireland, esquire.

4. Isabella, maid of honour to queen Anne, and after one of the bedchamber-women to her majesty, married Francis Arundel, of Stoke-park, in Northamptonshire.

5. Mary, died young.

6. Elizabeth, married John, lord Arundel, of Trerice.

Also five sons,

1. William Wentworth, died in Flanders, unmarried, A. D. 1693.

2. Thomas Wentworth.

3. Peter Wentworth, seated at Henbury, in the county of Gloucester, was first equerry to the duke of Gloucester, afterwards to prince George of Denmark, queen Anne, George I. and lastly, to queen Caroline. He married Juliana, daughter of Thomas Hoard, of Coat, in the county of Oxford, by whom he had eleven children, all of whom, except a daughter, Henrietta, and a son, William, died young. Henrietta married Thomas, son of Francis Arundel, above-mentioned; and William, who became seated at Henbury, in Dorsetshire, had a cornet's commission in the royal regiment of dragoons when he was but two years old, and continued in the regiment forty-three years, being captain of a troop therein at the battles of Dettingen and Fontenoy. He was gentleman-usher to the late prince of Wales, and is now in the same post to her royal highness the princess dowager. He married, on the twenty-third of October, A. D. 1731, Susannah, daughter of John Slaughter, of Upper Slaughter-hall, in the county of Gloucester, by whom he had a son and two daughters, Frederic Thomas, Caroline, who died A. D. 1762, and Augusta.

4. Paul Wentworth was killed at the siege of Namur, A. D. 1695, unmarried.

5. Allen Wentworth, page to king William III. and a cornet in his brother's regiment of dragoons, was killed at the siege of Liege, unmarried, October 23, A. D. 1702.

Sir WILLIAM WENTWORTH, the father of these children, died in 1691. We now proceed with the second son,

(First Earl of the Second Creation.) THOMAS WENTWORTH, who on the death of his cousin, William, earl of Strafford, in 1695, inherited the dignity of baronet by descent, and the barony of Raby, which (as said before) was limited to the brothers of Thomas, earl of Strafford.

At the time of the Revolution, being then a younger brother, he was made cornet in the lord Colchester's (after earl Rivers's) regiment of horse, and his commission was signed by the prince of Orange, December 31, A. D. 1688, which was before he was declared king: and was (though then very young) commanded into Scotland, where he made his first campaign in the Highlands, against the lord Dundee and his forces. He afterwards served every campaign with king William in Flanders, where his elder brother, who was his captain, died of a fever at Brussels, contracted in in the field, and his two younger brothers, Paul and Allen, were killed in his presence; one at the siege of Namur, and the other at Liege, as before-mentioned.

His lordship was commanded on the detachment that made the vanguard at the battle of Steinkirk, which appeared before the French by break of day, and rested in the fight till after sun-set, and then made the rear-guard of the army. And of the squadron of which he was, there came not fifty off alive out of two hundred and fifty. Whereupon, on the report of his behaviour in that action, by major-general Dimprie, in the Dutch service, who commanded that vanguard, king William desired the lieutenant-colonel of that regiment, who was then a groom of his bed-chamber, to bring him into his presence, and then promised him in person to advance him in the army, and made him his aid-de-camp.

At the battle of Landen, he was one of the four or five, who standing by king William to the last, accompanied him over the river Manhain, after the defeat of his army. And at the end of that campaign, October 4, A. D. 1693, his majesty gave him a commission of guidon and major in the first troop of horse-guards. Also soon after, the twentieth of January, A. D. 1693-4, made him cornet and first major in the said troop of guards, and groom of his bedchamber.

On the decease of William, earl of Strafford, he succeeded to the title of lord Raby, and was introduced into the house of peers, November 25, A. D. 1695. On June 13, A. D. 1697, his majesty gave him the royal regiment of dragoons. And in 1698, when king William went to meet the duke of Zell at the Goor, his lordship was chosen to be one of the few of his court to attend him thither, where he was in the utmost danger of his life; for at a hunting of wild beasts, he (like a young man of spirit) went alone to attack a wild boar, who at his second thrust threw him down, ript up his breeches from the knee to the binding, cut his shirt, and some part of his flesh, and would have torn him to pieces, had not king William sent the two huntsmen, who were his only seconds, to his relief, who with their spears killed the wild boar upon him. It was then at Zell, his lordship first saw and became acquainted with the princess Sophia, her son, the then elector of Hanover, and her grandson, then a youth.

In 1700, he was sent by king William to congratulate Frederick the First, king of Prussia, when by the emperor's consent he assumed that title; and on July 5, A. D. 1701, his lordship arriving from Berlin, at the Hague, set out the same day from Rotterdam to embark for England. He continued in great favour with his sovereign to the time of his death. That day the king had the fall from his horse (of which he died) he was seeing his regiment embark at Greenwich for Flanders; but on his return, his lordship was every day with his majesty till he expired.

In 1702, the first year of queen Anne, he served with his regiment in Flanders, and was then made brigadier-general of her forces. But the year after, at the earnest request of the king of Prussia, he was sent (though against his inclination, it being in time of war) envoy-extraordinary to that king. His lordship arrived in the Maes,

April 21, N. S. 1703, and after went to Arnheim to review his regiment quartered there, and from thence waited on the duke of Marlborough. Returning from the army to the Hague, the beginning of May, he set out on his journey two days after. And in his turn, viz. January 1, 1703-4, was made major-general. The duke of Marlborough after the battle of Hockstet, 1704, arriving at Berlin, on the twenty-second of November, was met without the town by the lord Raby, her majesty's envoy-extraordinary to the king of Prussia; and on the twenty-fifth, his lordship gave his grace an entertainment; and the king, with the margrave his brother, came and supped with them.

In 1705, he had the character of ambassador-extraordinary to the king of Prussia, and made his public entry into Berlin, April 7, A. D. 1706, through a multitude of spectators, (as our Gazette, N^o 4220, recites) whom the magnificence of his retinue, and servants cloathed in rich liveries had drawn together; and (though in that post) he served the duke of Marlborough the campaign, in which he forced the French lines, and took Menin, Ostend, &c. at which sieges he was assisting in 1706. In his return from the army, he waited on the elector of Hanover, arriving there October 3, and after a week's stay, proceeded to Berlin on his embassy. And whilst he was there, January 1, (1706-7) was constituted lieutenant-general of her majesty's forces. Also on January 14, N. S. following, the king of Prussia, with the prince and princess royal, (daughter of the elector of Hanover) dined with his lordship at Berlin, which was the first time of their royal highness's dining abroad after they were married. And June 9, 1707, the king and the prince royal did his lordship the honour to sup with him at his house of retirement near Berlin. He had the same year credential letters to the Imperial court, to which the queen had a mind to remove him, to have his service there; but at the pressing desire of the king of Prussia, he was continued ambassador-extraordinary at his court, till he succeeded the lord viscount Townshend, as ambassador-extraordinary to the States-general, viz. in March, 1710-11. And a treaty of peace being then in agitation, his lordship was sent for to England, to concert measures relating thereto; and on his arrival was sworn of the privy-council, June 14, A. D. 1711.

And her majesty taking into consideration his great merits and services, was pleased to advance him to the dignities of earl and viscount, by the style and title of earl of Strafford, viscount Wentworth, of Wentworth Woodhouse, and of Stainborough, in Yorkshire, with remainder to his brother Peter Wentworth, esquire, and his issue male, by letters patent, bearing date September 4, A. D. 1711, 10 queen Anne.

His lordship soon after returned to the Hague, and being again sent for by her majesty, arrived at London the fifteenth of May, A. D. 1712; after which, having received instructions to go to the army, (though ambassador-extraordinary and plenipotentiary for the treaty of Utrecht) he accordingly left London the twenty-third of June following, being ordered by the queen first to the Hague, to invite the States-general to join with her majesty in a cessation of arms, on the French giving up Dunkirk to the English. On their refusing to comply with the queen's measures, he went, pursuant to his instructions, with a very few domesticks (not staying for an escort) up to the late duke of Ormond, then encamped at Chateau Cambresis, and in his way thither was in some danger, being stopped and examined by several parties, as well French and Spaniards, as Dutch, Imperialists, &c. Having executed his commission, by seeing the cessation of arms declared between the French and English, on Dunkirk's being put into the queen's hands, he returned to Utrecht through Lisle, Tournay, Ostend, Bruges, Ghent, and Brussels, and had all the honours paid him as to a crowned head, as well by the Dutch as the others, being saluted by a treble discharge of the cannon round the towns as he passed, and by part of the several garrisons under arms to receive him. After having staid two days at Brussels to give the necessary orders, (the Catholic Netherlands being then equally under the administration of the queen and States-general) he passed through Antwerp, where on his arrival he was saluted by the cannon round the town and works, was met by the prince Esquilatchy, governor of the town, and carried to his palace, where he lay, and was most magnificently treated. The magistrates waited on him in their formalities, made him a handsome speech, and presented him with several large flagons of wine, and other things, brought in by the several burghers of the town, and their under officers, in great numbers; and the next morning, on his departure, he was again saluted with a treble discharge of cannon round the town and ramparts, as at his entrance.

giving

On his arrival at Utrecht, the negotiation for the treaty of peace was continued by his lordship, and the lord privy-seal, with the several ministers of all the foreign powers of Europe. And being again sent for to England, he was, at a chapter held at Windsor, October 26, A. D. 1712, elected a knight companion of the most noble order of the Garter; but being again sent in her majesty's service beyond the seas, was installed by proxy at Windsor, on the fourth of August following. Whilst he was abroad, he was highly esteemed by several foreign princes, especially by the princess Sophia, who often, with the queen of Prussia, dined with him at Berlin: and when absent, kept almost a continual correspondence by letters. And the kings of Denmark and Poland, having an interview with the king of Prussia, those three kings, with the queen of Prussia, dined together at his lordship's, and made him a present of their pictures at full length in one piece, in memory of his having treated three kings and a queen at the same time.

He was, at the demise of queen Anne, plenipotentiary for the treaty of Utrecht; and by a distinct appointment, ambassador-extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the States-general, lieutenant-general of her majesty's forces, colonel of the first regiment of dragoons, first lord of the admiralty, appointed August 29, A. D. 1712, and of her cabinet and privy-council. The treaties of Utrecht were signed at his lordship's house at Utrecht (though in the annals of queen Anne, by mistake, it is printed as signed at the lord privy-seal's house) between the queen of Great-Britain, France, Spain, Portugal, Prussia, the States-general, duke of Savoy, and all the allies, except the emperor, on the eleventh of April, A. D. 1713.

As first lord of the admiralty, he was by act of parliament one of the lords justices for the administration of the kingdom, till the arrival of George I. from Hanover, who on his coming to the Hague to embark for England, shewed him particular marks of his esteem, even so far as to come publicly with his royal highness the prince of Wales, our late sovereign, to the earl's house, where he played at ombre with his lady among a great many foreign ministers, and many other persons of distinction; and when the king was stepping into the boat to embark for England, it was observed, that he took leave of the earl in a most kind and distinguished manner. His lordship continued at the Hague in his public character till the twentieth of December, A. D. 1714, when in a public audience, taking leave of the States-general, he was before his departure, presented with a gold medal and chain, valued at six thousand guilders, and landed in England on the first day of January following.

He was married at Bradenham, on the sixth of September, A. D. 1711, to Anne, sole daughter and heir of Sir Henry Johnson, of Bradenham, in the county of Bucks; also of Tudington, in Bedfordshire, and of Freston-hall, in Suffolk; by his first wife, Anne, daughter to Hugh Smithson, esquire, son of Sir Hugh Smithson, of Stanwick, in Yorkshire, baronet; by whom he had issue one son, WILLIAM, his successor, and three daughters.

1. Anne, god-daughter to queen Anne, who was married in April, A. D. 1733, to the right honourable William Conolly, esquire, one of his majesty's privy-council of the kingdom of Ireland, and member both of the English and Irish parliaments. She became a widow in January, 1754.

2. Lucy, who in 1747, married George Howard, colonel of the Old Buffs.

3. Henrietta, married in December, 1743, to James Vernon, esquire, son of James Vernon, esquire, clerk of the council, and nephew to admiral Vernon.

The mother of these children died on the nineteenth of September, A. D. 1754, at Twickenham, in Middlesex, and his lordship dying at his seat in Yorkshire, in November, 1739, was succeeded by his only son, (Fourth and present Earl.) WILLIAM WENTWORTH, who returned from his travels on the third of April, A. D. 1741. He married Anne, second daughter and coheir of John Campbell, duke of Argyle and Greenwich, but has no issue. His lordship is a fellow of the Royal Society.

(TITLES.) William Wentworth, earl of Stratford, viscount Wentworth, of Wentworth Woodhouse, and of Stainborough, baron Raby, Newark and Oversley, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, June 29, A. D. 1611, (9 James I.) baron Raby, of Raby castle, in the bishopric of Durham, January 12, A. D. 1639, (15 Charles I.) viscount Wentworth, of Wentworth Woodhouse, and of Stainborough, and earl

of

THE ROYAL CANAL COMPANY LIMITED
GENERAL MANAGERS
OF THE
CANALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND

of Strafford, in the county of York, September 4, A. D. 1711, (10 queen Anne) baron Newarsh and Oversley, by descent.

(ARMS.) Diamond, a chevron between three leopards faces, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a griphon passant, pearl.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a griphon, pearl; on the sinister, a lion, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "En Dieu est tout."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Wentworth castle, in the county of York; at Boughton, in Northamptonshire; and at Twickenham, in Middlesex.

LEGGE, Earl of DARTMOUTH.

THAT there have been and still are many of this name in Italy, who have always been considered as men of eminence, and been honoured with posts of the first consequence, cannot be disputed. We must not be surprized therefore that the noble family now in England should claim, or that genealogists should compliment them with, the same origin. We are far from disputing, however unable we are to establish, the fact; leaving it as we found it, at best conjectural.

The first time we find the name upon record in England, is in the reign of Henry II. when for six years together, from 1164 to 1170, Hugh de Lega, and Richard, son of Osbert, were sheriffs of Bedfordshire and Buckinghamshire; and again, in 1171, we meet with William de Lega, as sheriff of Herefordshire. Whether either of these gentlemen was direct ancestor to the present earl of Dartmouth, or not, is beyond the power of any one to determine; for from that time till 1343, including a space of one hundred and seventy-two years, we have no authentic evidence that any of the name were men of either large property or personal consequence; but are only in general informed, that a younger branch of the family was seated at Leggs Place, near Tunbridge, in Kent, and had so been for many generations; of which was

THOMAS LEGGE, of the Skinners company, in the city of London, for which he served the office of sheriff, A. D. 1343; and in the years 1346, and 1353, was lord-mayor. He was returned one of the burgesses in parliament for that city, in 1349, and 1352. In 1338, he sent king Edward three hundred pounds towards carrying on the war with France, which was a considerable sum in those days, and more than any citizen advanced, except the lord-mayor, and Simon de Frauncis, who lent each eight hundred pounds the next

He married Elizabeth, one of the daughters of Thomas Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, and had issue by her two sons.

1. Simon Legge; and

2. John Legge, who was a serjeant at arms, in 1373. In 1381, being then in the Tower with Simon Sudbury, archbishop of Canterbury, and others, he was there surprized by Wat Tyler and his rebels, taken from that place, and beheaded on Tower-hill. He was knight of the shire for the county of Surry, in 1379, and had issue, from whom those of the name in Norfolk descended, of which family was Dr. Thomas Legge, master of Caius and Gonville college, in Cambridge.

SIMON LEGGE, the eldest son, married Joan, daughter of John Clavering, son of Roger Clavering, of the city of London; and in Cobham church, in Kent, is an exhortation to pray for the souls of Thomas Legge, and this Simon Legge, whose son, THOMAS LEGGE, married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Blount, knight, governor of a garrison in Aquitaine, who being besieged in 14 Henry IV. by the mareschal of France, with three hundred men, overthrew the mareschal's army, consisting of four thousand fighting men, and took prisoners twelve persons of note, and others to the number of one hundred and twenty. The said Thomas had issue by his wife aforesaid, Richard, William, and John. The first died a batchelor, and was buried in Cobham church, after having spent the greatest part of his estate in the wars between Henry VI. and Edward IV.

John, the third son, took advantage of his brother William's absence in Ireland, and got possession of his brother Richard's estate after his death, which occasioned a long suit. But William, nor his heirs, never recovered it. He married Eleanor Talboys, a daughter of ——— Talboys, of Kyme, in Lincolnshire, of which family was the lord Talboys in the reign of king Henry VIII.

WILLIAM LEGGE, the second son, went into Ireland, where he married Anne, only daughter of John, son of Miles, lord Bermingham, of Athenree, and had issue by her Edward, his son and and heir; and dying aged ninety-two, was buried at Caffils, in Ireland. Which EDWARD LEGGE, was sent by his father into England on the law-suit with his uncle John; but being unsuccessful, he made a voyage in 1584 with Sir Walter Raleigh to the Indies; and on his return into Ireland, had a company given him in Sir Henry Danvers's regiment. He was afterwards made vice-president of Munster, when Sir Charles Blount, lord Montjoy, knight of the Garter, (afterwards earl of Devon) was lord-lieutenant, to whom he was related; and often transacted affairs with the earl of Tir-Oen, being in favour with both parties. He had issue by Mary his wife, daughter of Percy Walsh, of Moyvallis, six sons and seven daughters, and died in the seventy-fourth year of his age, A. D. 1616. He was the first Protestant of his family; but most of his children were brought up Roman catholics by his wife, who outlived him several years.

1. Elizabeth, his eldest daughter, never married, but lived to one hundred and five years. She was well versed in the Latin, English, French, Spanish, and Irish tongues.

2. Mary, married to — Spragge, was mother of Sir Edward Spragge, admiral of the blue, who commanded the rear under prince Rupert in the last engagement with the Dutch, A. D. 1673.

3. Margaret, wife of — Fitz-Gerald, esq; lived above one hundred years, and was buried in Ireland.

4. Eleanor, married to — Davys, esquire, son of Sir John Davys, attorney-general, in Ireland, to king James I.

5. Susannah, wife of — Nugent, esquire, by whom she had issue, and was interred in Ireland.

6. Anne, espoused to — Anthony, esquire, and died in the one hundred and twelfth year of her age, in 1702.

7. Jane, married to — Usher, esquire, and had issue.

The sons were,

1. William Legge.

2. Thomas Legge, died young, and was buried in Ireland.

3. Richard Legge, was ensign in the earl of Newport's regiment in the first expedition against the Scots, and afterwards lieutenant-colonel of that regiment, and taken prisoner when the earl of Derby was defeated by Lilburn, at Wigan, in Lancashire. After the Restoration, he was sent with forces under the earl of Peterborough to take possession of Tangier, and was ranger of Whichwood, alias Whittlebury forest, in Oxfordshire, and died unmarried.

4. John Legge, was a lieutenant colonel in the marquis of Antrim's regiment in Ireland, in the reign of Charles I. And on the accession of king Charles II. by the cruel murder of his royal father, in 1648, being then in Ireland, he was sent by prince Rupert, prince Maurice, and the marquis of Ormond, then lord lieutenant, from Kinsale, to hasten his majesty's coming into Ireland; but the ship he was in being taken, he was for a long time imprisoned at Plymouth, and by a court-martial condemned to die: Whitlock gives the following account, July 16, A. D. 1649, "that the fleet before Kinsale took a vessel of prince Rupert's, of eleven guns, and in her, Legg, Sir Hugh Windham, captain Darcy, and sixty men, and ammunition. On the twenty-first of July, letters from Plymouth, of colonel Legg, Sir Hugh Windham, and others being brought thither prisoners, to know the pleasure of the house concerning them. Ordered, that colonel Legg be committed in Bristol, and Sir Hugh Windham to the Mount, for high-treason." However, he afterwards was released, and was deputy-governor of Jersey, in the reign of king James II. and ranger of Whichwood forest aforesaid, where he died in 1702, aged one hundred and nine years. He married Anne Allot, and had issue two sons and four daughters.

5. Edward Legge, died in his infancy.

6. Robert Legge, was sent by king Charles I. into Holland with the queen, to provide arms and ammunition; and on her return she gave this account of her army, from Newark, June 27, A. D. 1644. "I carry with me three thousand foot, thirty companies of horse and dragoons, six pieces of cannon, and two mortars. Harry Jermyn commands the forces which go with me, as colonel of my guards, Sir Alexander Lesley the foot under him, Gerard the horse, and Robin Legge the artillery." He was in most of the battles during the civil war, and received several wounds. In 1645, he was colonel of foot, and taken prisoner by colonel Massey, at the storming of Evesham. He was much trusted by the king and queen, on all hazardous occasions, both their majesties having a good opinion of his courage and fidelity, which he never forfeited. He married a daughter of Sir Daniel Norton, of Southwick, in Hampshire, by whom he had no issue. In order to the restoration of king Charles II. he had Portsmouth delivered to him by colonel Norton, his wife's brother, the government of which he possessed to his death, which happened soon after, and was buried there. We now return to

WILLIAM LEGGE, eldest son to Edward Legge and Mary Walsh. He was brought out of Ireland by Henry Danvers, earl of Danby, president of Munster, his godfather, who had promised (his father being infirm) to take care of his education, and was sent by him to serve as a volunteer under Gustavus Adolphus, king of Sweden; and after served under prince Maurice, of Orange, in the Low-Countries. On his return to England, he was first constituted, November 30, 2 Car. I. keeper of the king's wardrobe during life; and soon after made groom of the bed-chamber to king Charles I. In 1639, he had a commission to be lieutenant-general of the ordnance, in the first expedition against the Scots; and in 1640, brought up that petition from the army, to which his majesty subscribed C. R. whereupon he was examined by the house of commons, and ordered into custody as a delinquent; but was allowed his liberty, giving ten thousand pounds bail for himself, with the earls of Cumberland, and Newport, five thousand pounds each, for his appearance. The parliament soon after publishing a declaration, mentioning the king's attempting to incense the Northern army against them, &c. On which his majesty in answer thereto, said, "He signed captain Legge's petition to satisfy the army." And immediately after removing north-northward, the earl of Pembroke and Holland, having waited on him at Royston, from the parliament, March 9, A. D. 1642, they reported on their return, that the king on reading that part of their message, concerning captain Legge, said, "That's a lie." And on going with the king to York, who being with him when his majesty demanded entrance into Hull, the parliament thereupon remanded him. However, in that year, he was constituted serjeant-major and captain of a troop of cuirassiers in prince Rupert's regiment, and was taken prisoner at Dunsmore-heath, by major Ballard. He was soon at liberty; for, as Rushworth writes, he joined prince Rupert at Bridgnorth, with one thousand one hundred and twenty musketeers, before the fight between the prince and Sir John Meldrum at Newark, March 21, A. D. 1643. And in April following, was wounded and taken prisoner at Litchfield (as Echard writes) and soon after again released. For in the first battle at Newbury, the twentieth of September, A. D. 1643, having valiantly behaved, and the night after attending his majesty in his bed-chamber, the king presented him with a hanger he had that day worn, which was in an agate handle set in gold, and would have knighted him with it, had he consented; but the hanger was kept in his family till the house at Blackheath was robbed in 1693.

In 1644, he was governor of Chester; and December 25, that year, was made governor of Oxford. He had a regiment of foot, and another of cuirassiers; also a commission to be governor in chief of the city and county of Oxford, with power for impressing what soldiers he pleased in the counties of Bucks and Berks. On April 16, A. D. 1645, being then one of the grooms of the king's bedchamber, and governor of Oxford, he was admitted doctor of laws of that university; and on the eighth of October following, surrendered it to Sir Thomas Glemham, his majesty taking him with him when he left Oxford. When king Charles made his escape from Hampton-Court, he, with Sir John Berkley, and Mr. Ashburnham, were the only persons to whose fidelity the king committed himself. The earl of Clarendon relates, that Ashburnham alone seemed to know what they were to do, the other two having received only orders to attend. Whereupon he had no hand in that unfortunate step, of carrying the king over to the Isle of Wight, in which the other two were involved; for he staid with the king at Titchfield-house, while Ashburnham and Sir John Berkeley went to colonel Hammond. And on that, the earl of Clarendon gives him the following character: "Legge had so general a reputation of integrity and fidelity to his master, that he never fell under the least imputation or reproach with any man: he was a very punctual and steady observer of the orders received, but no contriver of them; and though he had in truth a better judgment and understanding than either of the other two, his modesty, and diffidence of himself, never suffered him to contrive bold counsels."

Cromwell sent a warrant to colonel Hammond for securing Mr. Legge, Mr. Ashburnham, and Sir John Berkeley; but the colonel desired to forbear the execution thereof, till he might know the pleasure of the houses: "In regard, (as he said) if those gentlemen should be apprehended, it would be very difficult for him to secure the person of his majesty." And that the king said, "If these gentlemen should be taken from him, and punished as evil doers, for counselling him not to go out of the kingdom, but rather to come to this place, for the more conveniency as to settlement of peace, and for endeavouring it accordingly, in attending him hither, he cannot but himself expect to be dealt with accordingly, his case being the same."

"That these gentlemen have engaged their honours not to depart from him: and having cast themselves upon him, in case they should be removed from thence, it would much reflect upon him."

On May 19, A. D. 1648, he was committed prisoner to Windsor castle, but was soon after released; and during the treaty of the Isle of Wight, he was nominated among others to attend his majesty; but on the thirty-first of August following, he was with Mr. Doucet, the only two disapproved of by the parliament. And engaging in that design of the earl of Holland's to restore the king, he was wounded, and taken prisoner with the earl, at St. Neots, in Huntingdonshire. King Charles was so sensible of his sufferings, and had so great an esteem of his fidelity, that a little before his death, he charged the duke of Richmond to tell the prince of Wales from him, that whenever he was restored to his right, he should be sure to take care of honest Will. Legge; for he was the faithfulest servant that ever any prince had.

After the unfortunate death of that king, he and his family suffered great hardships, and being imprisoned in Plymouth, he was by order of parliament, in 1649, removed to Bristol, with a charge of high-treason, and from thence was sent to Arundel castle, in Suffex; from whence he applied to the speaker, Lenthall, for leave to go abroad; who obtained it for him; and in return, colonel Legge, on the Restoration, was very instrumental in procuring Lenthall's pardon, who, when he died, left him by his will two hundred pounds as a legacy.

As he had eminently distinguished his loyalty to king Charles the First, so was he not backward in espousing the interests of his son and successor, king Charles the Second, accompanying him in 1650 into Scotland, where he was committed prisoner to Edinburgh castle, and so continued till the king made his escape from St. Johnstown, when, to gratify his majesty, he was released. At the battle of Worcester he was wounded and taken prisoner, and had been certainly executed, if his wife had not contrived his escape out of Coventry gaol, by hiring an old woman to carry him her cloaths, which he put on, and brought a close-stool pan, well filled, under his arm, the stench of which occasioned the guards to stand clear, and let him pass unregarded.

In the protectorship of Oliver Cromwell, he, with the earl of Oxford, and others, were committed to prison, being betrayed by the treachery of Manning, who corresponded with Thurlow, Cromwell's secretary, with a design to get money from them, and thereupon informed against such whose fidelity to the king was most notorious. In 1659, when risings were designed throughout the kingdom, he had a commission to raise a regiment.

giment of foot, with several blank commissions, to dispose of as he thought fit. He was also commissioned, with Arthur Annesley, after earl of Anglesey, John Mordant, soon after created viscount Mordant, Sir John Greenville, and Sir Thomas Peyton, to promise pardon to all those who shall endeavour his majesty's restoration, except those who sat as judges on his father.

After the Restoration, the king told him the message he had received from his royal father by the duke of Richmond, which, he said, must always intitle him to any marks of favour he could give him, and offered to create him an earl before his coronation, which he modestly declined, having a numerous family with a small fortune; but told the king, he hoped his sons might live to deserve his majesty's favour. On which he was restored to his place in the bedchamber, and lieutenantancy of the ordnance, with a commission to be superintendant, with general's pay. Also was constituted treasurer of the ordnance, and colonel of an independent company of foot in the Tower of London. All these were granted in 1660 to him during his life.

The next year he was chosen member of parliament for Southampton: and obtained a grant of the king's house in the Minories, London, the lieutenantancy of Alice-Holt, and Woolmer forests, in Hampshire, for forty-five years; also of lands in Ireland, to a considerable value, with a pension of five hundred pounds per annum for his own and his wife's life. In 1663, he was made woodward of Chute forest, in Wiltshire. He died October 13, A. D. 1670, in the sixty-third year of his age, and was buried in the vault, in the Trinity chapel in the Minories, with great solemnity; prince Rupert, the dukes of Buckingham, Richmond, Monmouth, Newcastle, and Ormond, with most of the court, being present at his funeral; and a monument of white marble is erected to his memory, on which is the following inscription:

DEPOSITUM.

"Gulielmi Leg Armigeri, Viri amplissimi Chiarchæ Strenui, R. Ma^{ti} circa Machinas bellicas Locum tenentis Generalis, & Thesaurarij nec non Armorum polionibus præfecti, ejusdem etiam unius ex interioribus, secundi quidem Ordinis, utriq; Carolo sacri cubiculi Ministris: qui domi suæ Fratrum quondam minorum propter Arcem Londinensem, febricula coreptus (in ipem ampliore) excessit. die Octobris xiii. Anno salutis humanæ MDCLXX. ætatis verò propriæ LXIII."

He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir William Washington, of Packington, in Leicestershire, by Anne, daughter of Sir George Villiers, of Brooksby, in the said county, and sister to the first duke of Buckingham of that family. She died in 1688, in the seventy-sixth year of her age, and was buried in the vault in the Trinity chapel, in the Minories, by her husband. They had issue three sons and two daughters;

1. Mary, married to Sir Henry Gooderick, of Ribston, in the county of York, knight and baronet, who was envoy-extraordinary to Spain, in the reign of king Charles II. and lieutenant-general of the ordnance, and privy-counsellor to king William III. by whom she had no issue. She died aged seventy years, and was buried in the vault with her father, though it is mentioned (by mistake) on Sir Henry Gooderick's monument in Ribston chapel, that she was buried there.

2. Susannah, married on the twenty-fifth of April, A. D. 1678, in King Henry the Seventh's chapel, in Westminster-abbey, to Thomas Bilson, of Mapledurham, in the county of Southampton, esquire; by whom she had one daughter, that died in her infancy, and two sons, Leonard Bilson, and Thomas Bilson, both which died in her life-time, without issue; Thomas by a fall from his horse, and Leonard in 1715, who left the remainder of his whole estate, after Thomas Bettesworth, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, to Henry Legge, fourth son to William, earl of Dartmouth, provided he should take the name of Bilson.

The sons were,

1. George Legge.
2. William Legge, who was page of honour to king Charles II. groom of the bedchamber, and captain of a troop of horse, in the regiment of horse-guards, commanded by Aubrey de Vere, earl of Oxford. In the reign of king James II. he was lieutenant-colonel to the queen's regiment of horse, governor of Kinsale, in Ireland, and member of parliament for Portsmouth. He married Mary Pool, widow of ——— Townshend, esquire, but had no issue by her; and dying in Dublin, in the forty-eighth year of his age, was buried there.

3. Edward Legge, died in his infancy, and was buried at Stoke, in Middlesex, where his mother resided during the absence of his father beyond the seas.

(First Lord.) GEORGE LEGGE, eldest son and heir, was sent to sea at the age of seventeen, under the care of Sir Edward Spragge. He commanded the Pembroke in 1667, the Fairfax in 1671, and the Royal Catherine in 1672. In the Dutch wars he was wounded, taking and destroying several of their ships. In 1669 he had the command of his father's independent company of foot; and in 1672, was made lieutenant governor of Portsmouth, under his royal highness, James, duke of York. In 1673, governor of Portsmouth, master of the horse, and gentleman of the bedchamber to the duke of York. In 1677, he had a grant of three hundred pounds per annum, as assistant to the office of ordnance. And before the end of that year, was constituted colonel of a regiment of foot, and lieutenant-general of the ordnance. Soon after he was made master of the ordnance; and on the third of March, A. D. 1680-1, was sworn of the privy-council to king Charles II. In 1682, he had a commission for viewing all the forts and garrisons in England, and for commanding in chief. And before the end of the same year, was by letters patent, * bearing date the second of Decem-

* The preamble to the patent imports: "That his majesty remembering the great merits of William Legge, one of the grooms of the royal bedchamber to his late father king Charles I. especially in that unparalleled rebellion raised against him; in December, in the thirty-fourth year of his reign, advanced to the degree of a baron of this realm, by the title of baron of Dartmouth, in the county of Devon, to hold and enjoy to himself and the heirs male of his body; and for default of such issue, to William Legge, esquire, one of the grooms of the royal bedchamber (brother to him the said George) and to the heirs male of his body; which remainder the king particularly ordered, in justice (as he was pleased to say) to the memory of old colonel Legge, whose modesty ought not to prejudice his children.

The following year he was sent admiral of the whole English fleet, to demolish Tangier, having a commission to be captain-general of all his majesty's forces in Africa, and governor of that city. On his return, he had, as a reward of his many faithful services, a grant from his majesty of ten thousand pounds. He also obtained from king Charles II. a grant to hold a fair twice a year, and a market twice a week, upon Black-heath, in the parish of Lewisham, in Kent.

During the reign of king James II. he was master of the horse, general of the ordnance, constable of the Tower of London, one of the lords of the privy-council, colonel of the royal regiment of fusileers, and captain of an independent company of foot. Also was high-steward of Dartmouth, Kingston upon Thames, King's college, in Cambridge, and recorder of Litchfield. He resigned his post of master of the horse, December 16, A. D. 1687. And in the succeeding year he was made admiral of the fleet of England, then set out to intercept the Dutch fleet bringing over the prince of Orange: which employment he accepted out of gratitude to the king, who, as bishop Burnet writes, (in his History of his own Times) loved him, and in whose service and confidence he had long been. The bishop also says, "that he was indeed one of the worthiest men of his court, but he was much against the conduct of his affairs; yet he resolved to stick to him at all hazards."

After the prince had landed, our Gazettes relate, that he passed by Portsmouth, the eighteenth of November, A. D. 1688, and after bad weather returned to Spithead November the twenty-third following, with forty-three ships of war; the rest of the fleet being put into other ports. Afterwards he sailed from thence for the Downs, December the twenty-ninth, and leaving there several men of war under the command of the lord Berkeley, his lordship with the rest of the fleet, sailed for the Buoy of the Nore.

Yet, notwithstanding he brought the fleet safe home, and had acted by order of king James, when in power, he was in 1691, committed prisoner to the Tower of London, where, after three months imprisonment, he departed this life suddenly of an apoplexy, on the twenty-fifth of October, A. D. 1691, in the forty-fourth year of his age. He was interred by his father in the vault in the Minories, where a monument of white marble was erected to his memory, by Barbara, his lady, who died on the twenty-eighth of January, A. D. 1717-18, in the sixty-eighth year of her age, and was buried by him. She was daughter of Sir Henry Archbold, of Abbots Bromley, in Staffordshire, and by her lord had issue one son, William, and seven daughters.

1. Mary, married November 12, A. D. 1685, in King Henry the Seventh's chapel, in Westminster-abbey, to Philip Musgrave, esquire, eldest son of Sir Christopher Musgrave, of Eden-hall, in Westmorland, baronet, and after his decease, to John Crawford, esquire, son to commissary-general Crawford, and died February 25, A. D. 1753.

2. Elizabeth.

3. Barbara.

4. Susannah.

5. Anne.

And the sixth and seventh died in their infancies.

(First Earl.) WILLIAM LEGGE, only son to George, lord Dartmouth, was born on the fourteenth of October, A. D. 1672. He was lieutenant of Alice-Holt, and Woolmer forests, till king William granted the reversion, after the term of colonel William Legge's grant for forty-five years, to Emanuel How, esquire, groom of his bedchamber; on which he surrendered the remainder of his term for a valuable consideration. He took his place in the house of peers, November 22, 1695. On the accession of queen Anne, he was constituted one of the lords commissioners for trade and plantations, 14 June, A. D. 1702; and on the eighteenth following, was sworn of her privy-council, at St. James's. In 1710, he was sworn one of her majesty's principal secretaries of state, and constituted keeper of the signet of Scotland, in commission with James, duke of Queensberry. Also the following year, on the fifth of September, was advanced to the dignities of viscount Lewisham, in Kent, and earl of Dartmouth. In 1713, he was appointed lord-keeper of the privy-seal; and on the demise of queen Anne, was one of the lords justices of Great-Britain, high-steward of Dartmouth, and one of the governors of the Charter house.

His lordship married in July, A. D. 1700, Anne Finch, third daughter to Heneage, earl of Aylesford, and by her ladyship, who died November 30, A. D. 1751, had issue six sons and two daughters;

1. Barbara, born October 3, A. D. 1701, married to Sir Walter Baggot, of Blithfield, in Staffordshire, baronet; and,

2. Anne, married in October, A. D. 1739, to Sir Leicester Holt, of Aston, in Warwickshire, baronet.

The sons were,

1. George, called lord viscount Lewisham, who married Elizabeth, sole daughter and heir of Sir Arthur Kaye, of Woodsome, in Yorkshire, baronet, by his wife, Anne Marrow, eldest daughter in which, being a person of singular skill and experience in military affairs, as also a valiant and expert commander, he faithfully served him in most of the battles and sieges of those unhappy times. Also performed several eminent services to the said king since his most happy restoration. And further considering, that George Legge, eldest son of the said William, following his father's steps in divers military employments, especially in sundry sharp and dangerous naval fights, wherein he did freely hazard his life; for which respect being made general of the ordnance and artillery, and one of his most honourable privy-council, his majesty thought fit to dignify him with some farther honour."

ter and coheir of Sir Samuel Marrow, of Berkeſwell, in Warwickſhire, baronet. And having been elected a member in the parliament that ſat firſt on buſineſs, November 28, A. D. 1727, for Great-Bedwin, in Wiltſhire, died of the ſmall-pox at his houſe, in Hollis-ſtreet, Cavendiſh-ſquare, London, on the twenty-ninth of Auguſt, A. D. 1732. He had iſſue, a daughter that was ſtill-born; ſecondly, a ſon, Arthur Legge, who died October 6, A. D. 1729, aged two years and ten weeks; alſo a ſon, William, lord viſcount Lewiſham, now earl of Dartmouth, and two daughters, Anne, married to James Brudenell, eſquire, brother to his grace the preſent duke of Montagu, and Elizabeth. His lady ſurviving him, married ſecondly, Francis, lord North and Guilford, afterwards created earl of Guilford.

2. Heneage Legge, baptized March 12, A. D. 1703-4, was at the age of nineteen admitted a ſtudent in the Inner-Temple. On the twelfth of December, A. D. 1734, he was choſen high-ſteward of the city of Litchfield. In February, A. D. 1739, he was ſworn one of the king's council; and in 1749, conſtituted one of the barons of the Exchequer. In June, 1740, he married Catherine, daughter, and one of the coheirs of Jonathan Fogg, of London, merchant, and niece to Sir John Barnard, by whom he had iſſue a ſon, Heneage, born January 7, A. D. 1746-7, and two daughters, Catherine, born July 27, A. D. 1741, and Anne, born October 8, A. D. 1742, which laſt mentioned child died July 30, 1752.

3. William Legge, born Auguſt 1, A. D. 1705, died an infant.

4. Henry Legge, born March 29, A. D. 1708, who took the name of Biſon, for reaſons already mentioned. In November, 1740, he was elected member of parliament for Eaſtlow, in Cornwall, being then a commissioner of the navy; after which he was appointed joint ſecretary of the treaſury. In the ſucceeding parliament ſummoned to meet on the twenty-fifth of June, A. D. 1741, he was returned member for Orford, in Suffolk; alſo again in the years 1747 and 1754, for the ſame place. On the ſixteenth of July, A. D. 1752, he had a grant of the office of ſurveyor-general of all his majeſty's woods in the ſeveral parks, foreſts and chafes, and in the lands of ancient inheritance of the crown, on the north and ſouth ſides of the river Trent, at which time he reſigned his place in the treaſury. On the twentieth of April, A. D. 1745, he was appointed a lord of the admiralty; and on the twenty-fourth of June the following year, was conſtituted a lord of the treaſury. In February, 1747-8, he was appointed envoy-extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the king of Prussia. Returning from his embaſſy in January, 1748-9, he was appointed in the April following treaſurer of the navy. On the fixth of April, A. D. 1754, he was conſtituted chancellor and under treaſurer of his majeſty's exchequer, and one of the lords commissioners of the treaſury, which he reſigned in November, 1755, but was reſtated on the ſixteenth of November the following year. In 1759, he was choſen member of parliament for the county of Southampton, upon a vacancy; and at the general election, A. D. 1761, he was returned again for the ſame county; but in March, that year, was diſmiſſed from all his employments, and never afterwards accepted of any place under the government. On the third of September, A. D. 1750, he married Charlotte, only daughter and heir of William lord Stawell; and by her had iſſue, as may be ſeen by inſpecting the account of her ladyſhip's family; where the reader will find, that the extinct title of Stawell was revived in the daughter by a freſh creation. He died at Tunbridge-Wells, (where he went for the recovery of his health) on the twenty-third of Auguſt, A. D. 1764.

5. Edward Legge, born A. D. 1710, was entered a volunteer on board the Royal-Oak on the thirty-firſt of May, A. D. 1726; and, on the fifth of March, A. D. 1733-4, was appointed lieutenant of the Deptford man of war. After paſſing through the neceſſary ſubordinate offices, he was commodore of a ſquadron in the Weſt-Indies, where he died in 1747; in which year he was elected member of parliament for Portſmouth.

6. Robert Legge, died an infant.

His lordſhip departed this life at his houſe at Blackheath, in Kent, on the fifteenth of December, A. D. 1750, in the ſeventy-ninth year of his age. The honours, &c. devolved upon his grandſon, (Second, and preſent Earl.) WILLIAM LEGGE, ſecond, but only ſurviving ſon, of George, commonly called lord Lewiſham.

His lordſhip ſtudied at the univerſity of Oxford, where he was honoured with the degree of doctor of laws. From thence he travelled into foreign parts; was at Rome A. D. 1752; and, returning to England in the beginning of the year 1754, he took his ſeat in the houſe of peers on the thirty-firſt of May enſuing.

On the eleventh of January, A. D. 1755, he married Frances-Catherine, daughter and ſole heir of Sir Charles Gunter Nicoll, knight of the Bath, by whom he has iſſue five ſons:

1. George, commonly called lord Lewiſham, born October 3, A. D. 1755.

2. William Legge, born February 4, A. D. 1757.

3. Charles Gunter Legge, born May 18, A. D. 1759.

4. Heneage Legge, born May 7, A. D. 1761.

5. Henry Legge, born January 23, A. D. 1765. His lordſhip on the ſeventeenth of Auguſt, 1765, was appointed firſt commissioner for trade and plantations, but he reſigned his place at that board in 1766. He is a fellow of the Royal Society, and recorder of Litchfield.

(TITLES.) William Legge, earl of Dartmouth, viſcount Lewiſham, and baron of Dartmouth.

(CREATIONS.) Baron of Dartmouth, in Devonſhire, by letters patent, dated Dec. 2, 1682, (34 Charles II.) Viſcount Lewiſham, in Kent, and earl of Dartmouth, Sept. 5, 1711, (10 Anne).

(ARMS.) Sapphire a buck's head caboſſed pearl.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, topaz, a plume of five oſtrich feathers party per pale, pearl and ſapphire.

SVP

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a lion pearl, semée of fleurs-de-lis, diamond and crowned with the crest. On the sinister, a buck pearl, semée of mullets ruby.

(MOTTO.) "Gaudet tentamine virtus."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Sandwell-Hall, in the county of Stafford; and at Blackheath, in Kent.

PAGET, Earl of UXBRIDGE.

WILLIAM PAGET, a person of low extraction, born at Wednesbury, in the county of Stafford, came up to London, and acted as one of the serjeants at mace for that city. He had a daughter, Anne, married to —Smith, and three sons, of which the eldest,

(First Lord.) Sir WILLIAM PAGET, may properly be stiled the founder of this noble family. He was born in London, and educated under the famous Lilly, at St. Paul's school, from whence he removed to Trinity college, in Cambridge; and having completed his academical studies, he was admitted into the house of bishop Gardiner, after which he applied himself again to study at the university of Paris.

Dugdale observes upon this nobleman's great genius and abilities, together with his extraordinary advancement, that he might well say with the poet,

—Et quæ non fecimus ipsi
Vix ea nostra voco.

For in 1532, he was appointed one of the clerks of the signet; and in 1541, clerk of the privy-council; as also clerk of the privy-seal, with the fee of thirty pounds per annum, and, soon after that, clerk of the parliament for life. In all which employments he acted with a diligence and prudence that recommended him to the further confidence of his royal master, Henry VII. by whom, in 1542, he was sent ambassador into France, and upon his return from that honourable negociation, made one of the principal secretaries of state, and knighted A. D. 1544. In the following year he was constituted one of the commissioners to treat with Matthew, earl of Lenox, touching the advancement of his royal master's interest in Scotland; whereupon the earl was to marry the lady Margaret Douglas, king Henry's niece. And the same year attending that king to Bologne, was associated with the earl of Hertford, and others, to treat with the ambassadors of France, in order for a general agreement between both realms. In 1546, he obtained a grant to himself and John Mason, (then secretary to the king for the French tongue) and the survivor of them, of the office of master of the posts, with the fee of sixty-six pounds thirteen shillings and four-pence per annum; and the following year was one of the commissioners that treated of and concluded a peace with the French. Shortly after this, the king lying on his death-bed, he was constituted one of his executors, and appointed one of the council to his successor king Edward VI. in the second year of whose reign he obtained a grant in fee of that house without Temple-Bar, in the city of London, called Exeter Place, (formerly belonging to the bishops of that see) as also of a certain parcel of ground lying within the garden of the Middle Temple, adjoining thereto; which house he rebuilt, and called it Paget-house: but it did not long retain that name, being afterwards called Leicester-house, and after that Essex-house.

In 1550, he was sent ambassador to the emperor Charles V. to acquaint him with the distressed situation of his majesty, exposed to the inroads of the Scots, the insults of the French, and the still more alarming dissensions among his own people; and to beg immediate assistance. Upon the third of December that year, being then knight of the most noble order of the Garter, comptroller of the king's household, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, he was called by writ to the parliament then sitting, by the title of lord Paget, of Beaudefert, in Staffordshire; upon the nineteenth of January following, he had his solemn creation to that honour, and within three days following was sent with the earl of Bedford, and Sir John Mason, to treat of peace with the French.

His lordship's elevation, notwithstanding his many and signal services to the state, did not fail to raise him some enemies; insomuch, that in the fifth of Edward VI. upon the fall of the protector, duke of Somerset, against whom the principal charge was, that he had designed the murder of some noblemen at Paget-house, he was sent to the Tower, and bereaved of the ensigns of the garter. But "money was not a little wanting at that time, whereupon several persons were put out of office, and some of them grievously fined; he was charged with selling the king's lands and timber woods without commission; also, that he had taken great fines for lands belonging to the crown, and applied them to his own proper use; and that he had made leases in reversion for more than one and twenty years; and submitting himself to be fined at the king's pleasure, his mulct was set at six thousand pounds, whereof two thousand were remitted, upon condition, that the other four should be paid within the compass of that year; all which he endured with a manly patience, knowing right well, that he held the residue of his estate upon the courtesy of those who hated him at the heart."

Whatever hardships he endured in this reign, they were soon after, upon the death of Edward VI. obliterated, by a new turn of fortune in his lordship's favour; for upon an attempt to advance lady Jane Grey to the throne, this nobleman joined with the earl of Arundel, the chief support of queen Mary's interest, and after they had proclaimed her, he rode all night post to give her notice thereof. For which zeal and respect he obtained an high place in her esteem, and soon after her marriage with king Philip, he was sent ambassador (together with the lord Hastings) to the emperor then at Brussels, to signify their joint desires to see cardinal Pole; to the end, that by his authority the church of England, (at that time in much disorder, by reason of the schism as it was then called) might be put under proper regulations.

Upon the twenty-ninth of January, in the third of Mary, he was made lord privy-seal; but upon the accession of queen Elizabeth, he obtained leave to quit the public service. By his last will and testament, bearing date November 4, A. D. 1560*, wherein he styles himself William, lord Paget, knight of the Garter, lord Paget of Beaufort, he orders his body to be buried at Drayton in Middlesex, if he deceased within forty miles; or at Burton, in Staffordshire, if he died within forty miles of that place, with such funeral solemnities as his executors think convenient. He bequeathed to the lady Anne, his wife, the use of the furniture of his houses in London, and West-Drayton, in Middlesex, as long as she lived unmarried, and after her decease, to his son and heir, Sir Henry Paget, knight, to whom he bequeathed the use of his great standing cup, with the cover double gilt, weighing one hundred ounces and a half, and to remain from heir to heir as an heir-loom. And to his sons, Thomas, and Charles Paget, and to every one of his children living at his decease, a pair of gilt pots, of the value of twenty pounds. He leaves, besides other legacies, annuities to his sons Charles, and Thomas, and his daughter Eleanor Palmer. The residue of his estate he bequeaths to his son and heir Sir Henry Paget, with his mansion-house without Temple-Bar, called Paget-Place, and appoints him his sole executor. Which was proved, 1 Julii, 1563.

He departed this life, aged fifty-seven, on the ninth of June, A. D. 1563, and was buried at Drayton; but his lady, and his son Thomas, erected a very stately monument to his memory above the choir in the cathedral of Litchfield, which, together with that beautiful church, was destroyed in the time of the rebellion against king Charles I. but by the care, and at the cost of the lord Hatton, a draught of it was taken, whereon the following inscription was engraven:

Illustri Heroi, piæ memoriæ, Domino Gulielmo Paget, Equiti maxime honorati ordinis Garterii, Regu-lo seu Baroni de Beaufort; potentissimi Principis Henrici Octavi ad Carolum Quintum Imperatorem, semper augustum, & Franciscum, Gallorum Regem Christianissimum, Legato sapientissimo, ejusdem Principis principi Secretario, & Consiliario fidelissimo; inter alios hujus potentissimi Regni Administratori, in Testamento Regio nominato: Ducatus Lancastrie (regnante Edwardo) Cancellario dignissimo: Hospitii Regii Censori, seu Contrarotulatori prudentissimo: Privati Sigilli serenissimæ Regine Mariæ Custodi sanctissimo: Illustrissimæ Regine Elizabethæ Seni charissimo, Senatori gravissimo; & optime de Patria sua, & bonis omnibus merito. Necnon Domine Annæ fidelissimæ Conjugi suæ, & Domino Henrico utriusque charissimo Filio, & Katharina, Henrici uxori dulcissimæ; prædicta Anna clarissima Fæmina & Domina Catharina, uxor dicti Henrici suavissima; & prænobilis Vir Dominus Thomas Paget in præsentia Regulus de Beaufort, de sententia & ultima voluntate dictorum Gulielmi & Henrici, animis libentissimis, & summo studio officii memores posuere. Vixit Annis 57, ob. 9 Junii, 1563.

His lordship married Anne, daughter and sole heir of Henry Preston, esquire, son and heir of Laurence Preston, second son to Thomas Preston, of Preston, in Yorkshire. She survived him many years, and was buried by him at West-Drayton, with great funeral solemnity, on the fifteenth of February, A. D. 1586. Their issue were four sons,

1. Henry Paget.
2. Thomas Paget.
3. Charles Paget, and
4. Edward Paget, which last died young; also six daughters.

1. Etheldred, married to Sir Christopher Allen, knight.
2. Joan, to Sir Thomas Kitson, of Hengrave, in Suffolk, knight.
3. Anne, to Sir Henry Lee, knight.
4. Eleanor, to Jerome Palmer, esquire; and secondly, to Sir Rowland Clerk, knight.
5. Dorothy, to Thomas Willoughby, of Wolaton, in Nottinghamshire, knight; and
6. Grisfold, to Sir Thomas Rivet, of Chipenham, in Cambridgeshire, knight; and secondly, to Sir William Waldgrave, of Smallbridge, in Suffolk, knight.

His eldest son,

(Second Lord.) HENRY PAGET, was made one of the knights of the Bath at the coronation of queen Mary; and being summoned to parliament in the eighth of Elizabeth, took his place there, on the thirtieth of September. He married Catherine, daughter of Sir Henry Knevet, of Buckenham, in the county of Norfolk, knight, and by her (who surviving him, married, secondly, Sir Edward Cary, of Aldenham, in Hertfordshire, knight, and bore to him Henry, the first viscount Falkland) had issue a daughter, Elizabeth, who died young.

His lordship departing this life A. D. 1569, was interred at Drayton; and the honours of the family devolved upon the next brother, (Third Lord.) THOMAS PAGET. He had summons to parliament in the thirteenth of Eliza-

* Dugdale says the will was without a date.

beth, and took his seat accordingly on the fourth of April. But being zealously attached to the religion of the church of Rome, he had reason to apprehend great danger from the subtlety of Robert, earl of Leicester, and secretary Walsingham, and deemed it more salutary to fly, than stand the result of their enquiries. He accordingly went to France; soon after which, some discoveries were made that he was a well-wisher to the queen of Scots: for which, in the twenty-ninth of Elizabeth, he was attainted in parliament; as was also his brother Charles, whose bigotry was no less notorious. Their effects were confiscated; and by that means the earl of Leicester got a grant of Paget-house from the crown.

This nobleman was remarkable in the literary world, inasmuch that Camden observes, that his death proved "a sad and universal loss to the commonwealth of learning."

He died at Brussels in 1589, leaving issue by his wife, Lazaret, daughter of Sir John Newton, of Somersetshire, knight, and widow of Sir Thomas Southwell, an only son and successor.

(Fourth Lord.) SIR WILLIAM PAGET, who was knighted before the 39th of Elizabeth, when he accompanied the earl of Essex in that signal expedition of taking the town and island of Calais. And in the parliament held in the first of king James, was restored to his lands and honours. He married Lettice, daughter and co-heir to Henry Knowles, of Kingsbury, in Warwickshire, esquire, by Margaret his wife, daughter and co-heir of Sir Ambrose Cave, knight, of the privy-council to queen Elizabeth, and chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, fourth son of Richard Cave, of Stamford, in Northamptonshire, esquire, ancestor to Sir Thomas Cave, baronet. And the said Henry Knowles was a younger son to Sir Francis Knowles, knight of the Garter, and treasurer of the household to queen Elizabeth. By this lady, the lord Paget had issue three sons, William, his successor, Henry, and Thomas, who both died unmarried; also four daughters,

1. Elizabeth, married to Sir William Hicks, of Ruckholt, in Essex, baronet.
2. Dorothy, who died unmarried.
3. Catharine, married to Sir Anthony Irby, of Boston, in Lincolnshire, baronet.

4. Anne, married, first, Sir Simon Harcourt, of Stanton-Harcourt, in Oxfordshire, ancestor to the present earl Harcourt; and after his decease, to Sir William Waller, of Osterly-Park, in Middlesex.

His lordship died on the twenty-ninth of August, A. D. 1629, and was buried at Drayton. His eldest son, (Fifth Lord.) WILLIAM PAGET, was born on the thirteenth of September, A. D. 1609. He was made knight of the Bath at the coronation of king Charles I.

In 1642, he was appointed by the parliament, lord-lieutenant of the county of Buckingham. But soon after, as the earl of Clarendon writes, "being convinced in his conscience, fled from them, and besought the king's pardon. And for the better manifesting the tenderness of his compunction, and the horror he had of his former guilt, he frankly discovered whatsoever he had known of their counsels; and aggravated all the ill they had done, with declaring it to be done to worse and more horrid ends, than many good men believed to be possible for them to propose to themselves." And at the battle of Edgehill, the regiment raised by him for the king, did great service. He was one of the lords that, at Oxford, January the twenty-seventh, A. D. 1643, signed a declaration, by the king's command, of the most probable means to settle the peace of the kingdom. He lived some years after the restoration of the royal family; and departed this life the nineteenth of October, A. D. 1678, at his house in the Old Palace-yard, Westminster, and was buried with his ancestors at Drayton.

He married Frances Rich, eldest daughter to Henry, earl of Holland, who was beheaded by the rebels; and by her had three sons, and seven daughters; William, Henry, and Thomas; whereof the second married a daughter of — Sandford, of Sandford, in Shropshire, esquire; and settling in Ireland, had issue Thomas Paget, esquire, (one of the grooms of the bed-chamber to his majesty, so appointed December the twenty-second, A. D. 1727; and brigadier-general of his majesty's forces, and colonel of a regiment of foot; whose lady, Mary, daughter and co-heir to Peter Whitcombe, of Great Braxted, in Essex, died February the fifteenth, A. D. 1740-1, whose only daughter was married in April, A. D. 1737, to Nicholas Bayley, of Placenywyd, baronet, member in two parliaments for Anglesey) and a daughter, Dorothy, married to Sir Edward Irby, of Boston in Lincolnshire, bart. father, by her, to the present lord Boston, chamberlain to the princess dowager of Wales.

The seven daughters were,

1. Isabella, who died unmarried.
2. Lettice, wedded to Richard Hampden, of Great-Hampden, in Buckinghamshire, esquire.
3. Elizabeth, who died unmarried.
4. Frances, espoused to Rowland Hunt, of Boreatton, in Shropshire, esquire.
5. Penelope, married to Philip Foley, of Prestwood, in Staffordshire, esquire.
6. Diana, married to Sir Henry Ashhurst, of Waterstock, in Oxfordshire, baronet. And,
7. Anne, who died unmarried.

His eldest son,

(Sixth Lord.) WILLIAM PAGET, succeeding to the honours of the family, took his seat in the house of peers on the twenty-fifth of November, A. D. 1678.

In the reign of king James II. he was one of the peers who appeared in Westminster-Hall, on the trial of the seven bishops; which had an effect in their favour, both on the judges and jury.

After the landing of the prince of Orange, he was one of the lords who voted for the vacancy of the throne, and settling the crown on his highness and the princess of Orange. Whereupon, on their accession, he was, in March A. D. 1688, constituted lord-lieutenant and custos-rotulorum of the county of Stafford, and appointed envoy extraordinary to the emperor. He arrived in that character at the Hague, October the third, A. D. 1689, and remained at the court of Vienna till February, A. D. 1692; when being appointed ambassador extraordinary to the grand signior, he travelled through Hungary and the Turkish territories ritories to Constantinople; and by his prudent negotiation effected the memorable peace of Carlowitz, in 1698; which stroke of policy will ever be remembered to his lordship's honour.

He married, first, Frances, daughter of Francis Pierrepont, a younger son of Robert earl of Kingston, and by this lady (who surviving * him near thirty-six years, died September the second, A. D. 1749, aged near one hundred years) had issue two sons; of which, William, the eldest, died before his father, and the second,

(First Earl.) HENRY PAGET, in his father's life time, was elected knight of the shire for the county of Stafford, in the seventh year of king William, as also in the tenth, twelfth, and thirteenth of that king; likewise in the several parliaments in the reign of queen Anne, whilst a commoner. In 1702, when his royal highness prince George of Denmark was constituted lord high-admiral of England, he was appointed one of his council in the affairs of the admiralty; and on the thirteenth of June, A. D. 1711, was declared captain of the yeomen of the guard; and the next day sworn of her majesty's privy-council. In the same year, on the first of January (his father yet living) he was created a peer of Great Britain, by the style and title of lord Burton, baron of Burton, in the county of Stafford. And on the twenty-fifth of February the year following, succeeding his father in honour and estate, was constituted lord-lieutenant and custos-rotulorum of the county of Stafford. On the seventeenth of April, A. D. 1714, her majesty appointed his lordship to be her envoy extraordinary to his most serene highness the elector of Hanover, and to the princess Sophia, electress and dutchess dowager of Hanover. And the same year, on the accession of George I. he was continued captain of the yeomen of the guards, and lord-lieutenant of the county of Stafford. Also on the nineteenth of October, A. D. 1714, in the first year of his reign, he was created earl of Uxbridge, in the county of Middlesex. And in September, A. D. 1715, resigned his employments. His lordship married Mary, daughter and coheir to Thomas Catesby, of Whiston, in the county of Northampton, esquire, by whom he had issue two sons, Henry, and Thomas-Catesby; the elder of which died young. But his lady dying suddenly at Isleworth, in February, A. D. 1735-6; he married, secondly, A. D. 1739, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Walter Bagot, of Blithfield, baronet, but had no issue by her; his lordship deceased in September A. D. 1743. Which

THOMAS-CATESBY, was one of the gentlemen of the bed-chamber to his late majesty, when prince of Wales; and on his accession to the throne, was, July the fourth, A. D. 1727, continued in the same post to his majesty. He was elected to parliament for the county of Stafford, in the two parliaments called by George I. His lordship married, on the third of May, A. D. 1718, Elizabeth, daughter to John Egerton, duke of Bridgewater, by whom he had issue two sons, Henry, and George; which last died at Colchester in the seventeenth year of his age, in April, A. D. 1737, and was buried at Drayton. His lordship dying before his father, in January, A. D. 1741-2, the honours of the family, upon the death of the first earl, devolved upon the grandson, (Second and present Earl.) HENRY PAGET.

(TITLES.) Henry Paget, earl of Uxbridge, baron Paget of Beaufort, and baron Burton.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Paget, of Beaufort in Staffordshire, Jan. 19, 1550 (4 Edw. VI.) Baron of Burton, in the same county, Dec. 31, 1711 (10 Queen Anne.) And earl of Uxbridge, in Middlesex, Oct. 19, 1714 (1 Geo. I.)

(ARMS.) Diamond on a cross engrailed between four eagles displayed pearl, five lions passant guardant of the first.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a demi tyger rampant, diamond, his majesty's ducal collar and tufts, pearl.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two tygers maned, gorged, and tufted as the crest.

(MOTTO.) "Per il suo contrado."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Drayton, in Middlesex; and at Beaufort, in Staffordshire.

* Mr. Edmondson contradicts this, and expressly says, that he married secondly, Isabel, daughter of Sir Anthony Irby, but gives the death of neither lady.

THE
OFFICE OF THE
SHERIFF OF THE COUNTY OF
NEW YORK
IN SENATE CHAMBERS
JANUARY 18 1880
ROBERT J. BROWN
SHERIFF OF THE COUNTY OF
NEW YORK
THOMAS J. BROWN
SHERIFF OF THE COUNTY OF
NEW YORK

B E N N E T, Earl of T A N K E R V I L L E.

THIS noble family is said to have been long seated at Clopcot, in Berkshire, and we find John Bennet, in 1433, returned among the gentlemen of that county, who made oath for the observance of the laws then made for themselves and retainers. This gentleman was probably grandfather to

THOMAS BENNET, of Clopcot, to whose memory a monument is erected, in Allhallow's church, in Wallingford, Berkshire, with this inscription :

“ This is the monument of Thomas Bennet, of Clopcot, esquire, who had issue Thomas Bennet, knight, citizen and alderman of London, his third son, who gave twenty pounds yearly for ever, to fifteen poor people of the town of Wallingford.”

The wife of this Thomas Bennet, the father, was Anne, daughter of — Molines, of Mackney, in Oxfordshire, and their issue were three sons ; the name of the second is not handed down, but the youngest, Thomas Bennet, was sheriff of London, in 1594, and lord-mayor of that city in 1603 ; and during his mayoralty, on the twenty-sixth of July, had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him at Whitehall. By his wife Elizabeth, daughter of William Cradock, esquire, by whom he has issue three sons and two daughters. His eldest son, Simon Bennet, seated at Beechampton, Bucks, was created a baronet, July 17, A. D. 1627: But this branch is extinct.

RICHARD BENNET, elder brother to Thomas Bennet, just mentioned, as lord-mayor of London, married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Tisdale, of Deanly, in Berkshire, and had issue three sons,

1. Ralph Bennet, ancestor to the Bennets, of Morden, in Surry.

2. John Bennet, ancestor to three earls of Tankerville, &c.

3. Thomas Bennet, alderman of the city of London, who died 1622, whose eldest son, Richard Bennet, was seated at Kew, and had two daughters, coheiresses, married, as in the table, and whose younger son, Thomas Bennet, was seated at Baberham, in Cambridgeshire, and was created a baronet, on the twenty-second of November, A. D. 1660, which honour is now extinct.

4. Walter Bennet, D. D.

Sir JOHN BENNET, second son of Richard Bennet, was seated at Dawley, in Middlesex, and was judge of the prerogative court, doctor of laws, chancellor to queen Anne, (confort to king James I.) and member of parliament for the city of York. He was knighted, A. D. 1603, and in 1617, was sent ambassador to Brussels. He departed this life in the beginning of the year 1627, leaving issue three sons by his wife Anne, daughter of Christopher Weeks, of Salisbury, in Wiltshire.

1. John Bennet, his successor.

2. Sir Thomas Bennet, doctor of civil laws, and master in Chancery, who by his first wife, Charlotte, daughter of William Harrison, of London, had issue two daughters, who died unmarried. By his second wife, Thomasine, daughter and coheir of George Dethic, esquire, counsellor at law, son of Sir William Dethic, he had issue Thomas Bennet, of Salthorp, in Wiltshire, who married Martha, daughter of John Smith, of Tidworth, in the county of Southampton, esquire.

3. Matthew Bennet, died unmarried.

The eldest son,

Sir JOHN BENNET, of Dawley, was knighted at Theobalds, on the fifteenth of June, A. D. 1616. He married Dorothy, daughter of Sir John Crofts, of Saxham, in the county of Suffolk, knight, by whom he had issue two daughters ;

1. Dorothy, married to Benjamin Bacon, of London.

2. Elizabeth, married to Sir Robert Carr, of Sleeford, in Lincolnshire, baronet.

Also six sons,

1. John Bennet, his successor.

2. Henry Bennet, created baron of Arlington, by letters patent, bearing date March 14, A. D. 1663, viscount Thetford, in the county of Norfolk, and earl of Arlington, by other letters patent, bearing date April 22, A. D. 1672. This nobleman, who was knight of the Garter, and lord chamberlain to the king, married Isabella, daughter of Lewis of Nassau, lord of Beaverwaert, and count of Nassau, and by her had issue an only daughter and heir, Isabella, successor to her father's titles, according to the limitation of the several patents ; which titles are now enjoyed by his grace the duke of Grafton, by virtue of his descent from this lady, who, on the first of August, A. D. 1672, became the wife of Henry Fitzroy, natural son to Charles II. afterwards created duke of Grafton, &c.

3. Robert Bennet,

4. Thomas Bennet, } died without issue.

5. Edward Bennet, }

6. Charles

6. Charles Bennet, who married Anne, daughter of Richard Wigmore, of Upton-court, in Herefordshire, and had issue a son and two daughters.

(First Lord.) Sir JOHN BENNET, the eldest son, was made knight of the Bath, at the coronation of Charles II. in whose reign, on the twenty-fourth of November, A. D. 1682, he was created baron Ossulston, of Ossulston, in the county of Middlesex. In the same reign he was lieutenant, and afterwards captain of the band of pensioners. At Harlington church, where he was interred, we find the following monumental inscription:

"To the Memory of Sir JOHN BENNET, Knight of the Honourable Order of the Bath, Lord OSSULSTON, Baron of Ossulston, in the County of Middlesex, Lord of this Manor, and Patron of this Church. And of both his Wives, the first ELIZABETH Countess of Mulgrave, Daughter of LIONEL CRANFIELD, Earl of Middlesex. The other BRIDGET, daughter of JOHN HOWE, of Langor in the County of Nottingham, Esq; by whom he had issue one Son and two Daughters.

Anno Dom. 1688.

Ætat Suxæ 70."

Of the two daughters, Dorothy, died young, and Annabella married John Cecil, earl of Exeter.

The son and heir was (First Earl.) CHARLES BENNET, born A. D. 1674, who took his seat in the house of peers, on the twelfth of December, A. D. 1695. By letters patent, bearing date, October 19, A. D. 1714, his lordship was by George I. raised to the dignity of an earl, by the title of earl of Tankerville. On the ninth of December, the following year, he was appointed chief justice and justice in eyre of all the forests, chases, parks, and warrens, south of Trent. On the twenty-seventh of February, A. D. 1720-1, he was made knight of the Thistle.

In July, A. D. 1695, he married Mary, only daughter of Ford, lord Grey, of Wark, and earl of Tankerville, by his wife Mary, fourth daughter of George, earl of Berkeley. By this lady, who died on the thirty-first of May, A. D. 1710, he had issue four sons and three daughters.

1. Bridget, married on the twenty-sixth of May, A. D. 1716, to John Wallop, esquire, created afterwards viscount Lymington, and after her decease, created earl of Portsmouth. She died October 12, A. D. 1738.

2. Annabella, married in 1721, to William Powlet, esquire, eldest son to lord William Powlet, second son of Charles, first duke of Bolton.

3. Mary, married August 6, A. D. 1720, to William Wilmer, of Syvell, in Northamptonshire. She died May 24, A. D. 1729, leaving three sons, Charles, George, and Bennet.

Of four sons, John, the second, died an infant; Henry and Grey, the two youngest, died unmarried, and the eldest, upon the death of his father, May 21, A. D. 1722,

(Second Earl.) CHARLES BENNET, succeeded to the earldom. On the twenty-eighth of February, A. D. 1728-9, he was appointed gentleman, or lord of the bedchamber to Frederic, prince of Wales; and on the sixteenth of May, A. D. 1730, was made knight of the Thistle. In September, 1731, he was appointed captain of the yeomen of the guards, which he held near two years, and was then made master of the buck-hounds. In June, 1737, he was appointed lord of the bedchamber to the king; but this post he soon resigned. On the first of May, A. D. 1740, having been appointed lord-lieutenant of the county of Northumberland, and of the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne, he was sworn into the same.

He married Camilla, daughter of Edward Colville, of Whitehouse, in the bishopric of Durham, and by her, who was lady of the bedchamber to queen Caroline, and who died on the thirteenth of June, A. D. 1750, aged one hundred and five years, had issue two sons; of which George, the youngest, was born, A. D. 1727, and one daughter, Camilla, who was married on the eleventh of January, A. D. 1754, to Gilbert Fane Fleming, esquire, son to governor Fleming. His lordship dying on the fourteenth of March, A. D. 1753, the eldest son, (Third, and present Earl.) CHARLES BENNET, succeeded to the honours of the family. In 1748, he was elected knight of the shire for the county of Northumberland. His lordship was originally disposed for a military life, and gradually passed through the several posts of ensign, captain, and lieutenant-colonel, and served, in the latter capacity, under the duke of Cumberland, in his (the first) regiment of foot-guards.

After his accession to the peerage, he was appointed lord-lieutenant of the county of Northumberland, which honour he afterwards resigned.

On the twenty-third of September, A. D. 1742, he married Alicia, third daughter of Sir John Astley, of Patehull, in Staffordshire, baronet, and by her ladyship has had issue three sons;

1. Charles Bennet, commonly called lord Ossulston, born November the twenty-sixth, A. D. 1743.

2. John Grey Bennet, died, aged near two years.

3. Henry Astley Bennet, born April 3, A. D. 1757.

And two daughters,

1. Camilla, born March 11, A. D. 1746-7, married count Donhoff of the holy Roman empire.

2. Frances Alicia, born January the eighth, A. D. 1749.

(TITLES.) Charles Bennet, earl of Tankerville, and baron Ossulston.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Ossulston, of Ossulston, in Middlesex, November the twenty-fourth, A. D. 1682, (34 Charles II.) and earl of Tankerville, a castle in Normandy, October the nineteenth, A. D. 1714, (1 George I.)

(ARMS.) Ruby, a bezant between three demi lions rampant, pearl.

(CREST.)

(CREST.) On a wreath, a scaling, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two lions, pearl, each charged on its shoulder with a bezant, and ducally crowned, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "De bon vouloir servir le roy."

(CHIEF SEATS.) Chillingham castle, in Northumberland, and Dawney-court, Bucks.

FINCH, Earl of AYLESFORD.

(First Earl.) HENEAGE FINCH, second son of Heneage, earl of Nottingham*, was member of Christ-church college, in Oxford, and from thence went to the Inner-Temple, London, and diligently applied himself to the study of the law, wherein he made such a proficiency, that on the thirteenth of January, A. D. 1678, he was appointed solicitor-general to king Charles II. from which office he was removed in April, A. D. 1686, by the succeeding monarch.

He was one of the chief council for the seven bishops in 1688, and very strenuously opposed their commitment to the Tower. He was chosen member of parliament for the university of Oxford in 1678-9, as he was for the borough of Guilford, in 1685. After this he was returned to the several parliaments of 1688, 1690, 1695, and 1701, for the university of Oxford.

By letters patent, bearing date the fifteenth of March, A. D. 1702-3, he was, by the favour of queen Anne, raised to the dignity of the peerage, by the stile and title of baron of Guernsey, and five days after was sworn of the privy-council; of which board he continued a member during that and the succeeding reign, till his death. On the twelfth of October, A. D. 1714, he was appointed chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, which office he resigned on the twenty-ninth of February, A. D. 1715-16. By letters patent, bearing date the twenty-sixth of October, A. D. 1714, his lordship was created earl of Aylesford.

He married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir to Sir John Banks, of Aylesford, baronet, and by her, who died on the first of September, A. D. 1743, was father of three sons and six daughters;

1. Elizabeth, married to Robert, lord Bingley; she died February 26, A. D. 1757.

2. Mary, who died unmarried in February, A. D. 1734-5.

3. Anne, married to William Legge, earl of Dartmouth; she died November the thirtieth, A. D. 1751.

4. Martha, died in January, 1760.

5. Frances, married to Sir John Bland, baronet; she died A. D. 1759.

6. Essex, died unmarried, A. D. 1744.

The sons were,

1. Heneage Finch.

2. John Finch, who served in parliament for Maidstone, from 1722, till the time of his death, January 1, A. D. 1739-40. By his wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Saville, of Methley, in Yorkshire, whom he married on the thirtieth of April, A. D. 1726, he had issue a son that died an infant, a daughter, Mary, and a second son, named Saville Finch, member in the present parliament for Malton, in Yorkshire; which Saville Finch married Judith, daughter of John Fullerton, of Dorsetshire, esquire.

3. Henry Finch, who died July 14, A. D. 1757.

His lordship dying on the twenty-second of July, A. D. 1719, was buried at Aylesford, and his eldest son, (Second Earl.) HENEAGE FINCH, succeeded to the honours of the family; before which, from the ninth of queen Anne, he had been constantly elected to parliament for the county of Surry. On the eleventh of June, A. D. 1711, he was appointed master of the Jewel-office, which post was continued to him after the accession of George I. till he resigned it at the same time that his father quitted the court.

He married Mary, daughter and heir of Sir Clement Fisher, of Packington, in Warwickshire, baronet, and by her, who died at Bath, in April, 1740, had issue one son and five daughters.

1. Anne, born October the seventeenth, A. D. 1713.

2. Mary, born March 1, A. D. 1716, married in November, A. D. 1736, to William, commonly called viscount Andover, to whom she bore, among other issue, the present earl of Suffolk and Berkshire.

3. Elizabeth, born November the twenty-eighth, A. D. 1717.

* See page 536, Vol. I.

4. Frances, born February 4, A. D. 1720, who married on the second of April, A. D. 1741, Sir William Courtenay, of Powderham, in Devonshire. She died in December, 1761.

5. Jane, born A. D. 1721, died A. D. 1726.

The only son and heir,

(Third, and present Earl.) HENEAGE FINCH, who was born on the sixth of November, A. D. 1715, succeeded to the earldom, &c. upon the demise of his father, June 26, A. D. 1757, who was interred at Allbury, in Surry.

In December, 1739, he was elected knight of the shire for the county of Leicester, and in 1741, and 1754, for Maidstone, in Kent. On the sixth of October, A. D. 1750, he married Charlotte, youngest daughter of Charles Seymour, duke of Somerset, who bore to him issue eight sons and two daughters, as underneath.

1. Heneage Finch, called lord Guernsey, born July the fourth, A. D. 1751.

2. Charles Finch, born May the twenty-fourth, A. D. 1752.

3. William Clement Finch, born May the twenty-seventh, A. D. 1753.

4. Charlotte, born May the thirteenth, A. D. 1754.

5. John Finch, born May the twenty-second, A. D. 1755.

6. Edward Finch, born April the twenty-sixth, A. D. 1756.

7. Daniel Finch, born April the third, A. D. 1757.

8. Seymour Finch, born June the eleventh, A. D. 1758.

9. Henry Allington Finch, born February the twenty-sixth, A. D. 1760.

10. Frances, born February the ninth, A. D. 1761.

(TITLES.) Heneage Finch, earl of Aylesford, and baron of Guernsey.

(CREATIONS.) Baron of the Isle of Guernsey, May the fifteenth, A. D. 1702-3, (1 Anne) and earl of Aylesford, in the county of Kent, October the twenty-sixth, A. D. 1714, (1 George I.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth, pearl, a chevron, between three griffons passant, diamond, for Finch. Second and third, pearl, a chevron vaire, between three demi-lions rampant, ruby, for Fisher.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a griffon passant, as in the coat.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a griffon diamond, gorged with a ducal collar, topaz. On the sinister, a lion, of the latter, ducally gorged, sapphire.

(MOTTO.) "Aperto vivere voto."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Aylesford, near Rochester, Kent; Allbury, near Guilford, in Surry; and at Packington, in Warwickshire.

HERVEY, Earl of BRISTOL.

THIS noble family is undoubtedly of Norman extraction, and descended from Herve, duke of Orleans, a younger son, of whom we are informed by Stow, attended William the Conqueror into Rugland, and shared with other adventurers the royal favour, when he rewarded his followers with divers grants of lands, lordships, &c. This gentleman was called

ROBERT FITZ-HERVEY. He had many sons, one of which was bishop of Bangor, and from thence was translated to the see of Ely, and was the first bishop of that place, A. D. 1109. He is also upon record, as the founder of Thorney monastery, in Cambridge, and departed this life on the thirtieth of August, A. D. 1131. The elder brother was another

ROBERT FITZ-HERVEY, called by some count Herve, who, in the reign of king Stephen, was governor of the castle of the Devizes, and was signally serviceable to that monarch in his wars with Maud the empress, and so valiantly defended his castle against the earl of Gloucester, that the siege was soon raised. It is said, however, that at last he was obliged to leave the kingdom with a very few attendants; but as a reward for his attachment to that king, he obtained several castles in France. Which castles, his son

HERVEY DE YUON surrendered, or rather delivered to king Henry II. finding himself unequal in force to the earl of Chartres, who, by aid of the French king, sought to dispossess him in 1169; and Camden informs us, that he was afterwards with that monarch at the conquest of Ireland. He married Wiccia, daughter of William Goieth, of Normandy; and had issue,

HENRY FITZ-HERVEY, who was in the crusade with Richard I. and was much in favour with king John, from whom he obtained many grants, and particularly the foresterhip of New Forest. By his wife, Alice, daughter to Henry, son of Ivo, he had issue,

OSBERT

OSBERT HERVEY, who was seated in Norfolk, and was justice itinerant, both in the reign of Richard I. and in that of king of John, till the time of his decease, A. D. 1206. By his wife Dionisia, daughter of Geoffrey de Grey, he had a son,

ADAM HERVEY, who married Juliana, daughter and heir of John Fitz-Hugh, and dying A. D. 1224, was succeeded by his eldest son,

JOHN HERVEY, (whose younger brother, William Hervey, was seated at Boxted, in Suffolk, and was sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, in the thirty-second of Henry II. and in the first and second of Richard I. His son William Hervey, of Boxted, married Beatrice, daughter of Thomas de Weyland, by whom he had a daughter, Amy, married to Robert Leyes, whose daughter and heir, Beatrix, became the wife of Thomas Badwella, and brought with her the manor of Boxted.) He married Joan, daughter and heir of John Harman, (or Hammon) of Thurley, in Bedfordshire, which, after the decease of his stepfather, became the chief place of his residence, although he had before been seated at Risely, in the same county. He had two sons, William and Francis, and dying A. D. 1260, was succeeded by the eldest,

WILLIAM HERVEY, of Thurley also, who married Mary, daughter and coheir of Richard Folliot, esquire, and had issue two sons, John and Peter; from the latter of which, seated at West-Walton, and Warnfield, in the county of Norfolk, the Herveys of Norfolk, and those of Northamptonshire, claim their descent.

He died A. D. 1297, and was succeeded at Thurley, and in his other possessions, by his eldest son,

Sir JOHN HERVEY, who added greatly thereunto, by marrying Margaret, daughter and coheir of Sir John Nernit, or Nornwit, of Burnham, in Buckinghamshire, knight, son of Thomas Nernit, by Alice, his wife, daughter and heir of Thomas Buckland, of Devonshire, esquire. His issue were, a younger son, Nicholas Hervey, slain at the battle of Tewkesbury, May 4, A. D. 1471, and JOHN HERVEY, his eldest son and successor. In 1386, he was elected knight of the shire for the county of Bedford, and had to defray the expences of sixty-three days attendance twelve pounds and twelve shillings. In the fourth of Henry IV. he was in commission with others, to treat with Owen Glendower, concerning the redemption of Reginald, lord Grey of Ruthyn, then his prisoner; and we know no more of him, but that with others he obtained licence in the sixth of the same reign, to found a collegiate church, at North Yevell, in Bedfordshire, in the room of the parish church there, to celebrate divine service for the souls of Sir John Trally, knt. and Reginald, his son.

He married Margaret, daughter of Sir William Calthrop, knight, and by this lady, who surviving him, married secondly, Sir John Argentine, and died A. D. 1427, he had issue his successor,

THOMAS HERVEY, of Thurley, esquire; who marrying Joane, daughter of William Paston, esquire, one of the justices of the King's Bench, had issue,

JOHN HERVEY, esquire, of Thurley, who was appointed master of the ordnance in 1461, with a grant of three shillings a day for himself, clerk, and servants in the office. He married Christian, daughter of John Chicheley, chamberlain of London, nephew and heir of Henry Chicheley, archbishop of Canterbury, and founder of All Souls college, in Oxford, and cardinal of St. Eusebius, and had issue four sons and four daughters, entered in the table.

The eldest son,

JOHN HERVEY, succeeded to Thurley, and marrying Alice, daughter and coheir of Nicholas Morley, of Glynd, in Suffex, esquire, had issue a daughter, Elizabeth, first, the wife of Thomas Atcliffe, esquire; secondly, of John Leigh, of Addington, in Surry, esquire, and two sons, of which the eldest,

Sir GEORGE HERVEY, seated at Thurley, was a man of great eminence. He was sheriff of the counties of Bedford and Bucks, in 1509, and 1517; had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him by king Henry VIII. (as a reward for his bravery at the sieges of Therouenne and Tournay, and the battle of Spurs) on the thirteenth of October, A. D. 1513. He died A. D. 1526, having had issue by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of John Stamford, an only child, Joane, who became the wife of Arthur Walton, of Elstow. By his will he bequeathed the manor place of Thurley, with many other fair possessions, to Gerard, the son of Margaret Smart, provided he took the name of Hervey; with which, and other conditions, this Gerard complying, he became seated at the ancient manor-house of the family, and from him descended the Herveys of that place. The younger brother of this Sir George, and who continued our line, was

THOMAS HERVEY, who in right of his wife, Jane, daughter and heir of Henry Drury of Ickworth, in the county of Suffolk, became seated at that place. This gentleman attended Henry VIII. in his wars, and was council for the city of Tournay, A. D. 1517. By his lady already mentioned, who surviving him, married, secondly, Sir William Carew, and at length departed this life on the second of July, A. D. 1525, and was buried at St. Mary's church, in St. Edmundsbury, Suffolk, he had issue four sons and two daughters. Simon, the second son, died young. John Hervey, the eldest son, was one of the executors to his uncle, Sir George Hervey, and was seated at Ickworth; but dying without issue, that and all other his possessions, devolved upon his brother,

WILLIAM HERVEY, of Ickworth aforesaid, who married Joan, daughter of John Cocket, of Ampton, in the county of Suffolk. He died on

* In this we have followed Mr. Edmondson; because his table concerning this noble family, seems to have an accuracy that deserves notice; and a part is declared by the author, to have been adopted ex Eviden. penes Comitum Bristol. We cannot however help thinking, that Nicholas was a younger son, not brother to John Hervey; for if we call him brother, we shall find him fighting at Tewkesbury, A. D. 1471, eighty-five years after the time John was summoned to parliament; a circumstance although possible, not very probable.

the first of August, A. D. 1538, having had issue three daughters, Elizabeth, Jane, and Margaret; the eldest married to ——— Guybon, of Sudbury, in Suffolk, the second to ——— Vynnes, esquire, and the youngest to ——— Prat, esquire.

Also five sons.

1. John Hervey, ancestor to the two earls of Bristol.

2. Sir Nicholas Hervey, of whom we shall have occasion to speak presently.

3. Edmund Hervey, seated at Elstow, who by his wife Margaret, daughter of Sir Giles Wentworth, knight, left an only daughter and heir, Isabella, who became the wife of Sir Humphrey Ratcliff, knight.

4. Francis Hervey, seated at Witham, who married Jane, the daughter of William Downer, esquire.

5. Anthony Hervey, who by his wife Lucy, daughter of Sir Humphrey Lisley, knight, had an only daughter and heir, Margaret, who married Sir Amias Powlet, knight.

The second son,

Sir NICHOLAS HERVEY, was gentleman of the privy-chamber to king Henry VIII. in the twenty-third year of whose reign he was ambassador in the emperor's court at Gaunt. He was twice married; by his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Fitz-William, and widow of Sir Thomas Maleverer, he had an only son, Sir Thomas Hervey, knight, marshal, in the reign of queen Mary, whose eldest of two daughters and coheirs, Eleanor, was married to William Worsley, of the Isle of Wight. Sir Nicholas married, secondly, Bridget, daughter and heir of Sir John Wiltshire, and widow of Sir Richard Wingfield, and by her had issue three sons and two daughters, as in the table. From the second son, Sir George Hervey, lieutenant of the Tower of London, the Herveys of Marks-hall, in Essex, are descended. The eldest son, Henry Hervey, married Jane, daughter of James Thomas, of Glamorgan, esquire; and by her had issue seven daughters, as in the table, all married except the youngest; their brother, the only son of Henry Hervey last mentioned,

Sir WILLIAM HERVEY, distinguished himself on several occasions, and for his eminent services, was at length advanced to the dignity of a peer of this kingdom, by the title of lord Hervey of Kidbrook.

He first signalized himself in 1588, in the memorable engagement of the Spanish Armada, wherein he was principally concerned in boarding one of the Spanish galleons, killing the captain, Hugh Moncada, with his own hands. He was afterwards knighted, June 27, A. D. 1596, with many other persons of note, who had valiantly behaved in taking the town and island of Cales; and the year following embarking again with the earl of Essex, and Sir Walter Raleigh, was present at the taking of the town of Fyal. In 1600, he commanded one of the queen's ships, and brought succours to the lord-president of Munster, then reducing the rebels in Ireland, who were in expectation of assistance from the Spaniards. He staid some time in that kingdom, and behaved himself in several actions with great bravery and conduct, particularly with seventy foot and twenty-four horse, he defeated one hundred and sixty foot, and eighteen horse of the rebels, killing and taking sixty of them, without the loss of one man. He was also very serviceable at the siege of Kinsale (possessed by the Spaniards in 1601) and on the surrender thereof the ninth of January, he was sent to take possession of the castles of Dunboy, Castlehaven, and Flower, pursuant to the capitulation. Being afterwards made governor of Carbery from Ross to Bantry, he took in Capeclear castle, and performed many successful acts, till the rebels were entirely reduced.

For which services, king James advanced him to the dignity of a baronet, on the 31st of May, in the seventeenth of his reign, and the year following created him a peer of the kingdom of Ireland, viz. baron of Ross, in Wexford, by letters patent dated August 5, A. D. 1620. Lastly, "By reason of his eminent services at home and abroad, both in the times of king James and king Charles I. as well in council as in the wars, and other foreign expeditions," (as the patent expresses) was created a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Hervey, of Kidbrook, in the county of Kent, February 7, 1628. He first, in 1597, took to wife Mary, relict of Henry, earl of Southampton, and daughter of Anthony Brown, viscount Montacute, by whom he had no issue. He secondly married on February 5, A. D. 1607, at Cripplegate church, London, Cordelia, daughter and coheir of Brian Annesley, of Lee, in Kent, esquire, by whom he had three sons, William, slain in the German wars; John, who died in Ireland; and Henry, who died young: also three daughters, Dorothy and Helen, who died unmarried; and Elizabeth, who became his sole daughter and heir, and was wedded to John Hervey, of Ickworth, esquire, hereafter mentioned. This lord Hervey departing this life, in June, 1642, was buried with great solemnity on the eighth of July following, in St. Edward's chapel, in Westminster-abbey, and his titles became extinct.

We must now return to

JOHN HERVEY, of Ickworth, esquire, eldest son of William, father of Sir Nicholas, grandfather to the said lord Hervey. Which John took to wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Pope, of Mildenhall, in Suffolk, esq; and departed this life in July, 1557: he was succeeded at Ickworth by William, his eldest son; but he had a numerous issue, for which we refer our readers to the table. The said

WILLIAM HERVEY, esquire, eldest son, was born in 1509, 1 Henry VIII. and having taken to wife Elizabeth, daughter to John Poter, of Boxted, in Suffolk, esquire, departed this life on the second of November, A. D. 1592, and was buried at Ickworth. He had three daughters;

1. Ursula, who died young.
2. Elizabeth, married to William Haward, of St. Edmundsbury, esquire; and
3. Bridget, married to ——— Collins, of the same town;

As also five sons,

1. John Hervey, his successor, at Ickworth.
2. Francis Hervey, who married Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Nevil, of Holt, in Leicestershire.
3. William Hervey.
4. Ambrose Hervey, and
5. Thomas Hervey. Which

JOHN

JOHN HERVEY, esquire, was born in the year 1555, and by his wife Frances, daughter and co-heir of Edmund Bocking, of Bocking, in Suffolk, esquire, who died before him the twenty-second of February, A. D. 1620, had issue two sons;

1. William Hervey, and
2. Robert Hervey, who died A. D. 1619.

As also three daughters;

1. Frances, who deceased in 1619.
2. Elizabeth, who also died unmarried, on the twenty-second of April, A. D. 1623, and

3. Mary, espoused to Giles Allington, of Horfeheath, in Cambridgeshire, esquire, and departed this life on the fourth of September, A. D. 1626. This John Hervey lived to the seventy-fifth year of his age, deceasing in 1630, and was succeeded by William, his son and heir. Which

WILLIAM HERVEY, knighted at Whitehall, on the thirtieth of April, 1608, married Susan, daughter of Sir Robert Jermyn, of Rushbrook, in Suffolk, knight, (grandfather to Sir Henry Jermyn, earl of St. Albans) on Sunday the twenty-first of March, A. D. 1613, in St. Mary's church, St. Edmundsbury, on which day of the month and week he was born in the same town, A. D. 1585. In the third of king Charles I. he was elected to parliament for St. Edmundsbury; but being in years, lived afterwards retired from public business, without concerning himself in the civil wars, and departed this life on September 30, A. D. 1660. His first lady dying on February 6, A. D. 1637, he married secondly, Penelope, daughter of Thomas Darcy, earl Rivers, relict first of Sir George Trenchard, of Wolverton, in Dorsetshire, and secondly, of Sir George Gage, of Firle, in Sussex, baronet; but had issue only by his first wife, viz.

His first child was still-born at St. Edmundsbury, April 17, A. D. 1614, and was buried in the chancel of St. Mary's church in the same town.

2. Judith Hervey, born at his house in Southgate-street, in St. Edmundsbury, April 20, 1615, was married to James Reynolds, of Bumsted, in Essex, esquire, and died July 12, A. D. 1679.

3. John Hervey, who succeeded his father, of whom we shall further treat.

4. Anne Hervey, born at St. Edmundsbury, April 9, A. D. 1618, died December 12, A. D. 1619.

5. William Hervey, born at St. Edmundsbury, on Whitsunday, May 15, A. D. 1619, died at Cambridge, September 23, A. D. 1642. He was fellow collegian with Mr. Cowley in that university, who bemoans his death in an excellent copy of verses, the most celebrated in all his works. The perusal whereof will give the reader a true idea of this gentleman's great worth; he having therein described the highest characters of religion, knowledge, and friendship, which were conspicuous in him at an age when most other men begin to learn them.

6. Mary Hervey, born at Ickworth, May 22, A. D. 1620, was married to Sir Edward Gage, of Hengrave, in Suffolk, baronet, and died July 13, A. D. 1654.

7. Susan Hervey, born at Ickworth, July 14, A. D. 1621, was second wife to Sir Thomas Hanmer, of Hanmer, in Flint, knight and baronet.

8. Kezia Hervey, born at St. Edmundsbury,

November 11, A. D. 1622, was married to Thomas Tyrrel, of Gipping, in Suffolk, esquire, and died November 22, A. D. 1659.

9. Catharine Hervey, born at St. Edmundsbury, the twenty-fourth of January, A. D. 1623, died January 16, A. D. 1625-6.

10. Thomas Hervey, born in Northgate street, St. Edmundsbury, May 25, A. D. 1625, who will be mentioned hereafter, being ancestor to the present earl of Bristol.

11. Nicholas Hervey, born at St. Edmundsbury, July 12, A. D. 1627, died March 22, A. D. 1629; and

12. Henry Hervey, born at St. Edmundsbury, June 18, A. D. 1631, died on the eighth of September following. We now return to

JOHN HERVEY, the eldest son of Sir William. He was born at Ickworth, his father's seat in Suffolk, on Sunday the eighteenth of August, A. D. 1616.

In the last parliament called by king Charles I. which met at Westminster, November 3, A. D. 1640, and continued sitting till the twentieth of April, A. D. 1653, he served for the port of Hyeth in Kent; but asserting the royal prerogative, and taking arms in behalf of his majesty, he was secluded the house, and obliged to compound for his estate.

However, having heartily concurred in the restoration of king Charles the Second, he was constituted treasurer of the household to queen Catharine his consort; and was in the peculiar esteem of his majesty, and in the strictest intimacy with the most ingenious, as well as greatest men in the kingdom. In parliament he was one of the leading members; and bishop Burnet relates of him, "That he was one whom the king (Charles II.) loved personally, and yet upon a great occasion he voted against that which the king desired. So the king chid him severely for it. Next day another important question falling in, he voted as the king would have him. So the king took notice of it at night, and said, you were not against me to-day. He answered, No, Sir, I was against my conscience to-day." Which was so gravely delivered, it was much talked of, being about the time of the Popish plot. He was a particular favourer of men of letters; and the famous Mr. Cowley, by his recommendation, was taken into the service of his kinsman, Henry, earl of St. Albans, lord chamberlain of the household to king Charles II. and was his great patron. This Mr. Hervey married Elizabeth, daughter and sole heir of William, lord Hervey, of Kidbrook, before-mentioned; but dying without issue, January 18, A. D. 1679, his estate devolved on his only surviving brother, Sir THOMAS HERVEY, knighted by king Charles II. who was elected for St. Edmundsbury in the three last parliaments called by that prince, as also by that called by king James II. and in all others to the time of his death. He shewed himself in all parts of life one of the best of men, and was particularly remarkable for his piety, chastity, charity, and other christian and moral virtues, whereby he was in the esteem of all that knew him; and having lived to the seventieth year of his age, died on the twenty-seventh of May, A. D. 1694, and was buried with his ancestors at Ickworth.

He

He married in 1658, Isabella, daughter of Sir Humphry May, vice-chamberlain of the household to king Charles I. which lady died on the fifth of June, A. D. 1686, and they had issue,

1. William Hervey, eldest son, born October 31, A. D. 1661, who died June 14, A. D. 1663.

2. John Hervey.

3. Thomas Hervey, born January 13, A. D. 1668, who betook himself to a military employment, served in Ireland under king William, and dying at St. Edmundsbury, the twenty-ninth of December, A. D. 1695, was buried at Ickworth.

Also three daughters,

1. Isabella Hervey, eldest daughter, born August 23, A. D. 1659, was married to Gervase Elwes, son and heir of Sir Gervase Elwes, of Stoke, in Suffolk, baronet.

2. Elizabeth, born September 16, A. D. 1660, died on the eighteenth of February, A. D. 1673.

3. Kezia, born April 24, A. D. 1664, married to Aubrie Porter, of St. Edmundsbury, esquire.

(First Earl.) JOHN HERVEY, eldest surviving son, born Aug. 27, 1665, married in the life-time of his father, on the first of November, 1668, Isabella, daughter and sole heir of Sir Robert Carr, of Astwarby, in Leicestershire, baronet, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and of the privy-council to king Charles II. On the death of Henry Goldwell, esquire, he was elected in his place for St. Edmundsbury, in that parliament which first met in the second of king William and queen Mary, and was chosen for the same place in a new parliament, which met at Westminster, November 22, A. D. 1695, and in all other parliaments called by king William; as also in that of the first year of her late majesty queen Anne. Having distinguished himself in the house of commons, he was, for the nobleness of his extraction, the antiquity of his family, and his many eminent virtues, advanced to the dignity of a baron of this realm, by the stile and title of lord Hervey, of Ickworth in the county of Suffolk, by letters patent, bearing date the twenty-third of March, A. D. 1703. And having always appeared in the interests of George I. and strenuously asserted his succession to the crown of these realms, was, in consideration thereof, and his many eminent qualities, created earl of Bristol, on the nineteenth of October, A. D. 1714, in the first year of his reign.

By his lady already mentioned, he had issue two daughters and one son, Carr, lord Hervey, born the seventeenth of September, A. D. 1691, who was educated at Clare-hall, in Cambridge, and as soon as he came of age, was elected to parliament for the borough of St. Edmundsbury, as also in the first parliament called by king George I. and was of the bedchamber to the late king, when prince of Wales. He died unmarried at the Bath, where he went for the recovery of his health, on Thursday the fourteenth of November, A. D. 1723.

Isabella, eldest daughter, died unmarried in November, 1711; and Elizabeth, his second daughter, of whom her mother deceased in childhood, the seventh of March, A. D. 1692-3, died an infant.

In 1695, his lordship married, secondly, Elizabeth, sole daughter and heir to Sir Thomas Felton, of Playford, in the county of Suffolk, baronet, comptroller of the household to her majesty queen Anne; she was one of the ladies of the bedchamber to her late majesty queen Caroline, when princess of Wales, and died on the second of May, A. D. 1741. They had issue eleven sons, and six daughters, viz.

1. John, lord Hervey, born the fifteenth of October, A. D. 1696, of whom we shall hereafter treat.

2. Thomas Hervey, born the twentieth of January, 1698-9, who was a member in three parliaments for the borough of St. Edmundsbury, and was one of the equeries to queen Caroline. Also May 23, A. D. 1738, he was constituted superintendant of all his majesty's gardens of every his royal palaces, &c. He married in 1744, Anne, daughter and coheir of Francis Cogland, esquire, counsellor at law of the kingdom of Ireland, and hath issue by her one son, William-Thomas Hervey.

3. William Hervey, born the twenty-fifth of December, A. D. 1699, captain in his majesty's navy; and on the twenty-seventh of November, A. D. 1729, was married to Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Ridge, of Portsmouth, in the county of Southampton, esquire; which lady died in childhood, the thirteenth of July, A. D. 1730, of a daughter, named Elizabeth.

4. Henry Hervey, born the fifth of January, 1700, who was a cornet in the lord Mark Ker's regiment of dragoons; and on the second of March, A. D. 1730, was married to Catharine, sister and heir to Sir Thomas Aston, of Aston, in the county of Chester, baronet. Whereupon, soon after he went into holy orders, was doctor of divinity, and took the name of Aston. His issue were, one son, Henry, and three daughters, Elizabeth, Catherine, and Harriot.

5. Charles Hervey, born the fifth of April, A. D. 1703, (twin with a daughter Henrietta, who died young) went into holy orders, and became prebend of Ely. He married December 31, A. D. 1743, Martha Maria Howard, daughter of — Howard of St. Edmundsbury, in Suffolk, esquire.

6. A son still-born, the sixth of July, A. D. 1704.

7. James Porter Hervey, born the twenty-fourth of June, A. D. 1706, who died unmarried.

8. Humphrey Hervey, born the third of June, A. D. 1708, who died soon after.

9. Felton Hervey, born the third of July, A. D. 1710, and died the sixteenth following.

10. Felton Hervey, born the twelfth of February, A. D. 1711-12, member in the last parliament for St. Edmundsbury, who was appointed equery to queen Caroline, and in December, A. D. 1737, was appointed groom of the bed-chamber to his royal highness the late duke of Cumberland. He married Dorothy, daughter of Solomon Ashley, esquire, and widow of Charles Pitfield, of Hoxton, esquire. By her, who died A. D. 1761, he had issue one son, Lionel Felton Hervey, and three daughters, Emily, Caroline, and Isabel.

11. James, born the fifth of March, A. D. 1712-13.

The daughters were,

1. Elizabeth, married May 8, 1724, to Bussy Mansell, esquire, son of Thomas, lord Mansell. She died in the thirtieth year of her age, July 24, A. D. 1727, without issue.

2. Anne,

2. Anne.
3. Barbara, died unmarried, July 24, A. D. 1727.
4. Louisa-Carolina-Isabella, who was married on the twenty-third of September, A. D. 1731, to Sir Robert Smith, of Smith-street, in the city of Westminster, baronet; and
5. Henrietta, died in August, A. D. 1732.

His lordship, the first earl of Bristol, departed this life, January 20, 1750-1, and was succeeded in his honours and estate, by his grandson and heir,

(Second, and present Earl.) GEORGE-WILLIAM HERVEY, son and heir of John, lord Hervey. Which

JOHN, LORD HERVEY, in consideration of his great merits, was called up by writ to the house of peers, as lord Hervey, of Ickworth, and took his place on the twelfth of June, A. D. 1733, according to his father's creation. His lordship was chosen one of the members for St. Edmundsbury, in the first parliament called by our late sovereign; and on the sixth of May, A. D. 1730, was appointed vice-chamberlain of his majesty's household, and two days after sworn of his most honourable privy-council. On the first of May, A. D. 1740, his majesty having been pleased to deliver the custody of the privy-seal to his lordship, the oath of keeper of the privy-seal was administered to him at St. James's; and his lordship took his place at the council-board accordingly. And, on the twelfth of May following, was nominated one of the lords justices for the administration of the government, during his majesty's absence.

His lordship married on the twenty-fifth of October, A. D. 1720, Mary, daughter of brigadier-general Nicholas Le Pell, then one of the maids of honour to her royal highness the princess of Wales, afterwards queen Caroline; and had issue by her four sons,

1. George William, born August 31, A. D. 1721, second earl of Bristol, of whom we are treating.
2. Augustus John, born the nineteenth of May, A. D. 1724, chosen member of parliament for Bury, in 1757, and serves at present for Saltash, in Cornwall. He is groom of the bedchamber to his present majesty, captain in the navy, and colonel of marines.
3. Frederick, born in August, 1730, in holy orders, clerk of the privy-seal, which he resigned upon being in February, 1767, appointed bishop of Cloyne, in the kingdom of Ireland. He was also chaplain to the king. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Jermyn Danvers, baronet, by whom he has issue two sons and two daughters, George, Augustus John, Mary, and Elizabeth.
4. William, born the thirteenth of May, A. D. 1732, member in the present parliament for St. Edmundsbury.

Also four daughters,

1. Le Pell, born in January, 1722-3, married to Constantine Phipps, esquire, son of William Phipps, by Catherine, only daughter and heir to James, earl of Anglesey, by Catherine, duchess of Buckingham, natural daughter to king James II. She died before, 1753.

2. Mary, born A. D. 1726, wife of George Fitz-Gerald, esquire, who, together with her sisters.

3. Emily-Caroline-Nassau Hervey, and

4. Caroline Hervey, had by his majesty's warrant, dated June 6, 1753, a grant to enjoy respectively the same place, prehemineny and precedence, in all assemblies and meetings, as a daughter of an earl of Great-Britain; as if their father had lived to enjoy the dignity of an earl of the kingdom.

His lordship was well heard both in the house of commons, and the house of peers, where he distinguished himself on several debates, and was much esteemed for his learning and oratory. He departed this life in the forty-seventh year of his age, on the fifth of August, A. D. 1743, and was succeeded in his honour and estate by his eldest son and heir, George-William, the earl of whom we are treating.

His lordship's father, being called up by writ to the house of peers, as lord Hervey of Ickworth, he succeeded to the barony on his decease; and on the meeting of the parliament, in December following, took his place in the house of peers. On the death of Charles, late earl of Suffolk, April 22, A. D. 1745, his lordship by his grandmother, with Elizabeth, countess of Portsmouth, were heirs to his estate, and to the barony of Howard, of Walden. And on the death of his grandfather, John, earl of Bristol, January 20, A. D. 1750-1, succeeded to his honours and estate. In 1759, he was appointed ambassador-extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Spain, and is now a privy-counsellor, and lord-lieutenant of Ireland.

(TITLES.) George-William Hervey, earl of Bristol, and baron Hervey, of Ickworth.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Hervey, of Ickworth, in the county of Suffolk, March 23, A. D. 1702-3, (2 Anne) and earl of the city of Bristol, October 19, 1714, (1 George I.)

(ARMS.) Ruby on a bend, pearl, three trefoils slipped, emerald.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a leopard passant, proper, bezanté, ducally gorged and chained, topaz, holding in his dexter paw a trefoil, as those in the coat.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two leopards proper, collar, chained, and bezanté, as the crest.

(MOTTO.) "Je n'oubleray jamais."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Ickworth, near Bury, Suffolk; and at Asgarbie, near Sleaford, in the county of Lincoln.

CARTARET, Earl GRANVILLE.

THE surname of this noble and ancient family was certainly assumed from the lordship of Cartaret, in Normandy, but has been variously written, viz. Carteray, Charteray, Carteres, Cartred, Katereck, Caterek, Kerteret, Quarteret, and Carteret.

The chief of this family in the year 1002, took upon him sovereign authority in the barony of Carteret, as is evident from a charter found among the archives of the cathedral of Contance, wherein Sir WILLIAM DE CARTERET is mentioned as co-lord with the king of France, of the barony of Carteret, in Normandy. The father of this Sir WILLIAM, probably was Guy de Carteret; for we find a person of that name living in 1000, lord of Carteret, who was also called l'Oiselaer, from his being an extraordinary marksman. He is said to have had four sons, two of which, Aufrey, and Mauger de Carterays, accompanied William the Conqueror into England. We are at a loss for the descendants, or successors of the eldest brother, Sir William, till the barony of Carteret devolved upon the heirs of the younger branch; and we are equally in the dark as to any thing further than what we have said concerning Mauger, the youngest brother.

AUFREY DE CARTERET, was father of REGINALD DE CARTERET, who went into the Holy Land with Robert, duke of Normandy, eldest son of the Conqueror. His son,

Sir PHILIP DE CARTERET, succeeded to the lordship of Carteret, in Normandy, and was lord of St. Owen, in the Isle of Jersey. He was also founder of the church of Torteval, in Guernsey, in consequence of a vow he made when in danger of shipwreck; that if he escaped with safety, he would build a church where he should land. His son,

REGINALD DE CARTERET, living A. D. 1156, was father of REGINALD DE CARTREY, (as the name was wrote in the reign of king John) who in 1204, was governor of Jersey, and lost his lands in Normandy, for his adherence to the crown of England, when that duchy was given up to the French. Dying in the year 1207, he was succeeded by his only son,

PHILIP DE CARTERET, who being with king Henry III. in his expedition into Brittany, A. D. 1231, was, in the following year with Arnauld de St. Amand, made joint-governor of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark. He had two sons and two daughters; the youngest of the former, John de Carteret, was one of the justices itinerant in Guernsey, A. D. 1304; and the eldest,

PHILIP DE CARTERET, marrying Margaret, niece of Philip Dawbeney, bailiff of the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, &c. dying 1274, he left an only son and successor,

Sir REGINALD DE CARTERET, who obtained the manor of Meleches, in the Isle of Jersey, as a gift from king Edward I. in the year 1306. He certainly had been of great service to that monarch, although the particulars are not upon record. In 1304, he had been justice itinerant in the Isle of Guernsey, and before him and others, assizes were held upon the feast of the apostles Peter and Paul that year. He died before the year 1309, and left issue three sons, John, Philip, and Geoffrey; of which the eldest,

Sir JOHN DE CARTERET, succeeded to the manor of Meleches; but marrying Lucia de Winchelaes, and having no children, the estates of the family at his demise, A. D. 1311, devolved upon his brother,

PHILIP DE CARTERET, the lord of St. Owen, who dying, A. D. 1328, was succeeded by his son, Sir REGINALD DE CARTERET, at that time governor of Mount Orguil castle, in the Isle of Jersey. For, in consideration of his being at that time employed in the king's service, his majesty respites his homage for a year; and we find that he did homage to the king the following year at Amiens, in France. He was lord of the manor of St. Owen, as his ancestors, time out of mind, had been. At length he lost his life, with many other brave leaders, who joined the English fleet, under the command of Reynold de Cobham, and Jeffery de Harcourt, in order to dispossess the French of the Isle of Guernsey, which they had for some time been masters of.

He had three sons,

1. Philip de Carteret, who died without issue.
2. Sir Reginald de Carteret.
3. William de Carteret, who died in March, 1349.

The second son,

Sir REGINALD DE CARTERET, at last became possessed of all the family possessions, which had been in some measure divided between the three brothers. Towards the latter end of Edward the Third's reign, Bertrand de Guesclin, constable of France, famous for his many victories over the English, passed suddenly from Bretagne into Jersey, with an army of ten thousand men, and there in the duke of Bourbon, and the flower of the French chivalry. The inhabitants, it seems, did not oppose their entrance, but confided entirely in the strength of their castle, and their determination nation to defend it. This Reginald de Carteret had the chief command, and with him seven sons, who by their prudence and valour, encouraged the rest to hold out to the last extremity. It is said, that nothing was omitted by the assailants in carrying on the siege: some of the out walls were thrown down by sap, which, however, did not affect the main body of the place. At last they came to this composition, that if the castle should not be succoured by Michaelmas-day next ensuing, they would surrender, and in the mean time the constable should break up his camp and depart. Such compositions to prevent the effusion of blood, and where both parties seemed resolute, were frequent in those days; and the constable being returned into Bretagne, soon after heard that the English fleet had appeared at sea, coming to relieve the castle, which was accordingly performed.

The preservation of the Island of Jersey was solely attributed to the courage and conduct of the said Reginald de Carteret and his sons. For which they were all eight knighted in one day, as is observed in an ancient manuscript of this family, wrote in the reign of queen Elizabeth; as also by Ashmole, and other authorities.

His eldest son,

SIR REGINALD DE CARTERET, was lord of St. Owen and Longville, and was constituted bailiff of the Island of Jersey, an office of great honour and trust, by virtue of which he took place of the governor, as the king's representative, holding by patent immediately from him. In general he is recorded for "great wisdom, and all manly virtues." Dying, A. D. 1381, he left issue three sons, Philip, John, and Reginald; John, the second son, was lord of Meleches, and had a son and heir of his own name.

The eldest son,

SIR PHILIP DE CARTERET, was under age at the decease of his father, and consequently in ward to the king: the custody of him was given to Roger de Walden, parson of the church of Drayton, in Leicestershire; but in 1385, being of full age, he had full seisin of all his lands and tenements. The conduct and valour of this gentleman eminently shone throughout his whole life, and were particularly exercised in defence of the Island of Jersey, the field of honour in which his ancestors had reaped so many laurels. Peter Ma-leurier, a French nobleman, obtained from queen Margaret, a grant of that island, in return for the assistance given her against king Edward, and thereupon the French seized the castle of Mount Orguel. Notwithstanding this, Sir Philip de Carteret, by his interest with the inhabitants, kept the castle of Grosnez, and half of the island in subjection to the crown of England, for the space of six years, but not without frequent skirmishes. At length king Edward being quietly seated upon the throne of England, Sir Robert Harleston, vice-admiral of England, was sent with a Squadron of the king's ships to Guernsey; and Sir Philip sending to him for succour, the fleet blocked up mount Orgueil by sea, while he (Sir Philip) at the head of the islanders, besieged it so effectually, that the French were at length obliged to surrender the said castle. Falle in his account of Jersey, after having given a detail of the circumstances attending this siege, says,

"Sir Richard Harleston was recompensed with the government of the island; but what reward was conferred upon Philip de Carteret, who had been the very life and soul of the undertaking, I cannot find. However, he could not miss that which always attends the doing of brave and worthy actions; I mean the public esteem and the inward satisfaction of having faithfully and honourably acquitted himself to his king and to his country, following therein the example of his ancestors."

This valiant knight married a daughter of Sir ——— Newton, knight, of Gloucestershire, and had a son of his own name, Philip de Carteret, who dying in the life-time of his father, left issue by Penna, daughter of Perine, of Caux, in the county of Tauf, in Normandy, a son, heir to his grandfather, named also

PHILIP DE CARTERET, who is recorded to have been in ward to the king for the space of eighteen years; and that the persons who had the care of his person and effects during that time, were so covetous that elder trees grew in the hall and other places of his manor-house at the time he performed his homage. He married Margaret, daughter and sole heir of Sir Richard Harleston (already mentioned) of the county of Lincoln, knight, governor of Jersey; by whom he had issue nineteen sons and two daughters. The eldest son died unmarried: the third son, Helier or Elias de Carteret, became lord of Handois, and bailiff of Jersey, and had an only daughter, Margaret, married to her first cousin, as will be seen. Philip de Carteret dying A. D. 1479, was succeeded as lord of St. Owen, by his second, but eldest surviving son,

EDWARD DE CARTERET, who was carver to prince Arthur, eldest son of king Henry VII. He died A. D. 1530, leaving a son and successor, HELIER DE CARTERET, who married Margaret, daughter and heir of Helier de Carteret, his uncle, and in her right obtained the lordship of Handois, as in his own right he did that of St. Owen. He was also Bailiff of the isle of Jersey; and very early conformed to the protestant religion. In the reign of queen Mary he was principally concerned in recovering the island of Sark from the French, who had built forts, and planted a colony there; for this and other good services done the crown, queen Elizabeth, in the seventh year of her reign, granted to him and his heirs for ever, the said isle of Sark, with all the members, liberties, &c. thereunto belonging to be held of the crown in capite, paying an annual rent of fifty shillings. He had two sons,

1. Sir Philip Carteret.

2. Amicias Carteret, lord of Handois, who in right of his wife, Catherine, daughter and heir of ——— Lampriere, and also heir to the family of St. Martin, became possessed of the lordship and estate of La Trinite, in which he was succeeded by Joshua, his eldest son, who marrying Jane Heraut, of an ancient family in the island, had issue, 1. Sir Edward Carteret, knighted at the restoration, and made gentleman usher of the black rod. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Johnson, esquire, alderman of London; and had issue Edward, Charles, and Elizabeth.

2. Amicias, who had the lordship of La Trinite; and left an only daughter, Mary, married to Sir

Charles

Charles Carteret, baronet, hereafter to be mentioned.

We now return to

SIR PHILIP CARTERET, eldest son to Helier de Carteret, who succeeded him in the grant of the island of Sark, and the lordship of St. Owen; and in the former undertook to plant such a colony as should keep the French out; and accordingly he enlarged the settlement thereon, whereby it was in a condition to oppose any attempt that might be made on it. Hence perhaps arose Camden's mistake in saying that this Sir Philip was the first who had that island.

The wisdom and judgment which this gentleman discovered in the prosecution of any affair he undertook not only raised the admiration, but extorted the confidence of the inhabitants of Jersey to such a degree, that upon any emergent occasion their recourse was always to him, and they never failed to follow his advice, or reap the benefit of it. He did not think that civil affairs were the only province in which a great man ought to be concerned; he extended his care even to the religion of the island; and was the principal mover of that petition to king James to restore to them the liturgy of the church of England; and he with two others of his own family, Philip Carteret and Joshua Carteret, were especially deputed jurats and justices of the isle to consider of such canons and constitutions in ecclesiastical affairs as might be fitly accommodated to their circumstances. The result of which was, (after taking the advice of the clergy of the island, and of the English prelates) a body of canons, which received the royal assent on the thirtieth of June, A. D. 1624, and was thereupon transmitted to Jersey to have the force of laws in matters ecclesiastical; and were accordingly observed.

He married Rachael, daughter and heir of George Powlet, esquire, third son to Sir Hugh Powlet, of Hinton St. George, in Somersetshire, knight, ancestor to the present earl Powlet; by her he had four sons and two daughters; 1. Rachael, married first to — Beaver, of the isle of Jersey; 2dly. to De Vic. 2. Judith, married to Sir Brian Johnson, of Oulney, in Buckinghamshire, knight.

The sons were,

1. Sir Philip Carteret, } of both these distinctly.
2. Helier Carteret, }
3. Amias Carteret, a captain in the wars in the Low-Countries, died without issue.
4. Gideon Carteret, died without issue.

SIR PHILIP CARTERET, the eldest son, was lord of St. Owen, and deputy-governor of Jersey, whose male line became extinct in his great grandson, Sir Charles Carteret, baronet, son and heir to Sir Philip Carteret, created a baronet on the fourth of June, A. D. 1670. Sir Charles was gentleman of the privy-chamber to queen Ann, and bailiff of Jersey. He married Mary, daughter and heir (as has been observed) of Amicias Carteret, esquire, who brought with her the lordship of La Trinite, which together with his estates at St. Owen and Sark, he bequeathed at his demise, A. D. 1715, to John, late earl Granville. The second brother to this Sir Philip, and from whom the present earl Granville descended was,

HELIER CARTERET, who was deputy governor of the island of Jersey in the reign of queen Elizabeth, and that of her successor. In 1638, he was constituted king's proctor in the island of Jersey on the second of May; and on the eighteenth of June following obtained a grant to himself and his son and heir, George Carteret, of the office and place of bailiff of the island of Jersey during the lives of either of them, or the longer liver. He married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heir of — Dumaresque, and had issue three sons; the two youngest of which, Philip and Reginald, had no issue; also two daughters, whose names are unknown.

The eldest son,

SIR GEORGE CARTERET, was born in the Island of Jersey, in 1599, at the time that his father was deputy-governor thereof. He went early into the sea-service, and by his conduct and courage, had acquired the character of an experienced officer, when king Charles I. ascended the throne; and the signal services he did to that monarch afterwards, before the civil wars, were rewarded with the grant of several lordships in Jersey, and also with the office of comptroller of navy, in 1639; and after the civil wars took place, upon his own credit he supplied the Cornish men with all sorts of ammunition, &c. from France, which was looked upon as a very considerable advantage to the king's affairs in that county, when they were in the highest straits for want of provisions, no less than other as essential necessities, for men in their situation, and resolute in so good a cause. He was bailiff and joint-governor of Jersey, in 1644; and on the ninth of May, the following year, was created a baronet. While he continued in Jersey, though he was but in joint-commission with the lord Jermin, as governor, yet he had the sole command, and watched all opportunities of doing the king service, or of succouring or assisting his friends.

The prince of Wales (afterwards Charles II.) chusing Jersey as the most proper place to retire to, when his royal father was stripped of his dominions, he was so well pleased with his entertainment, that he procured his father's leave for making Sir George Carteret, his vice-chamberlain; and afterwards, when he was king, coming a second time to Jersey, accompanied by his brother the duke of York, and several of the nobility, he stayed several months there, and was supplied by Sir George with all necessities.

It being thought necessary for his majesty's service and security to build a fort, as an out-work to Elizabeth castle, commanding the entrance and approach to it on the land side, it was named Charles Fort by Sir George, who was the director of the building; but when his majesty was defeated at Worcester, on the third of September, A. D. 1651, the parliament took into consideration the damages sustained by the privateers of Jersey, who daily brought in prizes there, and infested the channel so, that no English ship could stir without a convoy, and thereupon ordered out a fleet of eighty sail, under the command of admiral Blake, and major-general Haines, to attack the island; and Sir George, after a long resistance, finding himself unable to keep the field, shut himself up with several of the gentry and clergy, in Elizabeth castle; and colonel Philip Carteret, his son, defended Mount Orgueil castle, which surrendered by capitulation, on the fifteenth of November vember following; whereby it was agreed, that an act of oblivion should be passed, which the parliament confirmed on the thirty-first of December, A. D. 1651. Elizabeth castle held out a siege of three months; and yet Sir George would not hearken to any treaty, (though their magazine of powder was blown up by a bomb from the enemy, and fourscore persons killed) till he had sent to king Charles II. giving him an account of the condition he was in, and desiring a supply of men, &c. which being impossible for his majesty to procure, he sent back this message; that he was highly satisfied with his courage and conduct in defence of the island; being convinced, that no man could do more than he had done for his service: that he was sorry the ill posture of his affairs was such, that he could not promise him relief, requiring him not to throw away the lives of so many brave men, who might be reserved for a better occasion, and to capitulate, and surrender upon the best terms he could; yet he held out some weeks after this, and then, on very honourable conditions, surrendered the castle, which was the last garrison that held out for the king.

After making some short stay to settle his affairs, he went to Paris, to give his majesty an account of all that had passed in the siege. He was by the arts of Cromwell sent to the Bastile, and very narrowly escaped the worst his enemies could do for him; but, however, after three weeks imprisonment, he obtained his liberty, but was banished that kingdom. He went from thence to Savoy, afterwards to Venice; and in 1659, was at Rheims; from whence he repaired to the king at Brussels, about the end of December, that year, and accompanied him to Breda. Afterwards, when the restoration took place, he rode with the king in his triumphant entry through the city of London, on the twenty-ninth of May, A. D. 1660; and the day following, for his faithful services, he was appointed vice-chamberlain of the king's household, and of the privy-council. Also, by the same monarch, was constituted treasurer of the navy and commissioner of the admiralty.

At the coronation of the king, he had the honour of being appointed almoner for the day. In the first parliament called after the restoration, he sat for Portsmouth, and continued in favour with his sovereign, who designed him the honour of a peerage, and in the greatest credit with the nation, till the day of his death, January 14, A. D. 1679. King Charles II. had so just a sense of his great services, that by his warrant, dated the eleventh of February, A. D. 1679, the day before his interment, it is recited, that whereas he died before his patent, for his barony was sued out, his majesty authorises Elizabeth, his widow, and her youngest children, James Carteret, Caroline, wife of Sir Thomas Scot, knight, and Louisa, wife of Sir Robert Atkins, knight, to enjoy their precedence and pre-eminency, as if the said Sir George Carteret had actually been created a baron.

He was buried at Hawnes, in the county of Bedford, February 12, A. D. 1679. His wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Philip Carteret, of St. Owen, knight, surviving him, departed this life on the tenth of March, A. D. 1696, and was interred by her husband, at Hawnes aforesaid, on the nineteenth ensuing.

His issue were three sons,

1. Philip Carteret, who eminently distinguished himself in the civil wars, and was knighted by king Charles the Second, at his arrival in Jersey. He was governor of Mount Orgueil castle, as we have observed, when it was besieged by the parliament, and obliged to surrender the same. After the restoration, he married Jemima, daughter of Edward Montagu, earl of Sandwich, vice-admiral of England, and was with him in the great naval engagement with the Dutch in Solebay, on the twenty-eighth of May, A. D. 1672, wherein he was killed, together with his father-in-law. His lady, who died before him, in 1671, was buried at Hawnes. Of their issue we shall have occasion to speak presently.

2. James Carteret, who was captain and commander of an East-India ship, and afterwards of a man of war in the reign of king Charles II. He died unmarried.

3. George Carteret, died unmarried.

Also five daughters;

1. Anne, the wife of Sir Nicholas Stanning, baronet. She died before her father.

2. Caroline, the wife of Sir Thomas Scot, of Scots-hall, in Kent, knight.

3. Louisa Margareta, the wife of Sir Robert Atkins, of Saperton, in Gloucestershire, knight.

4. Rachel, } both died young.

5. Elizabeth, }

The issue of the eldest son already mentioned, were three sons;

1. Sir George Carteret, successor to his grandfather, the famous Sir George Carteret, of whom we have just treated.

2. Philip Carteret, baptized at Hawnes, on the twentieth of May, A. D. 1669, who was captain of marines, and lieutenant to Sir Francis Wheeler, admiral of a squadron of men of war designed for the Mediterranean sea, who was foundered in a storm, as he was sailing from Gibraltar, February 17, A. D. 1693, his own ship the Suffex being lost, and the admiral, captain Carteret, and the whole crew, except two Moors, drowned.

3. Edward Carteret, baptized at Hawnes, November 28, A. D. 1671. He was elected member for the borough of Huntingdon, in the tenth of William III. and afterwards for the town of Bedford, in the first year of queen Anne's reign. On the accession of George I. he was returned to parliament for the borough of Beeralston, in Devonshire; and on the fourth of April, A. D. 1721, he was appointed joint postmaster-general, in which post he died on the fifteenth of April, A. D. 1739. In 1699, he married Bridget, daughter of Sir Thomas Exton, dean of the Arches, and judge of the high court of Admiralty, by whom he had issue three sons and three daughters.

1. George, who died at Westminster-school, A. D. 1718. 2. Edward, who being appointed in 1731, one of the council to the East-India factory of Bengal, died there the same year; and 3. Philip, who died in April, A. D. 1727. His three daughters were, Bridget, (one of the maids of honour to queen Caroline) who died unmarried. Anna Isabella, married to William Cavendish, of Westbury, in the county of Southampton, treasurer of Greenwich hospital, and one of the admirals of his majesty's fleet; and Charlotte, who died unmarried, A. D. 1731.

The eldest of these three brothers,

(First Lord.) Sir GEORGE CARTERET, born 1666, succeeded as baronet, at the demise of his grandfather, being then thirteen years of age. By letters patent, bearing date October 19, 1681, he was created baron Carteret, of Hawnes, in Bedfordshire, with limitation, in failure of issue male, to his brothers Philip and Edward. The reasons for advancing a youth of fifteen years of age to the dignity of peerage, when he could have no personal merit equal to such a claim, are set forth in the preamble to the patent; and it would be injustice to the memory of the father and grandfather of this peer not to insert it. It sets forth,

"That his majesty king Charles II. designing to advance Sir George Carteret, late of Hawnes, in the county of Bedford, knight, and baronet (he being descended of an antient and worthy family of that name, which, for many ages past, had flourished with much reputation in the Isle of Jersey) whom, by reason of his eminent services to the late king (of blessed memory) as also to himself as vice-chamberlain of his household treasurer of the royal navy, and one of his most honourable privy-council, he had constituted vice-treasurer of Ireland, and treasurer of his military forces there: all which employments having managed with singular prudence, integrity and diligence, his majesty intended to have made him a peer of this realm had not his death prevented it.

"Whereas also Sir Philip Carteret, knight, eldest son to the said George, imitating his father's most loyal example, lost his life in his service in that notable sea-fight with the Dutch, which happened on Tuesday, the twenty-eighth of May, A. D. 1672, (his father then alive) leaving issue Sir George Carteret, now also of Hawnes, baronet, grandson and heir to the above specified Sir George. His majesty therefore taking into consideration the singular merits of the grandfather and father, in testimony of his real sense thereof, (by letters patent, bearing date, &c.) advanced him to the degree and dignity of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Carteret of Hawnes, before specified, to hold and enjoy to himself and the heirs male of his body, and for lack of such issue, to Philip Carteret, his brother, and the heirs male of his body, and for default of such issue, to Edward Carteret, his other brother, and to the heirs male of his body."

The first day that his lordship took his seat in the house of peers, was the thirtieth of November, A. D. 1688, when the memorable question was put, Whether there was an original contract between the king and the people, or not? In this dispute, whether king James had broke that original contract, it was carried in the affirmative. Lord Carteret voted with the majority, and upon every other occasion discovered a zeal for the protestant succession, and the true interest of his country, which ought not to be forgotten.

At the age of eight years, on the ninth of March, A. D. 1674, he was married to Grace, youngest daughter and coheir to John Granville, earl of Bath; a match agreed upon by his lordship's grandfather, Sir George Carteret, and the lady's father, in order that their posterity might be one and the same; a further cement of that sincere friendship, which had long subsisted between them.

His lordship died on the twenty-second of September, A. D. 1695, and was buried at Hawnes, eight days after, leaving his disconsolate lady, just in the prime of life, to rise to higher honours which were afterwards conferred upon her by king George I. who, in consideration of the great services of her father the earl of Bath, the only person entrusted by Charles II. and general Monk, in the arduous affair of the restoration of monarchy and episcopacy, created her ladyship, viscountess Carteret and countess Granville, by letters patent, bearing date January 1, A. D. 1714-15, in the first year of his reign, with limitation of those honours to her son, John, lord Carteret, (late earl Granville) with remainder of the title of viscount Carteret, to Edward Carteret, his uncle, and the heirs male of his body. By the death of her nephew, William Henry, earl of Bath, A. D. 1711, she became one of the two coheirs to her father John, earl of Bath's great estate in Cornwall and Devonshire, in which counties her paternal ancestors had been possessed of Bydeford, Kilkhampton, and other manors from the time of the Conquest. And by the noble alliances of her family, she derived an illustrious descent from the Courneys, earls of Devonshire, from the Bohuns, earls of Hereford, and so from king Edward I. also from the Beaumonts, the lords Bonville, the Gorges, the St. Legers, Butlers, earls of Ormond, with many other antient and honourable families, and her descendants have a right to the arms, crests, and quarterings of her noble father, John, earl of Bath. The crest his lordship bore, was on a chapeau, ruby, turned up ermine, a griffin passant, topaz. But his ancestors sometimes bore three other crests, as is evident from their seals, and from the pedigrees and quarterings of the family in the visitation of Devonshire, anno 1620, the original whereof is in the Harleian Library, and a copy in the college of arms, marked G 1.

The issue of this noble pair were three sons and one daughter, Jemima, who died unmarried, A. D. 1733, and was buried at Hawnes.

1. George Carteret, baptized at Hawnes, February 11, A. D. 1688, who was buried there June 8, A. D. 1689.

2. John Carteret.

3. Philip Carteret, born at Hawnes, November 6, A. D. 1692, a youth of a most promising genius in the literary way, but cut off in the nineteenth year of his age, on the nineteenth of March, A. D. 1710. He was interred in Westminster-abbey, where a monument was erected to his memory by his elder brother, the inscription of which was wrote by Dr. Friend, master of Westminster school.

Her ladyship, the mother of these children, died on the eighteenth of October, A. D. 1744, and was interred in Westminster-abbey. The honours that had been conferred upon her, devolved upon her only surviving son, he was but four years and five months old, having been born on the twenty-second of April, A. D. 1691. He was educated at Westminster school, and from thence removed to Christ-church college, in Oxford; at both which seminaries, his parts and his great progress in learning, became the subject of admiration, and seemed as it were prognostics of future greatness. He took his seat in the house of peers on the twenty-fifth of May, A. D. 1711, and used all his abilities in promoting the Hanover succession, a circumstance that could not but endear him to that august house. Upon the accession of George I. he was appointed one of the lords of his majesty's bedchamber. On the twentieth of July, A. D. 1715, he took the necessary oaths to qualify himself as bailiff of the Isle of Jersey, having been just then appointed to that office. On the sixth of July, A. D. 1716, he was appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Devon, which he resigned on the eleventh of August, A. D. 1721, and was succeeded by Hugh, lord Clinton. On the twenty-fifth of January, A. D. 1718-19, he was appointed ambassador extraordinary, and minister plenipotentiary to the queen of Sweden, and by his prudent negotiations, the antient friendship between the crowns of Great Britain and Sweden were renewed, and peace concluded between Sweden, Prussia, and Hanover, which was proclaimed at Stockholm, March 9, A. D. 1719-20. At the same time he settled a preliminary between Sweden and Denmark, agreed to and signed on the part of Sweden; he set out for the Danish court, on the thirteenth of June, A. D. 1720, and the treaty he brought with him was likewise agreed to, and signed by the minister plenipotentiary of the king of Denmark, on the third of July following. Thus, by his lordship's original embassy, as also by his appointment, as one of the ministers plenipotentiaries at the congress of Brunswick and that of Cambray, an end was put to that destructive war, which had so long raged between Sweden, Russia, Denmark, and the king of Prussia. He returned through Hanover, and arrived at St. James's, on the fifth of December, A. D. 1720.

(First Earl.) JOHN CARTERET, who had before succeeded his father, as lord Carteret, when he

He was soon after appointed ambassador extraordinary to the court of France, and having received his instructions, was upon the point of setting out, when his majesty deprived of one of his principal secretaries of state, by the death of James Craggs, esquire, who died February 17, 1720-1, called the lord Carteret to that high and honourable office, on the fourth of March following; and his lordship was, on the day ensuing, sworn of the privy council, and took his seat at that board, as one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state.

On the twenty-sixth of May, A. D. 1723, his majesty declaring his intention of visiting his German dominions, appointed lords justices for the time of his absence, among the number of which was the lord Carteret, whom he also appointed to wait upon him at Hanover. In the Gazettes of that time, we have a full account of his majesty's motions while abroad; and we always find, that he was attended upon by his lordship, in all his excursions, and upon every occasion, either public or private. He returned to England with the king, and landed at Margate, on the twenty-eighth of December following.

His lordship continued in his post of secretary of state till the third of April, A. D. 1724, when he was appointed lord-lieutenant of Ireland. He did not however visit that kingdom till the twenty-second of October following. His lordship's administration in Ireland gave great satisfaction, and it was by his means, that Mr. Wood's patent for coining halfpence and farthings, which had been complained of as a great grievance, was revoked. He continued in Ireland till May, A. D. 1726, having, during that time, been appointed one of the lords justices of England, during his majesty's absence, in 1725.

On the thirty-first of May, A. D. 1727, his lordship was again appointed one of the lords justices of the realm, the king having declared his intention to go abroad that summer; on which journey his majesty died June 11, about one in the morning. Upon the arrival of this unexpected and much lamented news, the privy-council, lord Carteret being present, and one of them, signed the proclamation of king George II. and on the twenty-ninth of July following, his majesty was pleased to declare lord Carteret again lord-lieutenant and chief governor of Ireland. He went over in the November following to his new appointment, and was kindly received by the whole kingdom. He did not return to England till the middle of May, A. D. 1728. He was again in Ireland, in 1729, and opened the sessions at the meeting of the houses of parliament, on the twenty-third of September, and continued in that kingdom till the twentieth of April, A. D. 1730, when he embarked for England, attended to the water-side by a great number of persons of distinction, the usual time allotted for a lord-lieutenant being expired. It may suffice to say, that his lordship's conduct, during his superintendency of that kingdom, gave his royal master great satisfaction in the appointment, and at the same time gave no umbrage to the people, whose interest he regarded no less than his sovereign's honour.

His lordship had no public employ from that time till the twelfth of February, A. D. 1741-2, when he was again appointed one of the principal secretaries of state, and the following day took his seat at the council-board accordingly; but he resigned the seals November, 1744, the year before which he waited upon the king to Hanover, who before his leaving St. James's, appointed him one of the lords justices, and he was present with the king during that whole campaign in Germany.

On the tenth of February, A. D. 1745-6, he was again appointed one of the principal secretaries of state, when the duke of Newcastle, and the earl of Harrington went out; but he continued the seals only four days, (and all that time ill) being obliged to resign on the fourteenth, in favour of the party which had just taken umbrage, and retired.

On the twelfth of July, A. D. 1750, he was installed knight of the Garter, having been elected to that honour at a chapter held at Kensington, on the twenty-second of June, A. D. 1749. On the seventeenth of June, A. D. 1751, he was appointed pointed president of the privy-council, in which post he died * on the second of January, A. D. 1763.

His lordship married, first, on the twenty-fourth of October, A. D. 1710, Frances, daughter of Sir Robert Worsley, baronet, of Chilton, in the county of Southampton, by his lady Frances, only daughter of Thomas, viscount Weymouth, by his lady, Frances, eldest daughter of Heneage, earl of Winchilsea, by Mary, his wife, eldest daughter of William, duke of Somerset, by Frances, his duchess, eldest daughter of Robert Devereux, earl of Essex, the favourite of queen Elizabeth. This lady dying on the ninth of June, A. D. 1743, was buried in Westminster-abbey, and his lordship married, secondly, on the fourteenth of April, A. D. 1744, Sophia, daughter of Francis Fermor, earl of Pomfret, and Henrietta Lovisa, his wife, daughter and sole heir to John, lord Jeffereys, by his wife Charlotte, daughter and heir of Philip Herbert, earl of Pembroke and Montgomery. By this latter lady, who died October 7, A. D. 1745, of a fever, he had issue an only daughter, Sophia, born

* We must observe further of his lordship, that by descent from his grandfather, Sir George Carteret, vice-chamberlain of the household to king Charles the Second, and of his privy-council, being one of the eight lords proprietors of South and North Carolina; and the other seven lords proprietors having sold and surrendered their respective rights and titles therein to his present majesty, confirmed by act of parliament, in the second year of his reign, intitled, "An Act for establishing an Agreement with seven of the Lords Proprietors of Carolina, for the Surrender of their Title and Interest in that Province to his Majesty." And all his lordship's rights and titles whatsoever, in the Carolina's, being saved and reserved unto him by the said act, he by his humble petition to his majesty in council, in 1742, reciting the several letters patent, made by king Charles the Second, to Edward, then earl of Clarendon, George, then duke of Albemarle, William, then lord Craven, John, then lord Berkeley, Anthony, then lord Ashley, Sir George Carteret, knight and baronet, Sir William Berkeley, and Sir John Colleton, knight and baronet, all since deceased; as also the act of parliament before recited. And that he is still entitled to one undivided eighth part of the said provinces, and of all the premises granted by the said several letters patent, as also of the arrears of quit rents, duties, &c. humbly prayed his majesty, that his said eighth part of his soil of the said provinces, and territories, might be set out and allotted to him, as should be agreed on between persons, to be appointed by his majesty, and the said lord Carteret. To hold and enjoy the same for ever hereafter in severalty, to the said Sir John Carteret, his heirs and assigns; together with all and every the same royalties, powers, &c. (the government thereof only excepted) as far as concerns such eighth part to be so allotted to the said John, lord Carteret. And thereupon humbly offered and proposed to his majesty, his heirs and successors, his share and interest of, and in the government of the said provinces and territories; and to convey, release and confirm, to his majesty, his heirs, &c. the other seven parts of the said provinces.

Whereupon his majesty referred the said petition to the lords of the committee of his most honourable privy-council; which was referred by them to the lords commissioners of trade and plantations, who having examined the said petition, reported to the said lords of the committee of privy-council, "That it would be for his majesty's service, that the said lord Carteret's property should be separated from that of his majesty, wherein the said lord Carteret should enjoy, whatever he was entitled to by the charters of Carolina, and the aforesaid act of parliament, and conceived the method, &c. proposed by the said lord Carteret, would be most effectual." Which report, the lords of his majesty's privy-council taking it into consideration, did agree in opinion with the said lords commissioners of trade and plantations: and thereupon, August 24, 1742, made their report to his majesty, that the said lord Carteret's property should be separated from that of his majesty's.

And humbly proposed, that the respective governors of South and North Carolina, or either of them, be ordered to nominate and appoint proper persons, as commissioners on his majesty's behalf, not exceeding five, who in conjunction with a like number, appointed by the said lord Carteret, as commissioners on his behalf, should be empowered to set out, and allot to the said lord Carteret, one full eighth part of the provinces of Carolina, in such part or parts thereof, as should be agreed on by the said commissioners, and that they should be required to make a return of the said proceedings to his majesty in council, within eighteen months after the date of his majesty's order; and also to lay before his majesty a plan, containing a full and exact description of the said lands, together with the respective boundaries thereof, in order (in case his majesty should approve thereof) for conveying the same to the said lord Carteret, in such manner, as should be advised by his majesty's council learned in the law. Provided the said lord Carteret made a surrender of all his pretensions to the government of the said provinces of Carolina, &c.

Thereupon his majesty in council, September 15, 1742, approving thereof, and by his order commissioners being appointed to allot to the said lord Carteret one full eighth part of the provinces of Carolina; they, by their report to his majesty in council, dated the sixth of December, 1743, certified, that in pursuance of his majesty's said order, they did set out, and allot to the said John, lord Carteret, one full eighth part of the provinces of Carolina, in one entire separate district in the province of North Carolina, next adjoining, and contiguous to the province of Virginia; which eighth part is bounded on the north by the line which divides Carolina from Virginia; to the east by the great Western ocean, commonly so called, and as far southerly, as Cedar-stake, set upon the sea side, in the latitude of thirty-five degrees thirty-four minutes, at north latitude, being six miles and a half to the southward of Chickinacomack Inlet; from that stake by a west line, which passed twenty-five feet, to the southward of the house wherein Thomas Wallis liveth; and so west, as far as the bounds of the charter, granted to the lords proprietors of Carolina, by king Charles the Second; which west line went one thousand six hundred and sixty poles to the north of the south end of Bath town: and the said commissioners did, pursuant to order, transmit to his majesty a plan, containing a full and exact description of the said one-eighth part of the said provinces and territories, so set out and allotted to the said John, lord Carteret.

And pursuant thereunto, on the ninth of May, 1744, his majesty was pleased with the advice of his privy-council, to approve of the allotment of land thereby made to the said lord Carteret, and to order Mr. attorney, and Mr. solicitor-general, to prepare such instruments or deeds, as are proposed by the said report, orders, &c. Accordingly Sept. 17, 18 Geo. II. 1744, his majesty by indenture of the one part, and the Right Hon. John, lord Carteret, on the other part: in consideration of the said lord Carteret's surrendering, releasing, and confirming to his majesty, all his estate, right, title, and interest, of, in, and to the government of the said province of Carolina; and of, in, and to the said seven-eighth parts, divided from the said one-eighth part, so allotted to the said John, lord Carteret; and also the said lord Carteret's assigning to his majesty, all arrears of quit-rents, debts, &c. then due and owing to his majesty, and to the said lord Carteret, from the farmers, tenants, &c. of the said seven-eighth parts of the said provinces, situate within any part of the seven eighth parts thereof: did thereby grant, &c. for himself, his heirs and successors, to the said John, lord Carteret, his executors, administrators, and assigns, all the said one-eighth part of the provinces so separated, and allotted to the said John, lord Carteret, by the said commissioners, with all the yearly rents, issues and profits thereof, &c. together with all rights, privileges, royalties, liberties, immunities, &c. of what kind soever, within the said one-eighth part of the provinces or territories, in as ample manner and form, as the said John, lord Carteret, &c. held, used or enjoyed, by virtue of letters patent, granted by king Charles II. Excepting nevertheless out of this grant, the powers of making laws, calling or holding of assemblies, erecting courts of justice, appointing judges or justices, pardoning criminals, granting titles of honour, making ports or havens, taking customs and duties on goods, &c. executing martial law, exercising any of the royal rights of a county palatine, &c. or exercising any other prerogatives, &c. relating to the administration of the government of the said one-eighth part of the said provinces. To hold the said one-eighth part, &c. to him, as aforesaid, his heirs, and assigns for ever; yielding and paying to his majesty, his heirs and successors, the annual rent of one pound thirteen shillings and four pence, on the feast of All Saints, for ever: also one fourth part of all gold and silver ore found within the said eighth part of the premises.

August

August 26, A. D. 1745, married on the third of February, A. D. 1765, to William Petty, earl of Shelburne. His issue by the former lady were, three sons and five daughters. The latter,

1. Frances, born A. D. 1712, who died an infant.

2. Grace, born July the eighth, A. D. 1713, who married on the twenty-second of July, A. D. 1729, Lionel, earl of Dysart, of the kingdom of Scotland.

3. Louisa, born September 15, A. D. 1714, married on the third of July, A. D. 1733, to Thomas, viscount Weymouth, and died on the twenty-fifth of December, A. D. 1736.

4. Georgina Carolina, born March the twelfth, A. D. 1716, and baptized the fifth of April following, king George I. being godfather, was married on the fourteenth of February, A. D. 1733-4, to John Spencer, esquire, brother to Charles, duke of Marlborough, who left issue by her one son, John Spencer, esquire, since created earl Spencer; and in May, A. D. 1750, she married, secondly, William, earl Cowper.

5. Frances, born on April the sixth, A. D. 1718, and baptized May the first following, was married on the twenty-fourth of May, A. D. 1743, to John Hay, marquis of Tweeddale, in Scotland.

The sons were,

1. George Carteret, born February the fourteenth, A. D. 1716-17, baptized March the eleventh following, and was buried at Hawnes, in Bedfordshire, on the thirteenth of June, A. D. 1721.

2. John Carteret, born October the nineteenth, A. D. 1719, and baptized the fourth of November following, who died the year following.

3. Robert Carteret, which
(Second Earl.) ROBERT CARTERET, succeeded his father in the honours of the family. He was born on the twenty-first of September, A. D. 1721. In 1744, he was elected member of parliament for Yarmouth, in the Isle of Wight. His lordship is hereditary bailiff of the Isle of Jersey, and as yet remains unmarried.

(TITLES.) Robert Carteret, earl Granville, viscount Carteret, baron Carteret, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, May the ninth, A. D. 1645, (21 Charles I.) and baron Carteret, of Hawnes, in the county of Bedford, October the nineteenth, A. D. 1681, (33 Charles II.) viscountess Carteret, and countess Granville, January the first, A. D. 1714, (1 George I.) with limitation of those honours to her son, John, lord Carteret, and the heirs male of his body.

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth, three clarions, topaz, for Granville; second and third, ruby, four fusils in fess, pearl for Carteret.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a branch of a tree, and thereon a squirrel sejant, feeding on a chesnut, all proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two winged deer, ruby, attired the same.

(MOTTO.) "Loyal devoir."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Hawnes, near Bedford, in the county of Bedford.

MONTAGU, Earl of HALIFAX.

THIS noble family is of equal antiquity, and claims the same ancestry with his grace the duke of Manchester, in our account of whose family the reader will find, that Henry, the first earl of Manchester, had three wives, the last of which was Margaret, daughter to John Crouch, of Cornbury, in the county of Hertford, esquire. From this match issued two sons, George and Sidney, the younger of which died young, and the elder,

GEORGE MONTAGU, born A. D. 1620, was seated at Horton, in the county of Northampton; and upon the death of Henry Montagu, his half-brother, succeeded to the mastership of St. Catherine's hospital, near the Tower of London. At twenty years of age he was elected to that parliament, which met on the third of November, A. D. 1640, for the borough of Huntingdon. He was also returned member for Dover, in the years 1660 and 1661, which latter election continued valid for seventeen years, eight months, and seventeen days, that parliament not being dissolved till the twenty-fourth of January, A. D. 1678-9.

He married Elizabeth, only daughter of Sir Anthony Irby, of Boston, in Lincolnshire, by his wife Frances, daughter of Sir William Wray, baronet, and by her had issue four daughters and five sons;

The former were,

1. Elizabeth, the wife of Sir Christopher Wandesford, baronet, created in 1707, viscount Castlemonger, and baron Wandesford, in the kingdom of Ireland, to whom she bore issue, which at length made her grandmother to the present viscount, who bears that title. She died on the tenth of November, A. D. 1731.

2. Anne, married to John Lawton, of Lawton-hall, in Cheshire.

3. Mary.

4. Theodosia, who married Robert Mitchell, of Petersfield, in the county of Southampton.

The sons were,

1. Edward Montagu, of whom hereafter.

2. Christopher Montagu, who was elected for the the town of Northampton, to the three several parliaments summoned to meet in the years 1695, 1698, and 1701. On the fifteenth of August, A. D. 1698, he was appointed one of the commissioners of the excise, which he was obliged to relinquish the following year, in order to keep his seat in parliament, an act then taking place, which disqualified any member, who should be a commissioner of any part of his majesty's revenue. However, on the sixth of June, A. D. 1706, he was re-appointed to that office. He married Anne, third daughter of Edward, earl of Sandwich, and widow of Sir Richard Edgecomb, knight of the Bath, but died without issue.

3. Charles Montagu, of whom we shall speak distinctly.

4. Irby Montagu, who died unmarried, a colonel in the foot-guards.

5. Sir James Montagu, knight, in 1707, was made solicitor, and the following year attorney-general, but was removed in 1710, upon the change of the ministry. On the accession of George I. he was made one of the barons of the Exchequer, and afterwards lord chief baron of the same court; in 1718, upon the resignation of earl Cowper, he was appointed one of the commissioners for the custody of the great seal of England. He died on the eighteenth of October, A. D. 1722. He was elected to parliament for Carlisle, in the years 1705, 1708, 1710. He married two wives; first, Tufton, daughter of Sir William Wray, of Ashby, in the county of Lincoln, baronet, sister and heir to Sir Christopher Wray; and secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Montagu, earl of Manchester. By the latter lady he had no issue; but by the former a son and a daughter, Charles and Elizabeth, married after her father's decease, to Sir Clement Wearg, knight, solicitor-general to George I. Which Charles Montagu, in June, 1738, was appointed one of the auditors to the prince of Wales, for the principality of Wales, and the duchy of Cornwall, and was chosen member of parliament for Westminster, in 1722; for St. Germans, in 1734; for Camelford, in 1741, and in the two succeeding parliaments, for the town of Northampton. He died 1759, leaving issue by his wife Anne, daughter and heir of Sir Theodore Colladen, knight, a son, Frederic Montagu, seated at Papplewick, in Nottinghamshire, member in the present parliament for the town of Northampton, and a daughter, married to John Fountayne, D.D. dean of York.

THE FATHER of these nine children departed this life at Manchester-house, in Channel-Row, Westminster, on the nineteenth of July, A. D. 1681, and was buried in the church of St. Catharine's, on Saturday the twenty-third of the same month; where, on the north side of the altar, is a fine spacious monument of marble, inclosed with iron rails, with entablature and cartouch pediment of the Corinthian order, and the following inscription, which shews his eminent endowments:

Hic requiescit honorabilis Georgius Montacutius,

* We confess ourselves at a loss how to settle the time of this gentleman's birth with precision, since, according to the inscription he must have been born either in 1722, or 1723; and yet we find as is observed page 77, that he was chosen

Henrici Manchesterie comitis filius, ex antiquis Salisburie comitibus oriundi antiqua morum gravitate & candore, iisque animi dotibus, quæ virum vere nobilem deceant, ornatissimus; qui etiam adolescens in maximo totius Angliæ concessu acerrimi in rebus agendis Judicii illibatæque erga regem fidei clara dedit indicia; neque honores ambiebat, aut publica munera, tranquillitatis serviens; eoque magis, ut amicorum inseruiret commodis; quorum negotia pari semper file procurabat, ac sua; unum solummodo munus libenter suscepit, hujus scilicet hospitii præfecturam, in eo nempe Benefaciendi sibi locum datum existimans.

Hoc enim templum velustate & squalore obrutum (immenso pæne sumptu) ab interitu ruinisque vindicavit; neque hic metam posuit, majora tamen meditantem, & tam pio opere occupatum ad præmium benefactorum Deus evocavit.

Uxorem duxit Elizabetham,

Antonii Irbi equitis filiam, quorum felices nuptias numerosa proles prædicat; quinque enim filiis & quatuor filiabus, moriturus benedixit. Ætat. sue 59, obiit 19 Julii 1681.

We must now speak of,

(First Lord.) CHARLES MONTAGU, third son of George Montagu, whose epitaph we have just given, and whom we have only stiled first lord, although he was created earl of Halifax, because the latter title became extinct at his death; whereas the barony, by a special limitation, devolved upon the elder branch.

He was born on the sixteenth of April, A. D. 1661; and after having been at Westminster-School, was sent to Trinity-College, Cambridge. His learning and great genius had made his name noised abroad, and upon his coming to town soon after the accession of king James, he needed no other recommendation to the earl of Dorset, Sir Charles Sedley, and the wits of that age, with most of whom he contracted a firm intimacy. Soon after the revolution took place he was sworn one of the clerks of the council, and serving in parliament first for Durham, and afterwards for Westminster, he had an opportunity of exhibiting proofs of a strong judgment, and his arguments in every debate of consequence were pertinent and persuasive. In short, he gained such an ascendancy in the house of commons, that king William made him first one of the lords of the Treasury, March 21, A. D. 1691-2; and afterwards chancellor and under treasurer of the Exchequer in 1694. The great project for recoinage the money, as well as another for issuing Exchequer bills to supply the scarcity of money in specie, were both owing to his management whilst in that office, and which proved of such singular service to the nation, that on the sixteenth of February, A. D. 1697-8, the house of commons came to this resolution, "that it is the opinion of this house that the honourable Charles Montagu, chancellor of the Exchequer, for his good services to this government, does deserve his majesty's favour."

The next object which solicited the care of this great man was the trade of the East-Indies, the settlement of which was deemed a task of so much niceness and difficulty, that the king and council, member of parliament in 1740, and is then said to be twenty years of age; so that there is a difference of two or three years, which we leave others to adjust.

after

after weighing the matter well, referred it to the parliament, the members of which plainly seeing the necessity thereof, ordered a bill for settling the trade to the East-Indies, on the twenty-sixth of May, A. D. 1698. Mr. Mountagu transacted the whole affair, cleared up every difficulty, and the bill passed to general satisfaction; and soon after he was appointed first lord of the Treasury, an office which he resigned in 1700, upon obtaining a grant of the office of auditor of the receipt of the Exchequer, vacant by the death of Sir Robert Howard. He was twice, during the reign of king William, appointed one of the lords justices during his majesty's absence.

On the fourth of December, A. D. 1700, letters patent issued forth from the crown, creating him baron Halifax, in the county of York, with limitation of that honour to George Montagu, esquire, (eldest son to Edward Montagu, who was elder brother to this lord,) and to his heirs male in consideration, as the preamble to the patent sets forth "that he was descended from a most antient family of noblemen, which then provided for the ornament and support of the kingdom, three earls, and eight members of parliament: that he was adorned with those virtues, to which none could envy any increase of honour, and which a just prince could not but freely offer; having by nature a genius to manage affairs of the highest concern, which he had cultivated by learning, and brought to a perfection by a continual practice of speaking well, and the exercise of transacting wisely. That, by experience, his majesty found him to be strenuous and eloquent in parliament, faithful and prudent in council, and in determining causes relating to the Exchequer, unblameable and penetrating; nor could he pass over in silence his sagacity, in taking care that in the greatest scarcity of money, the public credit should not sink, by being overburthened with excessive interest. That he must reckon it a happiness, that he was chancellor of his Exchequer, at the time, when, to his admiration, he beheld the current money, that had been adulterated and debased, coined a-new, and restored to its intrinsic value in the space of two years, though accounted the work of an age; an attempt as fortunate as bold. And the demands of money increasing, by his council and advice, a new and unusual method of establishing of paper credit, was entered on, whereby the riches of the nation were advanced. That for these good offices he gained the love and esteem of the people, and for the benefit they received by his means, he had easily obtained the king's. Wherefore, as his majesty was always inclined to comply with the wishes of his good subjects, he willingly, and with all cheerfulness, called him to the house of peers, whom the commons, by a public vote, for his eminent services, had pronounced deserving of his royal favour."

After the accession of queen Anne, his lordship was ever ready to defend the memory of king William. He was the person who moved for commissioners to treat of an union between the two kingdoms; and being one of those nominated, had a principal hand in bringing it to a speedy issue; but a harder task yet remained, which was to carry it through parliament, where so many were armed with objections of a nature that required more than ordinary skill to resist: this he however undertook with zeal, and executed in a masterly manner. His lordship was also the person who proposed a bill for the naturalization of the house of Hanover, and for the better security of the succession of the crown in the protestant line. Which act having passed, the queen made choice of him to carry it to George, elector of Hanover, and to invest his son our late sovereign, George II. with the most noble order of the garter. The reception he met with at Hanover was such as his quality, and particularly his important and agreeable errand might justly expect.

He returned to England by the Hague, having been commissioned to settle some affairs in that country, and was graciously received by his royal mistress, in whose favour he still continued till the great changes took place in 1710. At the queen's demise he was among the number of regents appointed by George I. till his arrival in England.

On the first of October, A. D. 1714, his lordship was sworn of the new privy-council, then appointed by George I. and two days after obtained leave to resign his place of auditor of the Exchequer to his nephew, George Montagu (late earl of Halifax). On the fifth of that month he was appointed first lord of the Treasury; and on the sixteenth was elected knight of the most noble order of the Garter, having on the fourteenth preceding been created viscount Sunbury, and earl of Halifax. On the third of November following, he was constituted lord-lieutenant of Surry; and before the end of the year was installed at Windsor.

The attention and regard he had throughout life paid to the interest of his country, no less than the honour of his sovereign, had so gained the affections of his fellow subjects, that he enjoyed these accumulated honours unenvied. He died in the fifty-fourth year of his age, on the nineteenth of May, A. D. 1715; and seven days after was interred in general Monk's vault, in Westminster-Abbey, where a monument is erected to his memory with the following inscription on three columns.

H.	S.	E.
CAROLUS MONTAGUE	Brevi etenim virum	His erga Patriam, & Principem mentis,
Honorabilis Georgii Montague de Horton	Sua in Senatu facundia,	Utriusq; Benevolentiam complexus,
In Agro Northantonienfi filius,	In Consilio providentia,	Avitum Stirpis suae splendorem
HENRICI Comitiss de Manchester Nepos,	In utroq; Solertia, fides, autoritas	Novis Titulis auxit:
Qui scholæ Regiæ apud hanc Ecclesiâ,	Ad gerendam Ærarii curam evexit;	Baro scilicet, deinde & Comes HALIFAX
Alumnus.	Ubi laborantibus Fiscii rebus	Creatus
Collegii S ^{ti} Trinitatis apud Cantabrigienfes	Opportune Subserviens,	Ad tres Montacutiani nominis Proceres
Socius.	Monetam argentam,	Quartus accessit:
Literas humaniores tam feliciter excoluit	Magno reipublicæ detrimento imminutam	Summo deniq; Perisclidis honore
Ut inter nostratum primos	Valori pristino restituit;	Insignitus
Tum Poetas, tum Oratores,	Et tantæ molis opus	Dum promovendæ salutis & utilitati publicæ
		Dispari

Dispari licet in Studiorum genere, Cum flagrante jam bello diutino, Omni mente incumberet
 Pari tamen cum laude floretet: Et aggredereetur & absolveret Medios inter conatus, Bonarumq; Artium disciplinis instructus Ne subsidia Regi Regnoq; necessaria (Pro lubricam rerum humanarum sortem)
 Ex Academiae Umbraculis Deessent interim, Cum bonorum omnium luctu
 In Publicum prodiret, Ne fides aut privata aut publica Extinctus est Literatorum jam tum Decus, Vacillaret nuspam xix die Maii, A. D. MDCCXV.
 Mox & Præsidium Sapienter cavit. Ætatis suæ LIV.

His lordship married Anne, daughter of Sir Christopher Yelverton, baronet, and widow of Robert, earl of Manchester; which lady died without issue; he therefore left his estate to his nephew,

(First Earl.) GEORGE MONTAGU, who succeeded to his barony; which George was the son of Edward Montagu, elder brother to the earl of Halifax, then deceased. This

EDWARD MONTAGU was born on the twenty-fifth of September, A. D. 1749, and succeeded his father at Horton, and in his other possessions in Northamptonshire. He served twice in parliament; first, A. D. 1680-1, for Seaford in Sussex, in that which met then at Oxford; and, secondly, in 1685, for the county of Northampton. He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir John Pelham, of Laughton, in Sussex, baronet, and by her, who after his decease married, secondly, Thomas Woodcock, esquire, had issue four daughters, and two sons; the former were,

1. Lucy, born May 15, A. D. 1679, married to John Morley Trevor, of Glynd, in Sussex, esq;
2. Elizabeth, born February 9, A. D. 1680-1; married to Richard Thoresby, of Hanslap, in Buckinghamshire, esquire.
3. Anne, married to Christopher Wilmot, of Osmarton, in Derbyshire.
4. Grace, married to William Cosby, esquire, governor of New York and New Jersey.

Of the sons,

EDWARD MONTAGU, the second, was colonel of a regiment of foot, a brigadier general of his majesty's forces, governor of Hull, and a member in two parliaments for Northampton. He died at his house in Golden-Square, in May, A. D. 1738; and having married Arabella, daughter of John Trevor of Trevallin, in the county of Flint, esquire, eldest brother of Thomas, lord Trevor; also widow of Robert Heath, esquire, by her he had issue five sons, 1. George, his heir. 2. Edward, who was slain at the battle of Fontenoy. 3. Christopher, chaplain to a regiment, who died in Flanders. 4. John. 5. Charles, member in the last parliament for Northampton, who is now colonel of the second regiment of foot; and was raised to the rank of a lieutenant-general on the nineteenth of January, 1761; he married Elizabeth-Villiers, viscountess Grandison, in Ireland, in her own right, daughter of John Villiers, earl Grandison, and widow of Aland Mason, esquire, which lady has issue by her first husband, one son. The daughters of this Edward Montagu were Arabella, who married Nathaniel Whettenhall, of Hankelow, in Cheshire, and Harriot, who died unmarried. The elder brother was the noble earl of whom we are treating.

His lordship, whilst he was a commoner, served in parliament for the town of Northampton; and on the decease of his uncle, Charles, earl of Halifax, &c. succeeding only to the title of lord Halifax, his majesty was pleased to advance him to the dignities of viscount Sunbury in the county of Middlesex, and earl of Halifax, and to his heirs male, by letters patent dated the fourteenth of June, 1715. On the twenty-seventh of November following, he was sworn at St. James's, of his majesty's most honourable privy-council; and on the seventeenth of June 1725, was installed one of the knights companions of the military order of the Bath. He continued auditor of the Exchequer, and a member of the privy-council, to the time of his decease.

His lordship first married Richarda Posthuma, daughter of Richard Saltingstall, of Chippen-Warden, in Northamptonshire, esquire, by whom he had a daughter, Lucy, married to Francis, then lord Guilford, since created earl of Guilford. And on her decease, A. D. 1734, he married Mary, daughter of Richard, earl of Scarborough, by whom he had issue one son, George, his successor, and six daughters,

1. Frances, married in January, A. D. 1738-9, to Sir Roger Burgoine, of Sutton, in Bedfordshire, baronet.
2. Anne, married February 22, A. D. 1748-9, to Joseph Jekyl, of Dallington, in Northamptonshire, esquire, heir to the late Sir Joseph Jekyl, master of the rolls; and he deceased in November, A. D. 1752.
3. Mary, wedded September 25, A. D. 1740, to Sir Danvers Osborne, of Chicksands, in Bedfordshire, baronet, who was appointed captain-general and governor of New York, June 16, A. D. 1743, and died in that government soon after his arrival there.
4. Elizabeth, born April 30, 1719, married September 22, 1743, to Henry Archer, esquire, brother of Thomas, lord Archer.
5. Barbara. And,
6. Charlotte, born January 31, 1725, wedded on the second of March, A. D. 1747, to James Johnston, esquire, equerry to his majesty, and colonel of a regiment of dragoons.

His lordship's second lady dying on the tenth of September, A. D. 1726, in the thirty-fifth year of her age, he after continued a widower; and departing this life the ninth of May, A. D. 1739, he was succeeded by his only son,

(Third and present Earl.) GEORGE MONTAGU, who was born on the sixth of October, A. D. 1716. In July, A. D. 1741, he married Anne (only daughter of William) Richards, then in possession of the large estate of her uncle, Sir Thomas Dunk, of Tonges, near Hawkehurst, in Kent, knight, deceased; pursuant to whose will she had assumed the surname of Dunk. The testator directed, that whoever should become the husband of his said niece, should also bear that name, with which his lordship complied immediately upon his marriage; and obtained an act of parliament for that purpose. By this lady, who died on the fifteenth of October, A. D. 1753, and was interred at Horton, he had issue three daughters,

1. Anne,

1. Anne, born in April, A. D. 1742, who died unmarried on the twenty-seventh of January, A. D. 1761; and was buried at Horton.

2. Frances, born in May, A. D. 1743, who died unmarried on the second of September, A. D. 1764.

3. Elizabeth, now sole heir, born in November, A. D. 1745. This lady was married on the eighth of March, A. D. 1766, to John Montagu, esquire, commonly called viscount Hinchinbroke, eldest son to John, earl of Sandwich.

In January, A. D. 1744-5, his lordship was appointed master of the buck-hounds; and shortly after the breaking out of that unnatural rebellion, in Scotland, his lordship's zeal for the public service exerted itself in raising a regiment of foot. In 1746, he was constituted chief justice in Eyre, South of Trent.

On the first of November, A. D. 1748, he was appointed first lord commissioner for trade and plantations, and soon after sworn of his majesty's most honourable privy-council. The attention given by his lordship in this station, to the commerce and colonies of Great-Britain, procured him the respect and esteem of all mankind; and the zeal, integrity, and ability, with which he pursued and promoted these important and long neglected interests, scarce left room in his sovereign's heart for any choice in the appointment to those higher offices, which his lordship has since so deservedly and ably filled.

The nation has felt the effect, and will for ever gratefully acknowledge the merit of those measures, by which the important colony of Nova Scotia, the barrier of North America, and the only safe rendezvous for a British fleet in that part of the world, was timely saved from the encroaching power of France; our right to the entire possession of it supported by negotiations; her valuable fisheries encouraged; and such establishments made therein as have laid the foundation of those conquests which have given such a lustre to the British annals.

"My lords and gentlemen,

I have the honour of his majesty's commands to meet this his first parliament in Ireland; I obey them with entire satisfaction, from an assurance, that your deliberations will be influenced by the same principles of loyalty and affection to your sovereign, and of zeal for the prosperity of your country, which have so long distinguished the parliaments of this kingdom.

"The loss of our late most gracious sovereign, at a time when not only the security of his own dominions, but the welfare of Europe, seemed so essentially to depend on the continuance of his life, must have affected you in the most sensible manner.

"Your grief however has already been alleviated, and your loss repaired, by the succession of his majesty, not only to the throne, (his legal inheritance) but to the duty, affection and confidence of his subjects, as unbounded as the greatest of his predecessors have ever possessed in the most fortunate periods of their reigns.

"This parliament happily commences with the accession of a king, bred under the influence, and formed by the example of a prince, who uniformly tempered prerogative with law; and whose glory it was, in the exercise of his power, to protect the rights and liberties of his people.

"You can be no strangers to his majesty's most gracious declaration, that the preservation of the constitution in church and state, and the enforcing a due obedience to the laws (not more necessary to his own authority, than to the liberties of his people) shall be the first and constant object of his care. And I

In a series of successes sufficient to aggrandize the British name in all parts of the known world, the subject, however he agrees with the enemy in being astonished at the rapid and salutary effect, and glories with his countrymen in those well concerted measures which were productive of such invaluable benefits, is seldom able to investigate the source or fountain from whence in reality they may be said to flow. Hence the merit of any particular operation, planned in private by the ministry, is, and ever was, attributed by different people to different statesmen, at one and the same time, as partiality shall direct, or the uncertain reports of the day mislead them. It is therefore but barely doing justice to the patriotic zeal of this noble lord to say, that the plan for the reduction of Senegal and Goree (the former a place of the utmost importance to our trade and navigation) was first imparted to his lordship; and that the effectual execution thereof was entirely the consequence of his patronage. We are authorized to say thus much by the gentleman who first laid the scheme, and who, under the auspices of government, superintended that beneficial expedition.

In July, A. D. 1749, he was appointed lord-lieutenant, and custos rotulorum of the county of Northampton, in the place of his grace the late duke of Montagu. On the twentieth of March, A. D. 1761, his lordship was by the king in council declared lieutenant general, and general governor of his majesty's kingdom of Ireland; and the day following was succeeded as commissioner for trade and plantations by lord Sandys. He set out from his house at Bushy-Park for Ireland on the twenty-sixth of September following; and having arrived in due time, the parliament of that kingdom met according to appointment, when his excellency opened the session with a speech * to both houses, which for elegance of expression, and warmth of sentiment, deserves to be transmitted down to future ages.

The satisfaction which his lordship had the address and happiness to diffuse through all ranks of men in that nation was sufficiently conspicuous, from have it particularly in command to declare to you, that his subjects of this kingdom are fully and in every respect comprehended in these assurances.

"His majesty's wise choice of a royal consort, eminent for her personal virtues and endowments, and descended from an house so illustrious for its attachment to the protestant cause, displays in the clearest light his paternal care, not only to preserve to us, but transmit unimpaired to our posterity, the blessing of his reign, liberty, and pure religion.

"When I consider the security of our present, and the prospect of our future happiness: and when I see you animated, as I am persuaded you are, with every sentiment which loyalty and gratitude can inspire; I assure myself of a session of parliament, that will be distinguished by its uninterrupted harmony, and by its effective zeal for the support of the honour and dignity of the crown. Such disposition, steadily adhered to, cannot fail, under his majesty's paternal influence, to preserve you an happy, and to establish you an opulent and flourishing people."

"Gentlemen of the house of commons,

"I have ordered the proper officers to lay before you the several accounts and estimates: from which you will be enabled to judge of the provisions necessary to be made for the support of his majesty's government, and for your own security. The means of making those provisions, (which, I hope, will be expeditiously adjusted) I doubt not will, on your part, be such as shall be most suitable to the circumstances of this country; from that gratitude which prompted the following resolution.

Ireland. Veneris 26 Februarii, 1762.

Resolved, Nemine Contradicente,

“That an address be presented to his excellency the lord-lieutenant, that he will represent to his majesty the sense of this house, that the entertainments and appointments of the lord-lieutenant of Ireland are become inadequate to the dignity of that high office, and to the expence with which it is and ought to be supported: and that it is the humble desire of this house, that his majesty will be graciously pleased to grant such an augmentation to the entertainment of the lord-lieutenant for the time being, as with the present allowance, will, in the whole, amount to the annual sum of sixteen thousand pounds. And to express that satisfaction which we feel, at the pleasing hope, that this just and necessary augmentation should take place during the administration of a chief governor, whose many great and amiable qualities, whose wise and happy administration in the government of this kingdom, have universally endeared him to the people of Ireland.”

E. Stirling, } Cler. Dom. Com.
H. Alcock, }

His excellency's disinterested reply is so peculiarly and characteristically his own, that it deserves not only to be held up as an example to future statesmen in Great-Britain, but to be communicated to distant nations, that it may there reflect that honour upon his country, which at home it ever will upon himself. It is as follows:

Gentlemen of the house of Commons,

“I shall take the first opportunity of laying before his majesty the sense of the house of commons

contained in this address. I enter fully into the truly liberal motives, which have influenced your conduct in this unanimous resolution. That you are solicitous not only to support his majesty's government, but to support it with becoming grandeur and magnificence, reflects the highest honour on yourselves; that you have chosen the time of my administration, that you have distinguished my person as the object of your favour, reflects the highest credit on me; and I must ever consider this event as one of the most fortunate and honourable circumstances of my life. Whatever merit you ascribe to me in the government of this kingdom, in reality arises from your own conduct, though your partiality would transfer it to mine. Your unanimity has first created this merit, and your liberality would now reward it.

“I am sensible of the obligation you confer: and I can in no way properly demonstrate my sense of it, but by being as I am, unalterably determined to implore his majesty, that I may be permitted to enjoy it pure and unmixed with the lucrative advantages you propose should attend it. This affectionate address is intended as an honour to me: that intention has on your part been fully answered; to make it truly honourable, something is still necessary on mine. It becomes me to vie with the generosity of parliament, and to keep up an emulation of sentiment. It has been my duty, in the course of this session, to propose large plans of public expence, and to promise an attention to public œconomy; and I could not without pain submit that the establishment, already burthened at my recommendation, should be still farther charged for my own particular profit.

“But while I consider myself at liberty to sacrifice my private interests to my private feelings, I must consider myself as bound likewise to consult, in compliance with your enlarged and liberal country; on mine, you may depend upon the utmost frugality.

“You will take into your consideration the several incidental charges of the military establishment, as it now stands, of which exact estimates can be formed; and also that a large sum will be wanted for the effectual repair of the barracks; a work which cannot be delayed.

“I must observe to you, that notwithstanding the authority given by the vote of credit of the last parliament, the sum of two hundred thousand pounds only has been raised; a circumstance of œconomy which cannot fail to give you satisfaction.

“My lords and gentlemen,

“The improvement of your natural advantages ought to be the object of your most serious attention. Agriculture, the surest support of every state, deserves at all times your highest regard, to the end that, through your wisdom, the skill and industry of the inhabitants of this country may fully correspond with the bounty of providence in their favour.

“To encourage, regulate, and improve, which will of course extend, your manufactures and commerce, will, I am sure, be your continual care. Your linen trade has long been the object of public encouragement; but much still remains to carry to its full extent a manufacture, for which there is so large a demand; which is so various in its branches; and which, with due attention, might be rendered as considerable a source of wealth to the whole, as it is now to part, of this kingdom.

“There is no object more worthy our attention, than our protestant charter schools. Notwithstanding the peaceable demeanour of the papists in this kingdom, it must always be your duty, and your interest, to divert from error, by every effect-tual, though gentle method, the deluded followers of a blind religion. And these institutions merit your support and protection, not only as schools of religion, but as seminaries of useful arts and virtuous industry.

“Let me now, in the most earnest manner, recommend to you, that, after so many honourable events abroad, and so many joyful events at home, neither jealousies, nor distrusts, neither public heats, nor private animosities, may disturb that tranquillity which is desirable at all times, and at this season is peculiarly necessary to your welfare.

“As to what regards myself, you shall always find me not only ready, but solicitous, to contribute whatever my authority, my credit, or my experience, can furnish for these salutary purposes. And I can with truth assure you, that I shall in no degree fulfil the intentions, nor merit the approbation, of my royal master, but by studying the peace and welfare of the kingdom which his majesty hath committed to my care.

“I am sensible the situation, in which I am placed, is as arduous, as it is important: but I bring with me the clearest intentions for your service. To maintain the honour, and to promote the service, of the crown, are duties from which I will never depart: to forward the prosperity, and to preserve the constitution, of this country, are objects of which I never will lose sight. And there is nothing I more sincerely wish, than that the interests of both kingdoms may be as thoroughly understood, as they are inseparably connected. There is no point I shall more diligently labour: and I must now assure you at the opening of my administration (what the progress of it will, I hope, demonstrate) that I have no end or ambition, but to be able to represent, in the warmest manner, to his majesty, the zeal and unanimity of his subjects in this kingdom, and to carry with me, on my return into the royal presence, the good opinion, the affection, the hearts of the people of Ireland.”

senti-

sentiments, the future support of the station in which I am placed, to the dignity of which, the emoluments are, as you represent them, inadequate. I shall transmit, therefore, the sense of the house of commons, that the augmentation which your generosity has proposed, may, if his majesty shall think fit, be made to the establishment of my successor, when he shall enter on the government of this kingdom, and when, it is probable, the circumstances of this country may be better able to support such additional burden. But while I must decline accepting any part of the profits, I rejoice to charge myself with the whole of the obligation: abundantly happy, if, when I shall hereafter be removed from this high, and through your favour desirable situation, I should leave it, through your liberality, augmented in its emoluments, and by my inability not diminished in its reputation."

His lordship arrived in London on the fourth of May, A. D. 1762; and on the nineteenth of June following was appointed first lord of the Admiralty; but resigning that post on the fourteenth of October, A. D. 1762, he was the same day appointed one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state. His lordship was succeeded, as lord lieutenant of Ireland, by Hugh, earl (now duke) of Northumberland, on the twentieth of April, A. D. 1763, and resigned as secretary of state on the tenth of June, A. D. 1765.

He was elected knight of the Garter on the twenty-third of April, A. D. 1764.

His lordship was raised to the rank of lieutenant-general in the army on the seventh of February, A. D. 1759; and is now hereditary ranger and warden of Salcey-Forest and Busby-Park; and a governor of the Charter-House. He continues lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Northampton; and of the privy-council.

(TITLES.) George Montagu Dunk, earl of Halifax, viscount Sunbury, and baron Halifax.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Halifax, of Halifax, in the county of York, December 12, A. D. 1700, (12 William III.) viscount Sunbury, in the county of Middlesex, and earl of Halifax, June 14, 1715, (1 George I.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, fifth and fourth pearl, three fusils, conjoined in fess ruby; a border, diamond, for Montagu; second and third, topaz, an eagle displayed, emerald, membered ruby for Monthermer.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a griphon's-head, couped, topaz, with beak and wings, diamond, and a portcullis on its neck of the same.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two griphons, pearl, gutty de sang, their wings expanded, ruby, and each charged on the neck as the crest.

(MOTTO.) "Otium cum dignitate."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Horton, near Northampton; at Stansted, in Sussex; and at Busby-Park, Middlesex.

YELVERTON, Earl of SUSSEX.

Antiquaries in general have agreed, that this noble and ancient family is of Norfolk extraction, and that the first lineal ancestor, of whom we have any account, was Andrew Yelverton, seated in Norfolk, in the time of Edward II. probably at Rackheath, near Norwich, for that we find was the residence of his son, Robert Yelverton. Mr. Edmondson carries the pedigree higher up, giving us the father and grandfather of the beforementioned Andrew; and says, that the latter, John Yelverton, was seated in Hertfordshire, in the ninth of Edward I. and that the former was also seated there in the ninth of Edward II. Be this as it may, the descendants of Andrew Yelverton were a long time seated in Norfolk, as might be proved from the records of that county, and corroborated, if necessary, from their marriages, which most commonly were with ladies in that part of the kingdom.

As the account we have of this family, is in the former part purely genealogical, barren of events either interesting or entertaining, we shall refer our readers for satisfaction in this particular, to the table, and only speak here of such persons whose memory has obtained a place in history; the first of which was,

Sir WILLIAM YELVERTON, only son of John Yelverton, by his second wife Elizabeth, daughter of John Read, of Rougham, in the county of Norfolk; which John Yelverton was the only son of Robert Yelverton, mentioned above.

In the fourteenth of Henry VI. he served in parliament for Yarmouth; and having employed his whole time in studying the law, arrived at such a degree of knowledge therein, that in the eighteenth of that reign, he was elected serjeant at law, and in the twenty-second of the same reign, A. D. 1444, was constituted one of the judges of the court of King's Bench; in which place he was continued, upon the accession of king Edward

Edward IV. at whose coronation he was made a knight of the Bath. Notwithstanding the favour he was in with this monarch, yet when Henry VI. prevailed, instead of being discarded, as he must naturally have expected, we find him constituted one of the judges of the court of Common Pleas, by patent dated October 9, A. D. 1470. He was interred at Rougham, as appears from the following inscription, which Weaver has preserved in his Funeral Monuments:

Ora te pro animabus Will. Yelverton Militis & quondam Justic. Dom. Regis de suo Banco & Domine Agnetis Uxoris sue, qui quidem Willus obiit - - - -

In the fifth generation from this Sir William, we arrive at another William Yelverton, who died on the twelfth of August, A. D. 1585, having had issue by his first wife, Anne, daughter and heir of Sir Henry Farmer, of East Barham, in the county of Norfolk, among other children, Henry and Christopher, the latter ancestor to the earls of Sussex, and the former, father to Sir William Yelverton, created a baronet, May 31, A. D. 1620, which honour became extinct in another Sir William, son to the first baronet. We must speak of the younger brother, Sir CHRISTOPHER YELVERTON, who was early entered a student at Gray's-Inn, and was generally esteemed a man of extraordinary genius, and of no less extraordinary application. After having been called to the bar, where he gave repeated proofs, that he had not studied in vain; he was Lent-reader to Gray's-Inn, A. D. 1573, as also in 1582; but did not then read, because of the pestilence that raged almost every where. In 1578, and 1584, he was elected treasurer of the society of Gray's-Inn; and being called to the degree of serjeant at law, A. D. 1588, was the same year constituted queen's serjeant; and having been elected to parliament, from the fifth year of queen Elizabeth, one of the representatives for Brackley and Northampton, as also one of the knights for the county in two parliaments, he had displayed such a turn for business, and was so thoroughly versed in the rules of the house of commons, that he was chosen their speaker in the thirty-ninth of Elizabeth, and in the following year his patent as queen's serjeant was renewed.

In 1602, he was constituted one of the judges of the King's Bench. His patent was renewed upon the accession of king James, bearing date, April 29, (1 James I.) On the twenty third of July, A. D. 1603, he was knighted at Whitehall, and dying at Easton Manduit, a seat in Northamptonshire, which he had purchased, he was buried in the church there, A. D. 1607. He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Catesby, of Ecton and Whiston, in Northamptonshire, and among other issue, entered in the table, had a son and successor,

Sir HENRY YELVERTON, who was born at Easton Manduit, on the twenty-ninth of June, A. D. 1566; and after having spent the necessary time at school, was matriculated in the university of Oxford; from whence removing to Gray's-Inn, he took the degree of barrister, and soon after was chosen recorder of Northampton, and returned to parliament as one of the representatives of that city. In 1606, he was appointed Lent-reader of Gray's-Inn.

His eminence at the King's Bench had been confessed by all for near ten years, and yet merit alone was not sufficient to raise him any otherwise than in reputation, as a man of great perspicuity and no less integrity; when by some means or other, he fell in the way of Robert Car, earl of Somerset, who was immediately struck with his address; and in a short time an intimacy took place between them, which on the twenty-ninth of October, A. D. 1613, gave merit no more than its due, in appointing Mr. Yelverton solicitor-general to the king. Ten days after his majesty conferred upon him the honour of knighthood at Whitehall; and, from a nearer acquaintance, formed such an opinion of his understanding, that he frequently called in his assistance at council.

On the twelfth of March, A. D. 1616-17, he was made attorney-general, before and after which time, some officious enemy had whispered into the king's ear matter for displeasure, which however was happily removed for a time, when the attorney had an opportunity of vindicating his innocence. The earl of Buckingham, against whom he had let fall some unguarded expressions, as was said, privately determined his ruin; and it is no wonder that so great a favourite at last accomplished it.

In 1620, Mr. attorney-general was called to account, for having passed certain clauses in a charter lately granted to the city of London, not agreeable to his majesty's warrant, and derogatory to his honour and profit. To determine the nature of the offence was left to the lord chancellor and others, and his lordship offered him, in the king's name, either to submit himself in private, or defend himself openly. He could not but see what his enemies were driving at; and therefore chose to throw himself upon the king's mercy, answering, "the offer is gracious, the choice easy, and the mercy free." Although this submission was signed by him, it was not deemed by the committee satisfactory enough; and especially, as it was necessary to obtain the surrender of the city charter, they advised, that an information be put in the Star-chamber against Mr. attorney, "as delinquent, against the mayor, as interested, and against the recorder, also mixtly with some touch of charge." In consequence of this, an information was lodged, and the cause being brought to an hearing, October 27, the attorney-general abiding by his first determination, threw himself again upon the king's mercy, allowing the charge; but desiring, that now the charter was recovered, the king might be acquainted with his fresh submission before they proceeded. The duke of Lennox, and the earl of Pembroke, with difficulty, carried this point for him, so inveterate were his opponents.

Notwithstanding the cause was remitted by his majesty on the eighth of November, when the king's solicitor and council insisted on the several parts of the information, and that though there was no corruption of reward laid to his charge, yet there was a corruption in affection, not to be allowed in a man of so eminent a place, and endued with so much knowledge as he had.

But

But one of the defendant's council being taken suddenly ill, the court was adjourned till the Friday following, being the tenth of November. His council then answered so effectually to the inconveniencies urged to have arisen from several clauses in the charter, that the chief reason which induced the court to censure him, proceeded from his digression of the king's warrant, which they looked upon as a breach of trust in so principal a ministerial officer as he was, not to be excused by error, ignorance, or credulity. Sir Edward Coke, whose place it was to begin, concluded his long and bitter speech, with a fine of six thousand pounds, and loss of place, which the rest of the court moderated to four thousand, discharging him of his place, by way of opinion, but submitting the same to the king, during whose pleasure, they also sentenced him to imprisonment in the Tower: yet Sir Henry Yelverton, who was sequestered in the execution of his office on the twenty-seventh of June, was not wholly deprived thereof till the January following.

While he lay in the Tower, the zealous townsmen of Northampton chose him one of their representatives in parliament; but instead of appearing there as a member, he was in April following, accused by them to the lords, as a delinquent, as guilty of some unjustifiable actions relating to the patents of Innes and Osteries, and of gold and silver thread, as also for signing some dormant patents without sufficient authority. Upon this occasion, when Sir Henry appeared at the bar of the house, he was rather imprudent in his expressions, which notwithstanding they served to clear him of one charge, brought on another. He declared, "he thought himself happy in the midst of his majesty's disfavour, to be sent to that honourable house; yet since wisdom required time, though innocence hath her present answer, he desired some time for consideration; but added withal, that the chief complaint against him was, concerning the patent of gold, &c. and that of Innes and Osteries; of which last, if he deserved well of his majesty, it was in that matter; and that the king and the subject were more abused by that patent than by any other; for the opposing of which he conceived he suffered at that day." The king, being informed of this passage, came to the parliament, and justified his attorney's moderate behaviour, and opposition to the prosecution of the inn-keepers, and that he himself disliked those proceedings against his subjects; but that since Yelverton had said that he suffered at that day for his good service therein, he required their lordships to do him justice, and punish the slander.

Sir Henry Yelverton was shortly after brought before the lords, and gave a particular answer to every article of the charge, which he concluded with a speech, representing his misfortune of lying under the displeasure of so great a favourite as Buckingham, another impolitic stroke, that brought him into fresh trouble. He said, however, that he had rather die than the commonweal should so much as receive a scratch for him, and that in none of his actions he had shewed any fear of that great man. That Sir Giles Monpeffon had brought him a message from the lord of Buckingham, that he should not hold his place a month if he did not conform himself in better measure to the patent of Innes; for my lord had obtained it by his favour, and would support it with his power. Nevertheless, he resolved to be as stubborn as Mordecai, not to stoop or pass those gracious bounds his majesty had prescribed him. He concludes, by saying, "Soon after I found the message in part made good, for all the profits of my place were diverted from me, and turned into an unusual channel, to one of my lord's worthies, that retained little more than the name of attorney. It became so fatal and so penal, that it became almost a loss of the suit to come to me, my place was but the seat of winds and tempests."

The king, hearing of this speech, acquainted the lords, that he intended to do himself justice, and repair the dishonour it reflected on him; which the lords besought his majesty to leave to them, who, without taking any notice of the charge exhibited by the commons, did, on the sixteenth of May, A. D. 1621, proceed to sentence, and declared, that the said Sir Henry Yelverton, for his speeches uttered here in court, which do touch the king's majesty's honour, shall be fined to the king in ten thousand marks, be imprisoned during pleasure, and make submission to the king, and for those which touched the marquis of Buckingham, he should be fined five thousand marks, &c. on which his lordship stood up, and did freely remit him his, and the prince and the house of peers agreed to move his majesty to mitigate the other. But we do not know what part of the fine was forgiven; probably none was required, for his fortune soon changed. The duke of Buckingham visited him privately in the Tower; and we may imagine they came to a right explanation among themselves (though it is not hard to determine who must have submitted) for Sir Henry was set at liberty, and went again to the bar, where he practised with his usual success, till April, A. D. 1625, when a gentleman from the duke of Buckingham did, without his previous knowledge, bring him a warrant from the king, signifying his pleasure, to make him a judge in the court of Common Pleas. Having been made a serjeant on the thirtieth of April, his patent for creating him one of the justices of the Common Pleas passed on the tenth of May ensuing (1625). In this office he died on the twenty-fourth of November, A. D. 1630, and was carried from his house in Aldersgate-street, to Northamptonshire, and buried in the parish church of Easton Manduit, in the north isle, wherein his son erected a monument, with two effigies, representing him and his lady at full length, with an inscription, setting forth his virtues. In Hetley's Reports we find the following memorandum, which as it was wrote by a cotemporary, and a man of impartiality, does honour to his memory.

"Memorandum. That upon Sunday morning, being the twenty-fourth of January, A. D. 1629-30, died Sir Henry Yelverton, puisne judge of the Common Pleas, who before had been attorney-general to king James; and afterwards incurring his displeasure, was displaced and censured in the Star-Chamber. He then became a practiser again at the bar, from which he was advanced by king Charles to be a judge. He was a man of profound knowledge in the common laws, and ingenious and eloquent in expression; and for his life, of great integrity and piety, and his death universally bewailed."

Under his name are extant in print, several speeches made in parliament, and particularly one in Rushworth's Collections, p. 34.

The rights of the people of England, concerning impositions: London, 1679.

Thirty-two sermons of Mr. Edward Philips, a Puritan preacher, taken by him in short-hand.

THIS GREAT MAN married Margaret, daughter of Robert Beale, esquire, clerk of the council to queen Elizabeth, and of his wife Edith St. Barbe, sister to the lady Wallingham, by whom he had several children, the eldest of which,

Sir CHRISTOPHER YELVERTON, became heir to the family estates, &c. On the sixth of May, A. D. 1623, king James conferred upon him the honour of knighthood at Greenwich; and in the fifteenth of Charles I. we find him sheriff for the county of Northampton. By letters patent, bearing date, June 30, A. D. 1641, he was by king Charles I. created a baronet.

He was married at Cripplegate church, on the twentieth of April, A. D. 1630, to Anne, daughter to Sir William Twisden, of Roydon-hall, in Kent, baronet. By this lady, who surviving him, died in 1670, and was interred near him at Easton Manduit, he had issue two sons; the youngest of which, Charles, died unmarried; and a daughter, Anne, married first to Robert Montagu, earl of Manchester, and secondly, to Charles Montagu, earl of Halifax.

At his demise, on the fourth of December, A. D. 1654,

The eldest son,

Sir HENRY YELVERTON, succeeded as baronet, who was baptized at Easton Manduit, on the sixth of July, A. D. 1633. From St. Paul's school, where he received the rudiments of classical learning, he removed to Wadham college, in Oxford, in 1650, and was entered a gentleman commoner, under the tuition of the famous Dr. Wilkins, warden of that college. He made a great proficiency in the learned languages, insomuch that he was generally allowed to excel his contemporaries of the same age and standing. He had a peculiar turn to religious studies, and was zealously attached to every thing or person which in any shape could be deemed sacred. As an instance of this, after he had succeeded his father, he entertained at his seat at Easton Manduit, Dr. Thomas Moreton, bishop of Durham, whom the severity of the times had ejected from his see, and behaved to him with rather more respect and deference, than if he had been at his house upon any other footing; and here it was that good bishop departed his life on St. Matthew's day, A. D. 1659.

This baronet was one of the knights for Northamptonshire, in that parliament which voted the restoration of king Charles II. and died in the flower of his age, on the third of October, A. D. 1670, and was interred in the chancel of Easton Manduit church, where are these inscriptions:

On a column on the left.

CAROLUS FRANCISCA MARIA	{	HENRICUS YELVERTON
		Baronettus ob'. 3 Oct.
		1670
		CAROLUS Dominus GREY de Rutthyn obiit 17 ^o Maii 1679.

On a colum to the right.

SUSANNA Baro- nissa GREY de Rutthyn ob' 28 Jan. 1676.	{	HENRICUS.
		CHRISTOPHO-
		RUS.
		NEVIL.

He wrote several religious tracts; in particular, a short Discourse of the Truth and Reasonableness of the Religion delivered by Jesus Christ; printed in octavo at London, A. D. 1662; also a Vindication of the Church of England against Edward Bagshaw, of Christ-church; and a preface to bishop Moreton's book, entitled, The Episcopacy of the Church of England, justified to be apostolical, from the Authority of the primitive Church.

This baronet married Susan, baroness Grey, of Ruthyn, daughter and sole heir of Charles Longueville, lord Grey, of Ruthyn, who inherited that title in right of his mother Susan, sister and heir to Henry Grey, earl of Kent, who being married to Sir Michael Longueville, knight, third son of Sir Henry Longueville, of Wolverton, in Buckinghamshire, had issue the said Charles Longueville, her son and heir, who, after a great dispute in parliament, had the title of lord Grey of Ruthyn adjudged to him, and thereby was summoned to parliament in 1640, (16 Charles I.) and having married Frances, second daughter, and one of the three coheirs to Edward Nevil, esquire, cousin-german to Henry, lord Aberga-venny, departed this life in the king's garrison at Oxford, on the seventeenth of June, A. D. 1643, leaving both title and estate to his only daughter and sole heir, the said Susan, baroness Grey, of Ruthyn, which Susan was married as above, and the present earl of Sussex, as descended from her, calls himself baron Grey of Ruthyn. Their six children are mentioned in the inscriptions above; we have therefore only to say of them, that Christopher, the third son, died A. D. 1697, unmarried; and Frances, the eldest daughter, was married to Christopher Hatton, afterward viscount Hatton.

(First Lord.) CHARLES YELVERTON, eldest son, succeeded his father as baronet, A. D. 1670, and his mother in the barony of Ruthyn, six years after; the latter of which he enjoyed only three years, dying at his lodgings in Pall-mall, London, of the small-pox, on the seventeenth of May, A. D. 1679. For want of issue,

(First Viscount.) HENRY YELVERTON, succeeded to his deceased brother's honours; of whom we only know, that he carried the spurs at the coronation of James II. and that of William and Mary; and that he was created viscount Longueville, vile, on the twenty-first of April, A. D. 1690. He married Barbara, daughter of Sir John Talbot, of Laycock, in Wiltshire, knight, and by her had two sons,

1. Talbot Yelverton.

2. Henry Yelverton, who married a daughter of major Carle, and had issue an only daughter, Barbara, who died young. He died A. D. 1765.

Also five daughters.

1. Barbara, married to Reynolds Calthorpe, of Elvetham, in the county of Southampton.

2. Susanna,

3. Frances,

4. Ann,

5. Henrietta,

} all died unmarried.

His lordship dying on the twenty-fourth of March, A. D. 1704, was buried at Easton Manduit. The honours, &c. devolved upon the eldest son, (First Earl.) TALBOT YELVERTON, who carried the spurs at the coronation of George I. and was afterwards by that monarch created earl of Sussex. The letters patent for this creation bear date September the twenty-sixth, A. D. 1717, and the remainder runs to Henry Yelverton, his brother, and the heirs male of his body, in case of failure of issue to the said earl. On the thirteenth of May, A. D. 1725, he was appointed deputy earl marshal of England, and acted in that capacity at the coronation of George II. and four days after the last named appointment, (May the twenty-seventh, A. D. 1725,) he was elected a knight of the most honourable order of the Bath, then revived. On the fifth of August, A. D. 1727, he was sworn of the privy-council to George I.

He married Lucy, daughter of Henry Pelham, of Lewis, in Sussex, esquire, clerk of the Pells, younger brother to Thomas, lord Pelham, and by this lady, who died in child-bed on the twenty-fifth of May, A. D. 1730, had issue three sons,

1. George Yelverton, who died young.

2. Augustus Yelverton, } successively earls of

3. Henry Yelverton, } Sussex.

His lordship departed this life at his seat at Easton Manduit, on the twenty-seventh of October, A. D. 1731, and was there buried. His honours devolved upon the eldest surviving son, (Second Earl.) AUGUSTUS YELVERTON, born July the twenty-seventh, A. D. 1727, who was lord of the bedchamber to his present majesty, when prince of Wales; but dying unmarried on the eighth of January, A. D. 1758, he was buried at Easton Manduit; and his only brother, (Third, and present Earl.) HENRY YELVERTON, born July the seventh, A. D. 1729, succeeded to the earldom, &c. On the seventeenth of January, A. D. 1757, he married Hester, the daughter of John Hall, esquire, by whom he had issue a daughter, Barbara, born June the nineteenth, A. D. 1760, and a son named Talbot, who died an infant.

(TITLES.) Henry Yelverton, earl of Sussex, viscount Longueville, baron Grey, of Ruthyn, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Summoned to parliament, as baron Grey, of Ruthyn, in the county of Denbigh, March the sixth, A. D. 1678, (30 Charles II.) formerly allowed November the third, A. D. 1640, (16 Charles I.) and summoned by writ the sixth of February ensuing; but originally, in 1332, (16 Edward II.) created baronet, June the thirtieth, A. D. 1641, (17 Charles I.) viscount Longueville, April the twenty-first, A. D. 1690, (2 William and Mary) and earl of the county of Sussex, September 26, A. D. 1717, (4 George I.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, three lions rampant, and a chief, ruby.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a lion passant regardant, of the last.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a wyvern, topaz, collared and chained, ruby. On the sinister, a lion regardant of the latter.

(MOTTO.) "Foy en tout."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Easton Manduit, in the county of Northampton.

COWPER,

COWPER, Earl COWPER.

STOW, in his Survey of London, mentions one Simon Cowper, as sheriff of London, in 1310. After whom we find mention made of Robert Cowper, valletorum de corona, who had a grant of six-pence a day for life, out of the king's rents, in the county of Northampton, in consideration of his good and acceptable services. It remains, however, undetermined whether these gentlemen may be reckoned among the ancestry of this noble family, which we can lineally deduce from no earlier a date than about the time of Edward IV. in the sixth year of whose reign,

JOHN COWPER, seated at Strode, in the parish of Slingfield, in the county of Suffex, married Joan, daughter and heir of John Stanbridge, of Strode, aforesaid, widow of Stephen Brode. By this lady, who surviving him, married, thirdly, Robert Aucher, esquire, he had issue,

JOHN COWPER, who was also seated at Strode, and married Mary Chaloner, by whom he had three sons, as in the table. The eldest of which,

WILLIAM COWPER, had a son of his own name,

WILLIAM COWPER, who marrying Margaret, daughter to Thomas Spencer, of St. Peter's Cornhill, London, merchant, and one of the churchwardens of that parish, in the thirty-fourth of Henry VIII. had issue,

JOHN COWPER, of St. Michael's, Cornhill, London, who was one of the sheriffs of that city in 1551, and alderman of Bridgeward. He died on the third of June, A. D. 1609, and was buried in St. Peter's, Cornhill, as appears from a monumental inscription, there erected to his memory, and that of his wife, who deceased before him, Elizabeth, daughter of John Ironside, of the county of Lincoln, esquire. Their issue were, five daughters and four sons, as in the table. The eldest son, John Cowper, dying young, the second son,

Sir WILLIAM COWPER, succeeded his father. He was born on the seventh of March, A. D. 1582, and was seated at Ratling Court, in the county of Kent. He was first created a baronet of Nova Scotia, and afterwards, on the fourth of March, A. D. 1641, a baronet of England, and was moreover knighted at Theobalds, on the first of March following. He was collector of the imposts on strangers in the port of London; and having taken part in the royal cause, was imprisoned in Ely-house. We find him afterward residing at his castle of Hertford, where by his affable deportment and generous hospitality, he reigned as a sovereign over the affections of the neighbouring people, and even condescended to practise what is generally esteemed the severest, but always the most amiable virtues of a christian, by visiting the sick and distressed; whose poverty alone, he used to say, entitled them to his protection. He died on the twentieth of December, A. D. 1664, and was buried at St. Michael's, Cornhill, in London. By his wife, Martha, daughter of James Masters, of East Langdon, in Kent, esquire, and sister to Sir Edward Masters, knight, he had issue six sons and three daughters, as in the table.

The eldest son,

JOHN COWPER was imprisoned with his father for his loyalty to king Charles I. and died in his confinement. This gentleman was, by profession, a lawyer, in which he spent many years as a member of Lincoln's-Inn. By Martha, his wife, daughter of George Hewkley, of London, merchant, he had a daughter, who died young, and an only son.

Sir WILLIAM COWPER, who succeeded his grandfather, as baronet. He served in the two last parliaments called by king Charles I. for Hertford, and was one of those who presented reasons for the indictment of James, duke of York, for not coming to church, and after the revolution took place, he served in several other parliaments for the same place. He married Sarah, daughter of Sir William Holled, of London, and left issue two sons;

1. Sir William Cowper, of whom hereafter.

2. Spencer Cowper, who upon the accession of George I. was appointed attorney-general to the prince of Wales; and on the twelfth of July, A. D. 1717, he was constituted chief-justice of Chester. Upon the accession of his late majesty, this gentleman was made chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and continued chief justice of Chester; after which, on the fourteenth of October that year, he was called to the degree of serjeant at law, and afterwards made one of the judges of the court of Common Pleas. He died at his chambers at Lincoln's-Inn, on the tenth of December, A. D. 1728. He was twice married, first, to Pennington, daughter of John Goodere, esquire; secondly, to Theodora, widow of John Stepney, esquire. By the latter lady he had no issue, but by the former was father of a numerous issue, all of which, with their descendants, are entered in the table.

The elder brother,

(First Earl.) Sir WILLIAM COWPER, succeeded his father, and having been a close attendant upon the several courts of justice, during the time he studied the law, he was so far a proficient, even at the time he was called to the bar, that he was very soon after appointed recorder of Colchester. In the reign of king William he was one of the king's council, and continued council to the crown after the accession of queen Anne, till he was made lord-keeper of the great seal, on the eleventh of October, A. D. 1705; in consequence of which he was sworn of the privy-council. His merit now shone with a greater lustre than ever; and her majesty thought the never could enough reward such extraordinary abilities, and accordingly began, by creating him a peer of England, by the stile and title of lord Cowper, baron Cowper, of Wingham. The letters patent for this creation bear date November 9, A. D. 1706, and the same year he was appointed one of the commissioners to treat of an union between England and Scotland. On the fourth of May, A. D. 1707, he was appointed lord high chancellor of Great Britain, which office he held in the height of favour both with sovereign and with people, till the grand revolution of politics, in 1710, took place. His friendship for the house of Hanover was too well known to admit his stay in so high an office, when all others who had shewed most zeal for that cause were discarded. He did not however fail of a reward; for upon the demise of the queen, he found himself one of the lords justices of the kingdom, till the arrival of George I. who immediately on his landing in England, restored this nobleman to his office of lord chancellor; and he took his seat at the new privy-council then appointed, as he was entitled by virtue of his post. He was afterwards, by letters patent, dated March 18, A. D. 1717, created earl Cowper, having been appointed lord high-steward of Great-Britain, on the sixth of February, A. D. 1716, for the trials of the rebel lords. He was also lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Hertford, one of the governors of the Charter-house, and fellow of the Royal Society.

It is remarkable of this nobleman, that he was the first lord chancellor who refused the New-Year's gifts, which it had been customary for the council to present; in which instance his laudable example prevails to this day.

His lordship married, first, Judith, daughter and heir of Sir Robert Booth, of London, merchant, by whom he had an only son, who died young. By his second wife, Sarah, daughter of John Clavering, of Chopwell, in the bishopric of Durham, esquire, (which lady died on the sixteenth of February, A. D. 1723-4,) he had two sons and two daughters.

The latter were,

1. Sarah, born December 17, A. D. 1707, who died unmarried December 7, A. D. 1758, and was buried at Hartingfordbury.

2. Anne, married in 1731, to James Colleton, of Hayneshill, in Berks, esquire, member of parliament for Lethwithiel. She died March 26, A. D. 1750.

* Mr. Edmondson, says, "the blazon of the supporters being very singular, it is here inserted, viz. on each side a light dun horse with a large blaze down his face; his mane

The sons were,

1. William Clavering Cowper.

2. Spencer Cowper, D. D. now dean of Durham. He was born April 17, A. D. 1712; and in May, 1742, married Dorothy, daughter to Charles, viscount Townsend.

(Second Earl.) WILLIAM COWPER, eldest son, born in 1709, succeeded his father. In April, 1723, he was appointed lord of the bedchamber to the king, which he afterwards resigned; and in March, 1743, he was appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Hertford.

On the twenty-seventh of June, A. D. 1732, he married Henrietta, youngest daughter and co-heir of Henry, earl of Grantham, and by her, who died on the twenty-third of September, A. D. 1747, and was buried at Hartingfordbury, he had issue a son, George Clavering, and a daughter, Caroline, born June 20, A. D. 1733, who on the twenty-fourth of July, A. D. 1753, married Henry Seymour, esquire, son to Francis Seymour, of Sherborne, in Dorsetshire, brother to Edward, late duke of Somerset.

He married, secondly, Georgina Caroline, daughter of John, earl Granville, and widow of John Spencer, esquire, by whom he had no issue, and departing this life on the eighteenth of December, A. D. 1764, and was buried at Hartingfordbury; his honours and estate devolved upon his only son, (Third, and present Earl.) GEORGE CLAVERING COWPER, born August 26, A. D. 1738, and baptised on the seventeenth of September following, the sponsors being the late king, princess Amelia, and the late duke of Grafton. On the decease of his grandfather, Henry, earl of Grantham, he succeeded to a very large estate, in 1754. His lordship is as yet unmarried.

(TITLES.) George Clavering Cowper, earl Cowper, viscount Fordwich, baron Cowper, of Wingham, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, March 4, A. D. 1641, (17 Charles I.) baron Cowper, of Wingham, in the county of Kent, November 9, A. D. 1706, (5 Anne) viscount Fordwich, in the same county, and earl Cowper, March 18, A. D. 1717-18, (5 George I.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, three martlets, ruby, on a chief ingrailed, of the latter, as many annulets, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a lion's paw erect, and erazed, topaz, holding a branch, emerald, fructed, ruby.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two bay horses with tails docked, proper*.

(MOTTO.) "Tuum est."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Colne Green, near Hertford, and at the Mote, near Canterbury.

close shorn, all but a tuft upon the withers; a black list down his back, a bob tail, and three white feet, viz. his hind feet and near foot before."

STANHOPE, Earl STANHOPE.

IN our account of the earl of Chesterfield's family, we observed, that the first earl married a second wife, Ann, daughter of Sir John Packington, of Westwood, in the county of Worcester, by whom he had an only son, ALEXANDER STANHOPE, who was gentleman-usher to the consort of king Charles II. On the accession of king William to the crown, his majesty nominated this gentleman envoy-extraordinary to Charles II. king of Spain, in which character he continued at that court in the reign of queen Anne, till, at his earnest request, he was recalled. He arrived in London from his embassy, on the third of November, A. D. 1706, and the year following departed this life, on the twentieth of September, leaving behind him the amiable character of a zealous friend to his country, of which he had given repeated proofs during the sixteen years he resided abroad.

He married Catherine, daughter of Arnold Burghill, of Thinghill Parva, in Herefordshire, esquire, lineally descended from Sir Humphry Burghill, who lived in the reign of William Rufus: by her he had issue five sons and two daughters.

1. Mary, who was one of the maids of honour to queen Anne, married Charles Fane, of Bastedon, in Berkshire, afterwards created viscount Fane, &c. in the kingdom of Ireland.

2. Catherine, who died unmarried.

The sons were,

1. James Stanhope, of whom hereafter.

2. Alexander Stanhope, who died at sea in his father's life-time.

3. Philip Stanhope, who was captain of the Milford man of war, sent into the Mediterranean. He was unfortunately slain on the twenty-eighth of September, A. D. 1708, in attacking the castle of St. Philip, in the island of Minorca, having quitted his ship, where he could not be of so great service, to share with his brother the danger of the land service.

4. Edward Stanhope, colonel of a regiment of foot, who lost his life at the siege of Cardona, in Spain, on the thirty-first of December, A. D. 1711.

5. William Stanhope, born at Madrid about the year 1691, who died an infant.

The eldest son was,

(First Earl.) JAMES STANHOPE, whose many great and real services reflect more honour upon himself and his noble family, than any prince has it in his power to bestow; and we cannot but congratulate the present earl Stanhope, upon the secret pleasure and satisfaction he must enjoy, in considering that the dignity of peerage, which he inherits, was the reward of intrinsic merit, and not owing to the blind partiality of his sovereign.

The account of this nobleman is already so well drawn up, that we have little else to do but transcribe.

He left the university of Oxford at seventeen or eighteen years of age, to accompany his father into Spain, and after some stay there, travelling into Italy, he served a volunteer under the duke of Savoy, afterwards king of Sicily and Sardinia. In 1694, going in the character of a volunteer into Flanders, he was early taken notice of by king William, who made him a captain in his regiment of foot-guards, and gave him the rank of lieutenant-colonel. In 1695, when Namur was besieged, being not then on duty, he served as a volunteer at the attack of the counterescarp, and giving extraordinary proofs of his courage and conduct, was wounded, and utterly disabled.

In 1700, he was elected a member for Newport in the Isle of Wight, which was the last parliament called by king William; and constantly serving in the house of commons (till he was created a peer) distinguished himself on the debates therein on several occasions.

In 1702, he was a volunteer in the expedition under the duke of Ormond to Cadiz, and behaved with great gallantry on the attack of the fort of Rodendallo, and the taking thereof greatly contributed to destroying the galleons at Vigo. The year after he embarked with Charles III. king of Spain, landed with him in Portugal, and served in that kingdom till the earl of Peterborough's expedition in the Mediterranean. He was made a brigadier-general, August 25, A. D. 1704, and acquired great honour in the siege of Barcelona, which surrendered to the allies on the ninth of October, N. S. A. D. 1705. He was declared, soon after, envoy extraordinary and plenipotentiary to king Charles III. and in that character arrived with his Catholic majesty at Valencia the second of October, A. D. 1706; and was made major-general of her majesty's forces, Jan. 1, A. D. 1706-7.

In 1708, he was declared commander in chief of the British forces in Spain, and arriving at Barcelona the twenty-ninth of May, N. S. his first enterprize was the reduction of the celebrated port of Mahon in the island of Minorca. He landed on that island the sixteenth of September, 1708, and immediately possessed himself of the town of Mahon, and the whole country soon appeared in his interest: but the castle holding out, great difficulties were found in landing and transporting our heavy artillery, through a country very rocky, rocky, and destitute of beasts of burden; yet with continual labour the artillery was brought up in twelve days, and on the twenty-eighth of September began to batter the castle; and some of the grenadiers getting into the line without orders, general Stanhope took the ordinary guard of the battery, and advanced to that part of the line next to him. The enemy were in so great a consternation at this sudden approach of our troops, that finding we were lodged at the foot of the glacis of the castle, and our main battery ready to play upon it, they, on the morning following, beat a parley, and at five in the afternoon the capitulation was signed for the delivery of it the next morning. The garrison consisted of above one thousand men under arms, part of whom were to be transported in our ships to France, and others into Spain. There was found one hundred cannon, three thousand barrels of powder, and all other necessaries for a good defence. This island is now part of his majesty's possessions of the kingdom of Great-Britain. In 1709, he embarked with eight thousand men for the relief of Alicant, then besieged, and arriving before it in April that year, all the three deck ships were ordered to fire upon the town and batteries of the enemy: but a violent east wind arising forced the ships out for sea-room, and tempestuous weather lasting some days, the enemy took that opportunity to fortify the shore in all places where landing was practicable. Whereupon general Stanhope, observing it was impossible to throw succours of men and provisions into the castle, capitulated for the same on honourable terms, and received the garrison. In 1710, the signal victory at Almenara, July 27, N. S. was, under God, owing to his prudent conduct and valiant deportment, for which the then king Charles returned him particular thanks. On the twentieth of August following, the French and Spaniards were defeated at Saragossa, which was an entire and glorious victory.

On the accession of king George I. he was, for his most faithful services, sworn one of the principal secretaries of state, and of the privy-council, Sept. 24, 1714, four days after his majesty's public entry thro' his city of London. On the seventh of July, A. D. 1716, he embarked with the king for Holland, and waited on his majesty to Hanover; but during his stay at the Hague, he set on foot the treaty with the Abbot de Bois, for a triple alliance between England, France, and Holland; whereby the honour, as well as security of the nation, was maintained, and France obliged, at her own expence, to demolish the port and harbour of Mardyke. He returned to the Hague from Hanover, January 15, A. D. 1716. In April, A. D. 1717, he was constituted first commissioner of the Treasury, and chancellor of the Exchequer; and applying his thoughts both to maintaining the public credit, and to lessen the interest of the debts of the nation, he managed so successfully, that, with the unanimous consent of both houses of parliament, acts were passed for that purpose. And there could not be a greater proof, that his transactions therein were to the satisfaction of the nation in general, than that among so many millions subscribed to the government, there was not five hundred pounds demanded out in money.

For these exemplary and extraordinary services, he was promoted to the dignity of a viscount of Great-Britain, by the style and title of lord viscount Stanhope, of Mahon, in the island of Minorca, as likewise baron Stanhope, of Elvahton, in the county of Derby, by letters patent, bearing date the twelfth of July, A. D. 1717, 3 Geo. I. with limitation, for want of heirs-male, to Thomas Stanhope, of Elvahton, and his brothers Charles, and William.

Which William afterwards became earl of Harrington, &c. as may be seen by inspecting the account of his lordship's family.

The lord viscount Stanhope was again sworn, March 25, A. D. 1718, principal secretary of state, in the room of the earl of Sunderland, who, by mutual agreement, had the place of first commissioner of the Treasury; and, on the fourteenth of April following, was further advanced to the dignity of an earl of this kingdom, by the title of earl Stanhope. On the fourteenth of June ensuing, he set out for Paris, to bring to a conclusion the negotiations for a general peace, the Spaniards at that time having attacked Sicily. He arrived at Paris four days after his departure from London; and his lordship having disposed the French court to an accommodation, signed on July 6, A. D. 1718, he travelled to Madrid for the same end, intent on the public service: and having, on the fourth of August, received a pass from the king of Spain, he proceeded from Bayonne, the next day, on his journey to Madrid. His lordship arrived there on the twelfth of August, and on the fourteenth went to Tresnera, a seat within half a league of the Escorial, where cardinal Alberoni had caused very commodious lodgings to be fitted up for him. The same evening, at night, his lordship, by appointment, went to the cardinal, at the Escorial, and had a long conference with him. But the news of their success in Italy frustrated his negotiations; and his lordship, taking audience of leave of the king and queen of Spain, on the twenty-second of August, set out early the next morning, proposing to reach Bayonne in six days; and from thence, by the way of Paris, to return for England. His lordship arrived at Whitehall, September the twenty-second, in the morning, and proceeded to Hampton-Court, to wait on his majesty.

On the ninth of May, A. D. 1719, his majesty declaring in council his intention of going out of England for a short time, earl Stanhope was appointed one of the lords justices; but attending on his majesty in Germany, he was meditating to obtain a redress of the grievances of the Protestants there, who were under persecution; to which end he brought about an interview between their Britannic and Prussian majesties.

He returned to England with his majesty in November, and on the twenty-third of December, A. D. 1719, set out for the court of France; and returning, set out again for that court, arriving at Paris the twenty-sixth of March, A. D. 1720; and the next day had audience of the duke of Orleans, the regent, on overtures made by the king of Spain. His lordship returned to Whitehall, April the second following, having brought the king of Spain to accede to the quadruple alliance. On the eleventh of June, A. D. 1720, he he was again declared one of the lords justices; and attending the king to Hanover, their Britanic and Prussian majesties, together with the duke of York, did him the honour of dining with him at his own house; where several weighty matters relating to the Protestant interest in the empire were settled, and a foundation laid for effectually redressing the grievances of the Protestants in those parts. After his return to England, whilst he was attending the great affairs of the nation in parliament, he was suddenly seized with a dizziness in his head, on the fourth of February, A. D. 1720-1, and going immediately to his own house by the Cockpit at Whitehall, died the next day in the evening, leaving his lady big with child, who deceased on the twenty-fourth of February, A. D. 1722-3. They were both interred at Chevening, in Kent; and the earl at his funeral, by the king's command, was attended by the horse-grenadiers, two hundred of the life-guards, and two battalions of the foot-guards, all their officers being in cypress mourning scarfs and hatbands, with all other honours due to a great general; his majesty's and the prince's coaches, with those of the nobility, &c. being in the procession.

He married the twenty-fourth of February, A. D. 1712-13, Lucy, daughter of Thomas Pitt, of Stratford, in Wilts, esquire, some time governor of Fort St. George, in the East-Indies, and left issue by her,

1. Philip, now earl Stanhope, and Lucy, a daughter, twins, born the fifteenth of August, A. D. 1714.

2. George Stanhope, born December the twenty-eighth, A. D. 1717, whose baptism was honoured with the presence of George I. as godfather; betaking himself to a military life, he was captain in colonel Duroure's regiment; from whence he was removed on the twenty-third of April, A. D. 1743, to lord Harry Beauclerk's regiment of foot, where he had the rank of lieutenant-colonel. After this he had the command of colonel Ligonier's regiment, with which, both at the battle of Falkirk, and that ever-memorable one of Culloden, he performed the part of a prudent and experienced officer, and essentially served the cause. He died unmarried, A. D. 1754, and was interred at Chevening, in Kent.

3. James Stanhope, born August 19, A. D. 1721, who died April 21, A. D. 1730, twin-born with Catherine, posthumous.

The daughters were,

1. Lucy, already mentioned.

2. Gertrude, born A. D. 1718, who died young.

3. Jane, born October 30, A. D. 1719.

4. Catherine, mentioned above, who died young, posthumous.

(Second, and present Earl.) PHILIP STANHOPE, the eldest son, succeeded to the honours of the family, and marrying in July, 1745, Grizel Hamilton, daughter of John, lord Binny, and sister to Thomas, earl of Haddington, had issue,

1. Philip Stanhope, called lord Mahon, born June 24, A. D. 1746, who died on the sixth of July, A. D. 1763.

2. Charles Stanhope, now called lord Mahon, born August 3, A. D. 1753.

His lordship, the present earl, is fellow of the Royal Society.

(TITLES.) Philip Stanhope, earl, viscount, and baron Stanhope.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Stanhope, of Elvaston, in the county of Derby, and viscount Stanhope, of Mahon, in the island of Minorca, in the Mediterranean, July 12, A. D. 1717, (3 George I.) and earl Stanhope, April 14, A. D. 1718, (4 George I.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, ermine and ruby, a crescent for difference.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a castle, sapphire, with a demi-lion rampant, issuing from out the top thereof, topaz, ducally crowned, ruby, and holding a granade between his paws, firing, proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a talbot, ermine; on the sinister, a wolf, topaz, crowned, as the crest, each charged on the shoulder with a crescent, sapphire.

(MOTTO.) "A Deo & rege."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Chevening, near Seven-oak, in Kent.

SHERARD,

THE COMPLETE ENGLISH PRIMER

Printed by J. Sturges, at the Press of the University of Cambridge, in the Strand, near St. Dunstons Church, in the City of London.

SHERARD, Earl of HARBOUROUGH.

AMONG the many Norman adventurers, attendant upon the Conqueror in his English expedition, we find a nobleman enrolled, called Scirrad, from whom genealogists, in general, agree to deduce the present noble family, which bears the name of Sherard. This gentleman obtained large possessions in the counties of Chester and Lancaster. In history we find nothing memorable of the descendants of this Scirrad for fourteen generations, and records are even silent as to the designation of any one of them to offices in their particular counties. Their names only, in a regular succession, are transmitted down to us; and for them we refer our reader to the genealogical table. We begin our account with

LAURENCE SHERARD, the fourteenth in descent from the noble Norman mentioned above, seated at Stapleford, in Leicestershire, in right of his mother. He was high sheriff for the county of Rutland, in 1438, and for the counties of Leicester and Warwick, in 1443. He married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Woodford, of Sproxton, in Leicestershire, by whom he had issue four sons,

1. Robert Sherard, who succeeded his father at Stapleford, and was high-sheriff for the county of Rutland, in the thirty-first of Henry VI. but dying without issue, the estate devolved upon the next brother,
2. Geoffrey Sherard, of whom presently.
3. Christopher Sherard, of London, died without issue.
4. William Sherard, seated at Saxby, in the county of Rutland, died also without issue.

The second of these sons,

GEOFFREY SHERARD, was thrice sheriff for the county of Rutland, viz. 1468, 1480, and 1483. He married Joyce, daughter of Thomas Ashby of Loseby, in the county of Leicester, esquire, and had issue by her two sons,

1. Thomas Sherard, his successor.
2. Robert Sherard, from whom the Sherrards of Lobthorpe, in Leicestershire, baronets, derived their descent.

THOMAS SHERARD, succeeding his father, was sheriff of the county of Rutland, A. D. 1491, and 1506. He married Margaret, daughter and sole heir to John Helwell, esquire, by which alliance he at length obtained the manors of Tigh and Whiffendine, in the county of Rutland, and Stansby and Grunby, in the county of Lincoln, besides many other lands of inheritance. Their only son,

SIR GEORGE SHERARD, succeeded to the possessions both of father and mother. He resided however at the manor-house of Stapleford, and was sheriff for the county of Rutland, in 1545, and 1562, also for the county of Leicester, A. D. 1567. He married Rohesia, daughter of Sir Thomas Poultney, of Misterton, in the said county, knight, and had issue six daughters.

1. Elizabeth, married to William Smith, of Cunnington, in the county of Lincoln, esquire.
2. Margaret, married to William Durant, of Cottesmor, esquire.
3. Joyce, married to Edward Bensford, esquire.
4. Eleanor, }
5. Margery, } all died unmarried.
6. Dorothy, }

He had also two sons, Francis and Thomas; the eldest of which,

FRANCIS SHERARD, succeeded upon the demise of his father, to the family estates. By his wife Anne, daughter of George Moore, esquire, he had issue one daughter, Rose, married to John Sherard, of Lobthorpe, esquire, and three sons,

1. Sir Philip Sherard, knight, who married Isabel, the daughter of Sir John Harpur, of Swarkston, in the county of Derby; but dying without issue on the twenty-third of April, A. D. 1624, he was buried at Stapleford, and the inheritance devolved upon his brother,
2. Sir William Sherard, who continued the line.

3. George Sherard, died unmarried.

The second son,

SIR WILLIAM SHERARD, was knighted by king James I. on the third of July, A. D. 1622, at Oatlands, and afterward was advanced to the honour of an Irish peerage, by king Charles I. on the tenth of July, in the third year of his reign, by the title of lord Sherard and baron of Le Trim. He married Abigail, daughter and co-heir of Cecil Cave, esquire, and widow of Henry Trefham, esquire, by whom he had issue five sons and four daughters.

The latter were,

1. Anne, }
2. Emeline, } died unmarried.
3. Elizabeth, }
4. Abigail, married to Nicholas Knolles, earl of Banbury.

The sons were,

1. Bennet Sherard, his successor.
2. Philip Sherard, ancestor to the present earl of Harborough.
3. George Sherard, who married Mary, daughter of ——— Crattenbury, or Croppinburghe, from which match the Sherards of Glatton derive their descent, as may be seen in the table.

4. Francis Sherard, } died unmarried.
 5. Henry Sherard, }
 The eldest son,

BENNET SHERARD, succeeded his father as baron of Le Trim, in Ireland. He was elected knight of the shire for the county of Leicester in several parliaments, in the reigns of Charles II. James II. and William III. and on the twenty-eighth of August, A. D. 1690, was appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Rutland, and departed this life A. D. 1700. He married Elizabeth, daughter and heir to Sir Robert Christopher, of Allford, in the county of Lincoln, by whom he had two daughters,

1. Elizabeth, married, first, to Edward Ingram, the second viscount Irwin of Scotland, and, secondly, to John Noel, of Walcote, in the county of Northampton, third son of Baptist Noel, viscount Campden, by Elizabeth, his fourth wife, daughter to Montagu Bertie, earl of Lindsey.

2. Lucy, married to John Manners, second duke of Rutland.

Also two sons, of which the eldest, Christopher, died A. D. 1681; and the youngest,

(First Earl.) BENNET SHERARD, succeeded to his father's honours and estates upon his demise.

On the eleventh of March, A. D. 1699, he was constituted lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Rutland. He was elected knight of the shire for the county of Leicester, in the last parliament called by king William; and in 1713, was returned for the county of Rutland.

On the accession of George I. he was advanced to the dignity of a peer of this realm, by the title of baron of Harborough, in the county of Leicester. The letters patent bear date October the nineteenth, A. D. 1714, and the honour is limited, for want of issue male, to Philip, second son of William, first baron of Le Trim, and his heirs male. On the twelfth of September, A. D. 1715, he was re-appointed lord-lieutenant of the county of Rutland. By letters patent, bearing date October the thirty-first, A. D. 1718, he was advanced to the rank of a viscount, by the stile and title of viscount Sherard, of Stapleford. On the fourth of May next ensuing, others letters patent, issued forth, creating him earl of Harborough, with the same limitations as were annexed to the barony. The same year he was appointed lord-warden and justice in eyre, north of Trent, which post was renewed to him by George II. on the tenth of September, A. D. 1727; and in November following, he was again sworn lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Rutland.

He married Mary, daughter and heir of Sir Henry Calverly, of Ayerholme, in the bishopric of Durham, knight, by whom he had a son, Bennet Sherard, who died an infant.

His lordship dying on the sixteenth of October, A. D. 1732, the honours of the family, according to the limitation of the several patents, for want of issue, devolved upon

(Second Earl.) PHILIP SHERARD, grandson to Philip Sherard, the second son of the first baron of Le Trim. We must speak of the last named PHILIP SHERARD. He was seated at Whiffendine, and received the estate thereabouts as a gift from his father. He was chosen one of the knights of the shire for the county of Rutland, in all the parliaments called by king Charles II. at whose restoration he commanded a troop of horse, raised in the said county, in support of the royal pretensions. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Denton, of Hillersden, in the county of Bucks, and widow of John Pulteney, esquire; and also of William Eure. His issue were three sons and a daughter, Abigail, married to John Pickering, esquire. Of the three sons, Bennet, Philip, and Denton, the youngest died without issue, the second married Ann, daughter and coheir of John Thornton, of Carr Coulston, in the county of Nottingham, doctor of physic. The descendants of this match are carefully entered in the table.

The eldest son,

BENNET SHERARD, upon the demise of his father, A. D. 1695, became seated at Whiffendine. He was knight of the shire for the county of Rutland, in the three first parliaments of king William, and dying A. D. 1701, left issue by his wife Dorothy, daughter of Henry, lord Fairfax, and widow of Robert Stapleton, of Wighill, esquire, (who surviving her husband, died in January, A. D. 1744-5, and was interred near him at Whiffendine) two daughters, Margaret, the wife of John Gilbert, D. D. archbishop of York, and Mary, who died 1764; also a son, Philip Sherard, who, we have observed, succeeding to the honours of the family, became the second earl of Harborough, of whom we are now to treat.

HIS LORDSHIP, while a commoner, was in 1708, chosen knight of the shire for the county of Rutland, and became, as we have observed, in 1732, earl of Harborough, baron of the same place, English honours; also baron of Le Trim, in the kingdom of Ireland. July the seventeenth, A. D. 1733, he was appointed lord-lieutenant of the county of Rutland. He died on the twentieth of July, 1750, and was buried at Whiffendine, having had issue six sons and eight daughters, by his wife Anne, daughter and heir to Sir Nicholas Pedley, of Huntingdon, knight, serjeant at law, which lady died February the sixteenth, A. D. 1749-50.

The daughters were,

1. Elizabeth, born February the third, A. D. 1705.
2. Dorothy, born November the tenth, A. D. 1707, married to the Reverend James Torkington, rector of King's Rippon, and Little Stewkley, in Huntingdonshire, son to James Torkington, of Great Stewkley, esquire.
3. Lucy, born December the fourth, A. D. 1710.
4. Ann, born April the twenty-sixth, A. D. 1712, who died in 1714.
5. Susannah, born January the sixteenth, A. D. 1713-14, who died in December, 1765, unmarried.
6. Ursula, born October the second, A. D. 1717, who died September the first, A. D. 1745, unmarried.
7. Anne, born February the twenty-second,

A. D.

A. D. 1722-3, who died May the nineteenth, A. D. 1724.

8. Catherine, born May the seventeenth, A. D. 1730, who died on the third of August following.

The sons were,
1. Bennet Sherard, successor to the honours of the family.

2. John Sherard, born May the fifteenth, A. D. 1713, who was appointed lieutenant of the yeomen of the guards, in May, 1736. He died on the twenty-fifth of April, A. D. 1746, unmarried.

3. Philip Sherard, born May the fifth, A. D. 1716, who died an infant.

4. Robert Sherard, born October the twenty-first, A. D. 1719, who was fellow of Merton college, in Oxford. He married Catherine, daughter of Edward Hearst, esquire, which lady died on the fifth of February, 1765.

5. Daniel Sherard, born June the seventeenth, A. D. 1722, who died unmarried.

6. Philip Sherard, born March the first, A. D. 1726, who is a colonel and major in the guards, having obtained the former rank on the nineteenth of February, A. D. 1762.

The eldest son,

(Third, and present Earl.) BENNET SHERARD, born August 21, 1709, became earl of Harborough, &c.

On the twenty-seventh of June, A. D. 1738, his lordship married, first, Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Ralph, earl Verney, of the kingdom of Ireland, by whom he had no issue.

This lady dying in June, 1756, was buried at Stapleford; and his lordship married, secondly, on the second of July, A. D. 1757, Frances, daughter of William Noel, esquire, one of the judges of the court of Common-Pleas; and by her, who died on the thirteenth of September, A. D. 1760, and was buried at Stapleford, had issue a daughter, named Frances, born April the twelfth, A. D. 1759.

In April, 1761, his lordship married, thirdly, Margaret, daughter of Thomas Hill, esquire, and by her, who died on the first of February, A. D. 1767, has issue an only son, (twin with a daughter still-born) born January the twenty-third, A. D. 1767.

(TITLES.) Bennet Sherard, earl of Harborough, baron of Harborough, in England, and baron of Le Trim, in Ireland.

(CREATIONS.) Baron of Harborough, in the county of Leicester, October the nineteenth, A. D. 1714, (1 George I.) and earl of the same place, May the fourth, A. D. 1719, (5 George I.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, a chevron between three torseaux, ruby.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, topaz, a peacock's tail erect, proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two rams, pearl, armed and unguled, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Hostis honoris invidia."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Stapleford, in the county of Leicester, near Melton Mowbray, and at Whiffendine, in the county of Rutland.

PARKER, Earl of MACCLESFIELD.

THIS noble family is a younger branch of the Parkers of Norton-Lees, in the county of Derby; and they owe their origin (as far as we can trace them) to the same common ancestor,

Thomas Parker, seated at Bulwell, a man of great possessions, which received an increase by marriage. With his wife, Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Adam de Gotham, son of Thomas de Gotham of Lees, son of Roger de Gotham, of Lees, near Norton, in the county of Derby, he had the manor of what is now called Norton-Lees, in that county. Their issue were three sons,

1. Robert Parker.
2. Thomas Parker, seated at Sprotborough, in Yorkshire, and at Little-Newton.

3. William Parker, seated at Shirland, in the same county.

Robert Parker, the eldest son, succeeded to Norton-Lees, &c. and marrying Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Birley, of Barnes, had issue four daughters;

1. Agnes, married first to ——— Bostock; secondly to ——— Coates.

2. Alice, married to ——— Baldwin, of Aquilate, in Shropshire.

3. ———, married to Mr. Peryn.

4. ———, married to James Maver, of Barley.

Also a son and successor, John Parker, who was of Norton-Lees, and at full age, A. D. 1434.

He married Ellen, daughter of Roger North, of Walkringham, in Nottinghamshire; by whom he had issue, Margaret, Agnes, Barlow, and two other daughters. The eldest of these married P. Selicke, of Haselbarton, in Derbyshire. The second married a gentleman, gentleman, seated at Woodhouse; and the rest died unmarried. Also five sons;

1. John Parker, seated at Norton-Lees, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Ralph Eyre, of Alfreton, in Derbyshire; from which match descended a lineal succession of owners of the ancient family seat.

2. Thomas Parker, ancestor to the three earls of Macclesfield.

3. Robert Parker.

4. Henry Parker, who was groom of the bed-chamber to king Henry VIII. died without issue.

5. William Parker, seated at Luton, in Bedfordshire. He was sewer to Henry VIII. and married Margaret, daughter to John Wroth, of Durance, in Enfield, Middlesex, by whom he had an only daughter, Barbara, married to John Wickham, of Enfield aforesaid.

The second son,

THOMAS PARKER, married a lady of his own name, probably a kinswoman from the elder branch of the family, seated at Norton-Lees.

His son,

WILLIAM PARKER, seated at Ashburn, in the county of Derby, was the father of three sons; George, Rowland, and Edward; the two youngest died unmarried; and the eldest,

GEORGE PARKER, married Barbara, daughter of — Birley, esquire; and had issue an only son, WILLIAM PARKER, seated at Parwick, in the county of Derby, in right of his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Humphry Wilton, of Parwick, aforesaid. He had two sons, of which the younger, Thomas Parker, was seated at Botesham, in the county of Cambridge, and married Elizabeth, daughter of — Hobson, of the same county.

The eldest son,

GEORGE PARKER, was seated at Park-Hall, in Staffordshire. By his wife, Grace, daughter of Hugh Bateman, of Hartington, in Derbyshire, he had issue two sons, William and Thomas. The eldest married Bridget, daughter of James Carrier, of Helpston, in the county of Northampton, esquire.

The second son,

THOMAS PARKER, was seated at Leche, in Staffordshire; and by his wife, Anne, daughter and coheir of Robert Venables, of Winckham, in Derbyshire, had an only son, (First Earl.) THOMAS PARKER, born at Leche, in 1667; and having finished the academical part of his education at Trinity-College, in Cambridge, he applied himself to the study of the law, in which he made a quick progress; and was early appointed council to queen Ann. On the eighth of June, A. D. 1705, he was called to the degree of serjeant; and was the same day appointed serjeant to her majesty. On the fifteenth of March, A. D. 1709-10, he was constituted lord chief justice of the King's Bench; and on the demise of the queen, was one of the lords justices appointed till the arrival of her royal successor, George I. who, in the second year of his reign, on the nineteenth of March, A. D. 1715, created him a baron of this kingdom, by the title and title of baron Parker, of Macclesfield, in the county of Chester.

On the twentieth of May, A. D. 1718, his lordship was appointed lord chancellor of Great-Britain; and on the fourteenth was sworn of the privy-council. While he was in this important post, he was on the ninth of May, A. D. 1719, constituted one of the lords justices during the absence of his royal master from these dominions; and on the fourth of June following was appointed custos rotulorum of the county of Warwick; and on the nineteenth of October, that same year, was appointed custos rotulorum for the county of Worcester.

Letters patent issued forth from the crown on the fifth of November, A. D. 1721, creating his lordship viscount Parker, of Ewelme, in Oxfordshire, and earl of Macclesfield, in the county of Chester, in tail male remainder to hold the dignities of baroness of Macclesfield, viscountess Parker, of Ewelme, and countess of Macclesfield, to Elizabeth, his daughter, wife of William Heathcote, esquire, (afterwards Sir William Heathcote, of Hursley, Hants, baronet) and to the heirs male of her body.

He was succeeded in his office as lord chancellor in 1725, by Peter King, lord king, and dying on the twenty-eighth of April, A. D. 1732, was buried at Sherborne, in Oxfordshire.

By his wife Janet, daughter and coheir of Charles Carrier, of Wirkworth, in Derbyshire, who died August 23, A. D. 1733, he had issue a daughter, Elizabeth, already mentioned; and a son and successor, (Second Earl.) GEORGE PARKER, who in the life-time of his father was constituted one of the tellers of the Exchequer for life.

This nobleman had a principal share in carrying through the act for the alteration of the title; and was upon account of his great learning complimented with admission as a member in several universities; and on the thirtieth of November, A. D. 1752, was chosen president of the Royal Society.

On the eighteenth of September, A. D. 1722, he married, Mary, daughter and coheir of Ralph Lane, esquire, an eminent Turkey merchant, descended from William Lane, of Glendon, esquire, and Anne his wife, daughter and heir to John Isham, of Witchley, in Northamptonshire; and by her, who died June 4, A. D. 1553, had issue two sons,

1. Thomas Parker.

2. George Lane Parker, born September 6, A. D. 1724, who has ranked as colonel in the army since the nineteenth of February, A. D. 1762.

His lordship married, secondly, in 1757, Dorothy, daughter of — Nisbet, by whom he had no issue; and departing this life on the eighteenth of March, A. D. 1764, was buried at Sherborne; and was succeeded in his honours, &c. by his eldest son, (Third and present Earl.) THOMAS PARKER, born October 12, A. D. 1723, who, in 1747, was chosen member of parliament for Newcastle under Line; and in 1754, being returned knight of the shire for the county of Oxford, was voted duly elected in 1755; and in the present parliament served for Rochester till his accession to the peerage.

On the twelfth of December, A. D. 1749, he married Mary, eldest daughter of Sir William Heathcote, of Hursley, in the county of Northampton, thampton, baronet, by whom he has issue two sons,

1. George Parker, called lord Parker, born February 24, 1755.

2. Thomas Parker.

And two daughters,

1. Elizabeth, born June 29, 1751.

2. Mary, born March 16, 1752.

(TITLES.) Thomas Parker, earl of Macclesfield, viscount Parker, and baron Parker, of Macclesfield.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Parker, of Macclesfield, in the county of Chester, March 9, A. D. 1715-16, (2 George I.) viscount Parker, of Ewelme, in the county of Oxford, and earl of Macclesfield, November 15, A. D. 1721, (7 George I.)

(ARMS.) Ruby, a chevron between three leopards faces, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a leopard's head erased and guardant, topaz, ducally gorged, ruby.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two leopards regardant, proper, each gorged, as the crest.

(MOTTO.) "Sapere aude."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Sherborne castle, in Oxfordshire.

FERMOR, Earl of POMFRET.

BY tradition we are informed, that the male line of this noble family is of Welch extraction, and that their name was Ricards: one of whom, marrying the daughter and heir of the family of Fermor, assumed that surname, or rather blended that and his own together; we have sufficient evidence of this with regard to the son of this marriage,

THOMAS FERMOR, who was seated at Whitney, in the county of Oxford, in the reign of Henry VI. for in his will, dated September 9, A. D. 1485, he is wrote Thomas Ricards, alias Fermor, senior. He died that year, and was buried at Whitney. He married two wives; by Alice, his first lady, he had issue a son, Laurence Fermor, seated at Minster Lovel, in Oxfordshire, whose issue were, a son, William, with whom that male line ended; and a daughter, Mary, married to Thomas Bonolt, esquire.

By his second wife, Emmote, daughter and heir of Simkin Hervey, esquire, and widow of Henry Waynman, who survived him, he had issue two sons.

1. Sir Richard Fermor, who continued the line, and was seated at Easton Neston, in the county of Northampton.

2. William Fermor, who was seated at Somerton, in Oxfordshire; and having married four wives, at length died without issue, and was interred on the south side of the chancel of Somerton church, under a great raised monument of grey marble, whereon are the portraitures of a gentleman and his wife in brass, and under them this inscription:

"Here lyeth buried Mr. William Fermour, Esq; whych was born of this Towne and Patrone of this Church, and also Clarke of the Crowne in the King's Bench in King Henry the 7th and King Henry the 8th Dayes; whyche died the 20th Day of 7^{ber}, in the Year of our Lord God a MCCCCCLII; and also here lyeth Mestres Elizabeth Fermour, his last Wyffe, which was the Daughter of S^r Will^m Norryffe, Knt. upon whose and all Christene Soules Ihu have mercy."

Sir RICHARD FERMOR, having been bred a merchant of the staple of Calais, raised a noble fortune; but being a very zealous Romanist, and not complying with the frequent alterations in religion, introduced by king Henry VIII. he changed his hospitality into charity for those of his opinion, and fell under that king's heavy displeasure, for conveying relief to one Nicholas Thayne, formerly his confessor, and at that time a close prisoner in the gaol of Buckingham, although nothing was ever legally proved against him, except that he had sent him eight-pence and a couple of shirts. But his own great wealth, and his false friend Cromwell, earl of Essex, the king's vicar-general, were powerful incentives to his ruin; and being found guilty of a præmunire, his whole estate, both real and personal, was seized on for the king's use, and executed with such strictness and severity, that nothing was left him or his family.

Hall, in his life of Henry VIII. writes, that he was a rich and wealthy man, and of good estimation in the city; but for relieving certain traitorous persons, who denied the king's supremacy, he was committed to the Marshalsea, in July, 32 Henry VIII. and after, in Westminster-Hall, was arraigned, and attainted in a præmunire, and lost all his estate.

The good old man, when he was stript of all he had, retired to a village, called Wapenham, in sight of his former habitation, and lived in the parsonage-house there; the advowson of which had been in his gift, and the parson thereof presented by him. There he passed several years with a most consummate piety, and intire resignation, till the fourth year of King Edward VI.

In the time of his prosperity he had in his family, according to the custom of the age, a servant, Will Somers, who, by his witty or frothy discourses, passed for his jester; and afterwards served the king himself in the same office and capacity. This man remembering, with some gratitude, his first master, and having admission to the king at all times and places, especially when sick, melancholy, and towards his end, let fall some lucky words, which awakened the king's conscience, so as at least to endeavour a restitution; and accordingly he gave immediate orders about it: but being prevented by death, it was never effectually performed till the fourth year of king Edward VI. by letters-patent, bearing that date; but so miserably lopt and torn, by the several grants and sales made by the crown during the afore said interval, that what he did obtain was not one-third of what he had before possessed. Those lands restored to him were the lordships and "manors of Towcettour, and Efton-Neston, the advowsons of the rectories of Coldhigham, and of the vicarage of Efton-Neston, the hundred of Wilmersley, with very large privileges thereto belonging, and several houses in Cotton-End, in the county of Northampton. The lordship and manor of Offley St. Legers, in the county of Hereford; the lordship and manor of Granno, in the county of Worcester; the lordships and manors of Lutonhoe, and the hermitage lands in Luton, and Runtisford farm, in Runtisford, in the county of Bedford." Yet king Edward, to make some compensation, granted by the same charter, to Richard Fermor, and his heirs, several other lordships, manors, lands, and tenements, viz. the lordships and manors of Corsecombe, Holstocke, Nether-stocke, and the advowson of the rectory of Corsecombe, in the county of Dorset; the manor of Mudfort, in the county of Somerset; the house and seat of the then late dissolved priory of Swaderfly, and divers woods and lands thereto belonging; the manor of Hide in Rode, and several lands in Rode in Ashen, in the county of Northampton, the manor of Newport Pound; and the advowson of the rectory and church of Rawrith, in the county of Essex, &c. Yet all this was but a small compensation for the great loss he had sustained.

He therefore being repossessed of part of his estate, and of some addition, as afore said, returned to his mansion-house at Easton-Neston, where, about three years after, he departed this life, on the seventeenth of January, A. D. 1552, 7 Edward VI. It is further said of him, that having some foreknowledge of his own death, he invited on that very day many of his friends and neighbours, and taking leave of them, retired to his devotions, and was found dead in that posture, and afterwards buried on the north side of the chancel of the parish church of Easton-Neston, under a grey marble tomb. Anne, his wife, survived him, who was daughter to Sir William Brown, lord-mayor of London, by whom he had five sons and five daughters;

1. Sir John Fermor, hereafter-mentioned.

2. William Fermor, } died infants.

3. George Fermor, }

4. Thomas Fermor, who inherited the estate of William, his uncle, at Somerton; was one of the members for Chiping Wicomb, in the parliament held in 5 Elizabeth, and makes his will, on the fifteenth of June, A. D. 1580, 22 Elizabeth, whereby he orders his body to be buried in the church of Somerton, as near to the body of Bridget, his late wife, as conveniently may be; and that his executors, within three years after his death, cause to be erected such a tomb of alabaster to be set over the bodies of him and his late wife, as they shall think convenient. He was a benefactor to Somerton, and Chinnor, in Oxfordshire, Bridgnorth and Asteley, in Shropshire, and Wapeham, in Northamptonshire. Also leaves his estate to his son Richard Fermor, and his daughter Mary; and for default of issue, to his nephew, Nicholas Fermor, except the manors of Fritwell and Ganno, which he wills, if they decease without issue, to Jerome Fermor, his brother, according to the gift of his uncle, William Fermor, of Somerton. It likewise appears that he founded a school at Somerton, with provision for a schoolmaster, and that Nicholas Fermor, his nephew, was son of Jerome, his brother. According to his will, his executors erected, in the chapel of Somerton church, a raised monument of white marble, whereon lies his effigies in armour, and the effigies of his wife, both on their backs, and round the verge is this inscription:

Thomæ Farmer, Armigero, viro animi magnitudine contra Hostes, beneficiâ erga Doctos admirabili, Domino hujus territorii benignissimo, & novæ Scholæ Fundatori optimo, in perpetuam sui, suæq; conjugis, Brigittæ, fœminæ lectissimæ, memoriam, ex Testamento executores sui hoc monumentum flentes erexerunt. Obiit vero Anno Domini Millesimo quingentesimo octogesimo, die Augusti octavo.

5. Jerome Fermor, fifth son of Sir Richard Fermor, died on the seventh of September, A. D. 1602, and, together with Jane his wife, lies buried at Towcester, in Northamptonshire.

The five daughters were,

1. Joan, first married to Robert Wilford of the county of Kent, esquire, and after to Sir John Mordant, of Thornton, in Essex, knight.

2. Anne, espoused to William Lucy, of Charlecote in Warwickshire, esquire.

3. Elizabeth, to Thomas Lovet, of Astwell, in Northamptonshire, esquire.

4. Ursula, to Richard, Fynes, of Broughton, in Oxfordshire, esquire, father to Richard, lord Say and Sele; and

5. Mary, wedded to Sir Richard Knightley, of Fausley, in Northamptonshire, knight.

SIR JOHN FERMOR, eldest son and heir of Sir Richard Fermor, was made one of the knights of the Carpet, with the lord Gerrard, the lord Borough, the lord Dudley, and others of distinction, at Westminster, on the second of October, the day after the coronation of queen Mary, in her presence, under the cloth of state, by the earl of Arundel, who had her majesty's commission to execute that honour. He was in that reign chosen knight knight of the shire for the county of Northampton in two parliaments; and was sheriff of the county in the fourth and fifth of Philip and Mary. He died on the twelfth of December, A. D. 1571, at little St. Bartholomew's, in London, and from thence was brought to his house at Easton-Neston, and buried in the parish church there on Thursday the twentieth of the same month, with great solemnity, the officers of arms attending his funeral. He married Maud, daughter of Nicholas Vaux, knight, lord Vaux, of Harrowden, (who died before him, on the fourteenth of April, A. D. 1569,) and by her had issue four sons,

1. George Fermor, esquire.

2. Nicholas, who died unmarried.

3. Richard, who married Dionysia, daughter of Robert Tanfield, of Burford, in Oxfordshire, esquire, by whom he had an only daughter, Catherine, married first Philip Godard, esquire; and secondly Sir Richard Waynman, of Tame, in Oxfordshire, knight.

4. Arthur Fermor.

Also three daughters,

1. Catharine, married to Michael Poultney, esquire; and secondly to Sir Henry Darcy, knight.

2. Anne, wedded to Edward Leigh, of Shawel, in Leicestershire, esquire; and

3. Mary, married to Sir Thomas Lucas, of St. John's, in Colchester, in the county of Essex, knight.

SIR GEORGE FERMOR, mentioned as the eldest son, who succeeded his father, after having spent his youth in the Netherlands, under William, prince of Orange, retired to his house at Easton, where he lived several years in great splendor and hospitality; and on the eleventh of June, A. D. 1603, had the honour of entertaining king James I. and his queen, at Easton, the very first time they ever met in England, where he gave both courts a very magnificent entertainment; and the king, as Philpot informs us in his catalogue of knights, before his departure, conferred the honour of knighthood on his son and heir, Sir Hatton Fermor, together with nine other gentlemen.

He died in a good old age on the first of December, A. D. 1612; and on the fourteenth of January following was buried in the chancel of Easton-Neston church, with great solemnity; and a noble tomb of alabaster is erected to his memory.

He married Mary, daughter and heir of Thomas Curson, of Addington, in Bucks; and of Water-Pery, in Oxfordshire, esquire. By this lady, who was god daughter, and maid of honour to queen Mary, and who survived him, he had issue seven sons and eight daughters; of which the latter were,

1. Agnes, who became the wife of Sir Richard Waynman, of Thame-Park, in the county of Oxford; afterwards created viscount Wenman, in Ireland.

2. Elizabeth, married first to Sir William Stratford, of Blatherwick, in Northamptonshire; and, secondly, to Sir Thomas Chamberlain, of Oxfordshire, one of the justices of the King's-Bench, and chief justice of Chester.

3. Jane, married to Sir John Killigrew, of Fal-mouth-castle, and of Arwanac, in Cornwall.

4. Catherine, married to William Hobby, of Hales, in Gloucestershire, esquire.

5. Mary, married first to James Creighton, lord Sanquhar, in Scotland; and, secondly, to Barnaby Obrien, second son of the earl of Thomond, in Ireland.

6. N. N.

7. N. N.

8. N. N.

The sons were,

1. Edward Fermor, who died unmarried in the life-time of his father.

2. Hatton Fermor, of whom hereafter.

3. Robert Fermor, who was slain in Ireland, without issue.

4. George Fermor,

5. Richard Fermor,

6. Devereux Fermor,

7. William Fermor,

The second but eldest surviving son,

SIR HATTON FERMOR, succeeded his father. He was knighted, as has already been mentioned; and passing his time chiefly at Easton-Neston, we find him no otherwise concerned in public life than that as sheriff for the county of Northampton, A. D. 1618. He married first Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Edmund Anderson, lord chief justice of the Common-pleas; but this lady dying without issue, he married, secondly, Anne, daughter of Sir William Cockaine, knight, lord-mayor of London, by whom he had five sons, and six daughters.

The latter were,

1. Mary, the wife of Sir Charles Compton, second son to Spencer, earl of Northampton.

2. Anne, married Jonathan Cope, of Rawton-Abby, in Staffordshire, grandfather to Sir Jonathan Cope, of Brewern, in Oxfordshire, baronet.

3. Arabella,

4. Elizabeth,

5. Catherine, died an infant.

6. Catherine, married to Sir John Shuckburgh, of Shuckburgh, in Warwickshire, baronet, grandfather to Sir Stukeley Shuckburgh; and, secondly, to Sir Roger Norwich, of Brampton, in the county of Northampton, baronet.

The sons were,

1. William Fermor, his successor.

2. Hatton Fermor, major of horse to the prince of Wales, who was slain at Culham Bridge, near Oxford, fighting in the cause of Charles I. in 1644, then aged only nineteen years.

3. Charles Fermor,

4. George Fermor,

5. Richard Fermor,

The father of these children had the misfortune to fall out of his coach, and break his leg, which accident terminated in his death, A. D. 1640. He was buried at Easton-Neston, near his ancestors, under a tomb of black and white marble, erected by his wife Anne, who survived him twenty-five years; and is reported to have, with a manly courage and constancy, sustained as well the hardships of imprisonment, as fines and confiscations to the last of those unhappy civil commotions.

The eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM FERMOR, succeeded his father, and on the sixth of September, A. D. 1641, was,

by

by letters patent, created a baronet. Notwithstanding his youth, he was honoured with the command of a troop of horse, by king Charles I. made one of the privy-chamber to the prince, his son, and served them both to the last with unshaken loyalty and honour; a circumstance that could not but draw upon him the censure of Oliver Cromwell and his adherents, who inflicted many hardships on him, and, amongst others, obliged him to compound for his estate for fourteen hundred pounds. Living however to see the restoration, he was elected member for the town of Brackley, in that parliament which met at Westminster, on the eighth of May, A. D. 1661. He was nominated a knight of the Bath, and in performing the ceremonies of that most honourable order, caught the small-pox, which put a period to his life, on the fourteenth of May, A. D. 1661.

He married Mary, daughter of Hugh Perry, and widow of Henry Noel, esquire, second son of Edward, viscount Campden; and by this lady, (venerable for her piety and virtue, and a faithful sharer of all his fortunes) who surviving him, died A. D. 1670, he had issue six sons and two daughters; Mary, who died young, and Anne, (posthumous) who died unmarried in June, 1740.

1. Hatton Fermor, who died an infant.
2. Sir William Fermor, successor to his father.
3. Henry Fermor,
4. George Fermor,
5. Richard Fermor,
6. John Fermor, died an infant.

The second son,

(First Lord.) Sir WILLIAM FERMOR, succeeded his father as baronet, and by letters patent, bearing date the twelfth of April, A. D. 1692, was created baron Lempster, or Leominster.

This nobleman rebuilt the antient seat of his family, (Easton-Neston) a regular and fair pile of building, of freestone, and added pleasant gardens and plantations, adorning the whole with a magnificent, costly, and well chosen collection of ancient statues of white marble, Greek, Roman and Egyptian.

He married three wives; first, Jane, daughter of Andrew Barker, of Fairford, in Gloucestershire, by whom he had issue an only daughter, Elizabeth, who died unmarried in 1705.

He married, secondly, Catherine, eldest daughter to John, third earl Powlet, by whom also he had issue an only daughter, Catherine, who married Sir John Wodehouse, of Kimberley, in Norfolk, baronet, by whom she had Sir Armine Wodehouse, baronet, knight of the shire for Norfolk. She died October 24, A. D. 1729.

Thirdly, he married Sophia, daughter of Thomas, duke of Leeds, and widow of Donatus, lord O'Brien, grandson to Henry, earl of Thomond, in Ireland, by whom he had issue two sons, Thomas and William, the latter born March 13, 1703, and four daughters,

1. Sophia, baptized June 14, A. D. 1693, died young.
2. Catherine, born A. D. 1694, died unmarried, April 11, A. D. 1719.
3. Bridget, born A. D. 1696, died unmarried.
4. Matilda, born December 23, A. D. 1699, married to Edward Conyers, of Copthall, in Essex, to whom she bore issue John Conyers, esquire. She died in February, 1740.

His lordship dying on the seventh of December, A. D. 1711, was interred at Easton-Neston, in Northamptonshire, and the honours of the family devolved upon the eldest son, (First Earl.) THOMAS FERMOR, baptized March 23, A. D. 1697-8, who was raised to the dignity of an earl, by letters patent, bearing date December 27, A. D. 1721, creating him earl of Pontefract or Pomfret. On the twenty-seventh of May, 1725, he was elected knight of the Bath; and on the twenty-seventh of September following, was appointed master of the horse to queen Caroline. In January, 1751, he was constituted ranger and keeper of St. James's and Hyde-Parks.

He married, on the fourteenth of July, A. D. 1720, Henrietta Louisa, only daughter and heir to John, lord Jefferies, baron of Wem, by Charlotte Herbert, his wife, only daughter and heir to Philip, seventh earl of Pembroke. By this lady, who was lady of the bedchamber to the consort of our late king, both before and after her accession to the title of queen, he had issue four sons and six daughters.

The latter were,

1. Sophia, born May 29, A. D. 1721, married in April, 1744, John, the late earl Granville, and was his lordship's second wife. She died A. D. 1745.

2. Charlotte, born February 16, A. D. 1724-5, married in August, 1746, to William Finch, esq; brother to the earl of Winchilsea.

3. Henrietta, born September 19, A. D. 1727, married January 13, A. D. 1746-7, to John Conyers, esquire, of Copthall, in Essex.

4. Juliana, born May 21, A. D. 1729, married in August, 1751, to Thomas Penn, of Braywick, in Berkshire, one of the proprietors of Pennsylvania.

5. Louisa, born October 23, A. D. 1731.

6. Anne, born May 21, A. D. 1733, married July, A. D. 1754, to Thomas Dawson, esquire.

The sons were,

1. George Fermor, his successor.
2. William Fermor, born 1723, who was captain of a man of war, and died A. D. 1744.
3. John Fermor, born August 3, A. D. 1726, who died A. D. 1729.
4. Thomas Fermor, born October 29, A. D. 1734, who died young.

The countess of Pomfret, mother of these children, surviving her husband, died in 1762. This lady bereaved the mansion-house at Easton-Neston of the most valuable part of its furniture, by presenting to the university of Oxford the choice collection of marble statues already mentioned, a kind of donation manifestly injurious, if we consider her descendants, and no less ostentatious, if we reflect by whom and to whom it was made: an action that will perpetuate her memory in her own family, and in that learned seminary, although we may venture to prophecy, it will affect each differently.

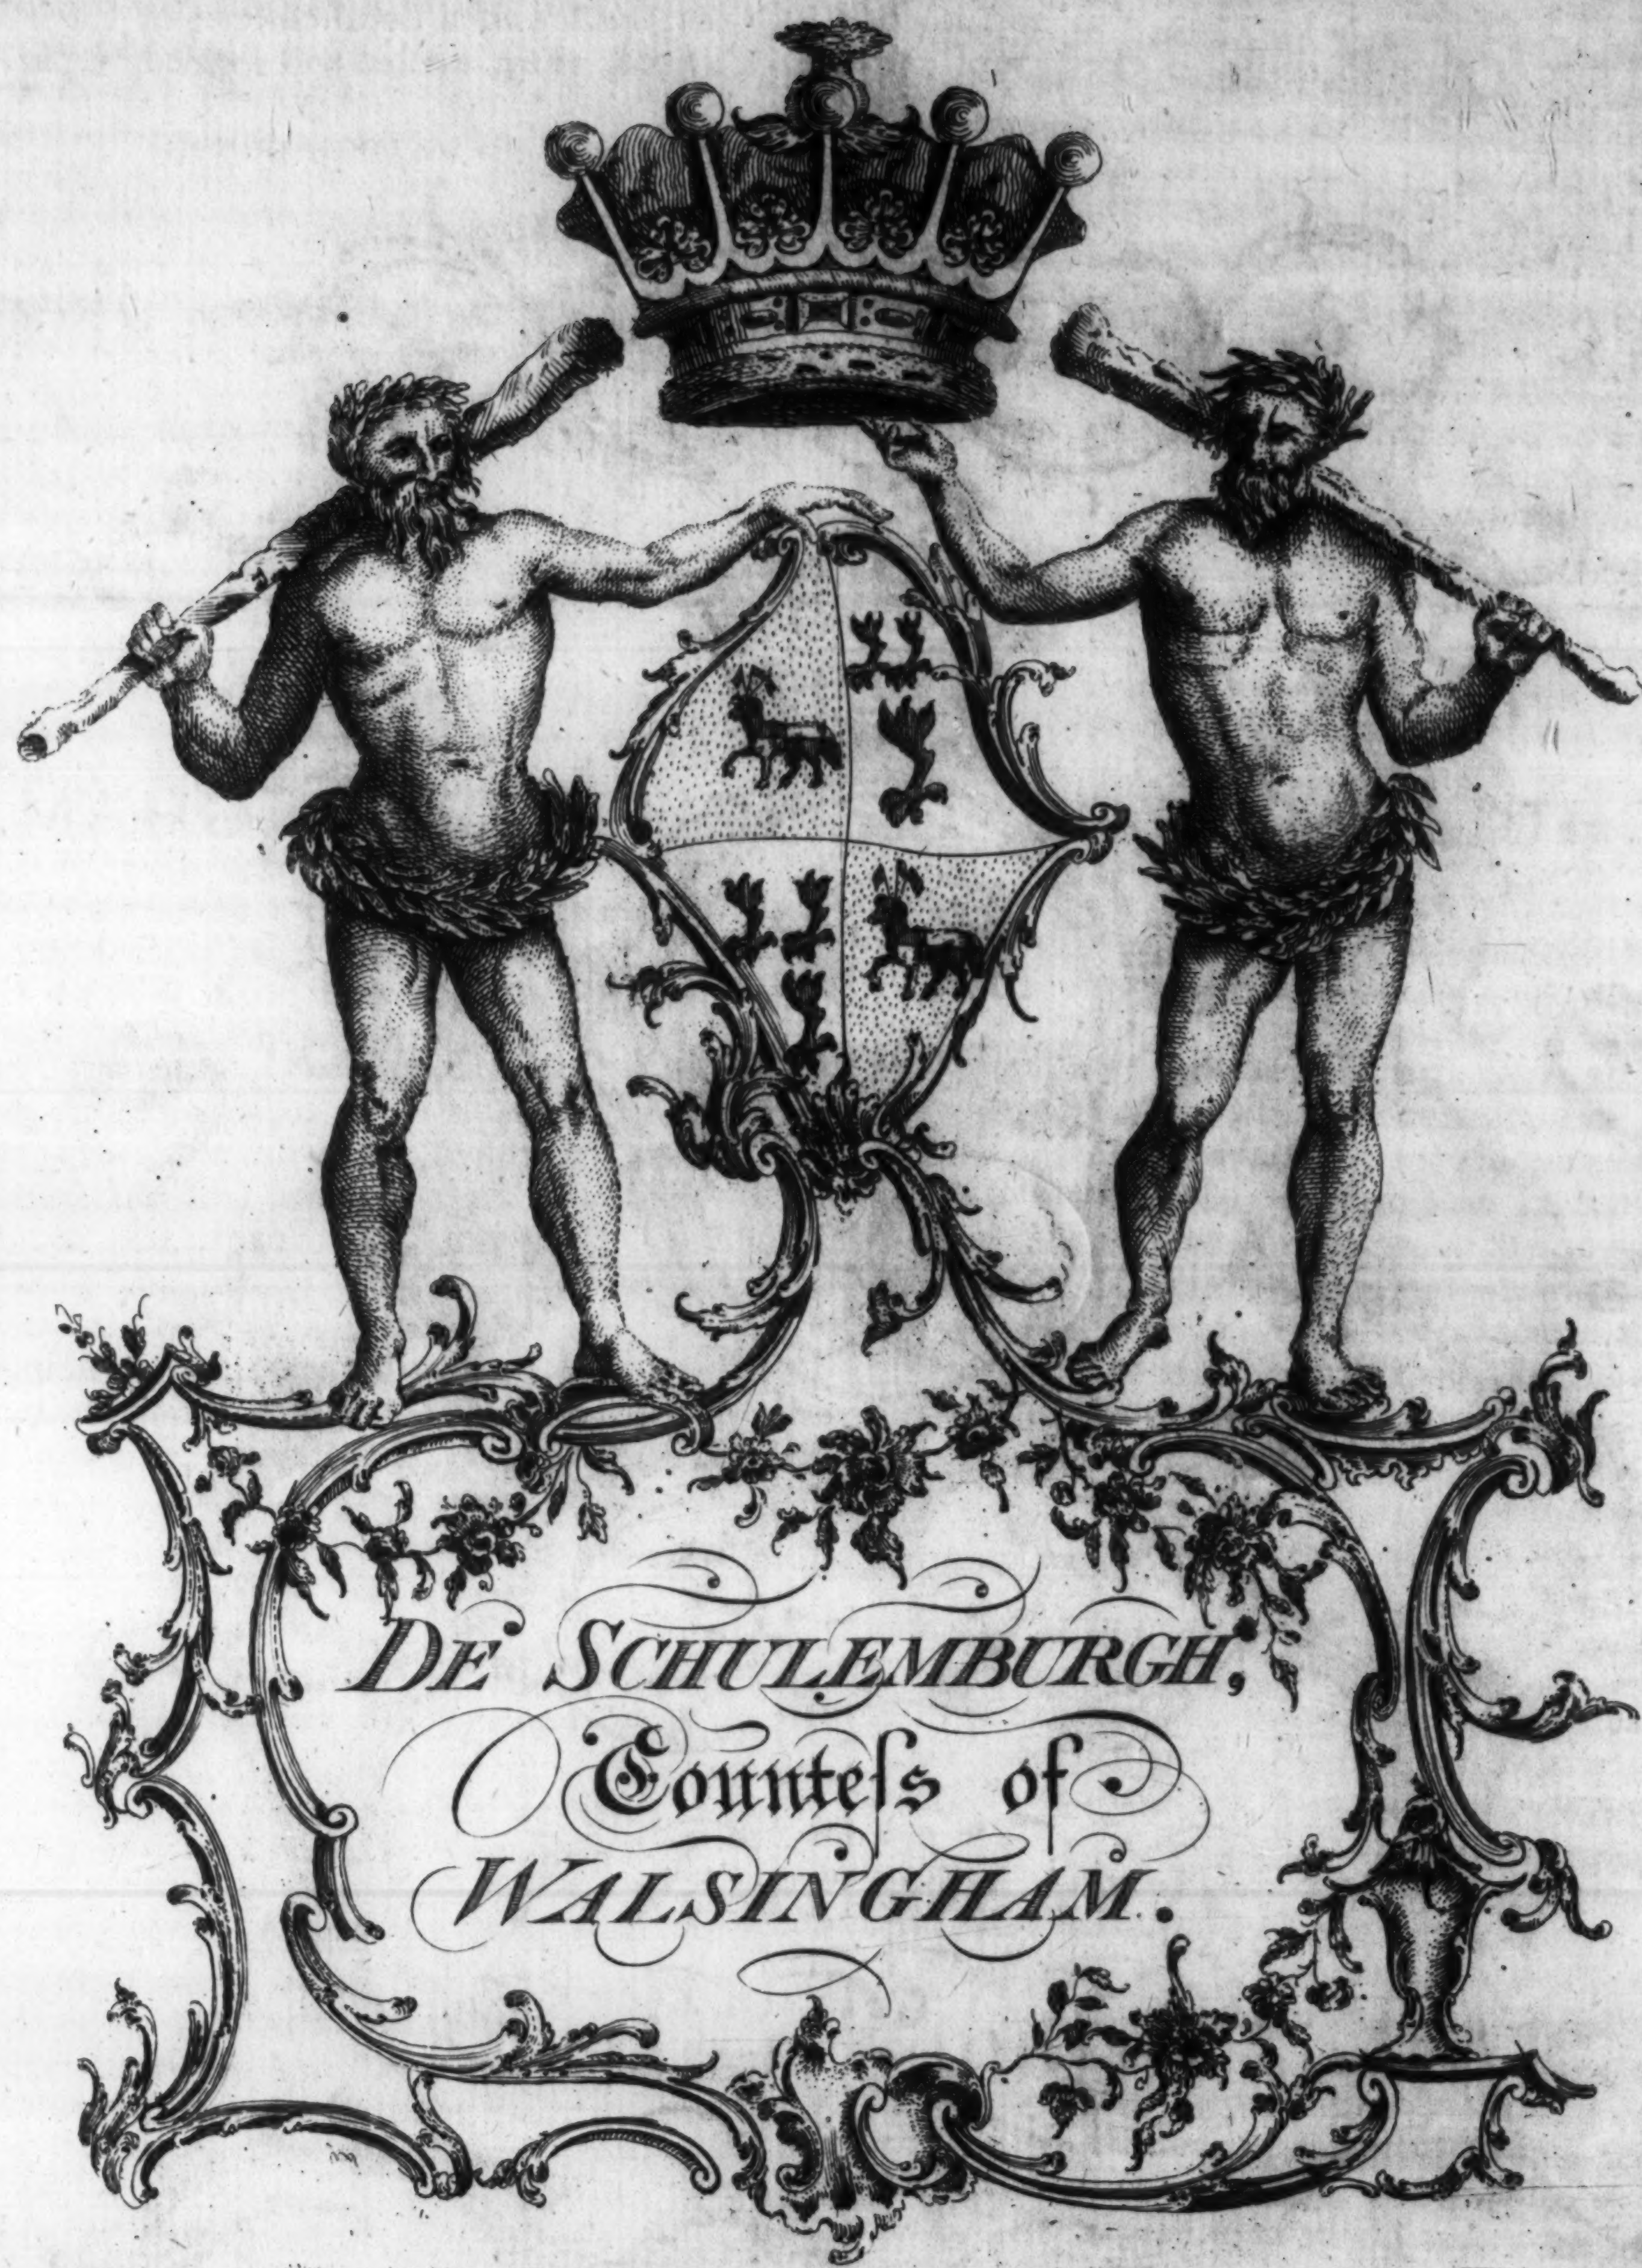

His lordship departing this life, on the eighth of July, A. D. 1753, was interred at Easton-Neston, and in his honours succeeded by his eldest son, (Second

(Second Earl.) GEORGE FERMOR, born June 21, A. D. 1722, who married about the end of April, A. D. 1764, Anna Maria, only daughter and heir of ——— Draycote, by whom he has issue one daughter, Charlotte, born November 25, A. D. 1765.

His lordship was appointed in 1762, lord of the bedchamber to his present majesty, and on the eighth of February, A. D. 1763, was appointed to the office or place of ranger or keeper of the Little Park at Windsor.

(TITLES.) George Fermor, earl of Pomfret, baron Lempster, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, September 6, A. D. 1641, (17 Charles I.) baron of Lempster or Leominster, in the county of Hereford, April 12, A. D. 1692, (4 William and Mary) and earl of Pomfret, alias Pontefract, in the county of York, December 27, A. D. 1721, (8 George I.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, a fess, diamond between three lions heads erased, ruby.

(CREST.) Out of a ducal coronet of the last, a cock's head, ruby, crested and wattled, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two lions, proper.

(MOTTO.) "Hora e sempre."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Easton-Neston, in Northamptonshire.

SCHULEMBURGH, Countess of WALSINGHAM.

MELOSINA DE SCHULEMBURGH, niece to her grace the late duchess of Kendal, was created countess of Walsingham, in the county of Norfolk, and baroness of Aldborough, in the county of York, by letters patent, bearing date, April the tenth, A. D. 1722, (8 George I.) On the fifth of September, A. D. 1733, she was married to Philip Dormer Stanhope, the present earl of Chesterfield, but has no issue.

(ARMS.) In a lozenge shield, two coats quarterly, viz. first and fourth, topaz, a lamb, passant, in fess, quartered, ruby and pearl, ensigned on the head with three standards of the second. Second and third, pearl, three eagles legs couped at the thigh.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two savages, each holding a club over his arm, and wreathed about his temples and loins with ivy, all proper.

C c GRAHAM,

GRAHAM, Earl GRAHAM.

THE Scotch antiquaries are universally of opinion, that no surname in Scotland can claim an higher origin than that of the noble family with which we are now immediately concerned.

The traditional account thereof handed down to us by the historians of the North is, that they are descended from the renowned GRÆME, who in the year 404, was general of the army to king Fergus II. and was governor of Scotland in the minority of his grandchild king Eugene II. fought with the Romans, defeated the Britons, and in the year 420, made a breach in, and forced that mighty wall, which the emperor Severus had reared up between the rivers Forth and Clyde, as the utmost limits of the Roman empire, to keep out the Scots from molesting them in their possessions, which wall has ever since retained, and to this day, goes under the name of Græme's Dyke.

The foundation of this great rampart has been of late traced from one river to the other, and is "fully instructed (says Douglas) by several stones found therein, which have Roman inscriptions cut out upon them, denoting the limits where, and by whom they were set, &c." A good many of these stones are at present to be seen in the college of Glasgow, and are well described in Mr. Gordon's Itinerarium Septentrionale.

This great man is said to have married a lady of the royal house of Denmark, and was progenitor of all the Grahams, in the kingdom of Scotland.

We shall however insist no further on these traditional accounts, but directly proceed with Douglas to deduce the descent of this illustrious and ancient family, by authentic documents, from WILLIAM DE GRÆME. He flourished in the reign of David I. who succeeded to the crown of Scotland in 1124, and founded the abbacy of Holyrood-house, in the year 1128, to which this William de Græme is a witness.

He appears to have been much about king David's court, being witness to many of that good prince's donations to the religious; and, according to Sir James Dalrymple, was proprietor of several lands in Mid-Lothian, which also appears from the chartulary of St. Andrews.

In a charter of king David to the priory of Durham, Willielmus de Græme is a witness, anno dom. 1139.

The same prince made a donation, Ecclesiæ de Haddington, ex utraque parte aquæ, sicut Willielmus de Græme fecit, &c.

In a confirmation charter of prince Henry to the priory of St. Andrews, the same William de Græme is a witness, in or before 1152, in which year prince Henry died.

He was father of

JOHN DE GRÆME, who flourished in the reigns of king Malcolm IV. and king William the Lion, which last succeeded king Malcolm, A. D. 1165, and died in 1214.

In a confirmation charter of a donation to the monastery of Newbottle, by Robert, son of David de Lindsey, of the great moss of Locherwood, this John de Græme, Henry de Bradie, sheriff of Edinburgh, are witnesses. The confirmation has no date, but appears to have been about the year 1170.

He left issue a son,

WILLIAM DE GRÆME, who succeeded him. In a charter of Alexander de Setun, to Adam de Polisworth, of the lands of Beeth, in marriage with his sister Emma, confirmed by king William about the year 1200, this William de Græme, David, son of earl Henry, John de Methkill, &c. are witnesses. He was succeeded by his son, Sir DAVID DE GRÆME, the undoubted progenitor of the present earl Graham.

He obtained from king William of Scotland, a grant of the lands of Charleton and Barrowfield, near Montrose; also the lordship of Kinnebar, cum dominiis, tenendiis & thanagiis ejusdem in vice-comitatu de Forfar, &c. The charter has no date, but must have been granted in or before 1214, in which king William died.

In the beginning of the reign of king Alexander II. who succeeded king William, he got a charter from Henry de Græme, (wherein he is designed his cousin or kinsman) of the lands of Clifton and Clifton-hall, of Mid-Lothian; the seniority whereof remains with the family of Montrose (their Scotch title) to this day.

He had four sons,

1. Sir David Graham, his heir.
2. Sir Patrick Graham, who is witness to a charter of king Alexander II. to the monastery of Newbottle, A. D. 1248.
3. Sir Thomas Graham designed, baro & miles, in a confirmation charter of the same king, Alexander, to the monastery of Paisley, to which David, bishop of St. Andrews is a witness, who was in that see, A. D. 1247.
4. William Graham, who is mentioned in two conventions betwixt the prior of St. Andrews and Bernard de Fraser, in the reign of king Alexander II.

He was succeeded by his eldest son,

Sir DAVID GRAHAM, who got several charters, domino Davidi Graham, filio Davidis, in the reign of of king Alexander II. particularly one from Patrick, earl of Dunbar, of two tofts of Meleckston, &c.

He had also from the same earl, the lands of Dundaff and Strathcarron, which had been a king's forest, in exchange of some lands of Sir David's, in Galloway.

He obtained likewise from Maldwin, earl of Lennox, the lands of Strathblane, Mugdock, &c.

He is witness in a charter granted by the said earl Baldwyn, to William, son of Arthur, son of Galbraith, &c. in which he is designed Dominus David de Graham, miles, in the year 1238.

He is a witness in many charters and confirmations of donations to the religious by king Alexander II. inter 1230 & 1240.

He was one of the guarantees of a treaty with king Henry III. of England, and dying soon after, left issue by Agnes his wife, a son and successor,

Sir DAVID GRAHAM, who made a great figure in Scotland, in the reign of king Alexander III. who succeeded his father, A. D. 1249.

He was sheriff of Berwick, and was sometimes designed by the title of Dundaff.

This Sir David, together with Clement, bishop of Dumblain, are mentioned in testimonio magnatum Scotiæ, anno 1253.

In a donation of Patrick, earl of March, to the monastery of Coldinghame, dominus David de Graham vicecomes de Berwick, is a witness, anno 1260.

He obtained from king Alexander III. distinct charters of his whole lands, all confirmed to him by charters, under the great seal.

He got also from Malise, earl of Strathearn, a grant of the lands of Kincardin, in Perthshire, which afterwards became one of the chief titles of his family.

He married Annabella, daughter of Robert, and sister of Malise, earl of Strathearn, by whom he had three sons;

1. Sir Patrick, his heir.

2. Sir John Graham, who got from his father the lands of Dundaff, by which title he was designed. When Sir William Wallace met him on Dundaff-muir, he was called Dominus ejusdem. He was a great hero and patriot, the constant companion and bosom friend of the brave Sir William Wallace, governor of Scotland, who with him shared the glory of all the illustrious victories that were then obtained by the Scots, over the common enemy of their country. They are both particularly mentioned at the engagement of Black-ironside, the burning of the barns of Air, the taking of the castle of Crawford, the defeat of the English at Lanark, the battle of Biggar, &c. &c. and he is agreed upon by Scotch historians, to have been the bravest and best of all Scotchmen, next to Sir William Wallace. He at last lost his life, fighting gallantly in defence of the liberties of his country, at the battle of Falkirk, so fatal to the Scotch in the year 1298. He was afterwards interred in a chapel at that place, with the following inscription on his tomb, which is still to be seen:

Mente Manuq; potens, et Vallæ fidus Achates, Conditur hic Gramus, bello interfectus ab Anglis.

He having no male issue, his estate of Dundaff returned to the family.

3. Sir David Graham was one of the arbiters chosen on the part of John Baliol, in his competition for the crown with Robert Bruce, anno 1292.

The Grahams by this time were become very numerous, among whom there were very worthy patriots, who made a glorious struggle in the defence of the liberties of their country against the oppressions of king Edward I. of England, and are particularly mentioned in Rymer's Fœdera Angliæ, Prynne's Collections, and several other authentic documents; and though we cannot pretend to connect them with this noble family, they were undoubtedly descended from the same stock.

Sir David appears to have died about the year 1270, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

Sir PATRICK GRAHAM, a man of great worth, honour and integrity.

He was witness in a charter of king Alexander III. of the lands of Beath, anno 1271.

He got a confirmation of several lands, from Duncan, third earl of Lennox, anno 1280, and is then designed dominus Patricius de Graham, miles, &c.

He was employed in several foreign embassies by king Alexander III. in 1281 and 1282, and was sent to negotiate the marriage betwixt that prince and a daughter of Guido, earl of Flanders, which was afterwards accomplished.

He was one of those Scotch worthies who solemnly obliged themselves to receive and defend princess Margaret, for their lawful queen and sovereign, in case of the death of king Alexander III. without male issue, anno 1290.

He was one of the arbiters chosen on the part of John Baliol, in his competition for the crown with Robert Bruce, together with David de Graham, A. D. 1292.

He is witness in a donation of Thomas de Gourlay, of some lands lying near Arthur's Oven, to the monastery of Newbottle, together with Willielmus de Graham, anno 1293.

He at last lost his life, fighting in defence of the liberties of his country, at the battle of Dundar, A. D. 1296, leaving issue two sons,

1. Sir David Graham, his heir.

2. Sir John Graham, who made a donation of the patronage of the church of Newlands, to the monastery of Dunfermline, A. D. 1317, and is then designed nobilis vir Johannes de Graham, miles.

He was succeeded by his eldest son,

Sir DAVID GRAHAM, who with several other of the Scotch nobility, was carried prisoner to England with king Edward I. A. D. 1297, but was soon after released.

He had a controversy with Archibald, bishop of Murray, concerning the fishings on the water of Esk, which at last he yielded to the bishop, about the year 1298.

After king Robert Bruce began in earnest to assert his title to the crown, he joined him, and continued his faithful and steady friend, for which he was particularly excepted out of the act of indemnity offered to the Scots by Edward I.

He afterwards, in reward of his constant loyalty, obtained a grant of several lands from king Robert

Robert Bruce, particularly the lands of Old Montrose, in Forfarshire, which were afterwards confirmed to his posterity by many charters under the great seal.

He was one of the magnates Scotiæ, who signed that famous letter to the pope, asserting the independency of Scotland, A. D. 1320. Besides Sir David, Johannes de Graham, and Patri- cius de Graham, signed the same letter, but Sir David is first named, and his seal is thereto af- fixed.

He was one of the guarantees of a treaty with the English, A. D. 1323.

He died soon after his royal master, king Robert, and was succeeded by his son,

Sir DAVID GRAHAM, designed of Montrose, who inheriting the virtues of his worthy ancestors, was a steady friend to king David Bruce, whom he accompanied in his unfortunate expedition into England, and was taken prisoner with him at the battle of Durham, A. D. 1346.

But it seems he was released before the year 1354, for then we find him one of the commis- sioners from the estates of Scotland, negotiating the king's liberty at the court of England.

In a charter under the great seal from king David Bruce, priori & canonicis de Rothenit, &c. nobilis vir David de Graham de Old-Montrose is a witness, A. D. 1360.

He had issue a son and a daughter; the latter married to William, earl of Ross, and he was suc- ceeded by the former,

Sir PATRICK GRAHAM, designed lord of Dun- daff and Kincardin, who was one of the noble Scotch heirs that were appointed hostages for king David's ransom, A. D. 1357, and is then designed Patrick, son and heir apparent of Sir David Gra- ham, &c.

He was one of the ambassadors appointed to treat with the English, for which he got a safe- conduct from king Edward III. A. D. 1361.

Upon the accession of king Robert II. to the crown of Scotland, he was one of the nobles who ratified the act in favour of his eldest son, the earl of Carrick, A. D. 1371.

He got charters under the great seal, from king Robert II. of the lands of Auchincrofs, and others in the shire of Lennox, anno 1377 et 1378.

In the reign of king Robert III. he was ap- pointed one of the ambassadors extraordinary to the court of England, A. D. 1394.

He married, first, Matilda, (but of what fa- mily we know not) by whom he had a son,

William, lord Graham, his heir, and a daugh- ter,

Matilda, married to Sir John Drummond, of Conraig.

He married, secondly, Eupheme, daughter of Sir John Stewart, of Railston, second son of Wal- ter, eighth lord high-steward of Scotland, and brother to king Robert II. by whom he had issue four sons,

1. Sir Patrick Graham, of Eliefton, ancestor to the earls of Mentieth.

2. Robert Graham.

3. David Graham.

4. Alexander Graham.

He died before the year 1404, and was succeed- ed by his only son of the first marriage,

Sir WILLIAM GRAHAM, lord of Kincardin, a man of great parts, who was concerned in all the public transactions of his time.

In the year 1405, Willielmus de Graham, domi- nus de Kincardin, obtained a safe-conduct from king Henry IV. to come to England, and treat for the liberty of the earl of Douglas, and others then prisoners in that kingdom.

He obtained another safe-conduct from the same prince, as ambassador extraordinary from the estates of Scotland to the court of England, anno 1406.

In 1412, he was again named ambassador ex- traordinary to treat with the English; and three times afterwards was appointed one of the com- missioners by the estates of the kingdom, to ne- gotiate the liberty of king James I. and Mur- dock, earl of Fife, then prisoners in England, A. D. 1413, 1415, 1416.

This William, lord Graham, got a charter from Robert, duke of Albany, containing an en- tail of the lands of Old-Montrose, and many others.

He married, first, Mariotta, daughter of Sir John Oliphant, of Aberdalgy, by whom he had two sons,

1. Alexander, his heir apparent.

2. John Graham, who in a charter under the great seal of Scotland, is designed second son of Sir William Graham, by Mariot Oliphant, A. D. 1421.

He married, secondly, lady Mariot Stewart, daughter of king Robert, widow of George, earl of Angus, and Sir James Kennedy of Dunure, ancestor of the earl of Cassils.

He got five charters under the great seal, Wil- lielmo, domino Graham, militi & Mariote Stewart, Sorori regis, inter 1420 & 1424, in which last year he died, leaving issue by the said lady Mariot Stewart, five sons, all mentioned in a charter un- der the great seal, A. D. 1421.

1. Sir Robert Graham, of Strathcarron, ances- tor of the Grahams of Fintray, Claverhouse, &c.

2. Patrick Graham, who betook himself to the service of the church, was a man of great piety and learning, was first bishop of Brechin, and then of St. Andrews. He died in the castle of Lochleven, A. D. 1478.

3. William Graham, ancestor of the Grahams of Garvock and Balgowan.

4. Harry Graham.

5. Walter Graham, of Wallace-town, ancestor to the Grahams of Knockdolian, &c.

ALEXANDER GRAHAM, eldest son and appa- rent heir of William, lord Graham, of Kincar- din, was one of the hostages for Murdoch Stew- art, then designed master of Fife, A. D. 1412; and this Alexander is then designed, filius et heres domini de Graham, &c.

He died before his father, leaving issue two sons,

1. Patrick, his heir.

2. Alexander Graham, mentioned in a charter under the great seal, and designed brother of Pa- trick, A. D. 1423.

PATRICK, LORD GRAHAM, of Kincardin, el- dest son to Alexander, succeeded his grandfather, A. D. 1424. That same year he was appointed one of the hostages for king James's ransom, and continued long confined in England.

At last we find Patrick, lord Graham, (unus ex obsidibus) obtains a safe-conduct from Henry VI. to return to Scotland, A. D. 1431.

After the murder of James I. he was appointed one of the lords of the regency, in the minority of king James II. and was by that prince made a lord of parliament about the year 1445; and sat as a peer in every parliament thereafter as long as he lived.

He was one of the ambassadors-extraordinary, appointed to treat with the English, anno 1451; also in 1457, ad tractandum super indentura treugarum, &c. and again in 1459.

He acquitted himself in all the negociations he was engaged in with great fidelity and honour, and died A. D. 1465, leaving issue by Elizabeth, his wife, a son, WILLIAM, LORD GRAHAM, who was appointed ambassador-extraordinary to the court of England, A. D. 1466.

He married Anne Douglas, daughter of George, fourth earl of Angus, by whom he had two sons and two daughters,

1. William, his heir.

2. George Graham, ancestor to the Grahams of Calendar.

The daughters were,

1. Jean, married to John, second lord Ogilvie of Airly.

2. Christian, married, first, to James Haldane, of Gleneagles; secondly, to Sir Thomas Maul, of Panmure.

He died in 1472, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

WILLIAM, LORD GRAHAM, afterwards earl of Montrose, a man of great honour and loyalty. He was a firm and steady friend to king James III. had the command of the army, he raised in his own defence against his rebellious subjects, and never deserted his interest.

He was in great favour with king James IV. who created him earl of Montrose, on the third of March, A. D. 1504.

He got a charter under the great seal, from that prince, Willielmo comiti de Montrose, confirming to him the lands of Old-Montrose, in Forfarshire, which belonged to his predecessors by donation from king Robert Bruce, confirmed by king David, &c. This confirmation is dated the said third day of March, A. D. 1504.

He afterwards got many charters under the great seal, Willielmo comiti de Montrose, of several lands and baronies, inter 1506 & 1511.

He married, first, Annabella, daughter of John, lord Drummond, by whom he had a son, WILLIAM, LORD GRAHAM.

He married, secondly, Janet, daughter of Sir Archibald Edmondston, of Duntreath, by whom he had three daughters,

1. Margaret, married, first, to William master of Lennox; secondly, to Sir John Somerville, of Cambuskenneth.

2. Elizabeth, married to Walter, grandson, and apparent heir of John, first lord Drummond.

3. Nicholas, married to Sir William Murray, of Abercairny.

He married, thirdly, Christian Wavane, by whom he had two sons,

1. Patrick Graham, ancestor of the Grahams of Inchbraco, of whom the Grahams of Gorthie, Bucklivie, &c. are descended.

2. Andrew Graham, who betaking himself to a religious life, was appointed bishop of Dunblain, A. D. 1575; and was the first protestant bishop of that see.

This earl accompanied king James IV. to the fatal field of Flodden, where he lost his life with his royal master, A. D. 1513.

He was succeeded by his eldest son,

WILLIAM, second Earl of Montrose, a man of good parts and great integrity.

He was one of the Scotch peers, to whom John, duke of Albany, regent of Scotland, committed the tuition of the young king, James V. when he went to France, to secure the interest of that crown in favour of his infant sovereign.

He obtained no less than seven charters under the great seal, Willielmo comiti de Montrose, of many lordships and baronies, between the year 1530 and 1550.

He married Janet Keith, daughter of William, third earl marshall, by whom he had four sons and five daughters,

1. Robert, lord Graham.

2. Alexander Graham, who was pensioner of Cambuskenneth.

3. William Graham, ancestor to the Grahams of Orchil.

4. Mungo Graham, ancestor of the Grahams of Killearn.

The daughters were,

1. Margaret, married to Robert master of Erskine.

2. Elizabeth, married to George, fourth earl of Caithness.

3. Agnes, married to Sir William Murray, of Tullibardin, ancestor of the duke of Athole.

4. Janet, married to Sir Andrew Murray, of Balvaird.

5. Catherine, married to John Graham, of Knockdolain.

He died on the twenty-fifth of May, A. D. 1571.

ROBERT, LORD GRAHAM, first son, and apparent heir of William, second earl of Montrose, married a daughter of Malcolm, lord Fleming, and was killed at the battle of Pinkie, A. D. 1547, leaving issue by the said lady a posthumous son, JOHN GRAHAM, who succeeded his grandfather, A. D. 1571, and was third earl of Montrose.

He got charters under the great seal, Johanni comiti de Montrose, of the whole lands, baronies, and earldom of Montrose, &c. &c. between the years 1578 and 1584.

He was a man of great abilities; and after queen Mary was prisoner in England, he went entirely into the measures of the court.

He was chancellor of the jury upon the trial of the regent Morton, for the murder of king Henry, and pronounced the sentence against him, guilty, &c.

He was highly esteemed, and in great favour with his majesty James VI. who constituted him lord high-treasurer of Scotland, by a full and ample commission, dated 1584.

He was afterwards appointed lord high-chancellor of the kingdom of Scotland, by another commission, dated in 1598.

D d

After

After king James's accession to the crown of England, when a design was set on foot for procuring a nearer union betwixt the two crowns, the earl of Montrose was nominated his majesty's high-commissioner to the parliament appointed to meet at Perth for that purpose, in July, 1604; but at that time it took no effect.

He was also appointed viceroy of all Scotland, supremum regni Scotiæ procuratorem pro omnibus vitæ diebus, &c. the highest dignity a subject could enjoy: for this he had another commission, dated on the ides of December, the said year, 1604; and as there are several clauses in that and his former commissions, very honourable for the family, and inserted at large in the Lives of the Officers of State; to that we shall refer our readers.

In virtue of this last commission, he presided as representing his majesty's person at the parliament which met at Perth, on the ninth of July, A. D. 1606, wherein "episcopal government was restored to the church; the estate of bishops reintegrate to the ancient and accustomed honours, dignities, prerogatives, privileges, &c. &c. as the same was in the reformed kirk, most ample and free at any time before the act of annexation, in 1587."

This great man discharged his duty in all the high offices he enjoyed with fidelity and honour.

He married Lillas, daughter of David, lord Drummond, by whom he had three sons and one daughter, Lillas, married to John, earl of Wigton.

1. John, lord Graham.
2. Sir Robert Graham, of Innermeath.
3. Sir William Graham, of Braco.

He died in November, 1608, in the sixty-first year of his age, and was succeeded by his eldest son, JOHN, fourth Earl of Montrose, who got charters under the great seal, Johanni comiti de Montrose, of many lands, between the year 1609, and 1620.

He was also a man of parts, and much esteemed by king Charles I. who immediately upon his accession to the crown, constituted him president of the council.

He married Margaret Ruthven, daughter of William, earl of Gowrie, by whom he had a son,

James Graham, afterwards marquis of Montrose, and four daughters,

1. Lillas, married to Sir John Colquhoun, of Lufs, baronet, and had issue.
2. Margaret, married to Archibald, lord Napier.
3. Dorothea, married to James, first lord Rollo.
4. Beatrix, married to David, lord Maderty.

He died in November, 1626, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

JAMES, fifth Earl of Montrose, born A. D. 1612, whose education was suitable to his high birth. He was possessed of many eminent qualities, with an uncommon military genius, which he nobly exerted in the service of his king and country.

On the breaking out of the civil war, he was at first engaged on the covenanters side; but no sooner did he perceive their intentions and the measures they were pursuing, than he deserted their party, went over to the king's service, was created marquis of Montrose, on the sixteenth of May, A. D. 1644, and continued steady and unalterable in the interest of the royal family to the end of his life.

The many great actions he performed, and the glorious victories he obtained with handfuls of loyalists, against the numerous forces of their enemies, viz. at Tippermuir, Alford, Aberdeen, Inverlochy, Kilsyth, &c. will scarce be believed by after ages; and as they are all largely expatiated upon in the life of that great man, written by Doctor Wishart, who was an eye-witness, to that we refer our readers, as it would be impossible for us to allot room enough to do justice to his extraordinary merit.

However, we must here, for the sake of truth, vindicate him from one aspersion, which has been most unjustly cast upon him by some authors, who have alledged, that he absolutely took the solemn league and covenant, and consequently was guilty of the breach of that oath; but this is absolutely false, for in October, 1643, he was summoned to appear before the parliament, to take that solemn league betwixt that and the beginning of January following; but at that time he was with the king, and so did not appear.

Upon the twelfth of January, A. D. 1644, there was a decree of parliament pronounced against him for not complying; upon which he was outlawed, forfeited, and his estate ordered to be sequestrate.

He was afterwards intercommuned under the designation of James Graham, sometime earl of Montrose, for being in rebellion against God and his covenant; and all his majesty's good subjects were discharged to reset or give him the least supply under the pain of treason: this was enacted on the twentieth of March, A. D. 1646, in which year he was surprized by general Lesley and the parliament forces at Philiphaugh, and his army routed and dispersed.

He was at last taken prisoner, and brought up to Edinburgh, where he suffered all the indignities of of a common malefactor with the utmost constancy: a very few days after which he was tried, condemned, and executed in the most cruel manner on the twenty-first of May, A. D. 1650; the firmness, resolution, and magnanimity with which he behaved at his trial and execution were inimitable. We shall sum up his character in the words of a noble author, who was far from being partial in his favour. "He gave as great testimonies of loyalty and courage as a subject could do; and performed as wonderful actions in several battles upon as great inequality of numbers, and as great disadvantages, with respect to arms and other preparations for war, as have been performed in this age, &c. &c."

His body was interred at the place of execution, where it rested till the restoration of king Charles II. who gave orders to have the scattered remains raised and collected together; and by his majesty's appointment they were interred in the isle of the cathedral church of St. Giles, which belonged to his family on the fourteenth of May, A. D. 1661.

He married Magdalen Carnegie, daughter of David, earl of Southesk, by whom he had one son,

JAMES GRAHAM, second marquis of Montrose. Though he was too young to be engaged in the wars with his worthy father, and lived a retired life

THE
OFFICE OF THE
SECRETARY OF THE
NAVY
WASHINGTON, D. C.
JANUARY 10, 1900

TO THE HONORABLE
MEMBERS OF THE NAVY
WASHINGTON, D. C.
JANUARY 10, 1900

THE
OFFICE OF THE
SECRETARY OF THE NAVY
WASHINGTON, D. C.
JANUARY 10, 1900

TO THE HONORABLE
MEMBERS OF THE NAVY
WASHINGTON, D. C.
JANUARY 10, 1900

THE
OFFICE OF THE
SECRETARY OF THE NAVY
WASHINGTON, D. C.
JANUARY 10, 1900

life during the usurpation, yet he gave many instances of his being a man of staunch loyalty, great probity, and honour.

Immediately after the restoration of king Charles II. his father's forfeiture was repealed, he was restored to the whole estates of the family, and appointed one of his majesty's most honourable privy-council.

He married Isabel Douglas, daughter of William, earl of Morton, widow of Robert, first earl of Roxburgh, by whom he had two sons and three daughters. The latter were,

1. Anne, married to Alexander, earl of Ca-lendar.
2. Jean, married to Sir Jonathan Urquhart, of Cromarty.
3. Grizel, married to William Cockran, of Kilmaronock, esquire, son of William, lord Cockran.

The sons were,

1. James Graham, his heir.
2. Charles Graham, a youth of great hopes and spirit, who died young.

He died A. D. 1669, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

JAMES GRAHAM, third marquis of Montrose, who, being young at his father's death, was carefully educated under the particular inspection of his majesty; and was a man of fine accomplishments, both natural and acquired.

The king made him a captain of the guards, president of the privy council, sheriff of Dunbarton, bailie of the regality of Lennox, Glasgow, &c. &c.

He died in the flower of his age greatly regretted, A. D. 1684; and by Christian Lefly, his wife, daughter of John, duke of Rothes, left issue an only son, JAMES GRAHAM, fourth marquis of Montrose, afterwards duke of the same place, who succeeded him. He was a man of distinguished parts and good judgment, much esteemed, and in great favour with her majesty, queen Anne, who, as soon as he came of age, constituted him lord-high-admiral of Scotland, A. D. 1705, and president of the council in 1706.

And in regard of his inviolable attachment and zeal for the protestant succession, and his hearty concurrence in the union of the two kingdoms, her majesty was pleased further to dignify him by the titles of duke of Montrose, marquis of Graham and Buchanan, earl of Kincardin, viscount Dundaff, lord Abernithvin, Mugdock and Fin-tray, by patent, hereditibus masculis ex corpore suo, quibus deficientibus hereditibus marchionis de Montrose per priora diplomata predecessoris illius Jacobi marchionis facti: Et concessi, &c. dated April 1707.

He was elected one of the sixteen peers for Scotland to the first, second, fifth, sixth, and seventh British parliaments.

He was appointed lord-privy seal in the room of the duke of Queensberry in 1709; but was removed from all his offices in 1713, for refusing to comply with the measures of the court.

Upon the death of her majesty, queen Anne, being at his seat in the country, he made a speedy journey to Edinburgh, and assisted at the proclamation of his majesty king George I. and being appointed one of the regency, posted to town, and heartily concurred with the rest for securing the public tranquillity till his majesty's arrival, who immediately constituted him one of the principal secretaries of state in the room of the earl of Mar. He was soon after appointed lord-keeper of the great seal for Scotland, and chancellor of the university of Glasgow.

He married Christian Carnegie, daughter of David, earl of Northesk; and by her, who died in 1744, and was buried at Aber-Ruthen, had issue, besides nine children, who died young, a daughter, Margaret, who died unmarried, and four sons.

1. James Graham, who died young in the life-time of his father.
2. David Graham, the first English peer in the family.
3. William Graham, successor to his brother.
4. George Graham, who was member of parliament for the county of Sterling, and a captain of the royal navy, but died without issue, A. D. 1746.

The second son,

(First Earl.) DAVID GRAHAM, was by his majesty, king George, advanced to the dignity of a peer in England, by the stile and title of earl and baron Graham, of Belford, in the county of Northumberland, May 23, A. D. 1722, with remainder to his two brothers, William and George, and he dying unmarried on the second of October, A. D. 1731, was buried at Aber-Ruthen, and the English honours, so lately acquired, devolved upon his brother, (Second and present Earl.) WILLIAM GRAHAM, who also succeeded his father, the late duke of Montrose, in the Scotch honours of this noble family at his demise, A. D. 1741.

He married in October, 1742, Lucy Manners, daughter to John, second duke of Rutland, by whom he has issue a son, JAMES GRAHAM, (stiled marquis Graham) born February 8, A. D. 1755.

And a daughter,

Lucy, born in July, 1751.

His lordship is chancellor of Glasgow university, and governor of the royal bank of Scotland.

(TITLES.) William Graham, earl and baron Graham of Belford, English honours; also duke, marquis, and earl of Montrose, &c. in the kingdom of Scotland.

(CREATIONS.) Earl and baron Graham, May 23, A. D. 1722, (8 George I.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth, topaz on a chief, diamond, three escallop shells of the first, for the name of Graham; second and third, pearl, three roses, ruby, barbed and seeded, proper, for the title of Montrose.

(CREST.) On a wreath, an eagle talloning a stork, proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two storks of the latter.

(MOTTO.) "Ne oublie."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Glasgow, in the county of Lanark; at Kincarn, in the county of Perth; and at Myndock castle, in the county of Lennox.

K E R,

K E R, E A R L K E R.

THE surname of KER, or CAR, is of great antiquity in Scotland; and some are of opinion, that the ancestors of the noble family which falls now immediately under our consideration, came originally to this island from France, where there were many considerable branches of it, (or at least families) who made a great figure, even before the tenth century, and whose posterity are subsisting in that kingdom to this day.

That one of these, a man of rank and spirit, came over to England with William the Conqueror, A. D. 1066, had a considerable command in his army, and having remarkably distinguished himself for courage and conduct, got from that prince a large share of the conquered lands, particularly in the north of England, where his posterity still subsists, and that of him all the Kers in Great Britain are descended.

Certain it is, the armorial bearing of the Kers in England and France are the same; but at what time the Kers first settled in Scotland, or whether they came from England or France, cannot now be positively ascertained; yet it appears from good authority, that there were several families of that name in the west of Scotland, in the reign of king Alexander III. who succeeded to the crown, A. D. 1249.

The learned antiquary, Sir George Mackenzie says, that the first of this family, who settled in the southern parts of North Britain, was ROBERT DE KER, who flourished in the reign of king Robert Bruce, and that of his son king David, who succeeded to the crown, A. D. 1329.

He was father of

JOHN KER, who appears to have had considerable possessions in lands, both in the counties of Selkirk and Roxburgh, by two original charters still extant, and he was the undoubted progenitor of this illustrious family.

Upon the resignation of John de Copeland, there is a charter, Johanni Ker de Foresta de Selkirk, of all his lands and tenements in Auldtounburn, with their pertinents, which formerly belonged to Adam de Rule, &c. the charter is dated the Monday after the purification of the blessed Virgin, anno 1357.

And upon the resignation of William de Blackdene, of part of the lands of Mow, and on Auldtounburn, in the regality of Sprouston, and shire of Roxburgh, he got another charter, Johanni Ker de Foresta de Selkirk & Mariota ejus Sponsa terrarum de Molla, Auldtounburn, &c. &c. dated at Auldtounburn, the Thursday after the feast of St. Michael, A. D. 1358. And he was soon afterwards proprietor of the whole barony of Auldtounburn, which became one of the chief titles of his family. By the said Mariota, he had a son,

HENRY DE KER, who succeeded him, and seems to have been a man of considerable rank and distinction; for he obtained letters of safe-conduct from king Edward III. for himself and twelve knights in his retinue, to pass through England, &c. A. D. 1363. He left issue a son and successor, ROBERT KER, who got a charter from Archibald, the fourth earl of Douglas, Roberto Ker de Auldtounburn, of the lands of Smellholm, and others holding blench of the earl, dated June 20, A. D. 1404.

He left issue two sons,

1. Richard Ker, his heir.
2. Andrew Ker, who carried on the line.

He was succeeded by his eldest son,

RICHARD KER, of Auldtounburn, who got charters from the earl of Douglas, of several lands, wherein he was designed filius & haeres Roberti Ker de Auldtounburn, A. D. 1412; but he died without issue, and was succeeded by his brother, ANDREW KER, the first of the family, who appears to have been designed dominus de Auldtounburn.

He was retoured heir to his brother Richard, A. D. 1428, and was armour-bearer to the earl of Douglas. He obtained a charter of the lands and barony of Prymside, upon the resignation of Andrew Rule, nobili viro Andrea Ker, domino de Auldtounburn, &c. &c. to which Archibald Douglas, of Cavers; James Rutherford, of that ilk; Thomas Cranston, of that ilk; and others, are witnesses, November 20, A. D. 1430.

He obtained a charter of confirmation of these lands, from Archibald, duke of Turenne, earl of Douglas, and Longueville, lord of Galloway, and Annandale, superior thereof Andra Ker domino de Auldtounburn, Scutifero suo, &c. to which William, abbot of Kelso, James Douglas, lord Balveny, Walter Scot, of Buccleugh, &c. are witnesses, August 6, A. D. 1432.

He obtained another charter from the same duke of Turenne, dilecto consanguineo suo Andrea Ker de Auldtounburn, of several other lands in the regality of Sprouston and shire of Roxburgh, A. D. 1439.

He obtained likewise a charter honorabili viro Andrea Ker de Auldtounburn, of the lands and barony of Celsford, A. D. 1446, which afterwards also became one of the chief titles to his family.

He

He got charters of many other lands and baronies between 1440 and 1448, too numerous to be here inserted, which sufficiently shews what a vast estate this family was possessed of, even as early as the reign of king James II. of Scotland.

He married a daughter of William Douglas, of Cavers, hereditary sheriff of the county of Roxburgh, by whom he had three sons,

1. Andrew Ker, his heir.

2. Thomas Ker,
3. James Ker, } of whom we only know the names, and that they were designed brothers-german to Andrew Ker, of Aultounburn, in a charter of William, earl of Douglas, to George Ker, of the lands of Hutton-hall, dated January 11, A. D. 1451.

He died before the year 1450, and was succeeded by his eldest son, ANDREW KER, promiscuously designed of Aultounburn and Cessford, who got a precept from William, earl of Douglas, for infesting him in the lands of Prymide, and others, as heir to his father, dated August 19, A. D. 1450.

He was a man of great parts, highly esteemed by king James II. and was concerned in most of the public transactions of his time.

He accompanied William, earl of Douglas, into England, A. D. 1450, for which he got a safe-conduct from king Henry VI. and another in 1451, wherein he is designed Andreas Ker, dominus de Aultounburn.

Although he was in strict friendship with the earls of Douglas, who were superiors of many of his lands, yet he does not appear to have been concerned in their rebellion. On the contrary, immediately after their forfeiture, we find him employed in negotiations of state; and that he got all his lands, which formerly he held of that family, to hold of the crown, &c.

He was one of the guarantees of a treaty of peace with the English, A. D. 1457.

He was appointed one of the ambassadors-extraordinary to the court of England, and warden of the marches, A. D. 1459, in which office he did his country signal service, in suppressing the insurrections on the borders.

He obtained from king James III. a gift of the ward of the marriage of Robert de Mow, upon which he got a charter under the great seal, Andreas Ker de Aultounburn, A. D. 1465.

He married Margaret, daughter of ——— Tweedie, of Drumelzier, an ancient family, in the county of Peebles, by whom he had four sons,

1. Walter Ker, his heir.
2. Thomas Ker,
3. William Ker,
4. Ralph Ker,

He died about the year 1480, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

WALTER KER, designed lord of Cessford and Aultounburn, who in his father's life-time obtained a precept from William Douglas, lord of Cavers, his grandfather, for infesting him in the lands of Borthwick-Shiels, as son and apparent heir of Andrew Ker, of Cessford, A. D. 1471.

He got two charters under the great seal of the lands, barony, and castle of Cessford; the lands of Caverstone, &c. A. D. 1473.

He obtained also from his father, a charter of some lands in the barony of Oxenham, in the county of Roxburgh, in January, 1474; all which lands, with several others, were confirmed to him by a charter, containing an entail, "to Walter, son and apparent heir of Andrew Ker, of Cessford, and the male heirs of his body; which failing, to Thomas Ker, then to William, then to Ralph, brothers-german to the said Walter, and the heirs male of their respective bodies; which failing, to the said Andrew, his nearest heirs whatsoever, reserving a third part to Margaret Tweedie, his spouse," dated April 5, A. D. 1474.

He was named one of the Scotch commissioners, to treat with the English, A. D. 1484; and also appointed one of the ambassadors-extraordinary to the court of England, A. D. 1491, and again A. D. 1494.

He got six charters under the great seal, Waltero Ker de Cessford, of the lands and baronies of Cessford, Cockburn, Toderick, Castlestead of Roxburgh, Aultounburn, Auld-Roxburgh, Caverston, &c. &c. between 1480 and 1496.

He died A. D. 1502, having about two years preceding, made a donation to the monastery of Kelso, pro salute corporis sui & pro salute anime Roberti Ker, militis filii sui nuper defuncti, &c.

His issue were, a daughter, Elizabeth, married to Philip Rutherford, son and heir apparent of James Rutherford of that ilk, the two fathers being parties contractors, February 12, A. D. 1484.

Also an only son,

Sir ROBERT KER, who married Christian, daughter of James Rutherford, of that ilk, whose contract was signed at the same time with that of his sister at Roxburgh, on the twelfth of February, A. D. 1484.

There is a precept for infesting Robert Ker, knight, son and apparent heir of an honourable man, Walter Ker, of Cessford, and Christian Rutherford, his spouse, in certain lands, in the barony of Cessford, A. D. 1486.

He died in the beginning of the year 1500, leaving issue by the said Christian Rutherford, a son, Sir ANDREW KER, of Cessford, who succeeded his grandfather, A. D. 1502, and was retoured heir to him, A. D. 1511.

He was a man of great parts, was often employed in negotiations of importance, which he managed with dexterity and success.

He was sent one of the ambassadors-extraordinary to the court of France, to endeavour to get Scotland comprehended in their treaty with England, A. D. 1515.

He married Agnes, daughter of William, third lord Crichton, of Sanquhar, by whom he had five sons and two daughters; Katherine, married to Sir John Ker, of Fernyhirst, and Margaret, to Sir John Home, of Ersilton, ancestor of the earl of Home.

The sons were,

1. Sir Walter Ker, his heir.

2. Marc Ker, commendator of Newbottle, father of Marc, first earl of Lothian, (ancestor to the present marquis of Lothian) by his wife Hellen, daughter of George Lesly, earl of Rothes.

3. Andrew Ker.

E e

4. Thomas

4. Thomas Ker, who was abbot of Kelso.

5. Ralph Ker, who is often with his brother mentioned in the chartulary of Kelso.

He died 1527, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

Sir WALTER KER, of Cessford, who was re-toured heir to his father, A. D. 1528.

He got a charter under the great seal, (containing many clauses very honourable for the family) of the lands, barony, and castle of Cessford, Huntley's lands; the barony of Auld Roxburgh, and castle thereof; the lands and barony of Auldtounburn, with several others, all erected into one free barony, to be called the barony of Cessford, "to and in favours of Sir Walter Ker, of Cessford, and the heirs male of his body; which failing, to his brother Marc; then to Andrew, his next brother-german; then to George Ker, of Fawdonside; then to Marc Ker, of Dolphington; then to Gilbert Ker, of Prymside Loch; then to James Ker, of Mersington; then to George Ker, of Linton; then to Lancelot Ker, of Gaitshall, and the heirs male of their respective bodies; which all failing, to the said Sir Walter, his nearest heirs male whatsoever." Dated at St. Andrews, September 21, A. D. 1542.

He got also charters under the great seal, of a vast number of lands and baronies, in the years 1542, and 1543.

He was a great promoter of the reformation, and sat in the convention or parliament, when the reformed religion was established, A. D. 1560.

He was also one among the Scotch noblemen who entered into a bond of association, to maintain and defend king James's authority and government, after the queen his mother had been forced to resign the kingdom, A. D. 1567.

He afterwards got charters under the great seal, Waltero Ker de Cessford, militi, terrarum burgi de Roxburgh, terrarum de Halyden cum manerio de Huntlywood, &c. &c. 1569.

He married Isabel, daughter of Sir Andrew Ker, of Fernyhirst, which appears by a charter under the great seal, Waltero Ker de Cessford, & Isabellæ Ker, filie domini Andreae Ker de Fernyhirst, sue sponsæ.

By her he had issue two sons,

1. Andrew Ker, who in his father's life-time got a charter under the great seal, Andreae Ker, apparenti de Cessford, of the lands and barony of Cessford, Auldtounburn, &c. A. D. 1554, but he died without issue before his father.

2. Sir William Ker, who continued the line.

Sir Walter, living to a great age, died in the year 1584, or 1585, and was succeeded by his only surviving son,

Sir WILLIAM KER, who obtained charters under the great seal, Willielmo Ker de Cessford, militi, of a vast number of lands and baronies, in the years 1587, 1588, and 1591.

He married Janet, daughter of Sir James Douglas, of Drumlanrig, ancestor of the duke of Queensberry, by whom he had two sons,

1. Sir Robert Ker, afterwards earl of Roxburgh.

2. Marc Ker, who got from his father the lands of Ormiston, by a charter under the great seal, Willielmo Ker de Cessford & Marco ejus filio secundo genito, A. D. 1591.

At last he got a charter, Willielmo Ker de Cessford, of the lands and barony of Elisheugh, A. D. 1595, and dying soon after, was succeeded by his eldest son,

Sir ROBERT KER, of Cessford, who in his father's life-time got a charter under the great seal, Roberto filio & hæredi apparenti Willielmi de Cessford, baroniæ de Cessford, &c. dated 1573.

He was a man of great parts and spirit, and much esteemed by king James VI. who conferred the honour of knighthood upon him, made him one of the gentlemen of his bedchamber, and he was one of the Scotch nobles that assisted at the coronation of queen Anne, A. D. 1590.

He manifested his loyalty, by joining the king with a considerable retinue of his own followers against Bothwell and his associates then in rebellion, A. D. 1591.

He got a charter under the great seal, domino Roberto Ker, feodotario de Cessford, of the lands of Sprouston, A. D. 1591; and being still more and more in favour with king James VI. he was pleased to raise him to the dignity of the peerage, by the title of lord Roxburgh.

He then got two charters under the great seal, Roberto domino Roxburgh & hæredibus quibuscunque, of the lands of the abbacy of Kelso, and several others, in 1602; and in these charters, there are particularly mentioned the great services he and his ancestors had done their country, as wardens of the marches, &c.

He accompanied his majesty into England, A. D. 1603, and was appointed one of the commissioners, to treat of a nearer union betwixt the two nations, A. D. 1604, which at that time took no effect.

He got charters under the great seal, Roberto domino Roxburgh & dominæ Joannæ Drummond sue sponsæ, of many lands, in 1613 and 1614.

In the year 1616, he was further dignified with the titles of the earl of Roxburgh, lord Ker, of Cessford, Caverston, &c. and got a charter under the great seal, containing a novodamus of many lands and baronies to Robert, earl of Roxburgh, and lady Jean Drummond, his spouse, in life-rent, and Henry, the son and apparent heir in fee, and the heirs of his body whatsoever; which failing, to John, earl of Perth, and the heirs procreate, or to be procreate, betwixt him and lady Jane Ker, countess of Perth, his spouse; which failing, to the said earl Robert, his heirs and assigns whatsoever, they bearing the name and arms of Ker, &c. dated August 19, A. D. 1618.

He got afterwards no less than ten charters under the great seal of different lands and baronies, three whereof are to him and Henry, lord Ker, his son and apparent heir, between 1630 and 1642.

He was a most faithful and dutiful subject to king Charles I. with whom he was also in great favour, and was by that prince made privy-seal, A. D. 1637, which office was confirmed to him in parliament, A. D. 1641.

And the king being fully convinced of his loyalty, appointed him one of the commissioners he sent to treat with the Scotch rebels, A. D. 1642.

This earl, with some others of the loyal nobility, joined in a letter to the queen, giving an account of the difficulties the earl of Derby was reduced duced to, with some other particulars relative to his majesty's affairs, &c. This letter was intercepted by general Fairfax, A. D. 1643, which brought the earl into great trouble.

He married, first, Mary, daughter of Sir William Maitland, of Leithington, by whom he had one son, William Ker, who got a charter, Willielmo magistro de Roxburgh filio natu maximo Roberti domini Roxburgh, terrarum dominii & baronia de Halyden, &c. anno 1614; but he died without issue before the year 1625.

Also three daughters,

1. Jean, married to John, second earl of Perth, whose son, Sir William Drummond, succeeded to the estate and honours of Roxburgh, as will be shewn hereafter.

2. Mary, married to James Scrymgeour, second viscount Dunhope, and had issue.

3. Isabel, married first to ——— Haliburton, of Pitcur, to whom she had no issue. She married, secondly, James, second earl of Southesk, and had issue.

THE EARL, married, secondly, Jean, daughter of Patrick, lord Drummond, by whom he had a son and successor, HENRY KER, who got a charter under the great seal, Henrico domino Ker, of the lands and barony of Prymside, &c. A. D. 1625.

He was also a great loyalist, and suffered many hardships on account of his attachment to the royal family.

He married Margaret Hay, daughter of William, tenth earl of Errol, by whom he had four daughters.

1. Jean, afterwards countess of Roxburgh, who carried on the line of this family.

2. Anne, married to John, earl of Wigton.

3. Margaret, married to Sir Henry Innes of that ilk, baronet.

4. Sophia, died unmarried.

This Henry Ker, died 1643, and his father, earl Robert, dying in 1650, his estate and honour, by entail, devolved upon his grandson,

Sir WILLIAM DRUMMOND, son of his eldest daughter, Jean, before-mentioned, who by his grandfather's appointment, married his own cousin-german, Jean, eldest daughter of Henry, lord Ker, and undoubted heir of this line of the family. He was accordingly served heir of entail to his grandfather, A. D. 1650; was second earl of Roxburgh; and he and his posterity became thereby bound to carry the name and arms of Ker, &c.

Sir William's genius in his younger days leading him to a military life, he went into the service of the States-general, where, by his merit, he soon got the command of a regiment, and acquired the reputation of a brave and gallant officer; but upon the breaking out of the civil war in Scotland, he returned home, joined the loyalists, and was steady in the interests of the royal family, for which he was fined by Oliver Cromwell in six thousand pounds sterling.

After the restoration, he got a charter under the great seal, containing a novodamus totius comitatus de Roxburgh, &c. Willielmo comiti de Roxburgh, dated January 10, A. D. 1663.

By the said Jean, countess of Roxburgh, he left issue two sons and one daughter, Jean, married to Colin, earl of Balcarras.

1. Robert Ker, his heir.

2. John Ker, who, upon the death of his cousin, William Ballenden, of Broughton and Auchinoule, lord Ballenden became his successor, A. D. 1670. For that nobleman having no issue, by consent of the crown, made a resignation of his estate and honours in favour of this John Ker, who was to change his name thereupon to Ballenden. His wife and posterity are entered in the table.

He died A. D. 1675, and was succeeded by his eldest son, ROBERT KER, third earl of Roxburgh, a man of great worth and honour, and one of the privy-council to king Charles II.

He married Margaret Hay, daughter of John, marquis of Tweeddale, by whom he had three sons,

1. Robert Ker, his heir.

2. John Ker, afterwards duke of Roxburgh, &c.

3. William Ker, lieutenant-general in the army, died A. D. 1740.

He accompanied his royal highness the duke of York, who was coming from London to Scotland by sea, in the Gloucester frigate, and had the misfortune to be cast away on the Yarmouth coast, in May, 1682, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

ROBERT KER, fourth earl of Roxburgh, a youth of great hopes and spirit; but dying without issue, in 1696, his estate and honours devolved upon his brother, JOHN KER, fifth earl of Roxburgh, a man of great parts and learning, who by her majesty queen Anne, was appointed secretary of state for Scotland, in 1704; and having been very faithful in promoting the union of the two crowns, was raised to the honour of duke of Roxburgh, marquis of Bowmont and Cessford, earl of Kelfo, viscount Broxmouth, lord Ker of Cessford and Caverston, by patent to the heirs male of his body, which failing, to the heirs succeeding to the estate and honours of earl of Roxburgh, &c. dated April 27, A. D. 1707.

He was elected one of the sixteen Scotch peers to the first British parliament, summoned to meet in October, 1707, and was re-elected to the second, fifth, and sixth.

He was one of the regency appointed by George I. from the queen's death till his arrival at London, and was immediately named one of the privy-council, lord-lieutenant of the counties of Roxburgh and Selkirk, keeper of the great seal, and was again constituted secretary of state for Scotland, A. D. 1716.

In 1722, he was made one of the knights of the most noble order of the Garter; but after the death of king George I. he retired from all public business, and led a private life the remainder of his days. He died February 24, A. D. 1741.

He married Mary Finch, daughter of Daniel, late earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham, and widow of William, marquis of Halifax, by whom he had a son, (First Earl.) ROBERT KER, second duke of Roxburgh, who succeeded him.

He was created a peer of England by letters patent, bearing date, May 24, A. D. 1722, by the the title of baron Ker, and earl Ker, of Wakefield, in the county of York.

In 1739, he married Essex Mostyn, eldest daughter of Sir Roger Mostyn, of Flintshire, by Essex Finch, eldest daughter of Daniel, earl of Winchilsea, &c. and by her had two sons,

1. John Ker, his successor.
2. Robert Ker, born August 25, 1747.

And three daughters,

1. Essex, born March 9, 1741-2, died young.
2. Essex, born January 25, 1743-4.
3. Mary, born March 17, 1746-7.

He died 1755, and was succeeded by his eldest son, (Second, and present Earl.) JOHN KER, now earl Ker, &c.

(TITLES.) John Ker, earl and baron Ker, (English honours) also duke of Roxburgh, marquis of Bowmont and Cessford, earl of Kelfo, viscount Broxmouth, baron Ker of Cessford and Caverston, (Scotch honours.)

(CREATIONS.) Earl and baron Ker, of Wakefield, in the county of York, May 24, A. D. 1722, (8 George I.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth, emerald on a chevron between three unicorns heads, erazed, pearl, armed and maned, topaz, as many mullets, diamond, for Ker; second and third, ruby, three mascles, topaz, for Weapont.

(CREST.) On a wreath, an unicorn's head, erazed, as those in the coat.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two savages, each holding a club over his shoulder, and wreathed about his temples and loins with ivy, all proper.

(MOTTO.) "Pro Christo & patria dulce periculum."

(CHIEF SEATS.) Fleurs, in Tiviotdale, on the north side the river Twede, and Broxmouth, in county of Hadington, near Dunbar, on the sea-coast.

WALDEGRAVE, Earl of WALDEGRAVE.

WILLIAM WALDEGRAVE, (or as it was then wrote, Walgrave) lord of Waldegrave, Twywill, and Slipton, in the county of Northampton, was a man of large property in the time of king Harold; and, in conformity to the custom of his ancestors, had assumed his name from the place of his residence.

This gentleman had an only daughter and sole heir, who succeeded him in all his possessions, and was, by William the Conqueror, given in marriage to a Roman chief,

GUERIN, or WARIN, who had attended him in his English expedition, and who, immediately after his nuptials, becoming lord of Waldgrave, &c. adopted that name, which his descendants to this day have continued, without any material alteration.

The son of this marriage was,

Sir WILLIAM DE WALDEGRAVE, who married an heiress from the family of De Linsey, and had a son,

Sir WARIN DE WALDEGRAVE, knighted; who by ——— Riston, his wife, had a son and heir,

JOHN DE WALDEGRAVE, who in 1205, was sheriff of the city of London, an office of great importance in those early days, and never trusted but to a man of known honour and integrity. He married a daughter of Sir Henry Hastings, knight, and had issue a successor,

WALTER DE WALDEGRAVE, whose son and heir by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir James Nevil, of Nottinghamshire, was,

Sir RICHARD DE WALDEGRAVE, who in the ninth of Edward III. was knight of the shire for the county of Lincoln. He married Agnes Daubeney, and was father of another

Sir RICHARD DE WALDEGRAVE, seated at Smallbridge, in the county of Suffolk, who was several times knight of that shire in parliament; and in 1382, was chosen speaker of the house of commons; and it is memorable, that he was the first person who declined that honour; which office, however, he was obliged by the king's peremptory command to fill. He died A. D. 1400, having married Jane, daughter and heir of ——— Sylvester, of Buers, in the county of Suffolk; which lady, surviving her husband six years, was at length interred near him at Buers aforesaid.

Their son,

Sir RICHARD WALDEGRAVE, with three other persons of distinction, was, A. D. 1462, appointed (according to Stowe) to keep the seas, and landing ten thousand men in Brittany, reduced the town of Conquet, with the Isle of Rhee.

He died A. D. 1434, and was buried at Buers, leaving issue by his wife, Joan, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas de Montchenfy, of Edwardston, in Suffolk, (who surviving him sixteen years, was at length buried at Buers) an only son,

Sir WILLIAM WALDEGRAVE, who had issue by his wife Joan, daughter of William Durward, of Bocking, in Essex, two sons, the eldest of which, Sir Richard Waldegrave, interested himself much in favour of the house of York, against that of Lancaster, but dying A. D. 1440, (his wife Alice, died died two years before) without issue, the younger son,

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
LIBRARY
CHICAGO, ILL.

Sir THOMAS WALDEGRAVE succeeded to the family estate, and continued the line. He also espoused the cause of the house of York, and for his valiant behaviour at the battle of Towton-field, had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him the same day, March 29, A. D. 1461. He died A. D. 1500, having had issue by his wife Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Sir John Fray, knight, lord chief baron of the Exchequer, three sons and two daughters, Jane, who was the second wife of Thomas Mannock, of Gifford's-hall, in Suffolk, esquire, who bore to him no issue, and Catherine, wife of George Mannock, esquire, son to the said Thomas, by his former wife.

The sons were,

1. Sir William Waldegrave, his heir, who was made knight of the Bath, at the marriage of prince Arthur, on the seventeenth of November, A. D. 1501. He was seated at Smallbridge, in Suffolk, and married Margery, daughter of Sir Henry Wentworth, of Codham, in Essex. From which match the Waldegraves of Smallbridge Ferreis, and Lawford, derive their descent.

2. Edward Waldegrave, ancestor to the earls of Waldegrave.

3. Richard Waldegrave.

The second son,

EDWARD WALDEGRAVE, was seated at Borely, in the county of Essex, and died A. D. 1527, leaving issue by his second wife, a daughter of Thomas Mannock, of Giffords-hall, in Suffolk, esquire, two sons and a daughter, Mary, married to Isaac Asteley, of Malton-Constable, in Norfolk.

The sons were,

1. Sir John Waldegrave.

2. Thomas Waldegrave.

The first wife of this Edward Waldegrave, was Mabel, daughter and coheir of John Cheyney, of Pinhoo, in Devonshire.

Sir JOHN WALDEGRAVE, succeeding his father, was seated also at Borely. He married Lora, daughter of Sir John Rochester of Lavenham, in Suffolk, knight, and sister to Sir Robert Rochester, knight of the Garter, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and comptroller of the household, in the reign of queen Mary, by whom he had issue three sons,

1. Sir Edward Waldegrave, his successor.

2. Robert Waldegrave, who married a coheirefs of the name of Forster, and

3. John Waldegrave.

He died on the sixth of October, A. D. 1543, and his eldest son,

Sir EDWARD WALDEGRAVE, on the thirtieth of November following, had special livery of his lands.

In the first of Edward VI. he obtained a grant to him and his heirs of the manor and rectory of West Haddon, in the county of Northampton. He was a principal officer in the household of lady Mary, afterwards queen of England, and therefore was deemed a proper person jointly with Sir Robert Rochester, his uncle, and Sir Francis Inglesfield, to be employed in forbidding mas in the house of their said lady; and these gentlemen for their failure herein incurred the king's displeasure to such a degree, that they were first committed to the Fleet, on the twenty-ninth of August, in the seventh of Edward VI. and afterwards to the Tower of London, where they were prohibited the use of pen, ink, and paper, and denied the privilege of having any visiter.

These gentlemen had it in commission from the council at Hampton-court, before which they were summoned to appear, to let the lady Mary know, the communion book should be used from that time in her family, and to prohibit her chaplains from saying mass in her house, under pain of the king's displeasure. But the severer part of their task yet remains; for in case her grace on this message dismissed them, they were commanded not to leave her house or service, but to stay and see the order fulfilled, and to deliver a letter to her grace from the king.

As this is an extraordinary anecdote, and in which Sir Edward Waldegrave was principally concerned, we shall insert the following curious extract from a manuscript in the Cotton Library, which will satisfy the curious of the result of the commission, which these gentlemen had received.

"This day (August 22,) Mr. Rochester, Sir Francis Inglesfield, and Mr. Waldegrave, officers to the lady Mary's grace, were before the lords, and declared unto their lordships that upon Saturday the fifteenth of this present, they arrived at Copped-hall, somewhat before night, by reason whereof they did not the same night execute their charge committed to them at Hampton-court, the fourteenth of this present. The Sunday following, because they understood that her grace received the sacrament, they did abstain to deliver their letter before noon, considering that the same would trouble and disquiet her. So as after taking commodity, to declare their letters, after that her grace had read them, they made offer to declare to her what charge they had received of the lords to execute; praying her grace to be contented to hear the same. Whereupon her grace made answer, that she knew right well that their commission was agreeing with such matter as was contained in her letters, and that therefore they needed not to rehearse the same. Howbeit, then pressing her grace, she was finally content to hear them. And when they had done, she seemed to be marvelously offended with them, and charged them that they should not declare that same they had in charge to say, neither to her chaplains nor her family. Which if they did, besides that they should not take her hereafter for their mistress, she would immediately depart out of the house. Upon this, as the said Rochester, Inglesfield, and Waldegrave, said to the lords, that forasmuch as she oftentimes altered her colour, and seemed to be passionate and unquiet, they forbore to trouble her any farther; fearing that the troubling her might perchance bring her into her old disease; and besought her to consider the matter calmly with herself, and pass thereupon against Wednesday next, when they would wait on her grace, and know her further pleasure. Which they said they did, hoping to have found her then, upon more ripe deliberation, and debating of the matter with herself, more conformable. And in the mean time they forbear also to declare to her chaplains and household the charge they had received. But repairing to her grace the said Wednesday, they did not only not find her conformable, but in further choler than she was before; utterly forbidding them to make declaration of their said charge and commission to her chaplains and household: adding, that where she and her household were in quiet, if they would by any means disturb her and them, if any inconvenience did ensue thereof to her or them, she would [attribute] it to the said Rochester, Inglefield, and Waldegrave. Which thing considered, they thought it better to return without doing their commission, and declare this much to their lordships, without meddling any further, than to proceed in the execution of their charge before they had advertised their lordships of the premisses.

"The lords having heard this much, commanded them to attend, until they should know further of their pleasures.

"The said Rochester, Inglefield, and Waldegrave, brought with them letters from the lady Mary's grace to the king's majesty." Thus far the Cotton Manuscript, which is a transcript out of the Council-Book.

We find further, out of the Council-Book, and the King's Journal, that August 23, they attended again, and were severally, one by one, charged with not obeying the king's injunctions, as aforesaid. And were strictly ordered, on their allegiance, and by the king's special command, to perform their commission, which they all refused to do; and thereupon were commanded to attend the council, till they were told their further pleasure.

After which the king sent the lord chancellor Rich, Sir Anthony Wingfield, and Sir William Peter, to execute the said commission. And Sir Edward Waldegrave, with his uncle Rochester, and Inglefield, were committed first to the Fleet, and afterwards to the Tower, as before-mentioned. And Sir Edward Waldegrave being thus closely confined, fell sick, and his wife, on the twenty-seventh of September following, obtained leave to repair to him, and provide for the recovery of his health; but still continuing in the same condition, it was ordered, on the twenty-fourth of October, that he should be removed out of the Tower, by the lieutenant, to some honest house, where he might be better looked to, for the curing of his quartan ague; remaining still as a prisoner, and to be forth-coming whensoever he should be called for. On the eighteenth of March following, he, with the other two, obtained leave to go to their own houses, and on the twenty-fourth of April they had licence to repair to the lady Mary, on her request.

King Edward's death happening soon after, Sir Edward Waldegrave was highly esteemed by queen Mary for his sufferings, who swore him of her privy-council, in the first year of her reign, constituted him master of the great wardrobe, and granted him the manor of Chewton, in Somersetshire. He was elected one of the knights for Wiltshire to that parliament, which sat at Westminster, in October, A. D. 1553, and held to December 6, and then dissolved: also in that parliament summoned to meet at Oxford, on the second of April, A. D. 1554, March the first, but was adjourned to Westminster. He was elected one of the knights for Somersetshire: likewise was chosen for the county of Essex, in the parliament, 4 & 5 Phil. & Mar. which met at Westminster, January 20, A. D. 1557, which held to the queen's decease. He was made one of the knights of the carpet on the second of October, the day after the queen's coronation, by the earl of Arundel; and, on the seventeenth of April following, was appointed one of the commissioners for the trial of Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, knight, charged with being privy to Wyatt's rebellion. In 4 & 5 Phil. & Mar. he obtained a grant of the manor of Hever-Cobham, in the county of Kent, and of the office of lieutenant of Waltham forest. Also was constituted chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, on the death of his uncle, Sir Robert Rochester, whom he succeeded also as heir to his large possessions, paying such legacies as were appointed in the will, of which he was one of the executors.

In 1558, being then chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, he was commissioned, with other privy-counsellors, to dispose of the church lands then vested in the crown. His prosperity was however soon at an end; for upon the accession of queen Elizabeth, he was divested of his employments, and committed to the Tower of London, where he continued near three years, and departed this life on the first of September, A. D. 1561.

He married Frances, daughter of Sir Edward Noel, knight, ancestor to the present lord Abergavenny, by whom he had issue two sons and three daughters.

The latter were,

1. Mary, married to John, lord Petre.
2. Magdalen, married Sir John Southcote, of Wytham, in Essex.
3. Catherine, married to ——— Goodwyn, of Somersetshire, esquire.

The sons were,

1. Nicholas Waldegrave, seated at Borely, in Essex, who married Catherine, daughter of Weston Brown, of Abbot's Roding, in Essex. From which match the Waldegraves now of Borely derive their descent.

2. Charles Waldegrave, who continued our line. Which

CHARLES WALDEGRAVE, esquire, was of Staning-hall, in Norfolk, and of Chewton, in Somersetshire, and having married Jeronima, daughter of Sir Henry Jernegan, of Coffey-hall, in Norfolk, had issue two daughters,

1. Frances, who became the wife of Henry Yaxley, of Bowthorp, in Norfolk, esquire.
2. Magdalen, the wife of Philip Parris, of Poding Norton, esquire.

Also two sons. Of Charles, the youngest, we know nothing.

The eldest,

SIR EDWARD WALDEGRAVE, who succeeded his father, served in parliament for Sudbury, in the twenty-seventh of Elizabeth, and in several succeeding parliaments. Although upwards of seventy years of age, he was an active loyalist, and commanded a regiment of horse in the civil wars; and on the first of August, A. D. 1643, was by king Charles I. created a baronet.

He persevered in his attachment to the royal family to the last, notwithstanding he had lost two of his sons, and suffered in his estate, to the value of fifty thousand pounds; and so far incurred the displeasure of the parliament, that in those propositions presented to his majesty at Hampton-court, on the seventh of September, A. D. 1647, he was among those persons nominated to be removed from his majesty's councils, and to be restrained from coming within the verge of the court, and to be declared incapable of bearing any employment.

moved

The time of this great man's death is not ascertained; but his first lady Eleanor, daughter of Sir Thomas Lovel, of Harling, in the county of Norfolk, knight, and sister and heir to Sir Francis Lovel, died on the twelfth of December, A. D. 1604, after which he married, secondly, a widow, whose name was Copledike, but had by her no issue. By the former lady he had a son and heir,

Sir HENRY WALDEGRAVE, baronet, who lies buried in the chancel of Cossey church, in Norfolk, with the following inscription on his monument, which contains all that is necessary to be said of him.

"Here lieth the body of Sir Henry Waldegrave, of Staning-hall, baronet, son and heir to Sir Edward Waldegrave, knight and baronet, and Elenor, his wife, daughter to Sir Thomas Lovel, of Harling. He married Anne Paston, daughter of Edward Paston, of Appleton, esquire, by whom he had VII sons and IV daughters. And, secondly, he married Catherine Bacon, daughter of Richard Bacon, gent. by whom he had six sons and six daughters. He died the 10th of October, 1658, aged sixty years."

Of the children by the latter lady we know not so much as the names; nor do we know more of those by the first wife, but that the names of the second, third, and fourth sons were, Edward, Henry, and John, and that the eldest son and successor was,

Sir CHARLES WALDEGRAVE, baronet, who married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Francis Englefield, of Englefield, in Berks, baronet, and had two sons, Henry, and Charles; the latter born August 21, A. D. 1660, and a daughter, Eleanor, born November 12, A. D. 1662.

The eldest son,

(First Lord.) SIR HENRY WALDEGRAVE, baronet, born August 24, A. D. 1659, was created baron Waldegrave, of Chewton, in the county of Somerset, by king James II. by letters patent, bearing date January 20, A. D. 1685. In February, A. D. 1686, he was appointed comptroller to the household; and on the eleventh of August, A. D. 1687, was constituted lord-lieutenant of the county of Salop.

He married Henrietta, natural daughter of king James II. by Arabella Churchill, sister to John, duke of Marlborough, which lady had assumed the surname of Fitz-James. This connection, joined to his zeal for the Romish religion, rendered him an abetter of most of his royal master's oppressive measures, insomuch, that when the revolution took place, he retired to Paris, where he died in 1689, having had issue two sons, James and Henry; the latter of which died unmarried: also a daughter, Arabella, who became a nun.

(First Earl.) JAMES WALDEGRAVE, succeeded his father in the barony, &c. qualifying himself by entering into the communion of the church of England, was permitted to take his seat in the house of peers on Monday the twelfth of February, A. D. 1721-2. The following account of this nobleman, collected from the Gazettes of that time, may be depended upon as authentic.

On the eighth of June, A. D. 1723, he was appointed a lord of the bed-chamber to his majesty, in the room of the duke of Richmond, deceased. On September 1, A. D. 1725, his lordship set out for the French court, being charged with his majesty's, and his royal highness the prince of Wales's compliments to the French king, on his marriage. On May 26, A. D. 1727, he was appointed ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the emperor of Germany, and two days after set out for that court by the way of France; and during his stay at Paris, receiving advice of the decease of his majesty, George I. arrived from Paris at Strasburgh on the twelfth following, N. S. On April 18, he arrived at Ulm, and received the compliments of the magistrates of that town; from thence he proceeded down the Danube for Vienna, where he arrived on the twenty-sixth, N. S. On the twenty-ninth he had an audience of his imperial majesty, at Luxembourg; and the preliminary articles for peace were reciprocally exchanged and ratified. He left that court June 7, A. D. 1730, and, by way of France, came to England. Whilst he was abroad in the service of his country, he was, by his late majesty, created viscount Chewton, and earl Waldegrave; the letters-patent bearing date 13 September 1729, 3 Geo. II. On the seventh of August, A. D. 1730, his majesty was pleased to appoint him ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the most christian king; also on November 3, following, one of the gentlemen of his bed-chamber, in the room of the earl of Chesterfield, appointed steward of his majesty's household. On the twelfth of February, A. D. 1734-5, he was sworn of the privy-council; and his lordship returning in 1737 from his embassy to England, for some time, he was elected a knight companion of the most noble order of the Garter, at a chapter held at St. James's, February 26, A. D. 1737-8; but affairs of moment calling his lordship to France, he was installed at Windsor, by his proxy, Sir William Wynn, knight, June 15, A. D. 1738. In the following year, having ever the interest of his country at heart, he complained to the court of France, that some Spanish vessels had seized ships belonging to British subjects, in the river of Bourdeaux; and the French ministry had such regard to his remonstrance, that orders were sent to the proper officers at that place, to endeavour to seize the Spaniards and their vessels, and to restore immediately to his majesty's subjects, the ships and effects that had been taken from them. At the latter end of that year he came over to England, and returned again to France in February, A. D. 1739-40. On April 5, A. D. 1740, his excellency gave a fine entertainment, on occasion of the success of admiral Vernon's enterprize against Porto Bello, at which were several English, German, Swedish, Danish, and Polish lords. But his lordship's health declining, he set out from Paris for Calais, on October 31, A. D. 1740, having obtained leave to return to England for his recovery. And on April 11, A. D. 1741, his lordship departed this life, at his seat at Navestoke, in the county of Essex, after a long illness, and was interred in the church there.

His lordship married, in the year 1714, Mary, second daughter of Sir John Webb, of Hatherop, in in Gloucestershire, baronet, and by her, (who died in child-bed, January 22, A. D. 1718-19) had three sons and a daughter, Henrietta, born January 2, 1716-17, who died May 31, A. D. 1753, having been married on the seventh of July, A. D. 1734, to lord Edward Herbert, second son to the marquis of Powis, who left her a widow in November following with child. She was delivered in June, A. D. 1735, of a daughter, Barbara, married afterwards to the earl of Powis.

1. James Waldegrave, his successor.
2. John Waldegrave, born at Ghent, in Flanders, January 17, A. D. 1715-16.
3. John Waldegrave, successor to his brother in the honours of the family.

The eldest son,

(Second Earl.) JAMES WALDEGRAVE, born March 4, A. D. 1714-15, upon the demise of his father, succeeded to the earldom, &c. and on the sixteenth of December, A. D. 1743, was appointed one of the lords of the king's bed-chamber. At the installation of his grace the duke of Newcastle, as chancellor of the university of Cambridge, he was complimented with the degree of Doctor of Laws, on the thirteenth of July, A. D. 1749.

On the twenty-seventh of April, A. D. 1751, he obtained a grant of the offices of steward of the duchy of Cornwall, and of the borough and manor of Bradninch, in Devonshire; and steward of all the castles, manors, and lands within the counties of Cornwall and Devon, parcel of the said duchy; and of warden and steward of the stanneries and of the stannery courts; and master and rider of the forest and chace of Dartmore, parcel of the said duchy.

On the eighteenth of December, A. D. 1752, he resigned his place in the king's bed-chamber upon being appointed by his majesty governor to his royal highness George, prince of Wales, (our present gracious sovereign;) and also to his royal highness prince Edward, (now duke of York;) and privy-purse to their royal highnesses. Two days after which appointment his lordship was sworn of the privy-council.

In 1758, he was installed at Windsor, knight of the most noble order of the Garter; and departed this life on April 8, A. D. 1763. His remains were interred at Navestock, with those of his father.

This nobleman, on the fifteenth of May, A. D. 1759, married Maria Walpole, one of the three natural daughters of Sir Edward Walpole, knight of the Bath, and by her, his lordship had issue three daughters.

1. Elizabeth Laura, born March 24, A. D. 1760.
2. Charlotte Maria, born October 11, A. D. 1761.
3. Anna Horatia, born November 8, A. D. 1762.

For want of male issue the honours of the family devolved upon his lordship's only surviving brother, (Third and present Earl.) JOHN WALDEGRAVE, born April 18, A. D. 1718, who was appointed groom of the bed-chamber to the late king, in January, A. D. 1747-8.

In 1747, he was returned to parliament for the borough of Oxford. In the ensuing parliament, which met May 31, A. D. 1754, he took his seat as member for Newcastle under Line. And in the parliament called upon the accession of his present majesty, and which met A. D. 1761, he was chosen for the same place.

He early took to a military life, being in December, A. D. 1737, appointed a lieutenant in the first regiment of guards, with the rank of captain. On the twelfth of July, A. D. 1743, he was appointed captain-lieutenant in the third regiment of foot-guards, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel; and, on the thirteenth of September following, obtained a company therein; and afterwards, in March, A. D. 1748, became second major; and in May, A. D. 1759, first major in the same regiment, with the rank of colonel. In February, A. D. 1751, he was appointed colonel of a regiment of foot, late Powlett's; and on the fifteenth of September, A. D. 1759, he was appointed colonel of the second regiment of dragoons-guards, in the room of lord George Sackville, and ranked as major general from the fifteenth of February, A. D. 1757, to the tenth of March, A. D. 1763; when he was raised to the rank of lieutenant-general. In March, A. D. 1760, his lordship was constituted governor of Plymouth.

In 1751, he married Elizabeth, daughter of John, earl Gower, by whom his lordship had issue three sons, and four daughters. The latter are,

1. Elizabeth, } born May 26, A. D. 1758,
2. Amelia, } twins.
3. Frances, born October 6, A. D. 1761.
4. Caroline, born March 1, A. D. 1765.

The sons are,

1. George Waldegrave, called viscount Chewton, born November 22, A. D. 1751.
2. William Waldegrave, born July 9, A. D. 1753.
3. John Waldegrave, born November 27, A. D. 1756.

(TITLES.) John Waldegrave, earl Waldegrave, viscount Chewton, baron Waldegrave, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, August 1, A. D. 1643, (19 Charles I.) lord Waldegrave, of Chewton, in the county of Somerset, January 20, A. D. 1685, (1 James II.) viscount Chewton, and earl Waldegrave, September 13, A. D. 1729, (3 George II.)

(ARMS.) Party per pale, pearl and ruby.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, topaz, a plume of five ostrich feathers, party per pale as the coat.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two talbots, diamond; eared, topaz; and each gorged, with a mural coronet, pearl, masoned, diamond.

(MOTTO.) "Cælum non animum."

(CHIEF SEATS.) Navestock, Essex. Haverplace, Kent.

ASHBURN-

ASHBURNHAM, Earl of ASHBURNHAM.

THIS noble family, seated originally at Ashburnham, in the rape of Hastings, in Suffex, is stiled by Fuller in his worthies, a family of stupendous antiquity, a family wherein the eminence hath equalled the antiquity, having been barons in the reign of Henry III. How long they were seated at Ashburnham is not ascertained; but we are able without interruption to trace them in a lineal retrogradation till we arrive at the reign of king Edward the Confessor, when we find,

PIERS, lord of Ashburnham, whose only son and heir,

ANCHITEL FITZ PIERS, was also lord of the same place, in which he was succeeded by his son,

BERTRAM DE ASHBURNHAM, or Ashburnham, whose descendants have invariably observed the name of that lordship as their surname.

He was a baron of the first rank and eminence at the time when William the Conqueror invaded England, and exemplified his attachment to king Harold by a strenuous opposition to the Normans. He was sheriff of the three adjacent counties, Kent, Surry, and Suffex; also constable of Dovercastle, and warden of the cinque ports; employments of honour and confidence, which must greatly have added to the natural influence, which as a man of considerable property he otherwise had in those parts. The success which attended the Norman duke naturally exposed all the friends of Harold to his mercy, which, in many instances, he liberally extended; it did not however reach Bertram, or his two sons, Philip and Michael, who were all three beheaded by order of William the Conqueror.

The records subsequent to the conquest are entirely silent as to any historical facts relative to the descendants of this Philip de Ashburnham (who was beheaded with his father) for sixteen generations; we shall therefore refer our reader for the genealogical part, which is preserved entire, to our table, beginning our account here with the seventeenth in descent from the last named Philip,

SIR JOHN ASHBURNHAM, who was knighted at the Tower of London, on the fifteenth of March, A. D. 1604, and dying A. D. 1620, was interred in St. Andrew's-church, Holbourn, where a monument presents us with the following inscription:

Antiquo stemmate nobilis, avitis sui virtutibus clarior, hic jacet Johannes Ashburnham, nuper de Ashburnham miles qui obiit in festo sancti Petri, 1620. Etatis 49. relictis ex conjugē clarissimis Johanne, Gulielmo, Elizabeth, Francisca, Anna & Catherina.

Domina Eliz Ashburnham Vidua F Thomæ Beaumont de Staughton in Com Leicestr. Milit. hoc amori & officio consulens, meritissimo viro lugubris posuit 1621.

The daughters of this match were,

1. Elizabeth, married to Sir Frederic Cornwallis, baronet.
2. Frances, married to Frederic Turville, esquire.
3. Anne, to Sir Edward Deering, baronet.
4. Catherine, died unmarried.

Their mother marrying, secondly, Sir Thomas Richardson, lord chief justice of the Common-pleas, was, by king Charles I. created baroness of Cramond, in Scotland, with entail of that honour to her issue by Sir Thomas.

JOHN ASHBURNHAM, eldest son of Sir John, last named, succeeded his father; but we must first treat of his younger brother,

William Ashburnham, who served in his youth in the service of the States-General against the Spaniards in the Netherlands; and being an excellent soldier, had a principal command in that army raised by king Charles, to march against the Scots. In 1640, he was member of parliament for Luggershal, in Wiltshire, and was examined on oath, whether he knew any thing of that plot charged on the officers of the army, for petitioning the king, &c. which he denied; nevertheless, the parliament voted, that he should receive no pay. Standing thus in great umbrage with the parliament, and the king's affairs not yet permitting him to make use of his service, he, to avoid the clamour that was raised against him, embarked on board a small fly-boat for Holland, with some other officers, who removed on the same account. They had not been long at sea, before they met with one of his majesty's ships, bringing amunition to his assistance: on which it was agreed, that Mr. Ashburnham and the lord Digby should proceed on their voyage, and the others should return with the ammunition; but whilst this was agitating, the parliament squadron dron came up, and though the ship escaped, yet the fly-boat was taken, and carried into Hull; where he was taken with the lord Digby, who concealed himself under the disguise of a Frenchman, till he found a convenient opportunity to reveal himself to the governor, Sir John Hotham, whom he prevailed with to espouse his majesty's interest, and to surrender Hull; which design being at length rendered fruitless, colonel Ashburnham, and the lord Digby, were dismissed by the governor, and was the principal cause (as my lord Clarendon writes) of the loss of Sir John's head.

Mr. Ashburnham came to his majesty about the time he set up his standard at Nottingham, and entered on action with the first, repairing to the marquis of Hertford, at Sherburn, where, with a small force, having kept that castle several weeks, without being incommoded by the earl of Bedford, who watched them with a much greater army, they marched from thence to Minehead, and there the marquis, with some other gentlemen, transported themselves into Wales, leaving this colonel Ashburnham, with Sir Ralph Hopton and others, to march into Cornwall. There they raised forces with such activity, that in a small time they made themselves masters of the West; and having performed very considerable services, joined prince Maurice at Chard, in Somersetshire, about the middle of June, A. D. 1643, with an army of three thousand foot, five hundred horse, and three hundred dragoons, of which colonel Ashburnham had been major-general.

He was soon after made governor of Weymouth, on the opinion of his courage and dexterity, (as the earl of Clarendon writes) and to make way for him, Sir Anthony-Ashley Cooper was removed from that command. He was made colonel-general of the county of Dorset, and in the year 1644, having received express orders from prince Maurice, to quit all places that he conceived not tenable, in case an army should advance into those parts, he, about the fourteenth of June, on the earl of Essex's marching towards him, quitted Weymouth, a considerable port-town, and retired to Portland castle, where he endured a siege of about four months, with great patience and resolution, suffering both the want of men and provisions, until he was relieved by the earl of Cleveland, and Sir Walter Hastings appointed governor in his room. However, being censured for quitting of Weymouth, he, at his own request, had a publick hearing before his majesty and the council, to whom he so fully stated the matter of fact, (as Sir Edward Walker writes in his History of the Progress of the King's Forces) and the impossibility of keeping that place, in case an army did attempt it, together with his reasons for retiring to Portland, and how he disposed of his majesty's arms and ammunition, as that in the opinion of all there, he was cleared from any crime or neglect.

After the restoration he was made cofferer to king Charles II. and dying without issue in December, A. D. 1679, was buried in the church of Ashburnham, in Suffex, where a noble monument of white marble is erected to his memory, with his effigies in a Roman dress, and the effigies of his lady in white marble, reposing her right arm on a cushion, an angel holding a wreath on her head: and in a compartment of white marble is this inscription:

"Under this tomb (viz. in the vault for this family) lie the bodies of Jane countess of Marlborough, and William Ashburnham, her husband, second son of Sir John Ashburnham. She was daughter to John lord Butler of Hertfordshire; she was married first to James earl of Marlborough, lord high treasurer of England, who after seven years died, and left her a young, beautiful, and rich widow. When this William coming from beyond sea, where he was bred a soldier, married her, and after lived almost five and forty years most happily with her. She was a very great lover, and (through God's mercy) a great blessing to this family, which is hoped will ever remember it with honouring her memory. This William Ashburnham, her husband, lived after her to a great age, and gloried in nothing in this world but this his wife and the almost unparalleled love and entire friendship that for above fifty years was between his dear elder brother, John Ashburnham, and himself. He was cofferer to king Charles I. and king Charles II. He died without issue, and, by God's blessing, was a happy preserver of his brother's posterity.

"The praise and glory of it be to God alone."

We now return to the elder brother, JOHN ASHBURNHAM, who was groom of the bedchamber to king Charles I. and member of parliament for Hastings in 1640; and four years after, was so far confided in by his royal master, that he was appointed one of the commissioners for the treaty at Uxbridge.

He was the only servant, and indeed the only person, (except Dr. Hudson, a clergyman, who served as a guide) who attended his majesty on the twenty-seventh of August, A. D. 1646, when he left Oxford. And when the king was in the hands of the Scots army, he, with the royal approbation, transported himself to France, the Scots forbidding him the king's presence, and threatening to deliver him to the parliament; but when he was assured that the king was in the hands of the English army, he ventured to wait upon him again. He had also by some friends, a recommendation to Cromwell and Ireton, and jointly with Sir John Berkeley, knight, who came with him from France, was the principal agent for his majesty, conferring both with his majesty's friends and the officers of the army as often as they desired. But the army at last having got the sole power, they began to be regardless of these agents, and even of the king himself; whereupon his majesty resolving to escape, Mr. Ashburnham was the chief confidant in that affair, and with the said Sir John Berkeley, was sent to treat with colonel Hammond, governor of the Isle of Wight, to take the king into his protection, which the colonel seemed to comply with; but by a fatal mistake of that man's honour, the king was delivered into the hands of the army, which occasioned tioned a suspicion of Mr. Ashburnham, and Sir John Berkeley, especially the former, whom however the earl of Clarendon sufficiently clears.

After the murder of the king, Mr. Ashburnham obtained leave to remain in England, of his son, in regard that he had married a lady of large possessions, which most probably would suffer confiscation should he leave them. His loyalty however induced him to supply king Charles II. with considerable sums of money, for which he was committed to the Tower by Cromwell, where he remained a prisoner till the death of that usurper.

When the happy restoration of Charles II. took place, he was reinstated in his post of groom of the bed-chamber; and in 1661, was elected to parliament, as knight of the shire for Sussex.

He was interred in the chancel of Ashburnham church, under a noble monument of black and white marble, whereon lie the effigies in full proportion of a gentleman in armour between his two wives, the one in a winding-sheet, the other in a baroness's robe, with a coronet on her head; all their hands elevated; and underneath are the figures of four sons and four daughters kneeling before a desk. Over all, in an arch of white marble, supported by two black marble pillars, is the following inscription on black marble, in gilt Roman letters.

"Here lies in the vault underneath, John Ashburnham, esquire, of this place, son of the unfortunate Sir John Ashburnham, whose good nature and frank disposition towards his friends, in being deeply engaged for them, necessitated him to sell this place, (in his family long before the conquest,) and all the estate he had elsewhere, not leaving to his wife and six children the least substance, which is not inserted to the least disadvantage of his memory, (God forbid it should be understood to be a charge of disrespect upon him) but to give God the praise, who so suddenly provided both for his wife and children, as that within less than two years after the death of the said Sir John, there was not any of them but was in a condition rather to be helpful to others, than to want support themselves. May God be pleased to add this blessing to his posterity, that they may never be unmindful of the great things he hath done for them. The wife of the said Sir John Ashburnham was daughter to Sir Thomas Beaumont, of Slaughton, in Leicestershire. She was very eminent for her great temper and prudence. She died in the seventy-fifth year of her age, and both the said Sir John and his wife, lie buried in the church of St. Andrew's in Holbourn, London."

"The said Mr. John Ashburnham married the daughter and heir of William Holland, of Westburton, in this county, esquire, who lies also here interred, and by whom he had these eight children. She made the first step towards the recovery of some part of the inheritance wasted by the said Sir John, for she sold her whole estate, to lay out the money in this place. She lived in great reputation for piety and discretion, and died in the seven and thirtieth year of her age. The second wife to the said Mr. John Ashburnham, who lies also here interred, was the widow of the lord Poulett, of Hinton St. George, in the county of Somerset: she was daughter and heir to Christopher Kenn, of Kenn, in that county, esq; who left her a great estate in lands, now in the possession of the lord Poulett. She was worthy imitation by all her sex, for her honourable and religious conversation: She brought great advantages to the family of this place, and died at the age of seventy years and four months: And her memory is precious to all considering persons that knew her. This Mr. John Ashburnham was of the bedchamber to their majesties Charles I. and Charles II. who when he had performed the service to God, in building this church at his own charge, died in the sixty-eighth year of his age, on the fifteenth day of June, in the year of our Lord 1671."

Frances, the first wife of the said John Ashburnham, died in the year 1649, and was buried at Ashburnham. Of their daughters, Frances, born anno 1632, was married to Sir Denny Ashburnham, of Bromham, in Sussex, baronet, from whom is descended the present William Ashburnham, lord bishop of Chichester; and Elizabeth, to Sir Hugh Smith, of Long-Ashton, in the county of Somerset, baronet.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM ASHBURNHAM, esquire, died in the year 1655, and was buried at Ashburnham, having married Elizabeth, daughter of John, lord Poulett, of Hinton St. George, by whom he had issue John, his son and heir, created lord Ashburnham. And the said Elizabeth was, secondly, married to Sir William Hartop, of Rotherby, in the county of Leicester, and dying on the eighteenth of August, A. D. 1690, aged sixty, was buried at Ashburnham. Which

(First Lord.) JOHN ASHBURNHAM, born January 15, A. D. 1655-6, was heir to his grandfather, as also to his uncle William Ashburnham; and on the accession of king William and queen Mary, was created a baron, by the stile and title of lord Ashburnham, baron of Ashburnham, in Sussex, by letters patent, bearing date the twentieth of May, A. D. 1689.

His lordship married in Westminster-abbey, on the twenty-second of July, A. D. 1677, Bridget, only daughter and heir to Walter Vaughan, of Porthommel-house, in Brecknockshire, esquire; and on the nineteenth of August, A. D. 1702, he was constituted lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of that county.

His lordship departed this life on the twenty-second of January, A. D. 1703-10, and was interred at Ashburnham, where also the remains of his lady are deposited.

Their issue were three sons and three daughters,

1. Jane, married to James Hayes, of Glynbourn, in Sussex. She died in August, A. D. 1731.

2. Ann, who died an infant.

3. Elizabeth, married, first, to Robert Cholmondeley, of Holford, in Cheshire, son of Thomas, natural son of Robert, viscount Kells, and earl of Leinster, in Ireland; and, secondly, to Seymour Cholmondeley, esquire, brother to Charles Chol.

Cholmondeley, of Vale Royal, esquire. She died in January, 1732-3.

The sons were,

1. William Ashburnham, his successor.
2. John Ashburnham, the first earl of this family.
3. Bertram Ashburnham, died in April, A. D. 1743.

The eldest son,

(Second Lord.) WILLIAM ASHBURNHAM, born May 20, A. D. 1675, died on the sixteenth of June, after the decease of his father, and having no issue by his lady, Catherine, daughter, and at length sole heir to Thomas Tayler, of Clapham, in the county of Bedford, esquire, (which lady died on the eleventh of July, after her husband, and they were both buried at Ashburnham) the honours of the family devolved upon his brother,

(First Earl.) JOHN ASHBURNHAM, baptised March 13, 1687. In 1713, he was colonel and captain in the first troop of horse-guards. In December, A. D. 1728, he was appointed lord of the bed-chamber to his royal highness Frederic, prince of Wales.

By letters patent, bearing date the fourteenth of May, A. D. 1730, he was created viscount St. Asaph, and earl of Ashburnham. In June the following year he resigned his place in the prince's bed-chamber; and on the twenty-third of November next ensuing was constituted captain of the yeomen of the guards.

He was thrice married: first on the twenty-first of October, A. D. 1710, to Mary, daughter of James Butler, duke of Ormond; by which lady, who died on the second of January, A. D. 1712, and was buried at Ashburnham, in the twenty-third year of her age, he had no issue.

He married, secondly, on the twenty-fourth of July, A. D. 1714, Henrietta, countess of Anglesey, widow of John, earl of Anglesey; and daughter to William, earl of Derby, who died on the twenty-sixth of June, A. D. 1718, in the thirty-first year of her age, leaving an only daughter, Henrietta Bridget, born November 10, 1716; who died unmarried on the eighth of August, A. D. 1732.

His lordship married, thirdly, Jemima, daughter, of Henry Grey, duke of Kent, and by her, who died on the twenty-seventh of July, A. D. 1731, had issue a son and heir,

His lordship departing this life at his house in St. James's-Square, in March, A. D. 1736-7, was buried at Ashburnham, with the remains of his three wives. He was succeeded by his only son, (Second and present Earl) JOHN ASHBURNHAM, born October 30, A. D. 1724. He was appointed lord of the bedchamber to king George II. in February, 1747-8, in which post he was continued by his present majesty till he resigned in 1762.

On the fourteenth of July, A. D. 1753, he was appointed keeper of his majesty's park, called Hyde-Park, in the county of Middlesex, and also keeper of St. James's Park, in which he was succeeded by George, earl of Orford, on the twelfth of July, A. D. 1763. On the twelfth of July, A. D. 1765, he was constituted master of the great wardrobe.

In 1756, he married Elizabeth, sister and co-heiress of John Crowley, esquire, of Barking-hall, in Suffolk, daughter of John Crowley, esquire, late alderman of London, son of Sir Ambrose Crowley, knight.

By this lady, his lordship has had issue,

Two sons,

1. George Ashburnham, born February 2, 1758, who died twelve days after his birth.
2. George Ashburnham, called viscount St. Asaph, born December 25, A. D. 1760.

Also four daughters,

1. Henrietta Theodosia, born November 8, A. D. 1759.
2. Jemima Elizabeth, born January 1, A. D. 1762.
3. Elizabeth Frances, born May 10, A. D. 1763.
4. Theodosia Maria, born June 16, A. D. 1765.

(TITLES.) John Ashburnham, earl and baron Ashburnham, and viscount St. Asaph.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Ashburnham, of Ashburnham, in the county of Sussex, May 30, A. D. 1689, (1 William and Mary.) viscount St. Asaph in the principality of Wales, and earl of Ashburnham, May 14, A. D. 1730. (3 George II.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, a fess, ruby, between six mullets of the latter*.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, topaz, an ash-tree, proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two grey hounds, diamond, each having a plain collar and line, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Le roy and l'estat."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Ashburnham, in the county of Sussex; and at Teddington, in the county of Middlesex.

* They sometimes have born ruby, a fess, pearl, between six mullets of six points pierced, of the latter.

HOWARD, Earl of EFFINGHAM.

OF the many families which claim one common ancestor with his grace the duke of Norfolk, this branch issuing from William Howard, commonly called lord William Howard, eldest son of Thomas, second duke of Norfolk, by his second wife, Agnes, daughter of Sir Hugh Tilney, deputy of Calais, and sister and heir to Sir Philip Tilney, of Boston, in Lincolnshire, is by no means to be accounted the least considerable, inasmuch as it has afforded nine peers of parliament, in a little more than two hundred years, three of which were only barons, and the other six earls, three of Nottingham, and three of Effingham, most of which have been men of eminence in the several reigns wherein they lived.

(First Lord.) WILLIAM HOWARD, eldest son to Thomas, second duke of Norfolk, by his second wife, &c. in the twenty-fourth of Henry VIII. was one of the attendants of his majesty to Calais, and from thence to Bulloign, where he was magnificently received by Francis the First, king of France. About two years after he was sent into Scotland, to present king James V. with the order of the Garter: also to acquaint him of the intended interview betwixt their majesties of England and France; and intreating his presence thereat, to desire him to pass through England, in order to accompany king Henry to Calais.

In the twenty-seventh year of that reign, he was (according to Herbert) sent with Dr. William Barlow, bishop of St. Asaph, to the king of Scots, to persuade him to an interview with king Henry, as also to make certain advantageous propositions to him.

In the thirty-third of that reign, upon the unhappy deportment of Catherine Howard, his niece, fifth wife of king Henry VIII. for which she lost her head (being newly returned from an embassy to France) he was indicted, as was also his wife, and the old duchess of Norfolk, for misprision of treason, in concealing what they knew of that queen's behaviour therein, and condemned to perpetual imprisonment: but at length, through the king's favour, he was enlarged. In the sixth of Edward VI. he was made deputy of Calais.

Being a valiant person, (says Dugdale) and perfectly loyal to both those kings, he had such esteem from queen Mary, as that by letters patent, bearing date the eleventh of March, A. D. 1553, in the first year of her reign, he was advanced to the degree and dignity of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Howard of Effingham; also, the twentieth of the same month, made lord admiral of England, Ireland, and Wales; and upon the second of April next ensuing, took his seat in parliament amongst the rest of the peers. Also, on the eighth of that month, he was constituted lord-admiral and lieutenant-general of all her forces at sea. He was likewise lord-chamberlain of her household, in which office he was continued by queen Elizabeth, upon her accession to the throne.

On the ninth of October, A. D. 1554, he was elected knight of the most noble order of the Garter, and installed in December following.

He was sent ambassador, with the lord Cobham, to the Spaniards, in the Netherlands; and, in the twelfth of Elizabeth, accompanied the earl of Suffex, general of those forces, then sent against the earls of Northumberland and Westmorland, at that time in rebellion. In the fifteenth of that reign he was one of the peers that sat at the trial of the duke of Norfolk.

By his testament, bearing date the sixth of May, in the eleventh of Elizabeth, he bequeathed his body to be buried in the chancel of the parish church of Reygate, in Surry, appointing a tomb there to be made for him, and to Charles, his son and heir, bequeathed his collar of gold, and all his robes belonging to the order of the Garter.

In 1572, he was appointed lord-privy-seal; but enjoyed that honourable office only a short time, for he departed this life on the eleventh of January, A. D. 1572-3. His remains were, pursuant to his will, deposited at Reygate.

This nobleman married two wives; first, Catherine, daughter and coheir to Sir John Broughton, of Tuddington, in the county of Bedford, knight. By this lady, who died A. D. 1535, and was buried at Lambeth, in Surry, his lordship had issue an only daughter, Agnes, married to William Powlet, marquis of Winchester.

He married, secondly, Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Gamage, of Coity, in Glamorganshire, which lady died A. D. 1581, having had issue by her lord, four sons and five daughters.

1. Douglas, married, first, John, lord Sheffield; secondly, Robert, earl of Leicester; and thirdly, Sir Edward Stafford, of Grafton, knight.

2. Mary, married, first, Edward, lord Dudley, afterwards Richard Montpeffon, esquire. She died A. D. 1600.

3. Frances, married Edward, earl of Hertford. She died A. D. 1598.

4. Catherine, died young.

5. Martha, married to Sir George Bouchier, knight, third son to John, earl of Bath.

The sons were,

1. Charles, successor to his honours.

H h

2. Sir

2. Sir William Howard, ancestor to the present earl of Effingham, to whom we shall return, when we have attended the elder branch, till for want of male issue the earldom of Nottingham became extinct, and the barony devolved upon his great grandson.

3. Edward Howard, } died young.

4. Henry Howard, }
The eldest son,

(First Earl of Nottingham.) Sir CHARLES HOWARD, succeeded his father; and on the twenty-fourth of April, A. D. 1574, was installed knight of the Garter.

In the thirteenth of Elizabeth, (his father then living) he was one of those noble persons, who by the command of queen Elizabeth, conducted the lady Anne, of Austria, daughter to Maximilian, the emperor, from Zealand into Spain.

In the twenty-eighth year of that reign, upon the death of Edward, earl of Lincoln, lord-high admiral of England, (being then lord chamberlain to the queen, as his father had formerly been) he was constituted his successor in that great and important office; whereupon in 1588, when that formidable armada from Spain, so much threatened an invasion here, he was constituted lieutenant-general of the queen's whole fleet at sea; of whose prosperous success she had not the least doubt, well knowing him, by his moderation and noble extraction, to be a person of great knowledge in maritime affairs, discreetly wary, thoroughly valiant, industrious in action, and a person whom the mariners entirely loved.

In the thirty-ninth of Elizabeth, further dangers being threatened from the Spaniards, through the help of those Irish, which were rebelliously disposed, he was made joint-general of the English army, with Robert, earl of Essex, for the defence of this realm, both by sea and land, (viz. Essex for the land, and this lord-admiral for the sea) the first squadron being led by him, the second by Essex, the third by Thomas Howard, and the fourth by Sir Walter Raleigh. On the fifteenth of June also, this year, he was constituted justice itinerant of all the forests south of Trent, for life; and upon the twenty-second of October following, in consideration of his eminent services, in 1588, by defending this realm against the Spanish armada, and afterwards in sacking of Cadiz, in Spain; as also in destroying the Spanish fleet then in the port there, was advanced to the dignity and title of earl of Nottingham, as descended from the family of Mowbray, whereof some had been earls of that county.

In the forty-first of Elizabeth, still continuing in high reputation at court, some danger from the Spaniard being then threatened, he was constituted lieutenant-general of the queen's field forces; and three years after, was made one of the commissioners for exercising the office of earl-marshal of England.

After the demise of queen Elizabeth, in order to the solemnity of the coronation of her successor, king James, his lordship was made lord-high-steward for that occasion; and in the second year of that monarch's reign, he was, upon a renewal of the commission, appointed one of the seven commissioners, to execute the office of earl-marshal. But in 1619, he surrendered his patent for the office of high-admiral into the king's hands, and was immediately succeeded by the marquis of Buckingham.

This noble earl married, first, Catherine, daughter of Henry Cary, lord Hunsdon, by whom he had issue two sons and three daughters,

1. Elizabeth, married to Sir Robert Southwell, of Woodrington, in Norfolk, knight.

2. Frances, married, first, to Henry Fitzgerald, earl of Kildare, in Ireland; secondly, to Henry, lord Cobham.

3. Margaret, married Sir Richard Leveson, of Trentham, in Staffordshire.

The sons were,

1. William Howard, who had summons to parliament, and died in the life-time of his father. Having married Anne, daughter and heir of John, lord St. John, of Bletchhoe, by her, who died A. D. 1638, and lies buried in Westminster-abbey, he had issue an only daughter and heir, Elizabeth, who became the wife of John, lord Mordaunt, afterward earl of Peterborough.

2. Charles Howard, successor to the honours of the family.

His lordship married, secondly, Margaret, daughter to James Stuart, earl of Murray, in Scotland, which Margaret was naturalized by parliament, in the first year of the reign of king James; by her he had issue two sons,

1. James Howard, who died young.

2. Sir Charles Howard, afterwards earl of Nottingham.

The first earl died at Hayling, near Croydon, on the thirteenth of December, A. D. 1624, being at that time eighty-eight years of age. Margaret, his wife, surviving him, married, secondly, Sir William Munson, knight, and after his decease, thirdly, viscount Castlemain, in Ireland; and the only surviving son of the first marriage, (Second Earl of Nottingham.) CHARLES HOWARD, succeeded as earl of Nottingham, &c. and was appointed lord-lieutenant of the county of Surry.

He married, first, Charitie, daughter to Robert White, of Christ-church, in the county of Southampton, widow of William Leche, of the Field, in Suffex; and this lady dying A. D. 1618, he married, secondly, Mary, daughter of Sir William Cockaine, knight, lord-mayor of London, and dying A. D. 1642, without issue, he was buried at Reygate, and the earldom, &c. devolved upon his half-brother, (Third Earl of Nottingham.) Sir CHARLES HOWARD, who marrying Arabella, daughter to Edward Smith, of the Middle-Temple, and dying, A. D. 1681, without issue, was buried at Reygate, and the earldom of Nottingham became extinct. The barony, which had been as it were obscured by the superior title, devolved upon,

(Fifth Lord.) FRANCIS HOWARD, great grandson of Sir William Howard, second son of the first baron Howard of Effingham. Which

Sir WILLIAM HOWARD was seated at Lingfield, in the county of Surry, and was elected to several parliaments for Reygate. He died A. D. 1600, having had issue by his wife Frances, (daughter of William Gouldwell, of Gouldwell-hall, in Kent, esquire,) three sons and one daughter, Honora.

1. Sir Edward Howard, knighted A. D. 1602, who was cup-bearer to king James I. and served in parliament also for Reygate. He died unmarried, A. D. 1620.

in

2. Sir Francis Howard.

3. Sir Charles Howard.

Sir FRANCIS HOWARD, knighted July 4, A. D. 1604, married Jane, daughter of Sir William Monson, of Kinnerly, in Surry, knight, and continued the line. He was seated at Bookham, in Surry, where he died, and was buried A. D. 1651. His issue were, seven sons and a daughter, entered in the table.

The eldest son,

Sir CHARLES HOWARD, was also knighted, and marrying Frances, daughter of Sir George Courthorp, of Whiligh, in Suffex, knight, had issue two sons and a daughter, Jane, married to Thomas Methwold, of Hele-house, in Middlesex.

The second son,

GEORGE HOWARD, married Anne, daughter of Thomas Kidder, of Lewes, in Suffex, esquire, and dying on the thirteenth of December, A. D. 1684, was buried at Bookham. His descendants are correctly entered in the table.

The eldest son,

FRANCIS HOWARD, was successor in the barony to Charles, earl of Nottingham, and baron Howard, of Effingham, of whom we have only to say, that his lordship was governor of Virginia in the reign of king Charles II. and died on the thirtieth of March, A. D. 1695. He was buried at Lingfield.

His lordship married first, Philadelphia, daughter of Sir Thomas Pelham, baronet, of Laughton, in the county of Suffex, ancestor to his grace the duke of Newcastle. This lady died on the thirteenth of August, A. D. 1681, and was buried at Lingfield, and her surviving lord married, secondly, Susan, eldest daughter of Sir Henry Felton, of Playford, in Suffolk, baronet, and widow of Thomas Herbert, esquire. His issue were, by the former lady, four daughters,

1. Philadelphia,
2. Margaret,
3. Frances,

died unmarried.

4. Elizabeth, married, first, to William Roberts, of Willefden, in Middlesex; and, secondly, to William Hutchinson, esquire.

Also three sons,

1. Charles Howard, born A. D. 1676, who died on the eleventh of April, A. D. 1694.

2. Thomas Howard, his heir.

3. Francis Howard, successor to his brother, and afterwards earl of Effingham.

The elder of these two surviving sons,

(Sixth Lord.) THOMAS HOWARD, succeeded to the barony. In the reign of queen Anne, his lordship was gentleman of the bedchamber to George, prince of Denmark; and after the accession of George I. was appointed to the same honourable post in his majesty's bedchamber.

He was twice married. By his last wife, Elizabeth, daughter of John Rotheram, of Much Waltham, in Essex, and widow of Sir Theophilus Napier, baronet, he had no issue; but by his first lady, Mary, daughter and coheir of Rush Wentworth, third son of Sir George Wentworth, a younger brother to Thomas, earl of Strafford, he was the father of two daughters,

1. Anne, married in September, A. D. 1729, to Sir William Yonge, knight of the Bath, and baronet.

2. Mary, married to George Venables Vernon, of Sudbury, in the county of Stafford, member in several parliaments for Litchfield.

His lordship departed this life on the tenth of July, A. D. 1725, and was buried at Lingfield. For want of male issue, the barony devolved upon his brother, (First Earl of Effingham.) FRANCIS HOWARD, who on the fourteenth of July, A. D. 1731, was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the horse-grenadier-guards; and on the twenty-second of July, A. D. 1732, was constituted colonel of a regiment of foot. On the death of the earl of Suffex, October 17, A. D. 1731, he was appointed deputy earl marshal of England; and, on the eighth of December following, was raised to the dignity of an earl of Great-Britain, by the stile and title of earl of Effingham.

In June, 1737, he was appointed colonel of the second troop of horse-grenadier-guards, and on the seventeenth of July, A. D. 1739, promoted to the rank of a brigadier-general. On the twenty-ninth of December, A. D. 1740, he was constituted captain and colonel of the fourth troop of horse-guards.

He married two wives. By the last lady, Anne, sister of Robert Bristow, esquire, one of the commissioners of his majesty's board of green-cloth, whom he married in July, 1728, he had a son, George Howard, born May 8, A. D. 1730, who died in July, 1731.

By his first lady, Diana, daughter of Fergus O'Farrel, esquire, of the kingdom of Ireland, he had a son and heir, (Second Earl of Effingham.) THOMAS HOWARD, who, upon the demise of his father, on the twelfth of February, A. D. 1743, (who was interred at Bookham) became earl of Effingham.

His lordship was also immediately appointed deputy earl-marshal of England; and the same month, (April) he was appointed colonel in the first regiment of foot-guards, and afterwards first lieutenant, and lieutenant-colonel of the second troop of horse-guards. On the twentieth of August, A. D. 1749, he was appointed aid-de-camp to his majesty; and on the second of December, A. D. 1754, he was preferred to the command of a regiment of foot, being then a major-general; and from the eighth of that month his lordship ranked as lieutenant-general.

He died on the nineteenth of November, A. D. 1763, being then colonel of the first troop of horse-grenadier-guards, and one of the chief searchers of the customs in the port of London. His remains were deposited in the family vault at Bookham, in Surry.

On the fourteenth of February, A. D. 1744-5, his lordship married Elizabeth, daughter of Peter Beckford, of the island of Jamaica, esquire, deceased, grandson of Sir Thomas Beckford, knight and alderman of London, by whom he had issue, two sons and four daughters, all now living.

1. Thomas Howard, successor to the honours, &c.

2. Richard Howard, born February 21, A. D. 1748.

The

The daughters are,

1. Elizabeth, born November 10, A. D. 1750.
2. Anne, born May 4, A. D. 1752.
3. Maria, born August 31, A. D. 1753.
4. Frances - Herring, born May 22, A. D.

1755.

(Third, and present Earl of Effingham.) THOMAS HOWARD, born January 13, A. D. 1745-6, succeeded his father, A. D. 1763, and married in October, A. D. 1765, Catherine, daughter of Metcalf Proctor, of Thorpe, near Leeds, esquire.

(TITLES.) Thomas Howard, earl of Effingham, baron Howard, of Effingham.

(CREATIONS.) Lord Howard, of Effingham, in the county of Surry, March 11, A. D. 1553, (1 queen Mary) and earl of Effingham, December 8, A. D. 1731, (5 George II.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly; first, the arms of Howard; secondly, ruby, three lions passant guardant in pale, topaz, a label of three points, pearl, for Brotherton; third, cheque, topaz and sapphire, for Warren; fourth, ruby, a lion rampant, pearl, for Mowbray, a mullet for difference.

(CREST.) On a chapeau, turned up ermine, a lion guardant, topaz, his tail extended, ducally crowned, pearl, and gorged with a label of three points of the latter, a mullet for difference.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two lions, pearl, each charged on the shoulder with a mullet, diamond.

(MOTTO.) "Virtus mille scuta."

(CHIEF SEAT.) Great Bookham, near Guildford, in Surry.

WALPOLE, Earl of ORFORD.

THE ancestors of this noble and ancient family were seated at Walpole*, in the county of Norfolk, long before the Conquest; and, that from this circumstance their surname was derived, antiquaries universally agree. As we are at a loss for a lineal succession of owners of that town before it was granted by the last of them to the monastery of Ely, so are we afterwards, till the reign of king Henry II.

We read however, of many who bore that name at, and after the arrival of William the Conqueror, viz. Reginald de Walpole, Richard de Walpole, and Emma, his wife, Stephen de Walpole, but cannot precisely determine what relation they bore to each other. The first we can speak of with any certainty, was

Sir HENRY DE WALPOLE, who, by Isabel, his wife, was father of Henry de Walpole, a person of such eminency, that, adhering to the barons in the reign of king John, and being taken prisoner, he was obliged to pay a fine of an hundred pounds, before he could obtain his deliverance. He was succeeded by Sir JOHN DE WALPOL, who was also engaged in the same cause; and returning to his allegiance, king Henry III. the twenty-seventh of October, (a few days after king John's death) writes to the sheriffs of Cambridge and Norfolk, forthwith to deliver to him all the lands, which he had at the time he revolted from king John, his father. In 38 Henry III. A. D. 1253, he was one of the jurors of Norfolk at the Pleas at Westminster.

He had several sons,

1. Henry de Walpol.
2. William de Walpol; and
3. Ralph de Walpol.

William de Walpol, the second son, gave to Henry, son of Sir John de Walpol, knight, and Henry, his son, and their heirs, lands in Thornmere, in Walpol, by a charter, dated at Walpol, in the twenty-fifth of king Edward, son of king Henry. And by another charter, dated in the same year, he gave to the said Henry Walpol, (who is mentioned to be a knight) and Henry, his son, other lands in Walpol.

Ralph de Walpol, the third son, also writing himself son of John, and clerk of Houton, gave, by deed, without date, to Thomas de Clenchwardetoun, one piece of land, called Longland, in the fields of Houton; whereunto was a witness, Sir Henry Walpol, and others. This Ralph is, without doubt, the same Ralph de Walpol, who was bishop of Norwich, and of Ely, and of this family, as appears from his arms in glass in the cathedral of Ely, as also from the register of Walpol St. Peter's, which recites his being born there. He obtained the dignity of archdeacon of Ely, in 1271, 55 Henry III. and was elected bishop of Norwich, on the eleventh of November, A. D. 1288. On his confirmation, John Peckham, archbishop of Canterbury, addressed him in this manner. "My lord elect, There has an evil custom prevailed in the diocese of Norwich, of receiving the first-fruits of the livings in your diocese, which proceeds from a spirit of covetousness, and is displeasing both to God and man. Let me therefore persuade you, if you have any concern for your soul's health, to lay aside this evil custom, which will thus tend to the public advantage." To which he made reply, "I shall freely consent to what you have desired of me, and promise to do all that is in my power to prevent it." This was transacted at South Malling, in Kent, after his return to England, from waiting on the king on the frontiers of Arragon, where he obtained the royal assent; and by patent, bearing date the seventh of February, the king recites, "That the church of Norwich, having elected that discreet man," Mr. Ralph de Walpol, archdeacon of Ely, to the bishopric of Norwich, he confirms the said election, and commands the archbishop of Canterbury, William de Redham, and Peter de Leycester, to deliver to him the temporalities, &c. whereupon he was consecrated in the church of Canterbury, (as the register of Walpole St. Peter's sets forth) on the twentieth of March following, being Mid-Lent Sunday. He sat in the see of Norwich about ten years, and then, on the death of William de Luda, bishop of Ely, was translated by the pope to Ely, by his own absolute authority. He continued in that see scarce three years, departing this life on the twentieth of March, A. D. 1301-2, and was buried on the first of April following, in the presbytery, before the high altar of his church. We must return to HENRY DE WALPOLE, the elder brother of this bishop, who succeeded his father, Sir John Walpole, in the manors of Walpole and Houton, (as it was antiently written) with other lands.

* There are two distinct parishes in that town; the one Walpole St. Andrew's, the other, Walpole St. Peter's; at the latter of which this family resided in those early days.

He had the honour of knighthood conferred on him before the fifth of king Edward the First; and married Isabel, daughter of Sir Peter Fitz-Osbert, and heir to her brother, Sir Roger Fitz-Osbert, summoned to parliament among the barons of the realm, in 22 Edward I. Surviving the said Sir Henry, this lady was married, secondly, to Sir Walter Jernegan, by which match the lordship of Somerley town, with other lands, (as Cambden observes) devolved on the Jernegans, after the death of Sir Roger Fitz-Osbert. She deceased about the fourth of king Edward the Second, and held a third part of the manor of Houton in dower, as appears by a charter of that date, wherein she is stiled the lady Isabella Gerne-gayn, late wife of Sir Henry Walpol, knight, father of Sir Henry Walpol, knight. Which

Sir HENRY WALPOL, held certain lands in Walpol, and was lord of the manor and villages of Houton. He was knighted either before, or in the first year of king Edward the Second, and sat as knight of the shire for the county of Norfolk, in the parliament that met at Lincoln, in 9 Edward II. In 16 Edward II. he was one of the commissioners for the county of Norfolk, who were appointed to assess and collect a subsidy of a sixth, granted to the king in parliament. Also, in the year following, he was returned into Chancery, among the knights, who (with other persons of note) were certified to bear antient arms from their ancestors. He purchased divers lands in Walpol and Houton, as is evident from several deeds, bearing date from the second year of king Edward the Second, to the seventh year of king Edward the Third, and was living in the ninth of

Edward the Third, when, with Alice, his wife, he constituted Henry, vicar of the church of Houton, to deliver seisin to John de Ketilston, and others, of two pieces of ground at Willifgreen, in the fields of Houton; and, departing this life soon after, left issue,

HENRY WALPOLE, his son and heir, who was returned one of the knights for the county of Norfolk, to the parliament summoned to meet at York, on Friday before the feast of St. Nicholas, in 7 Edward III. and with Robert de Walkfare, the other knight, had a writ (directed to the sheriff of Norfolk, as customary in that age) for their expences in attending nineteen days, at 4s. per diem. The armorial bearing of this gentleman was, a fess with three crosses crosslets, between two cheverons, circumscribed, S. H. WALPOL.

He had two sons, Henry and John, and two daughters, Catherine and Alice, and was succeeded by his eldest son, HENRY WALPOOL, who in the twelfth of Henry VI. when the title of the house of York began to be set on foot, and commissioners thereupon appointed in every shire, to summons all persons of the best note, and tender them an oath for the observation of articles concluded on in the parliament then held; this Henry Walpool, with his brother, John Walpool (as the name was then wrote) was returned among those of the first quality in the county of Norfolk, who were sworn to the observance of the said articles, and to keep the peace for themselves and retainers. The said John Walpool writes himself of Bychamwell, in his last will, which bears date on the thirteenth of January, A. D. 1433, wherein he constitutes his brother-in-law, Thomas Walby, executor, and leaves him guardian to his two daughters, Isabel and Cecilie.

Henry Walpool, before-mentioned, survived till the twentieth year of king Henry the Sixth, as appears by his last will, bearing date at Houghton, on Friday, the feast of St. Cruse, A. D. 1442, 20 Henry VI. and proved at Norwich, the twenty-seventh of June, the same year.

He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Oliver le Groffe, of Croftwick, in Norfolk, knight, and had issue five sons and two daughters, as in the table.

The eldest son,

HENRY WALPOLE, of Walpole, and Houghton, was the fifth of that name in lineal descent; and is mentioned in several deeds relating to his manors of Houghton, &c. in the reign of king Henry the Sixth. By Margery his wife, daughter of Sir John Harlick, of Southacre, in Norfolk, he had issue a son and heir,

JOHN WALPOLE, of Houghton, who took to wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Shawe, of Derby, esquire; and had issue, two sons,

1. Thomas Walpole.

2. William Walpole, who died without issue.

And two daughters,

1. Alice; and

2. Maude. The said

THOMAS WALPOLE, had a grant from William Fowkes, and others, of lands in Houghton, in 1 Henry VII. to which John Walpole, esquire, his father, was a witness. He had also divers other grants of lands in that reign.

By his testament, bearing date the twenty-fourth of May, A. D. 1512, 4 Henry VIII. it appears that he had two wives, Joan and Alice, which last survived him; also, that John, his eldest son, died before him, and had a wife, Anne, who survived him; likewise, that his daughter, Agnes, was married to William Ruffel, and Edward Walpole was his eldest surviving son and heir; but he constitutes executors of his will, his son, Henry Walpole, (ancestor to the Walpoles in Lincolnshire) and his brothers-in-law, Geffery and William Cobb. His first wife, Joan, was daughter of William Cobb, of Sandringham, esquire, by whom he had issue, as before is mentioned. He departed this life on the twenty-fourth of January, 1514.

EDWARD WALPOLE, eldest surviving son and heir to Thomas Walpole, was thirty years old at the death of his father, and, making proof of his age, had livery of his lands, as appears by inquisition taken at Norwich, the twenty-sixth of September, in the sixth year of king Henry the Eighth.

In 27 Henry VIII. Thomas Headham, and others, grant to this Edward Walpole, and Lucy his wife, and to John Walpole, their son and heir-apparent, one messuage in Houghton, &c. This Lucy was daughter of Sir Terrey Robsart, by his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Siderston, of Siderston, in Norfolk, knight; and, by the death of her brother, Sir John Robsart, and his daughter Amie, without issue, was at length sole heir to her great-grandfather, Sir John Robsart, knight banneret, and knight of the most noble order of the garter, who was famed for his valour and conduct in several actions in France, in the reigns of Henry the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth.

This Edward Walpole died in the first year of queen Elizabeth, and was buried with his ancestors at Houghton, on the second of January, A. D. 1558, and the said Lucy had sepulture with him on the first of February, A. D. 1559. They had issue a daughter, Elizabeth, married to Martin Cobb, of Snetisham, in Norfolk, esquire, and three sons, John, Richard, and Terrey; whereof Richard Walpole, second son, writing himself of Brakenash, in the county of Norfolk, gentleman, makes his will the twenty-sixth of March 1568, in 10 Elizabeth, and leaves his whole estate to his younger brother, Terrey Walpole: "And if his last will be not sufficient, without further act in the law, to give assurance, and convey over, to his said brother Terrey, all his right and interest in his lands, but that his eldest brother, as next heir to him by the common law, may challenge the same; his last request to him is, that he will relinquish his title therein, and suffer his last will to stand in force, which he hopes he will, having great trust in the goodness of his nature, and the uprightness of his conscience;" and wills to him his great seal with the red stone, and his tablet of gold. He also bequeaths legacies to Elizabeth, Bona, and Catharine Walpole, daughters of his said elder brother, John Walpole, and to Calibot Walpole, his son; also to his nephews, Geffery, and Thomas Cobb, and his nieces, Robsart, and Elizabeth Cobb; appointing his brother Terrey Walpole, executor.

This Terrey Walpole was buried at Houghton, the twentieth of February, A. D. 1582; having married two wives, Wyborough, and Catharine; the former was buried at Houghton, on the sixth of November, A. D. 1574, and by her he had issue Richard Walpole, baptized the thirteenth of February, A. D. 1568, and buried the sixth of January, A. D. 1632; also Lucy Walpole, christened the fifth of February, A. D. 1569. By Catharine, his second wife, daughter and coheir of ——— Threvile, he had issue Alice Walpole, baptized the eighteenth of October, A. D. 1579; Edward Walpole, baptized the second of June, A. D. 1581, and Anne Walpole, baptized the second of June, A. D. 1582, married to John Pepys, of Ashted, in Surrey, gentleman.

JOHN WALPOLE, esquire, elder brother to the said Richard, and Tirrey, succeeded to the manor of Siderston in Norfolk, and other lands, as cousin and heir to Anne Dudley, who died without issue, the first wife to Robert Dudley, earl of Leicester, the great favourite of queen Elizabeth; and was daughter and sole heir of Sir John Robsart, knight, brother to Lucy, wife of Edward Walpole, esquire, father to the said John. He married Catharine, daughter and coheir of William Callybot, of Coxforth, in Norfolk, esquire, and was buried by his ancestors at Houghton, the twenty-ninth of March, A. D. 1585, the said Catharine, his wife, surviving him twenty-four years, was buried by him the twenty-fifth of September, A. D. 1612.

Their issue were,

1. Edward Walpole, baptized the twenty-eighth of January, A. D. 1559, who died in his travels beyond the seas.

2. Callibot Walpole, was a twin with Thomas; they were christened on the fourteenth of March, A. D. 1561.

3. Dorothy, baptized the twenty-fifth of December, A. D. 1588, died an infant, and was buried the twenty-ninth of January, A. D. 1559.

4. Catharine, was married October 3, A. D. 1581, to Philip Ruffel, of Burnhamthorp, in Norfolk, esquire.

5. Bona, baptized the fourteenth of February, A. D. 1560, was married October 18, A. D. 1592, to John Amyas, of Delpham, in Norfolk, esq;

6. Elizabeth, married July 3, A. D. 1591, to Richard Bunting, of Southcreek, in Norfolk, esquire.

7. Bridget Walpole, baptized the sixteenth of November, A. D. 1569, married July 4, A. D. 1693, to Henry Paynell, of Bellaugh, in Norfolk, esquire.

The eldest surviving son,

CALLIBOT WALPOLE, succeeded his father, and, in the year 1591, took to wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Edmund Bacon, of Hefset, in the county of Suffolk, esquire, with whom he cohabited thirty-three years, and, surviving her, lived a widower twenty-two years. She was buried at Houghton on the first of February, A. D. 1624, and he had sepulture there with his ancestors, on the fourth of May, A. D. 1646.

Their issue were,

1. Robert Walpole, who succeeding him in his estate at Houghton, &c.

2. John Walpole, baptized the twentieth of November, A. D. 1595, was seated at Southcreeke, creeke, in Norfolk, and marrying Abigail, daughter and sole heir of Froxmer Corbet, of Bromesthorp, in the same county, esquire, became possessed of that seat and estate, and left three daughters his coheirs, Elizabeth, married to Edward Pepys, counsellor at law, and of Bromesthorp, esquire, but died without issue; Bridget, wedded to Francis Thoresby, of Gaywood, in Norfolk, esquire, and Susan, to John Hare, of Snitterton, as also (in her right) of Bromesthorp, esquire, second son of Sir John Hare, and brother to Sir Ralph Hare, of Stow-Bardolph, bart.

3. Callibot Walpole, baptized November 27, A. D. 1597, died unmarried.

4. Bacon Walpole, who was christened May 29, A. D. 1599, and died also unmarried.

The daughters were,

1. Elizabeth, baptized October 20, A. D. 1594, was married February 14, A. D. 1612, to Thomas Clifton, of Toftrees, in Norfolk, esquire; and

2. Anne, christened November 21, A. D. 1596, married January 12, A. D. 1614, to Thomas Petrus, esquire, son and heir of Sir Augustus Petrus, knight, (by his second wife, Abigail, daughter of Sir Arthur Heveningham) and brother to Sir Thomas Pettus, of Rackheath, in Norfolk, created a baronet, September 22, A. D. 1641, and died November 21, A. D. 1654. She was married, secondly, May 25, A. D. 1619, to Sir Henry Hungate, of Bradenham, in Norfolk, knight.

ROBERT WALPOLE, eldest son and heir of Callibot, was born September 23, A. D. 1593, and having married Susan, daughter of Sir Edward Barkham, knight, lord mayor of London, in the nineteenth of king James the First, had issue,

1. Elizabeth, baptized January 18, A. D. 1615, and buried the twenty-third following.

2. Jane, christened the ninth of March, A. D. 1617.

3. Elizabeth, baptized October 29, A. D. 1620; and

4. Edward, his son and heir, christened at Houghton, November 9, A. D. 1621.

Susan, his wife, departing this life the year after, was buried at Houghton, November 9, A. D. 1622; whereupon he lived a widower forty-one years, dying in the clymacteric year of his age, on the first day of May, A. D. 1663, and on the fourth of the same month, was buried by her.

Sir EDWARD WALPOLE, only son and heir, married in 1649, Susan, second daughter and coheir of Sir Robert Crane, of Chilton, in Suffolk, knight and baronet, and was elected a member for the borough of King's-Lynn, to the parliament begun at Westminster, the twenty-fifth of April, A. D. 1660, which voted the return of king Charles II. He, and his father, joined with Sir Horatio Townshend, (after lord viscount Townshend) in fortifying the haven of King's-Lynn, and raising forces for his majesty's reception, if the king had not been peaceably restored: for which service, he was made one of the knights of the Bath, at the coronation of king Charles the Second; and being again elected a member for Lynn, in that called the Long Parliament, deceased during the sitting thereof, in the forty-sixth year of his age, and was buried at Houghton, on the ninth of March, A. D. 1667-8, his lady dying before him the same year, had sepulture there on the eighth of July, A. D. 1667. This gentleman was highly esteemed by all that knew him; and the corporation of Lynn had such a sense of his integrity and services in the house of commons, that they made him a present of a noble piece of plate, with an inscription, expressing their esteem of his great abilities.

He had issue,

1. Robert, born the eighteenth of November, and baptized the twenty-eighth of the same month, A. D. 1650.

2. Jane, baptized October 19, A. D. 1651, and buried at Houghton the twenty-fourth of February, A. D. 1652.

3. Edward, baptized October 2, A. D. 1652, and buried the eleventh of February, A. D. 1653.

4. Susan, born the third of November, A. D. 1653, and buried the twentieth of May, A. D. 1659.

5. Elizabeth, born December 12, A. D. 1654, and buried April 28, A. D. 1662.

6. Anne, married to Montfort Spelman, of Narborough, in Norfolk, esquire, and died without issue, September 28, A. D. 1691.

7. John, born January 28, A. D. 1657, who died an infant.

8. Dorothy, born May 14, A. D. 1659, and died unmarried, October 5, A. D. 1694.

9. Susan, born June 22, A. D. 1660, and was buried at Houghton, February 6, A. D. 1665.

10. Mary, born August 11, A. D. 1661, married to John Wilson, of Leicestershire, esquire, but left no issue.

11. Horatio Walpole, esquire, born July 11, A. D. 1663, who married the lady Anne Osborne, daughter of Thomas, duke of Leeds, and widow of Robert Coke, of Holkham, in Norfolk, esq; but died without issue on the seventeenth of October, A. D. 1717; and his lady surviving, died August 4, A. D. 1722.

12. Edward Walpole, baptized September 14, A. D. 1664, was master of arts, and fellow of Trinity-college, in Cambridge; and dying January 29, A. D. 1688, was buried in the chapel of the said college.

13. Elizabeth, born December 28, A. D. 1665, married to James Host, of Sandringham, in Norfolk, esquire.

ROBERT WALPOLE, eldest son of Sir Edward, was elected to parliament for the borough of Castle-Rising, from the first year of king William and queen Mary, till his decease, in November, A. D. 1700. He was deputy-lieutenant, and colonel of the militia, in the county of Norfolk, and bore other offices, suiting his degree, as his ancestors had done before him; and was distinguished amongst the most polite men of the age. He married Mary, only daughter and heir of Sir Jeffery Burwell, of Rougham, in Suffolk, who survived him, and departed this life the fifteenth of March, A. D. 1711.

They had nineteen children; of which the following three daughters were married.

1. Mary, in April, A. D. 1689, to Sir Charles Turner, of Wareham, in the county of Norfolk.

2. Dorothy, the second wife of Charles, viscount Townshend.

3. Susan,

3. Susan, married to Anthony Hammond, of Wotton, in Norfolk.

Of the sons,

1. Edward Walpole, died A. D. 1698, in the life-time of his father.

2. Burwell Walpole, killed in a sea-engagement, on board the Elizabeth, in the reign of king William.

3. Robert Walpole, successor to his father.

4. Horatio Walpole, of whom in his proper place, as lord Walpole, of Woolterton, so created A. D. 1756.

5. Galfridus Walpole took to a maritime life, and rising gradually, was advanced to the command of the Lion, a third rate man of war, which he bravely defended in an engagement with the French, in the reign of queen Anne, and therein had his right arm shot off. Soon after the accession of king George I. he was elected for the borough of Lestwithiel, in Cornwall, to the first parliament called by his majesty, and made captain of the Peregrine, afterwards called the Carolina yacht; also treasurer of Greenwich-Hospital: and was April 8, A. D. 1721, appointed joint post-master general, and commissioner for the management of the post-office. He married Constance, daughter of Mr. Hays, of London, but died without issue, on the seventh of August, A. D. 1726; and his lady, in 1735, was married to ——— Kyrwood, of Herefordshire, esquire.

(First Earl.) ROBERT WALPOLE, eldest surviving son, was born the twenty-sixth of August, A. D. 1674; succeeding to the estate at Houghton, the antient seat of his ancestors (which he rebuilt) he was first chosen a member for Kings-Lynn, in 1700, and served for that borough in all parliaments to the time, of his being created earl of Orford, excepting the interval of one session, in 1711: when his weight and influence, in opposing the measures then carrying on, made it necessary for those, who were determined to go through with them, to resolve, to get him out of the house, and in consequence of such resolution, into the Tower, where he continued till the parliament was up; notwithstanding his being re-elected during the time of that confinement, by the same steady corporation; whom none of the great menaces continually sent down upon that election could influence, or alter, in the just opinion they always had of his eminent and faithful services: and of his resolute adherence to what they, as well as he, then thought the interest of their country.

In June, A. D. 1705, he was commissioned, amongst others, to be of council in the affairs of the Admiralty to his royal highness prince George of Denmark, lord-high-admiral of England; and, in 1707, constituted secretary at war; likewise made treasurer of the navy, in January, A. D. 1709. In the remarkable session of that year, when Dr. Sacheverel was impeached, he was chosen one of the managers of the house of commons to make good the articles of impeachment against him; at which time the rights and liberties of the people of England, the happy revolution, which redeemed us from popery, and the protestant succession, were vindicated from the artful insinuations in his sermon preached at St. Paul's; and the managers had the thanks of the house of commons for their services. On the change of the ministry, in August, A. D. 1710, he was removed from his employments, and afterwards was in no office during the remainder of the queen's reign.

On the accession of George I. to the throne, his eminent abilities, and his zeal for the succession in his royal house, which he had strenuously and successfully asserted, brought him again into the service of his country; being first made pay-master of the guards and garrisons at home, and of the forces abroad, on the twenty-third of September, 1714, five days after his majesty's landing. And, when a new privy-council was appointed to meet on the first of October, A. D. 1715, he was then sworn thereof, and took his place at the board. On the tenth of October, A. D. 1715, he was constituted first lord commissioner of the Treasury, and chancellor of the Exchequer; and, in the same year, was elected chairman of the committee of secrecy, appointed by the house of commons, to inquire into the conduct of those evil ministers, "That brought a reproach on the nation, by the unsuitable conclusion of a war, which was carried on at so vast an expence, and was attended with such unparalleled successes." On the tenth of April, A. D. 1717, he voluntarily resigned his posts of first lord commissioner of the Treasury, and chancellor of the Exchequer; the lord viscount Townshend and other noblemen resigning their places about the same time. But, on the fourth of June, A. D. 1720, he was constituted pay-master general of all his majesty's forces; also, on the fourth of April, A. D. 1721, first lord commissioner of the Treasury, and chancellor of the Exchequer. Likewise, on the twenty-sixth of May, A. D. 1723, he was nominated one of the lords justices for the administration of the government, and, by his majesty's appointment, he was sworn on May the twenty-ninth following, sole secretary of state, during the absence of the lord viscount Townshend, and the lord Carteret, who went with the king to Hanover.

On May 27, A. D. 1725, his majesty conferred on him the dignity of knighthood of the most honourable order of the Bath, at the same time that his royal highness prince William, late duke of Cumberland, with several lords, and persons of high degree were knighted and invested with the ensigns of the said order. On the seventh of June following, his majesty declared him one of the lords justices for the administration of the government during his stay at Hanover. Also, on the twenty-sixth of May, A. D. 1726, he was elected (with his grace the duke of Richmond) knight-companion of the most noble order of the Garter, and was installed at Windsor the sixteenth day of June: and, in 1727, was one of the lords justices of Great-Britain.

On the accession of his late majesty, he was July 24, 1727, continued in his office of first commissioner of the Treasury, and chancellor and under-treasurer of the Exchequer; also one of his majesty's privy-council; and was chosen one of the governors of the Charter-House. At his majesty's coronation, October 11, A. D. 1727, he attended as a privy-councillor, and as knight of the Garter, in the full habit and collar of that most noble order, &c. In July, A. D. 1738, he was unanimously elected high-steward of Lynn-Regis, in the room of the lord viscount Townshend deceased ceased. And, in 1740, was again one of the lords justices during his majesty's stay at Hanover.

In the first session of the parliament, which met December 4, A. D. 1741, resigning his places, his majesty on the ninth of February following was pleased to confer on him the dignities of an earl, viscount, and baron of this kingdom, by the style and titles of baron Houghton, viscount Walpole, and earl of Orford, to him and his heirs male. His lordship afterwards was well pleased with his retired state; but being much afflicted with the stone, it at length put a period to his life, in the seventieth year of his age, at his house in Arlington-street, on Sunday, March 18, A. D. 1745-6.

He first married Catherine, daughter of John Shorter, of Bybrook in Kent, esquire, and of Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Sir Erasmus Phillips, of Picton-Castle, in Pembrokeshire, baronet, by whom he had issue three sons,

1. Robert, lord Walpole, late earl of Orford.

2. Sir Edward Walpole, knight of the most honourable order of the Bath, seated at Frogmore, near Windsor. On the twenty-ninth of April, A. D. 1730, he was elected member of parliament for Lestwithiel, in Cornwall, on a vacancy by the death of Sir Edward Knatchbull, baronet. In the succeeding parliament, summoned to meet June 3, A. D. 1734, he was chosen for Great Yarmouth in Norfolk, and has since constantly served for the same place. On the duke of Devonshire's being declared lord-lieutenant of Ireland, he was appointed secretary for the affairs of that kingdom; and landing with his grace, September 7, A. D. 1737, he was sworn of the privy-council there. And after being joint-secretary of the Treasury, he was, on May 12, A. D. 1739, constituted clerk of the Pells in his majesty's Exchequer. He is now clerk of the Pleas, and commissioner of wine licence in Ireland.

3. Horatio Walpole, seated at Strawberry-hill, near Twickenham, in Middlesex, was chosen member for Callington, in Cornwall, in the parliament summoned to meet, June 25, A. D. 1741; also in the next parliament in 1747; and in the parliament which first met, May 31, A. D. 1754, was member for Castle-Rising, in Norfolk, and serves in the present parliament for King's-Lynn, in Norfolk. He is usher of his majesty's Exchequer: also comptroller of the Pipe, and clerk of the Estreats in the Exchequer, and is yet unmarried.

His only surviving daughter, Mary, was married to George, the present earl of Cholmondeley, and is deceased, leaving issue by him George, lord viscount Malpas, and other sons.

The lady, their mother, departing this life on the twentieth of August, A. D. 1737, was buried at Houghton; and her youngest son has erected a monument for her, in King Henry the Seventh's Chapel, Westminster-abbey, with the following inscription:

To the Memory
of
Catherine Lady Walpole
Eldest Daughter of John Shorter, Esq; Of Bybrook, in Kent,
and
First Wife of Sir Robert Walpole, Afterwards Earl of Orford.

Horace,
Her youngest son,
Consecrates this Monument.

She had Beauty and Wit
Without Vice and Vanity;

And cultivated the Arts

Without Affectation.

She was devout,

Tho' without Bigotry to any Sect;

And was without prejudice to any Party,

Tho' the Wife of a Minister;

Whose power she esteem'd,

But when she could employ it

To benefit the Miserable,

Or to reward the Meritorious.

She lov'd a private Life,

Tho' born to Shine in public:

And was an Ornament to Courts

Untainted by them

She died August 20, 1737.

Sir ROBERT took to his second wife, Maria, daughter and sole heir of Thomas Skerret, esquire, who died at his house in Dover-street, January 15, A. D. 1734; which lady died of a fever, after a miscarriage, on Sunday morning, June 4, A. D. 1738, and was also buried at Houghton.

(Second Earl.) ROBERT WALPOLE, the eldest son, having had all the advantages of education at home, set out on his travels in the year 1720; and before his return, in consideration of the great services of his father, the antiquity of his family, the merits of his ancestors, and that the name of Walpole might be more conspicuous, (as inserted in the preamble to his patent) was created a peer of Great-Britain, by the name, stile, and title of lord Walpole, baron of Walpole, in the county of Norfolk, (the ancient inheritance of his family) by letters patent, bearing date the tenth of June, A. D. 1723, with limitation, for want of heirs male, to Edward, and Horatio, his brothers; and, in default of their heirs male, to their father, Sir Robert Walpole, and his heirs male, remainder to the heirs male of Robert Walpole, esquire, father of the said Sir Robert Walpole.

His lordship, soon after his return to England, took his place in the house of peers, January 21, A. D. 1723. He married, on the twenty-seventh of March, A. D. 1724, Margaret, daughter and sole heir of Samuel Rolls, of Haynton, in the county of Devon, esquire, by whom he had issue one son, born the second of April, A. D. 1730, and named George, by his late majesty, who was his godfather, and our late most gracious queen, his godmother.

On the institution of the military order of the Bath, in 1725, that dignity was conferred on him. On October 3, A. D. 1727, George II. was pleased to grant him the office of ranger and keeper of his majesty's new Park, near Richmond, in Surry. After which, he was constituted clerk of the Pells in the Exchequer; and, in April, A. D. 1733, appointed lord-lieutenant, and custos rotulorum of the county of Devon. On July 8, A. D. 1738, he was made master of the harriers, and fox-hounds; and on May 12, A. D. 1739, was constituted auditor of his majesty's Exchequer, when he resigned his place of clerk of the Pells, to his brother, the honourable Edward Walpole, esquire. And departing this life, on the first of April, A. D. 1751, was succeeded in his honours and estate, by his only son, (Third, and present Earl.) GEORGE WALPOLE, who that day was of the age of twenty-one. His lordship is high-steward of the borough of Yarmouth, and one of the lords of his majesty's bed-chamber; and as yet unmarried.

On the thirtieth of June, A. D. 1757, he was appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Norfolk, and the city and county of Norwich, in which capacity he was almost singularly expeditious, when the militia bill had passed, inasmuch, that the Norfolk corps was fit for duty, before the men in most other counties had been embodied. On the twelfth of July, A. D. 1763, his lordship was appointed ranger of St. James's and Hyde-Parks.

(TITLES.) George Wapole, earl of Orford, viscount and baron Walpole, and baron of Houghton.

(CREATIONS.) Baron of Walpole, in Norfolk, June 10, A. D. 1723, (9 George I.) baron of Houghton, viscount Walpole, in the county of Norfolk, and earl of Orford, in the county of Suffolk, February 9, A. D. 1741, (15 George II.)

(ARMS.) Topaz, on a fess between two chevrons, diamond, three cross-crosslets of the field.

(CREST.) On a wreath, the bust of a man side-faced, couped proper; on his head a ducal coronet, and therein a long cap, ruby, charged with a catherine wheel, and tasselled at the top, topaz. This crest belonged to the family of Robfart.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, an antelope, pearl, altered proper, unguled, topaz, and gorged with a collar exchequette, topaz, and sapphire, with a golden chain affixed thereto, parting between his fore legs, and reflexed over his back. On the sinister, an hart, pearl, attired proper, unguled and gorged with like collar and chain.

(MOTTO.) "Fari quæ sentiat."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Haynton, in Devonshire, and Piddleton, in the county of Dorset; and at Houghton, in Norfolk.

STANHOPE, Earl of HARRINGTON.

THIS noble branch of the Stanhope family claim a descent from Sir John Stanhope, of Shelford, whose eldest son, by his second marriage, was, as may be seen page 543.

Sir JOHN STANHOPE, of Elvaston, who was knighted by king James at Whitehall, the fourth of June, 1607, and in the eighteenth year of that reign, was elected one of the knights of the shire for the county of Derby; as also, in the first parliament called by king Charles the First; and served for the town of Leicester, in the third year of that reign. In the fifth year of that king, he was sheriff of Derbyshire; and departed this life on the twenty-ninth of May, A. D. 1638. The inscription on a marble monument in the church at Elvaston, (where his figure lies in full proportion) gives an account of himself, his marriages and children; which having been broke down, was lately repaired by the heir of his house, and is as follows:

*Qui, Nobilissimo Stemmata non frustra Oriundus, Tantam Familiæ propriis Virtutibus coluit Nobilitatem
Ingenii Solertia affectuum temperans Motus, Mentis robore spectatissimus.*

*Qui publicis Muneribus in Comitatu Derbieni functus
Prudenter consuluit Honori integritate inconcussa
Fidelem Regi et strenuam Patriæ Senatui ascitus Navavit operam.*

*Cujus Patrocinium defensi Hospitalitatem refecti
Munificentiam donati senserunt Pauperes,
Cujus Amicitiam & Consuetudinem Gratissimam Nobiliorum Optimi coluere.*

*Johannes Stanhope Eques Auratus
Sui apud omnes relicto Desiderio
Perplacide Secundum Christi Redemptoris
Adventum expectans requiescit,
Obiit Anno Domini 1638 Æt. ex*

*Priore Conjuge Olivia filia & Hærede Eduardi Berrisford de Berrisford in Comitatu Staffordiæ, unicam habuit Natam Quæ Carolo Cottono Armigero
Nupsit. Et ex Conjuge Maria Filia Johannis
Radclyffe de Orfial in Comitatu Lancastriæ Militis (quam Superstitem reliquit) septem filios et tres Filias suscepit, ex quibus duos filios et filiam, Johannem, Thomam & Franciscam, infantes
Amisit. Vives adhuc Johanne, Cromwello, Radclyffe, Byrono, Alexandro, Elizabetha, et Anna.*

*Hoc Viro charissimo, Amoris Monumentum
Maria Fæmina Selectissima Eademque Conjux Mæstissima Consecravit.*

Of the sons and daughters before-mentioned, Anne, was married to Sir Thomas Ellis, of of Nocton, in the county of Lincoln, knight, and Thomas, Radclyff, Cromwell, Byron, and Alexander, had no children.

JOHN STANHOPE, his first son, who died an infant, was born in the parish of St. Margaret, Westminster, and christened the nineteenth of February, A. D. 1624; and

JOHN STANHOPE, his heir, was, at the death of his father, nine years of age, on the eleventh of October, A. D. 1637, as the inquisition, post mortem, shews. He took to wife, Jane, daughter of Sir John Curzon, of Kedleston, in the county Derby, knight and baronet. And departing this life on the twenty-sixth of March, A. D. 1662, was buried at Elvaſton, by his lady, who deceased on the fourteenth of April, A. D. 1652, and succeeded by

JOHN STANHOPE, his only son, who married Dorothy, daughter and coheir of Charles Agard, of Foston, in the county of Derby, esquire, by whom he had issue,

1. John Stanhope, who died young.

2. Thomas Stanhope, of Elvaſton, married Jane, one of the daughters and coheirs of Gilbert Thacker, of Repton, in the county of Derby, esquire, and relict of Charles Stanhope, (second son of Philip, earl of Chesterfield) who took the surname of Wotton. He was chosen for the town of Derby, in the first parliament called by queen Anne; and dying without issue, on the tenth of April, A. D. 1730, was succeeded in his estate by Charles Stanhope, esquire, his brother and heir. His relict deceased the fourth of December, A. D. 1744.

3. Charles Stanhope, of Elvaſton, esquire, who was secretary to the Treasury; and, March 10, A. D. 1721-2, appointed treasurer of the Chamber, in which he continued till the death of king George I. He died unmarried, A. D. 1760.

4. William Stanhope; which

(First Earl.) WILLIAM STANHOPE, for his great services to the nation, was advanced to the dignity of a peer of this realm, by the title of lord Harrington; which barony of Harrington was in a younger branch of this family, in the reign of king James the first. His lordship, after a learned and polite education, served in the reign of queen Anne, in Spain, where he was captain of a company, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, in the third regiment of foot-guards; and at the latter end of the year 1710, was constituted colonel of a regiment of foot.

On the accession of king George II. he was constituted colonel of a regiment of dragoons, and returned to parliament for the town of Derby; and in 1715, was made colonel of a regiment of horse: on the nineteenth of August, A. D. 1717, he was appointed envoy extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the king of Spain; and, in 1718, seeing our affairs at the court of Madrid tending to a rupture, he shewed his care and concern for his country, in giving private and early notice of his apprehensions to the English consuls and merchants, settled in the Spanish sea-ports, advising them to secure their effects. And in April, that year, he had frequent conferences with cardinal Alberoni, on proposals transmitted from the king of Great-Britain, and the regent of France, for an accommodation of the differences between the courts of Spain and Vienna. And having received a letter from Sir George Byng, dated June 20, on the Spanish coast, he notified his majesty's orders to employ force of arms, in case the king of Spain persisted in his enterprizes in Italy. On November 17, A. D. 1718, he was appointed envoy and plenipotentiary to the court of Turin; from whence he returned to Paris; and, May 31, A. D. 1719, set out for the duke of Berwick's camp, before Fontarabia, against which he had opened the trenches, on the night between the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth of that month. Likewise, after admiral Byng had destroyed the greatest part of the Spanish fleet, he concerted measures, and procured an English squadron to fall on the port of St. Anthony, in the bay of Biscay, in which were one man of war of seventy guns, and two of sixty, newly built, with an incredible quantity of timber, pitch, and tar, and other navel stores, for building more; all which were destroyed by the English squadron, assisted, (as our author relates) "by a detachment which the duke of Berwick spared from his army, at the solicitation of colonel Stanhope, the English minister, who contrived the design, and, serving as a volunteer in the enterprize, principally contributed to the execution of it" This mention is made of it, in our Gazette, N^o 5773, "Finding it necessary to encourage and animate troops which had not been used to enterprizes by sea, he was the first that leaped into the water, when the boats approached the shore."

On the end of that war, he was declared a brigadier-general, and returned with the same character to Spain. But the Spaniards besieging Gibraltar, he had such regard to the honour of his country, that, on February 27, N. S. 1726-7, he acquainted the chief minister, that hostilities having been begun by the Spanish army before Gibraltar, he had taken his resolution to leave that court, without loss of time; and for that purpose desired his catholic majesty would grant him the necessary passports for himself, his family, and his equipage. On March 11, he left Madrid, and arrived on the twenty-second at Bayonne, and passing through France, on April 3, O. S. 1727, landed at Dover; and the next day arrived at St. James's. And his late majesty was pleased, May 20, following, to appoint him vice-chamberlain of his household; and he was also sworn of his most honourable privy-council, the thirty-first of May following.

After our late sovereign's accession to the throne, he was nominated first ambassador and plenipotentiary to the congress at Soissons, and April 24, set out for France, and arrived on the twelfth of June following. On September 9, A. D. 1729, he was declared ambassador and plenipotentiary to the king of Spain. And by his negotiations and credit at that court, the treaty of peace which begun at Soissons, being concluded at Seville, on the ninth of November, N. S. 1729, his majesty, in consideration of his great services, on the twentieth of November, A. D. 1729, advanced him to the degree of a peer of Great-Britain, by the name, style, and title of lord Harrington, in the county of Northampton. His lordship, on the thirteenth of June, A. D. 1730, was constituted tuted principal secretary of state, in the room of Charles, lord viscount Townshend, who, by reason of his ill state of health, had resigned; and being sworn on the nineteenth of the same month, took his place at the board accordingly. On December 18, A. D. 1735, he was declared major-general of the horse; also lieutenant-general, July 17, A. D. 1739. In 1740, he waited on his majesty to Hanover, who, before his departure, May 12, declared him one of the lords justices. On the change of the ministry the year after, his lordship resigned the seals into his majesty's hands at St. James's, February 12, A. D. 1741-2; and the next day was declared lord president of his majesty's most honourable privy-council, and took his place at the board accordingly.

The king was also pleased to grant unto his lordship, February 9, A. D. 1741-2, the dignities of a viscount, and earl of Great-Britain, by the name, style, and title, of viscount Petersham, in the county of Surry; and earl of Harrington, in the county of Northampton; and in 1743, he was one of the lords justices of the kingdom, during his majesty's being abroad that year.

On the resignation of earl Granville, October 18, A. D. 1744, his lordship was again appointed principal secretary of state; and in 1745, attended on his majesty to Hanover, who set out from St. James's May 3, and before his departure declared him one of the lords justices. Afterwards, September 6, N. S. he came from thence to Helvoetsluys, to wait the king's arrival there, and prepare for his majesty's embarking for England, who arrived at St. James's August 31, A. D. 1745, and his lordship arrived at his house there the same night.

February 10, 1745-6, his lordship resigned the seals; but his majesty was pleased to re-deliver them to him four days after, viz. the fourteenth of February, at St. James's.

On November 4, A. D. 1746, the earl of Chesterfield was sworn one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state in the place of his lordship, who was declared lord lieutenant-general, and governor-general of the kingdom of Ireland, the twenty-second of November following, in the room of the earl of Chesterfield. And, March 24, A. D. 1746-7, he was constituted general of his majesty's foot-forces.

On the fifth of September, A. D. 1747, his lordship set out for Ireland, and arrived at Dublin September 13, accompanied by several persons of distinction.

During his lordship's stay in Ireland, he made it his chief care that the kingdom might be in such a state, as to resist any attempts of the common enemy; and on the sixth of October, A. D. 1747, he opened the session of parliament with a speech from the throne, and received the compliments of both houses.

April 9, A. D. 1748, his lordship went in state to the house of peers, and put an end to the session by a speech to both houses; and embarking for England, he arrived at his house in St. James's, April 25, A. D. 1748, waited on his majesty the next day, and was very graciously received.

His lordship landing again at Dublin, September 26, A. D. 1749, resumed the government of Ireland; and on April 5, A. D. 1750, was again appointed one of the lords justices during his majesty's being abroad. And in 1751, the duke of Dorset succeeded his lordship as lord lieutenant of Ireland.

His lordship married Anne, daughter and heir of colonel Edward Griffith, one of the clerks comptrollers of the Green-cloth (by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Dr. Thomas Laurence, first physician to queen Anne) and by her had two sons, William, now earl of Harrington, and Thomas, twins, born on December 18, A. D. 1719; but their mother died in child-bed, and his lordship remained a widower till his death, December 8, A. D. 1756. Thomas, the youngest son, in August, A. D. 1741, had a commission of captain in Honeywood's regiment of dragoons, and going over sea died in February, A. D. 1742-3.

His lordship's only surviving son, (Second and present Earl.) WILLIAM STANHOPE, was elected, in 1741, one of the members for Aylesbury; and served for Bury St. Edmunds, in the two following parliaments, till his succession to the peerage. His lordship, taking to a military life, served the campaign in 1745, as captain of a company in the first regiment of foot-guards, and by his commission had the rank of lieutenant-colonel. Having behaved with great gallantry at the battle of Fontenoy, May 11, A. D. 1745, his majesty, on June 15, that year, was pleased to constitute him captain and colonel of his second troop of horse grenadier-guards; and, in 1748, to appoint him customs and collector in the port of Dublin. On February 24, A. D. 1755, his lordship was constituted major-general; and promoted to that of lieutenant-general, on January 28, A. D. 1758.

His lordship, on August 11, A. D. 1746, was married to the lady Caroline Fitz Roy, eldest daughter of his grace Charles, duke of Grafton, by whom he had issue two sons and five daughters,

1. Caroline, born March 11, A. D. 1746-7, married October 8, 1765, to Kenneth Mackenzie, esquire, (since lord Fortrose) to whom she bore a daughter, Caroline, born July 6, A. D. 1766. Her ladyship died on the sixth of February, A. D. 1767.

2. Isabella, born April 4, A. D. 1748.

3. Amelia, born May 24, A. D. 1749.

4. Henrietta, born October 25, A. D. 1750.

5. Charles, called viscount Petersham, born March 17, A. D. 1753.

6. Henry-Fitz-Roy Stanhope, born May 29, A. D. 1754.

7. Anna Maria, born April 5, A. D. 1760.

(TITLES.) William Stanhope, earl of Harrington, viscount Petersham, and lord Harrington.

(CREATIONS.) Baron of Harrington, in the county of Northampton, by letters-patent, November 20, A. D. 1729, (2 George II.) viscount Petersham, and earl of Harrington, February 9, A. D. 1741-2, (15 George II.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, ermine and ruby, a crescent on a crescent for difference.

(CREST.)

WALLOP, EARL of PORTSMOUTH.

133

(CREST.) On a wreath, a tower, sapphire, with a demi-lion rampant issuing from the battlements, topaz, holding between his paws a grenade firing, proper.

a garland or chaplet of oak, emerald, fructed, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "A Deo et Rege."

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a talbot guardant pearl, gutte de poix*. On the sinister, a wolf erminois†, each supporter gorged with (CHIEF SEATS.) At Linby, in the county of Nottingham; and at Petersham, in the county of Surry.

WALLOP, Earl of PORTSMOUTH.

CAMDEN, in his description of Hampshire, speaking of Wallop, the town from which this family assumed their name, says,

"The Test having taken into it a little river from Wallop, or more truly Well-hop, that is, by interpretation out of our forefathers language, a pretty Well in the side of an hill, whereof that right worshipful family of the Wallops, of knights degree, dwelling hard by, took name."

The first we find in the pedigree of this family, is

MATTHEW DE WALLOP, who on April 27, A. D. 1203, the fifth of king John, obtained a grant to him, and his heirs for ever, of the custody of the house, castle, and gaol, of Winchester, with the lands of Wodecote, and one hide of land in Andover, with the appurtenances, and all other customs and privileges thereunto belonging. In 9 John, the king grants to Matthew de Wallop, his servant, two hundred and eight acres of land in Wallop, which was Stephen de Benden- ges.

In 15 John, the king orders him to deliver Nicholas de Hevill, (who was in his custody at Winchester) to Robert de Gaugy. And in the sixth of Henry III. the sheriff of the county of Southampton had command to deliver to Matthew de Wallop, those lands which were in the king's hands in Wallop.

The said Matthew had issue,

JOHN DE WALLOP, who was living in the eighth of Edward I. He left, by Mabel, his wife, Richard, who died without issue, and

Sir ROBERT WALLOP, his heir, who died the eleventh of Edward I. and left an only daughter, his heir,

ALICE DE WALLOP, who married Peter de Barton, lord of West-Barton, in the county of Hants, and had issue,

WILLIAM DE BARTON, who by Joan, daughter and heir of Herbert Deamede, also heir to the family of Breton, had issue,

RICHARD DE BARTON, their heir, who took the name of WALLOP, and was knight of the shire for the county of Hants, the second of Edward III. He married Alice, daughter of Sir John Husee, of Beechworth castle, in Surry, knight, and heir to her brother, Roger; he had issue three sons. John, the second, was member for Wilton, the twenty-first and twenty-second of Edward III. Sir Richard, third son, was knight of the shire for the county of Hants, the ninth of Henry V.

THOMAS WALLOP, the eldest son, married Margaret Wellington, and died the twenty-seventh of November, A. D. 1361, leaving

JOHN WALLOP, his heir, then eight years of age. He was one of the members for Salisbury, in 1401, and died in 1438. He married Avise, daughter of John Busch, and had a son, THOMAS WALLOP, who was knight of the shire for the county of Hants, in 1414, and dying in the lifetime of his father, left by Margaret, daughter and coheir of Nicholas Valoynes, lord of Farley and Clidesden, in the county of Hants, two sons, John and Edward.

JOHN WALLOP, the eldest, who was heir to his grandfather, was seated at Farley, which was the chief residence of the family, till it was burnt in 1677; but was rebuilt in 1733, by the late earl, as well as the church of Farley. He was knight of the shire for the county of Hants, in A. D. 1472, and married Joan, daughter of Richard Holte, of Colrythe, in Hants, esquire, and had three sons and two daughters; Margery, married to John Kirby, of Stanbridge, esquire, and Margaret, to John Vaux, of Odiam, esquire, both in the county of Hants.

RICHARD WALLOP, the eldest son, was sheriff of the said county, A. D. 1502, and was designed to have been created a knight of the Bath, at the marriage of prince Arthur, but died about that time, leaving no issue by Elizabeth, his wife,

* Spotted with drops of pitch.

† Yellow spotted with black ermine spots.

daughter of — Hampton, of Old Stoke, in the same county, esquire.

He was succeeded by

Sir ROBERT WALLOP, his brother, who was sheriff of the same county, in 1509, 1516, and 1524, and died in 1535, without issue.

STEPHEN WALLOP, his next brother, married a daughter of — Ashley, of Winbourne St. Giles, in the county of Dorset, esquire, ancestor of Sir Anthony Ashley, knight and baronet, whose daughter and heir married Sir John Cooper, baronet, by whom she had Anthony, the first earl of Shaftesbury; and the said Stephen had issue, Sir John, Sir Oliver, and Giles, of which the latter was a priest; and,

Sir JOHN WALLOP, the eldest son, was greatly distinguished for his martial exploits, and prudent conduct in several embassies. In the third of Henry VIII. Sir Edward Poynings was sent with fifteen hundred archers, to the assistance of Margaret, duchess of Savoy, regent of the Low Countries; and it is probable Sir John Wallop was in that expedition, and there received the honour of knighthood; for he was not long after on an embassy to the said regent, and he was knighted before that time. In 4 Henry VIII. we find him, by the title of Sir John Wallop, in that fleet, which, in the month of March sailed to Brittany, when Sir Edward Howard, lord admiral, resolved to board six galleys of the French, under Prior John, in the harbour of Brest. Sir Edward was attended by four choice captains, this Sir John Wallop being one of them; but through an excess of valour, the admiral lost his life, Sir John Wallop, and the rest escaping very narrowly. In 1513, 5 Henry VIII. he was employed on extraordinary dispatches to Margaret, duchess of Savoy, regent of the Low Countries, before the king's expedition into France, who that year took the castle and city of Tournay, at which it is probable he assisted.

In 6 Henry VIII. he was admiral and commander in chief of the fleet, sent to encounter Prior John, the French admiral, who landed in Sussex, and burnt the town of Brighthelmstone. But the French getting into their own ports, he failed to the coast of Normandy, and there landed and burnt twenty-one villages and towns, with great slaughter, and also the ships and boats in the havens of Treaport, Staple, &c. wherein he acquitted himself with such conduct and valour, that all our historians have mentioned this expedition much to his honour.

Hall (who lived at that time) writes, "That men marvelled at his enterprizes, considering he had at the most but eight hundred men, and landed them so often." The lord Herbert writes, "That Sir John Wallop burnt divers ships, and one-and-twenty villages, landing many times in despite of the French, which seemed the more strange, that his soldiers exceeded not eight hundred men." In 9 Henry VIII. this very honourable mention is made of him in the History of Portugal: "John Wallop, an English gentleman of worth, afterwards governor of Calais, came into Portugal, offering to serve in Afric on his own expence. He served two years at Tangier honourably, and then returned home; having received the order of knighthood of Christ, and other considerable favours, and continued always a great favourer of the affairs of Portugal." In 14 Henry VIII. he was one of the principal commanders of that fleet and forces, which landed in Brittany, on July the first, and took the town of Morlaix by assault; and was with those who first entered the town, where the soldiers had great pillage, and returned to the Isle of Wight, before the end of that month. He was also the same year, in that expedition into France, under the earl of Surrey, who, after taking several towns and villages, left this Sir John Wallop, one of the chief captains, worthy of the best praise, (as observed by Hall, before-mentioned) at St. Omer's, with one thousand nine hundred men, to lie there, and at Guynes, Hammes, and at Mark, where he did good service, by spoiling of towns, taking of prisoners, &c. In 15 Henry VIII. he was, with the duke of Suffolk, at the taking of Bray, Roy, and Montidier, in France; where the forces under his command performed such services by their courage and activity, that the camp was frequently supplied with horses, victuals, and other necessaries. As our historians write, they were called Adventurers, all proper men and hardy; having, as Hall says, little or no wages, but by their manhood and politics took great booties, and brought to the army all necessaries. In 16 Henry VIII. he was still in those parts, and with his band of men, performed extraordinary services against the French, whom with great valour they defeated in the month of May, at Somer de Boys. Afterwards, this Sir John Wallop, and Sir William Fitz-Williams, captain of Guynes, with one thousand nine hundred chosen men, on Midsummer-day, passed the low country of Picardy unto the castle of Hardingham, which they assaulted; and Sir John Wallop, with his men, entered the ditch, and setting up ladders to the walls, some climbed up, but were repulsed: and the French coming up with two thousand horse and two thousand foot, the English being weary, retired in good order to their fortresses.

In 18 Henry VIII. the king sent him not only to the princes of Germany, to exhort them to join against the Turks, but also to Mary, queen of Hungary, to comfort her for the loss of her husband; adding withal such a supply of money, as might testify his zeal to that cause was greater than theirs, who by kindred and neighbourhood were more concerned therein. The year after he was with Sigismund, king of Poland, to animate him to join against the Turks; which king, in his letter to Thomas Wolsey, archbishop of York, styles him, the magnificent Sir John Wallop, great marshal of Calais. In 20 Henry VIII. he obtained the office of ranger of the park at Ditton, and steward of the manor for life; and, on June the twenty-third, 22 Henry VIII. was constituted lieutenant of the castle of Calais. In 25 Henry VIII. we find him ambassador to Francis I. the French king, and continuing at that court, A. D. 1535, 27 Henry VIII. He was ordered to expostulate with the French monarch, for giving his advice to the Germans, to own the supremacy of the bishop of Rome, and to shew him the book wrote against it by Dr. Samson, dean of the chapel to Henry VIII. and to incline him to the king's opinion in ecclesiastical affairs. Also was ordered to attend the French king at his interview with the pope at Marseilles, who then married his his niece to the duke of Orleans. Secretary Cromwel, in a letter to him, dated at Thorneberry, August 23, A. D. 1535, thus expresses himself:

"The king having perused the hoolle contents thoroughly of your letters, perceivying not only the liklihood of the not repayr into France of Philip Melancton, but also your communications had with the French king's highness, upon your demaund made of the kynges majesties pensions, with also your discrete answers and replications made in that behalfe, for the which his majestie givethe unto you condigne thanks, &c." In the same year (with Henry VIII.) he had a grant of the advowson of the parish church of Obbyrkirk, in the marches of Calais; and was ordered to propose to the French king, the conditions concerning a revocation of the censures inflicted by the pope on his royal master: and to treat of a marriage between the duke of Angoulesme, the French king's third son, and the princess Elizabeth. He continued in France, on his ambassy till 1737, 29 Henry VIII. when we find him summoned to attend at the christening of prince Edward, on October 15, that year; and being of the king's privy-chamber, was one which supported a rich canopy over the prince at that grand solemnity. Also, the same year, he was in nomination for one of the knights of the Garter. In 30 Henry VIII. in consideration of his services, he had a grant of the priory of Barlich, in Somersetshire, and the manors of Brampton, Bury, and Warley, in the same county; and the manor of Morebach, in Devonshire, to him and his heirs. In 32 Henry VIII. he was again in France on an embassy, where he continued till a war broke out with that realm. And on April 23, St. George's-day, 35 Henry VIII. was at a chapter of the most noble order of the Garter, the first named in the list of knights, by all the companions present; and had more votes than the viscount Lytle, lord St. John, and lord Parr, who were then chose, though the king did not then declare him elected. The same year, on a treaty concluded with the emperor Charles V. whereby the king was obliged to assist him in defence of his dominions in Lower Germany against the king of France; his majesty being well assured (as the words of the patent import) of the fidelity, prudence, and experience of his trusty and well-beloved counsellor, Sir John Wallop, captain and governor of the castle and county of Guynes, constitutes him captain-general and leader of the forces to be employed, according to the said treaty, with full power to give battle and annoy all the enemies of the said emperor: and was authorised, as he saw expedient, to punish all under his command, even with death itself; likewise to reward all as should well deserve, with knighthood, and such military honours and marks of distinction as he thought fit.

He landed at Calais, A. D. 1543, and marching from thence, between the frontiers of France and the Low Countries, did much spoil on the enemy, till he joined with the emperor's forces before Landrecy, then besieged; whereof the French king being advertised, resolved to relieve it. Hereupon the two great armies being near each other, it was expected a battle would ensue; but the French in the night dislodged secretly, and retired. After which the emperor continued the siege till towards the midst of November, when he marched (without taking the town) to Cambray, and possessed himself thereof.

On Sir John Wallop's return the same year, he was elected knight of the Garter, at a chapter of that most noble order at Hampton-court, especially called on Christmas-Eve, the duke of Norfolk, the earl of Surrey, lord Russel, viscount Lisle, lord St. John, earl of Essex, Sir Anthony Brown, Sir John Gage, and Sir Anthony Wingfield, knights of the Garter, being present with the king in that chapter, and were unanimous in their choice. And, as a special mark of the king's favour, Sir John Wallop had his robes of the order out of the king's wardrobe, when he was installed, viz. May 18, A. D. 1544, 30 Henry VIII. at which time the earl of Arundel and Sir Anthony St. Leger were installed with him, who had been elected on April 24. Mr. Ashmole, who wrote the history of the knights of the order of the Garter, did also intend to write the history of the lives of that most noble order. But his design being represented, (as he complains) through the wrong end of the perspective, by the chancellor of the order, to king Charles the Second, and the knights companions, he received so great discouragement, as caused him to wave it. In his Collections, this Sir John Wallop is mentioned to have been ambassador to the emperor, to the kings of France, Portugal, Hungary, and Poland. Sir John was twice commissioner with the lord Cobham, and others, for delivering of hostages, in Edward the Sixth's time, concerning the treaty of Valloigne. The last commission we find him in, was on November 16, A. D. 1550, 4 Edward VI. when he was the first named, to hear and determine all controversies relating to the titles of lands and possessions, lordships, and territories, as well within the king's limits, as within the French king's, on the marches of Calais.

It appears by several circumstances, that he was abroad in the king's service, at the death of Henry VIII. January 28, A. D. 1546-7, and in the reign of Edward VI. had the sole command of our forces for the defence of our territories in France. He died at Guisnes, in July, 5 Edward VI. where he lies buried.

This great man had two wives; first, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Oliver St. John, of Lidiard Tregoze, in Wiltshire, knight, and relict of Gerald Fitz-Gerald, esquire, son of Thomas, earl of Kildare; secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Clement Harleston, of Okenden, in Essex, knight; but dying without issue, his estate devolved upon his next brother, Sir OLIVER WALLOP, who on the twenty-seventh of September, A. D. 1547, was knighted in the camp at Roxborough, by the duke of Somerset, general of the English army, for his conduct and bravery, exemplified at the great battle of Musleborough, on the tenth of that month.

Upon the decease of Elizabeth, the widow of his brother, Sir John Wallop, he had livery of the manors of Bury and Barlich, in the sixth of Edward VI.

We know no more of this knight, but that he was sheriff for the county of Southampton, in the year 1558, and died A. D. 1566, leaving issue by two wives.

By

By his second lady, Ann, daughter of Robert Martin, of Adlamston, in Dorsetshire, esquire, and widow of Sir John Tregonell, knight, he was father of two sons and two daughters,

1. William Wallop,
 2. Stephen Wallop,
 3. Anne,
 4. Grace,
- from whom remains no issue.

By his former lady, Bridget, daughter of — Pigot, of Beechampton, Bucks, he had one daughter, Rose, married to Walter Lambert, esquire, and three sons.

1. Sir Henry Wallop, his successor.
2. William Wallop, was returned to parliament for Lymington, in the eighteenth of Elizabeth. In the church of Weald, in the county of Southampton, we find the following monumental inscription, which contains all that is necessary to be said further of this gentleman:

“ Here lies William Wallop, esquire, second son of Sir Oliver Wallop, knight. His eldest brother was Sir Henry Wallop, knight, late treasurer of Ireland. He was nephew to Sir John Wallop, knight; who being, first, a gentleman of the privy-chamber to Henry VIII. was afterwards admiral of a navy, and captain of a thousand adventurers against the French. He served against the Moors for the king of Portugal, and was general of the English at the siege of Landarby. He was sent ambassador to the king of Hungary to NAPLES, to the emperor Charles V. to Ferdinando, king of the Romans, and into France, where he was twice lieger ambassador. He was captain of the castle and marshal of the town of Calais; lieutenant of the castle and county of Guisnes; a privy-counsellor of estate, and knight of the most noble order of the Garter.

“ This William was a justice of peace, once high-sheriff of this county, and twice mayor of Southampton. He had three wives, but died without issue in the eighty-fourth year of his age; to whose memory, his last wife, Margery, daughter of John Fisher, of Chilton Candover, esquire, hath erected this monument.”

Obiit 13 die Novembr. Anno Domini 1617.

Leaving no issue, his estate devolved upon his nephew, Sir Henry Wallop, the eldest son of his elder brother, Sir Henry.

3. Richard Wallop, seated at Bagbroke, in the county of Southampton, married Mary, sister and coheir of William Spencer, of Everton, in Northamptonshire, and had issue; but the male line is now extinct.

The eldest son,

Sir HENRY WALLOP, succeeded his father, and was distinguished for his eminent abilities, in the reign of queen Elizabeth, by whom he was knighted at Basing, A. D. 1569. He was returned to that parliament, which was first holden at Westminster, on the eighth of May, A. D. 1572, and which, by near eighty several prorogations, was continued till the nineteenth of April, A. D. 1584. Upon most occasions he was a leading member in the house of commons, and was particularly assiduous in debates relative to the reformation of discipline in the church.

When the rebellion broke out in Ireland, this gentleman raised one hundred men for the service of the crown, and with them went over to that kingdom. On the fourth of April, A. D. 1580, he joined the lord justice, then laying siege to the castle of Asketten, in which, after the surrender, his company formed a garrison. On the fourteenth of August following, he was constituted vice-treasurer and treasurer of war in Ireland. About the latter end of August, A. D. 1582, he, together with the archbishop of Dublin, and the lord chancellor, received from the lord Grey of Wilton, the sword, whereby that nobleman resigned his government in Ireland, which was by the queen conferred upon Sir Henry Wallop, on the first of September next, ensuing, under the character of lord justice. His conduct, during his stay in that kingdom was such as gained the approbation of his royal mistress, notwithstanding many attempts were made to depreciate his best services. His political conduct extended itself beyond that of his predecessors; and at the same time that he was using every prudential method to still the rebellious frenzy which had insatuated the minds of the inhabitants, he had an eye to the future peace and welfare of the kingdom, by civilizing the people, and introducing among them numbers of Englishmen, whom he disposed of in that part of the county, where he had made considerable purchases, chiefly with that view; and in particular, in March, 1584-5, he purchased a lease of the abbey of Eniscorthy, as also of the castle and manor, with the lands thereunto belonging, in the county of Wexford.

The following letter, signed by Hugh, bishop of Fernes, and twenty-nine gentlemen, of the county of Wexford, will give the reader an idea of the veneration in which he was held by the more sensible inhabitants of that country, as well as the general utility of his operations.

Right Worshipfull,

“ Our humble duties remembred. It hath been geven out of late by reporte, that your worship was to deall with Morgan Mac Brien, and the rest of his sept, for his and theire landes in the barony of St. Molyns, and elsewhere, and that your intention was to plante Habytation there, as you have alreedy done about Enescorthie. At the first report whereof all wee the gentlemen and inhabytants of this poore countie of Wexford, did not a lyttle rejoice, hoping that by that meanes, we should not only lyve in better securytie, than we have done hetherto, but that also, those lands lyeing now altogether wast, might in a short time, by your worship's countenance and good pollice be peopled, and geve relief especyallie to the poore towen of Rosse, and to the whole countrey, which is not a lytle decayed throughe the dissolacion of these parts. But being now geven to understande that your worship having viewed the same upon the offer made unto you by Morgan, and considered of the difficulties which arise in some condicions between your worship and him, and otherwise, doth determine to proceede no further in the matter, we have bene greatlie grieved and dismaied, to see so good a purpose broken, broken, of which we hoped to have seen brought to passe to the universal good and quiet of this countrey, and of all this part of Leinster, and to your worship's perpetual fame, as the author of so great a good: for when we consider the benefyt which we all feele and receave alredie by your worship's cominge amonges us, the reliefe which innumerable poor creatures have had at your hands by your works, your cattle and your charitie, which otherwise would have starved and died for hunger. How this border, which before your cominge was a very denn of thieves, and the chief receptacle of all the malefactors of Leinster, is now become so quiet and free from such caterpillars, that no cattel is housed in the nights neere about Enescorthie. And that the oppressions and extorcions wherewith the poore were wont to be continually waxed and eaten up by officers, as well as idle men, are now through your authoritie and countenance restrained and somewhat bridled: we did assuredlie hope, that your worship extending your godlie care throughout the whole skirte and border of this poore countie, would (as yt were with a wall of defence) have invironed us from the annoyance of any enemies from henceforth, wherebie wee might have enjoyed the fruets of peace and tranquillitie, purchased by your tender and fatherlie care of the afflicted state of this poore countrey, and with no small travell and chardge also. Our confidence was, that justice which your worship hath brought amonges us indeed, where before she was but a shewe, and her venerable name used to the spoile and undoenge of most of us, sholde dwell and florish generallie henceforthe emonges us. And that the good, and speciall orders that you have alredie begun, and are in hande to establish in that sappie corner of our contrey, where you have planted, shold have spredd themselves over the rest of the borders, and so over the whole contrey, and have reduced us to our auntyent, naturall, and most desired fourme and manner of lyvinge, according to the use and custome of Englande, from which, through the libertie that idle persons, not corrected, had to spoile us, and want of good government and rule, we are declyned and degenerate. But, alas, all, or the greatest part of our expectation and hope is fayled, if your worships do now breake of, and reverse that so good, and so benefyciall a purpose. For although the light of your upright deallinge and zeale of justice, do shine sufficientlie out of that place, to shewe us the waie of our happie estates, if we have grace to acknowledge the goodness of almightie God towards us in sendinge you amongst us. And that your worship's example will be a greates meanes to induce others to followe your steppes, and to stryve to wynn that love, reverence, and commendacion, which you have gotten together, with the dailie and harte praier of all degrees of people in the whole countrey: yet do we certenlye see and discerne, that unless that border may be established with the pollicie and government, as is devised for Enescorthie, and those quarters, which cannot be done but by your worship, or some man so well disposed as yourselfe, and of aucthorytie, countenance, and habilytie to goe throughe withall, it will be almost impossible but that the Cavanaughes of that sept, followinge their wonted manner of lief, and drawing to them idle followers and malefactors from other places, will contynualle be a gaul to this countrey, and an open passage for all the evell disposed to annoy and infeste us still. Wee therefore whose names are subscribed, do, with one consent, heretelie and humblie praie and beseech your worship, that you will vouchsaf to hould on and persever in that intention of takinge those lands of Morgan Mac Brien, and his sept, and planting thereof with such good orders and government, as your worship can well devise, for the inhabitinge thereof, as well to your own comodite and benefit, as to our good and quiet; wherein, if any thing that we or any of us can do to the furtherance of so good a purpose, may prevayle, your worship shall be most assured to have our endeavours to the utmost of our powers. Now is the time to enterprize such a thing, when your worship have the willing mindes and consent of all that sept; who, if they be now diverted from that hope which they had conceived, that they maie, under the justice and moderacion of your rule, lyve and frame themselves to goodness, no doubt but verie necessitie and desperacion will dryve them to naughtiness, which naturallie, and by kinde they are too much inclyned unto; and that they will imploie all the lyttle force that is left them to do the most mischief that they shall be hable. Whereas, if your worship taking the countrey at their handes, shall build a strong place at Simalyns, and maintaine some convenient force there; that on the one side, and Enescorthie on the other, will be as two bullwarks to yoake and keepe them under, and to bridle and chastize the doubtful minds of those that shall attempt any evell, wherein we should never need to feare anny more, or that they could be able to disturbe the state and quiet of this countrey, as they have done; but rather hope that example of well disposed people, labouring for their lyving, and the sweetness of enjoyeng their own, by due administration of justice, would draw them to that goodness which otherwise there is no hope of. And if haplie the fear of envious speeches may move your worship to forbear this worthy enterprise, albeyt the cleernes of your conscience, and the treuthe yt selfe will alwaies be a testimonie sufficient of your godlie zeale and sincere meaninge, to do good by all the meanes you can to all men: yet, for the better avoiding of such slaunders and malicious reports (if anny should be so lewde as to devise them) our testimonye shall bee alwaies readie to declare both to her majestie (if need bee) and to all the world, that your worship's doings in that behalfe shall have bene most profitable for the commonwealth, and fyt for the advancement of hir highnes's service. And our incessant praie shall be imploied to almightie God for the inclining your hart to this good action, and for the protecting and defending of your worship from the mallice of all envious and slaundersous tounge broaching the same, and for the happie successe therein to your worship and your posteritie, and to all other your and their affayres. And so we humblie take leave the XXth of August 1587.

"Your worships loving friends

"Hugo Fernensis, &c."

M m

He

He departed this life, after a decline for near twelve months, on the fourteenth of April, A. D. 1599, and was buried at St. Patrick's church, in Dublin, with the following inscription on a plate of bras.

"Near unto this Place lieth that worthy Knight, Sir Henry Wallop, of Farley Wallop, in the County of Southampton, in the Realm of England, who faithfully served Queen Elizabeth in this Kingdom, as Vice-Treasurer and Treasurer at War, by the Space of eighteen Years and eight Months, and was Lord Justice within this Realm, jointly with the Lord Chancellor of this Realm, almost by the space of two Years, in the Years of our Lord God 1582, 1583, 1584; in which Time the Wars of Desmond were ended, and his Head sent into England; besides many other weighty Causes committed to his Charge, during his said Service. He departed this Life the 14th Day of April 1599. He was Son and Heir of Sir Oliver Wallop, Brother and Heir of Sir John Wallop, Knight of the most Honourable Order of the Garter, and Lieutenant of the Castle and County of Gujines, in France, Nephew and Heir of Sir Robert Wallop, knight."

He married Catherine, daughter of Richard Gifford, esquire, and sister of Sir Henry Gifford, of Sombourne, in the county of Southampton, by whom he had issue three daughters,

1. Anne, married to Richard Powlet, of Heriard, in the county of Southampton.

2. Bridget, married to Nicholas Hallswell, in the county of Somerset.

3. Winefrede, married, after her father's death, to Sir Richard Gifford, of Sombourne, aforesaid.

Also three sons,

1. Sir Henry Wallop, his heir.

2. Oliver Wallop, who was slain in the life-time of his father, on the fourteenth of August, A. D. 1598, in that battle, fought between the earl of Tyrone and the marshal Bagnal, when the Irish obtained the victory, with the slaughter of thirteen captains and one thousand five hundred soldiers. He was never married.

3. William Wallop, died unmarried before his brother, in the service of his country, in Brittany.

Sir HENRY WALLOP, the eldest son, was born on the eighteenth of October, A. D. 1568; was chosen member of parliament for Andover, in the thirty-ninth of Elizabeth, and knight of the shire for the county of Southampton four years after. In the years 1602 and 1603, he was sheriff of the county of Southampton, and in 1605, served the same office, in Shropshire, for which he was qualified, by marrying before, A. D. 1601, Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Robert Corbet, of Morton Corbet, in that county, with whom he obtained the manor and noble seat of Redcastle, and divers other lordships and manors in the same county.

On the ninth of July, A. D. 1608, the king, in consideration of the true and faithful services of Sir Henry Wallop, knight, grants to him the tithes of Eniscorthy, and confirms to him and his heirs for ever, his lands in Ireland. In 9 James I. he had a confirmation of his lands in Ireland, from Thomas, earl of Ormond, grand treasurer, Donat, earl of Thomond, and other the commif-sioners for inquiring into defective titles. And the year after, September 5, 10 James I. he constituted Roger Manwaring, esquire, constable, governor, and keeper of his castle of Eniscorthy, in the county of Wexford, with such jurisdictions, privileges, &c. as to the same belonged; and general-receiver of all his rents, &c. with the yearly fee of twenty pounds English money.

On February 16, A. D. 1616-17, 14 James I. he obtained a grant for free-warren, in his manors and lordships of Farley-Wallop, Over-Wallop, Nether-Wallop, Clidesden, Hatch, Illesfield, alias Ullsfield, Subberton, Appleshaw, East-Rednam, and Fyfeild, with the appurtenances, in Southampton; also in his manors of Allington, alias Aldrington, in Wilts, Hopton-Ash, alias Hopton-Castle, Shelerton, Broadward, Abcot, Oblages, Clogonford, alias Clongunnas, and Clongbury, in Salop. In 15 James I. he was constituted one of his majesty's council, under William, lord Compton, then president of the marches of Wales; and in 1622, 20 James I. one of the commissioners for advancing the woollen manufactory in the said principality.

In 1 Charles I. he was one of the trustees of Elizabeth, countess of Southampton, for the third part of the lordships, manors, &c. of Henry, earl of Southampton, deceased, during the minority of Thomas, earl of Southampton. And with the said countess, William, viscount Sey, Robert, lord Spencer, Henry, lord Danvers, and Sir Robert Vernon, had a grant of the wardship and marriage, as also of the custody of the lands of Thomas, earl of Southampton, who was so highly distinguished in the reigns of Charles I. and Charles II. and died in the post of lord high-treasurer of England.

This Sir Henry Wallop was instructed in juvenile learning by Nicholas Fuller, afterwards a prebendary of the church of Salisbury, a very pious clergyman, and author of several pieces. He was his tutor, and went with him to Oxford, where, in Michaelmas term, A. D. 1584, they were both matriculated as members of St. John's college, and afterwards translated themselves to Hart-hall, where they improved their studies; and Wood observes, that Fuller was a very extraordinary proficient. His pupil was also a very learned gentleman, and of exemplary morals, as is evident from his manuscript writings; and was a judicious manager of his estate, as appears by several copies of his letters relating thereto; which also shews, that he kept a very hospitable house, in all respects suitable to his fortune, one of the largest among the commoners of his time. His countrymen testified their esteem and confidence in him, by his being so often their representative in parliament; first, in the reign of queen Elizabeth, and after, in the reigns of James I. and Charles I. to the time of his death. In the first year of Charles I. he had such an interest, that his son was elected with him for the county of Southampton, and they sat together in one parliament, in the reign of king James I. and all the parliaments in king Charles the First's reign; the son for Andover, and the father for the county of Southampton.

This Sir Henry Wallop being very aged, was not present in parliament when the protestation was taken by both houses, on May 4, A. D. 1641, and and, it is probable, might be ill, for his son Robert then took it. He died November 15, A. D. 1642, aged seventy-four, on October 18 before his death, and was buried in the vault with his ancestors at Farley, as the plate on his coffin shews; and his lady lies buried with him, with this inscription on her coffin:

"Here lieth the body of Dame Elizabeth Wallop, wife to Sir Henry Wallop, Knt. who deceased the 5th Day Novemb. 1624. She left behind her, then living, one son and five daughters. Which Dame Elizabeth, was Daughter and sole heir to Robert Corbet, of Moreton Corbet, Esq. Which Robert had to wife Anne, daughter to John Lord St. John, of Bletsoe."

He had five daughters,

1. Anne, married to John Dodington, of Breamor, in the county of Southampton. She died A. D. 1656, and was interred at Farley.

2. Elizabeth, } died unmarried.

3. Catherine, }

4. Bridget, married Sir Henry Worsely, of Appledorecomb, in the county of Southampton, knight.

5. Theodosia, died unmarried, August 29, A. D. 1656.

Also a son and successor,

ROBERT WALLOP, born July 20, A. D. 1610. He served in parliament from the twenty-first of James I. till the troubles in the succeeding reign, sometimes for the county of Southampton, sometimes for the borough of Andover. He died on the nineteenth of November, A. D. 1667, and was interred at Farley, leaving by his wife Anne, daughter of Henry Wriothesly, earl of Southampton, an only son and heir,

HENRY WALLOP, who was chosen one of the representatives of Whitchurch, in the first parliament called by Charles II. after his restoration, which began on May 8, 1661, and was continued by several prorogations for seventeen years, eight months, and seventeen days; so that he died before it was dissolved, viz. on January 25, 1673, in the forty-fourth year of his age, as appears from the inscription on his coffin, in the vault at Farley. He married Dorothy, youngest daughter, and one of the four coheirs, of John Blewet, Esq; by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Sir John Portman, knight and baronet. Which John Bluet, esquire, was possessed of one of the largest estates in the west, and was lineal heir male to Sir William Bluet (or Bloet, as it was anciently wrote) living in the reign of William the Conqueror. Hervey, Clarencieux King at Arms, anno 1584, calls him earl of Salisbury; and William Bluet, in the reign of Henry II. in an original charter in the augmentation-office, is stiled Frater Comitum Richardi. Sir Rouland Bloet is said to marry Loretta, daughter of Jeffery Ragland, lord of Ragland, in Monmouthshire, by whom he was grandfather of Sir Roger Bloet, who had to wife Joan, daughter of Sir Lewis de Powis, lord of Powis; and his brother Robert Bloet was in 1092, the second bishop of Lincoln, and also lord chancellor of England, who added twenty prebends to the twenty in that church, founded by Remigius. And Sir Roger's grandson, Sir Ralph, married Hawse, sister to Ralfe de Monthermer, earl of Gloucester and Hereford; from whom, after eleven descents, was the said John Bloet, married to Elizabeth Portman, by whom he was father of Dorothy, before-mentioned, married to Henry Wallop, esquire, whom she survived many years, and is buried with him at Farley; where, on a black marble in the chancel is this inscription:

In Memory

Of

The Virtuous and Exemplary Pious
DOROTHY, Daughter and Co-heir of John Bluet of Holcomb Regis in the County of Devon, Esq;

Relict of Henry Wallop, Esq; late of this Parish,

To both which ancient Families, by her extraordinary Prudence, Moderation,

Piety, and other eminent Graces, she added great Lustre,
Who (having had a considerable Share in those Troubles and Difficulties

Which attend Humanity) after a Life of the wisest Conduct with relation

Both to Temporal and Spiritual Matters, died as much like a Christian

As she lived; and into the Hands of her GOD, to whom she had long paid

A constant Devotion, she meekly resign'd her pious humble Soul,

Decr. 1st in the Year of or. Lord } 1704 of her Age } 72

That he might pay a grateful Acknowledgement to one that had deserved so

Well of his Family, and perpetuate, for thy Imitation, so rare an Example,

Bluet Wallop, Esq;

Her Grandson and Heir, ordered this Memorial.

Their issue were four sons;

1. Robert Wallop, who was born Feb. 20, and baptized on the twelfth of March, A. D. 1654, and died unmarried in the life-time of his father.

2. Henry Wallop, } successively possessors of

3. John Wallop, } their father's estates, &c.

4. Charles Wallop, died before his father; unmarried.

The second son,

HENRY WALLOP, succeeded his father, and served in parliament for Whitchurch, A. D. 1678, as also in 1680; in the parliament called by James II. and the two first parliaments of king William and queen Mary. He died unmarried on the twenty-eighth of December, A. D. 1691, aged thirty-four years, seven months; and twenty days. He was succeeded by his only surviving brother,

JOHN WALLOP, who, on August 14, A. D. 1683, married Alicia, third daughter and coheir of William Borlase, of Great Marlow, in Buckinghamshire, esquire, second son of Sir John Borlase, of Buckmer, in the same county, baronet; and by her, who survived him, had issue five sons and two daughters:

1. Bluet Wallop, born August 8, A. D. 1684, hereafter mentioned.

2. Henry Wallop, born November 27, A. D. 1686, and died March 9, A. D. 1690.

3. John

3. John Wallop, first lord viscount Lymington, and earl of Portsmouth.

4. William Wallop, born April 30, A. D. 1692, and died on the twenty-fourth of June following.

5. Robert Wallop, who, after his travels in Germany, France, and Holland, died in the nineteenth year of his age, on January 27, A. D. 1714, and was buried at Farley.

The daughters were,

1. Elizabeth, who was born September 19, A. D. 1685, and was buried at Farley, on May 4, A. D. 1700, unmarried.

2. Mary, who was married to Henry, lord Herbert, of Chirbury, and was first lady of the bed-chamber to Anne, princess of Orange.

He died A. D. 1694, and was buried at Farley, and his eldest son, BLUET WALLOP, esquire, succeeded to the estate, and died unmarried in the twenty-fourth year of his age, on October 30, A. D. 1707; whereupon the estate devolved on his next surviving brother and heir,

(First Earl.) JOHN WALLOP, born April 15, A. D. 1690, was by George I. in consideration of his great abilities and merits, advanced to the dignity of a peer of this realm, by the title of baron Wallop, of Farley-Wallop, in the county of Southampton; also to the title of viscount Lymington, in the same county, by letters-patent, bearing date June 11 (1720) 6 George I. the preamble thereof being as follows: "Since, of " all the privileges that belong to the supreme " authority, we esteem that to be the most valuable, which enables us to give a just reward
" to those men who deserve well of their country.
" — We have determined to place, among the " peers, our trusty and well-beloved John Wallop, Esq; one of the lords of our Treasury; of " a very ancient, and during the reign of our
" royal ancestors the Saxons in this island, of an illustrious family.

" But we having had experience, in his executing public affairs, of those virtues that before adorned a private life, candour of manners, integrity of mind, and skilfulness in business; we are persuaded that the honours of the peerage will neither be greater than his merit, nor conferred upon him sooner than they were expected by all good men."

His lordship was chosen one of the knights for the county of Southampton, in the parliament called to meet on March 17, A. D. 1714-15, as also one of the burgesses for Andover. And on April 13, A. D. 1717, was constituted one of the lords commissioners of the Treasury, and re-chosen for the county of Southampton, whilst he was a commoner; and also continued in the commission of the treasury.

On January 11, A. D. 1732-3, his lordship was constituted lord-warden and chief justice in Eyre of all his majesty's forests, parks, chases, and warrens beyond Trent. On September 3, A. D. 1733, he was appointed lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Southampton, and of the town of Southampton, and county of the same: likewise, by patent of the same date, lord warden and keeper of New-Forest, and the duckoys in the said forest, and of the manor and park of Lindhurst, and hundred of Rudberg, in the county of Southampton; also, November 2, the same year, made vice-admiral of the county of Southampton; and July 4, A. D. 1734, vice-admiral of the Isle of Wight.

His lordship, on the surrender of his place of lord warden and chief justice in eyre, was constituted, July 12, 8 George II. governor and captain of the Isle of Wight, captain of the castle of Carisbroke, and all other castles and fortresses in the said isle; also constable of the castle of Carisbroke, and likewise steward, surveyor, receiver, and bailiff of all manors, lands, woods, revenues, &c. within the said island.

In 1742, his lordship surrendered his place of governor of the Isle of Wight, and soon after gave up his posts of lord warden of New Forest, lord-lieutenant of the county of Southampton, &c. but his majesty taking into consideration his eminent services, was pleased to advance him to the honour of earl of Portsmouth, in the county of Southampton, by letters patent, dated April 11, A. D. 1743, 16 George II. and on February 22, A. D. 1745, he was again pleased to confer on his lordship the government of the Isle of Wight.

His lordship, May 26, A. D. 1716, married the lady Bridget, eldest daughter to Charles Bennet, earl of Tankerville, by whom he had issue,

1. Bridget, born February 20, A. D. 1716-17, who died June 26, A. D. 1736, unmarried.

2. John Wallop, viscount Lymington, born August 3, A. D. 1718, who, on July 12, A. D. 1740, married Catharine, daughter and sole heir of John Conduit, of Cranbery, in Southampton, by Catharine, his wife, daughter of Robert Barton, esquire, and niece and coheir of the celebrated Sir Isaac Newton. Which John Conduit, esquire, was elected a member of parliament for Southampton, in 1734, and succeeding Sir Isaac Newton, as master of his majesty's mint, died in that post, May 3, A. D. 1737. His lordship served in the ninth and tenth parliaments of Great Britain for the borough of Andover, and died in 1749, leaving four sons, John, now earl of Portsmouth, Henry, Barton, and Bennet; also a daughter, Catherine. The viscountess Lymington, his relict, died April 15, A. D. 1750, and was interred by the remains of her father, in Westminster-abbey.

3. Borlase, born June 3, A. D. 1720, who took to a military life, and was first an ensign in the royal regiment of foot-guards, and afterwards aid-de-camp to general Wentworth, in the expedition to Carthage, in 1741; but being immediately after seized with a burning fever, he died in April that year, unmarried.

4. Mary, born August 17, A. D. 1721, and died April 13, A. D. 1722.

5. Charles, born December 12, A. D. 1722, who in 1747, was chosen member of parliament for Whitchurch.

6. Anne, who died March 7, A. D. 1759.

7. Bluet, born April 27, A. D. 1726, who was page of honour to his majesty, and attended on him during the campaign in 1743; in 1744, he also served in Flanders; and on May 11, N. S. 1745, was in the battle of Fontenoy. He was equerry to the duke of Cumberland, and was with him at the battle of Culloden, April 16, A. D. 1745, being

THE
LIBRARY OF THE MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY
LONDON
1851

TO THE
MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY
LONDON
1851 being captain in the regiment of Buffs; and died aged twenty-three, June 6, A. D. 1749, having been chose, in 1747, member for Newport, in the Isle of Wight.

8. Elizabeth, buried at Farley, June 20, A. D. 1727.

9. Henry, and } who both died infants.
10. Bennet, }

Her ladyship died of an apoplexy, in the forty-third year of her age, at Lindhurst (the king's house, in New Forest) October 12, A. D. 1738, and was buried in the vault belonging to the family at Farley. His lordship, June 4, A. D. 1741, married, secondly, Elizabeth, eldest daughter to James, lord Griffin, and relict of Henry Grey, of Billingbeer, in the county of Berks, esquire, but died without issue by her, in the seventy-second year of his age, November 23, A. D. 1762; being then governor and captain of the Isle of Wight, captain and constable of Carisbroke castle, and steward, surveyor, &c. of all manors, lands, woods, revenues, &c. within the said island; and was succeeded by his grandson, (Second, and present Earl.) JOHN WALLOP, who was born June 29, 1742, and married, August 27, A. D. 1763, Urania, daughter of Coulson Fellowes, of Eggsford, Devonshire, esquire, who was returned one of the knights for Huntingdonshire in parliament, from 1741 to 1754, inclusive.

(TITLES.) John Wallop, earl of Portsmouth, viscount Lymington, and baron Wallop, of Farley-Wallop.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Wallop, of Farley-Wallop, and viscount Lymington, in com' Southamp. June 11, A. D. 1720, 6 George I. and earl of Portsmouth, April 11, A. D. 1743, 16 George II.

(ARMS.) Pearl, a bend wavey, diamond.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a mermaid, holding in her dexter hand a comb, in the other a mirror, all proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two chamois, or wild goats, diamond.

(MOTTO.) "En suivant la verité."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Hurshbourne, and at Farley-Wallop, both in the county of Southampton.

GREVILLE Earl BROOKE, and Earl of WARWICK.

THE name of this family was anciently wrote GRAVILLE, or GREVILLE, with or without the final e, and sometimes GREVEL. Leland, in his Itinerary of England, which he wrote in the reign of Henry VIII. in the frequent mention he makes of this family, uses the two first of those names promiscuously. He says, "Sum hold opinion that the Gravilles cam originally in at the conquest. — The veri auncient house of the Gravilles is at Draiton, by Banburi, in Oxfordshire. But there is an nother manor place of the chief stok of the Gravilles, caullid Milcot, yn Warwik-shire, where a late, as at a newer, fairer, and more commodious house, thei used to ly at. — And court rolles remayne yet at Draiton, that the Grevilles had landes ons by yere 3300 marks.

"And Gravilles had Knap Castel, and Bewbusch Parke, and other landes in Southsax, by descentes of their name.

"Grevill, an ancient gent. dwelleth at Milcote, scant a mile lower than Stratford, towards Avon ripa dextra."

Although these and other authorities, together with the name itself, which plainly appears to be Norman, sufficiently evince the great antiquity of this family, yet the first of the Grevilles which we find mentioned on record, is in the reign of king

Edward I. A. D. 1294, when William Grevill died seized of the manors of Inglewait and Awaldtoftes, in the county of York; and of the office of chief forester of Galteres, with the jurisdiction there. After him was John Grevill, with whom the learned Camden begins his curious and accurate pedigree of the family, the original roll of which is in the possession of Francis, the present earl Brooke, and earl of Warwick.

JOHN GREVILL died before the thirty-third year of king Edward III. in which year there was a plea between Margaret the wife of the said John, and Richard de Caur and Isabel his wife, concerning the wardship of William Grevill, son and heir of the said John.

This WILLIAM GREVILL was seated at Campden, in Gloucestershire, and had issue, William, his son and heir. They were both living in the twenty-first year of king Richard II. and being wrote William Grevel of Campden, the one lent the king two hundred marks, and the other an hundred marks, great sums in those days. On the tenth of August, A. D. 1397, the king acknowledges the receipt of the said loan from them, and promises payment thereof in the Quindenes of Easter then next. The year after, this last William having purchased the manor of Milcote in Warwickshire, of sir Walter Beauchamp, knight, he, to strengthen his title, obtained a release, bearing date at Milcote, on the fifth day of November, in the twenty-second year of king Richard II. from William de Peto, cousin and heir to Geffery de Langley, whose right it was, in the reign of king Edward III. and being so possessed thereof, entailed it by fine, in the second year of king Henry IV. on the issue male of his body, by Joan then his wife, and for want of such issue, upon John, and Lodowick, his sons by Margaret his first wife, and the issue male of their bodies successively, with remainder to his own right heirs. He died in the third year of king Henry IV. and consonant to the orders in his last will, was buried in the church of the blessed Virgin Mary of Campden, in which church his monument still remains. By his last will and testament, bearing date at Campden, April the second, A. D. 1401, and proved in the year following, he bequeathed to that church, a hundred marks towards its repairs, and two hundred pounds to maintain four chaplains to say mass therein, during the ten following years, for his soul and the souls of all his ancestors. He bequeaths his manors, lands, &c. to Joan his wife, John Grevill his son, and Richard Brothell, his executors; and appoints Sir Roger Hatton, abbot of Evesham, and Sir William Bradley, supervisors. The said Joan, his second wife, was sister and heir of Sir Philip Thornbury, knight, and lived a long time after him. But this lady having brought him no sons, the entail before mentioned took place, with regard to John, his son and heir, and Lodowick, whom he had by Margaret his first wife, by whom he likewise had issue two daughters; Mary, married to John Gifford, of Harpre, esquire; and Alice, married to Edmond Ludlow, esquire.

JOHN GREVILLE, eldest son and heir of the last mentioned William, resided also at Campden, and being sheriff of Gloucestershire, and the Marches of Wales, in the sixth year of king Henry IV. bore for his arms, sable, upon a cross engrailed, within the like border, or, ten annulets of the second, with a mullet of five points in the dexter quarter. In the eighth year of king Henry V. he obtained the king's pardon for all transgressions, in that he, and Sibil his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Robert Corbet, knight, deceased, had entered on the lands and tenements which Joan, the wife of the said sir Robert, held in dower. Sibil, his wife, dying soon after without issue, he married Joyce, daughter of Sir Walter Cokesey, knight, and sister and heir to Hugh Cokesey; and by her he had issue John, his son and heir.

This JOHN GREVILLE resided at Cherlton Regis, in the county of Gloucester; and was chose one of the knights for that shire, in the second year of king Henry V. as also in four other parliaments, viz. from the last of king Henry V. to the thirteenth of king Henry VI. On the death of Joan, his grand-father's second wife, in the 28th year of king Henry VI. he became possessed of the manor of Milcote, which she held during her life; and thereupon made that seat his principal residence. He was in the commission of the peace for the county of Warwick, and sheriff of that and Leicestershire, in the first year of king Edward IV. In the fifth year of that reign he had the honour of knighthood conferred on him; and in the 13th of king Edward IV. had livery of the lands which descended to him by the death of his mother. The same year he was sheriff of Warwickshire and Leicestershire; as also a third time, in the 17th year of king Edward IV. He bore the same arms as his father did, excepting the annulets upon the cross, as appears by his picture, together with that of his wife, both kneeling in their surcoats of arms, in the east window of the parish-church at Binton, in Warwickshire. He departed this life on the 6th day of August, in the 20th year of Edward IV. and, pursuant to the directions given in his last will, was buried in St. Ann's chapel, in the church of Weston upon Avon. By Joan his wife, daughter of William Scote, he left issue Thomas, his only son and heir; as also two daughters, Ann and Margeret, both of whom died without issue.

THOMAS GREVILLE, only son and heir of the above-mentioned John, was twenty-six years of age at the decease of his father. He assumed the name of Cokesey in respect of the inheritance he enjoyed by descent from his grandmother, and having livery of his father's lands, made Milcote his chief residence. In the same year, 20 Edward IV. he was constituted sheriff of Warwickshire and Leicestershire; and at the coronation of king Henry VII. was one of the knights of the Bath then created. The next year, 2 Henry VII. he was made a knight banneret, for his valiant behaviour in the battle of Stoke. In the 4th year of king Henry VII. he was one of the commissioners of array in the county of Warwick, for sending archers, &c. into Britany, for relief of that dutchy; and the year after, was constituted one of the justices for jail-delivery in Warwickshire. In the 6th year of king Henry VII. he was a commissioner for arraying of men in defence of this realm, then in danger of an invasion from Charles IX. king of France; and in the commission of the peace for the county of Warwick, from that time until his decease. This Sir Thomas died in the 14th year of king Henry VII. leaving no issue by Elizabeth his wife, daughter to William lord Herbert: whereupon Robert Russel and Robert Winter were found to be his cousins and heirs, and inherited the lands of the Cokeseys; but by force of the entail made in the second year of king Henry IV. the manor of Milcote, and other manors and lands of the Grevilles, resorted to John Greville, great grandchild to Lodowick, second son to William Greville, of Campden.

This LODOWICK, or LEWIS, GREVILLE, married Margeret, the only daughter and heir of Sir Giles Arderne, or Ardene, of Drayton, near Banbury in Oxfordshire, knight, by Philippa his wife, who was also a considerable heiress; and which Sir Giles Ardene was lineally descended from TURCHITIL DE WARWICK, earl of Warwick at the time of the conquest; as may be seen in the table. In consequence of this marriage, Lodowick settled at Drayton, the ancient seat of his wife's family; and being thus possessed of that rich inheritance, added to his own paternal estate, which had been greatly augmented by part of the possessions of the lords Dinan or Dinham, he raised this branch of the family of Greville to so eminent a degree, that Leland, as we mentioned before, before, says they were at length possessed of three thousand three hundred marks per annum. But this great estate, as Leland further informs us, by the fraud of one Somerton, to whom it came to be bequeathed in trust, without a proper declaration of uses, and by the extravagance of the grand-father of the Grevilles of Drayton, who lived in the time of king Henry VIII. came to be reduced to four hundred marks per annum. This Lodowick died on the 28th of August, A. D. 1438, and was buried at Drayton. He left issue four sons, viz.

1. William Greville, his heir.
2. Richard Greville, who was knight for Oxfordshire in the eighth year of king Henry V.
3. Robert Greville; and,
4. John Greville, from whom the GREVILLES of Limington in Gloucestershire derive their descent.

WILLIAM GREVILLE, the heir of Lodowick, was also seated at Drayton. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Robert Frances, of Formark, in the county of Derby, knight; and departing this life in the nineteenth year of king Henry VII. was succeeded by Ralph, his son and heir. This

RALPH GREVILLE, took to wife, Margaret, daughter and coheir of Thomas Poyntz, of Frampton-Cottell, in the county of Gloucester, esquire; and as, by this marriage, the Grevilles, his descendants, have the right of quartering the arms of no less than five ancient and honourable families, viz. of Poyntz, Bardolph, Mallet, Clanebow, and Acton. The pedigree of that lady is inserted in the table.

He had issue his only son and heir,

JOHN GREVILLE, who on the death of Sir Thomas Greville, alias Cooksey, in the fourteenth year of Henry VII. as aforesaid, succeeded to the lordship and manor of Milcote, and other the ancient demesnes of the Grevilles. In the fifteenth year of king Henry VII. he was one of the justices for the gaol-delivery at Warwick, and also in the commission of the peace for that county. He married Jane, daughter of Sir Humphry Forster, of Harpeden, knight, and by her had issue one daughter, Maria, who married Robert Somerville, esquire; and two sons, viz. Edward, his eldest son and heir; and Robert, who left two daughters his coheirs, viz. Dorothy, wife of Edward Morgan, esquire, and Anne, married to Thomas Nevill, esquire.

EDWARD GREVILLE, the first son, was in the commission of the peace for Warwickshire, in the first year of king Henry VIII. In the fifth year of king Henry VIII. he was present at the siege of Terouen, and at the battle that ensued, called by our historians the battle of Spurs, from the swiftness of the French in running away; and having afterwards assisted at the storming of Tournay, he, in reward for his valiant behaviour, received the honour of knighthood, on the thirteenth of October, A. D. 1513. In the twelfth year of king Henry VIII. he was one of the knights appointed to attend the king and queen to Canterbury, and from thence to Calais and Guisnes, to the meeting with the French king; every one of that degree having a chaplain, eleven servants, and eight horses. In the thirteenth year of king Henry VIII. he obtained the wardship of Elizabeth, one of the daughters and coheirs, and at last the sole heir of Edward Willoughby, only son of Robert Willoughby, lord Brooke. This grant, in its consequences, greatly contributed to aggrandise his family, as will appear from what afterwards followeth. He married Anne, daughter of Robert Denton, of Armesden, in the county of Bucks, esquire; by whom he had four sons, viz.

1. John, his eldest son and heir.
2. Fulke, his second son, of whose posterity we are principally to treat.
3. Thomas Greville, } both of whom died
4. Edward Greville, } without issue.

He departed this life in the twentieth year of king Henry VIII. and was buried in St. Anne's chapel, in the church of Weston upon Avon, according to the appointment of his will.

JOHN GREVILLE, of Milcote and Drayton, eldest son of the before-mentioned Sir Edward Greville, was one of the knights for the county of Warwick, in the thirtieth year of king Henry VIII. and being knighted at the coronation of king Edward VI. died on the twenty-fifth of November, in the following year, leaving by his wife Elizabeth, the daughter of John Spencer, of Hodnet, esquire, an only son, Edward, who was afterwards knighted. This

Sir EDWARD GREVILLE, of Milcote, married Margaret, daughter and coheir of William Willington, of Burleston, in the county of Warwick; by whom he had Lodowick, his only son; which

LODOWICK GREVILLE, having married Thomasin, daughter of Sir William Peters, knight, left issue

Sir EDWARD GREVILLE, of Milcote, who married Joane, daughter of Sir Thomas Bromley, chancellor of England, and by her had issue John, his only son, and seven daughters, viz.

1. Margaret, married to Sir Arthur Ingram, knight.
2. Catherine, the wife of — Ingram, esquire.
3. Joyce, married to William Whitacre, esquire.
4. Margaret, married to Edward Pennel, esq;
5. Jane,
6. Elizabeth, } died unmarried.
7. Constance, }

His son John, dying unmarried in his father's life-time, Sir Edward sold his whole estate to Lionell Cranfield, earl of Middlesex; and thus the elder branch of the family of Greville of Milcote came to be extinct.

We now return to

Sir FULKE GREVILLE, second son to Sir Edward Greville, and brother to Sir John Greville, aforesaid. He had for wife, Elizabeth, before mentioned, the ward of his father, one of the greatest heiresses then in England; and by her had a numerous issue*.

Having

* It may not be improper to give a particular account of the descent of this lady; from whom the family of the Grevilles inherited a very large estate, and partook of the noblest blood in England. She was not only sole heir of the family of Willoughby of Brooke by her father, but by her grandmother was descended from the old earls of Warwick, and Having by this marriage obtained the manor of Alcester, and many other fair lordships and lands, he seated himself at Beauchamp's Court, and augmenting this large estate by the purchase of sundry lands in the neighbourhood, raised his family to high distinction in the county of Warwick. In the thirty-second year of Henry VIII. the king demised to him the site of the monastery of Alcester, together with all the lands and rents belonging thereto, lying in and about Alcester, Coughton, Kinerton, and Exhall; and he thereupon pulled down the monastery, for enlarging his house at Beauchamp's Court: but the inheritance being granted by the crown, to William and John Sewiter, and to the heirs of the said John, Sir Fulke purchased the same of them in the fourth and fifth of Philip and Mary. In the thirty-fourth year of king Henry VIII. he was sheriff of the counties of Warwick and Leicester, as also in the first year of king Edward VI. and was knight of the shire for the county of Warwick, in three several parliaments. That he was an affectionate husband, and tender parent; that he had encountered great difficulties, in securing the inheritance of his lady, (the daughters of the late lord Brooke claiming as coheirs) and that he was remarkably accurate in his accounts, and adhered strictly to justice in all his transactions, appears by the whole tenor of his last will, bearing date the twelfth of September, in the first year of queen Elizabeth; in which, towards the end, he thus expresses himself: "And my especial requests to my executors for the love I have born them, and for the travel I have taken in establishing the hole inheritance, with my great costs also to be considered, I most earnestly require them, and on God's behalf charge them, that my debts be paid, if I die before the accomplishments thereof." His executors were, his lady, and his eldest son, Fulke Greville. He died in the first year of queen Elizabeth, and Elizabeth, his wife, in the third; and both were buried in the church at Alcester, where an altar-monument is erected to their memory, upon which the effigies of himself and his lady are laid, with the portraitures of his children on the sides.

Round the verge of the monument is the following inscription:

"Here lieth the body of Foulke Grevyll, knight, and lady Elizabeth his wife, the daughter and heir of Edward Willoughby, esquire, the sone and heire of Robert Willoughby, knyght, lord of Broke; and lady Elizabeth, one of the daughters and coheires of the lord Beauchamp of Powyk: which Foulke died the Xth day of November, anno Domini MDLIX; and the said lady Elizabeth, his wife, departed IXth day of in the year of our lord MDLX; of whose foules God have mercy. Amen."

They left three sons, and four daughters.

The

and was heir to one of the most considerable branches of that illustrious family. We shall therefore go back to the time when the house of Warwick flourished.

In this family, which gave a succession of earls for upwards of four hundred years, and fell at last by its own weight, the reader will have a remarkable instance of the dignity, wealth, and power of the ancient English nobility, as well as of the uncertainty of human grandeur.

In order to make this note more entertaining to the curious reader, and to throw light upon the subject in hand, we shall begin with a short historical review of the old earls of Warwick, so well known in English history.

J. Rolfe, or Rous, the noted Warwickshire antiquary, who died in the year 1491, not only assures us, that Warwick hath had its earls ever since the reign of the renowned king Arthur, in whose time, as he gravely asserts, Arthgal, or Artigal, first enjoyed that honour; but likewise furnishes us with a list and historical account of the several succeeding earls, taken from the ancient British chronicles: and in this he is partly followed by Sir William Dugdale, in his Antiquities of Warwickshire. The former part of Rous's work favours so much of fable and romance, that little or no credit can be given thereto: and it is certain, that although Warwick, as well as other counties, had its earls in the period preceding the invasion of this island by William, duke of Normandy, yet those earls were no more than either fiduciary viccomites, or substitutes to the earls of Mercia, within whose earldom Warwickshire was included; or immediate officers to the king; and had not in themselves any absolute jurisdiction: neither did they in their own right possess the castle and town of Warwick, or receive the third penny of the county, as would have been the case had they been earls in fee.

At the time of the conquest, TURCHILL, who had then lately succeeded his father Alwine, as earl or viccomes of Warwick, had large possessions in that and the neighbouring counties. Although he was a nobleman of great note and power, yet he did not give any assistance to Harold in his opposition to duke William; for which reason that conqueror not only suffered him to continue in quiet possession of his vast estates, all which he enjoyed during his life; but also employed him to enlarge and fortify the castle and town of Warwick, although he soon after deprived him of the earldom.

William the Conqueror having thus caused the town of Warwick to be fortified with a ditch and gates, and the castle to be repaired and enlarged, which until that time consisted of little more than the fortification, called the Dungeon, built in the year 915, by order of Ethelfleda, daughter of king Alfred, upon an hill of earth artificially raised near the river side, committed the custody of that strong place to HENRY DE NEWBURGH, whom he had then lately advanced to the dignity of EARL OF WARWICK, and annexed to the earldom and castle, the manor of Warwick, with its appurtenances, which was then in the crown, and included the royalty of the borough.

Soon after the death of the Conqueror, William Rufus, his successor, enriched this new-created earl with the greatest part of the inheritance of Turchill de Warwick. The bear and ragged-staff, which had been the device or ensign of Turchill's family from before the time of his ancestor, Guy, earl of Warwick, so famous for his feats of chivalry in the Saxon age, was, on the grant of this inheritance, assumed by the new earl as the ensign of his family; and hence it became the remarkable badge of the successive earls of Warwick, through the lines of NEWBURGH, BEAUCHAMP, NEVIL, PLANTAGENET, and DUDLEY, as it now also is of the present EARL OF WARWICK; and when supporters came in use, it was likewise in that shape added to their arms.

This HENRY DE NEWBURGH, earl of Warwick, who took his surname from the castle of Newburgh, in Normandy, the place of his birth, was second son of Roger de Beaumont, lord of Pondandemer, Preaux, &c. attended William the Conqueror into England, and was, as the table sheweth, lineally descended from Bernard, a Saxon nobleman, who coming into Denmark, and joining Rollo, afterwards the first duke of Normandy, in his expedition against France, soon became his chief counsellor, and second in command to him in his descent upon that kingdom. On the quarrel between king William the Conqueror and his son, Robert Curthose, this Henry was one of those great men, who in the year 1081, effected the reconciliation between them, and having strictly adhered to the interest of Henry, the king's fourth and youngest son, with whom he had constantly lived in the strictest intimacy, was by his industry and authority, the chief instrument in advancing that prince to the throne, upon the death of his brother, William Rufus. In the reign of Henry I. he, in imitation of that king, who made a park at Woodstock, began making Wedgenock-park, about two miles from his castle at Warwick.

The sons were,

1. Foulke Greville.
2. Robert Greville, of Thorp-Latimer, in the county of Lincoln, ancestor to Francis, the present earl Brooke, and earl of Warwick; and
3. Edward Greville, afterwards Sir Edward Greville, of Harrold park, in the parish of Waltham abbey in the county of Essex; whose line terminated in two daughters, his coheirs.

The daughters of the aforesaid Fulke Greville were,

1. Mary, married to William Harris, of the county of Devon, esquire.
2. Eleanor, to Sir John Conway, of Arrow and Ragley, in the county of Warwick, knight.
3. Catherine, to Giles Read, of the county of Gloucester, esquire; and
4. Blanche, who died unmarried.

FULKE GREVILLE, the eldest son, upon the death of his mother, succeeded to this great inheritance, and was knighted in the seventh year of queen Elizabeth, being then thirty-nine years of age. He was, according to the character Camden gives of him, "a person no less esteemed for the sweetness of his temper, than the dignity of his station." We have the following account of him, in a valuable manuscript, wrote in 1644, and mentioned in the note beneath. "He was a gentleman full of affabilitie and courtesie, and much given to hospitalitie, which got the love of the whole countrie. For in his time no man did beare a greater sway in the countie of Warwicke than himselfe. He was evermore attended with a brave companie of gentlemen. Upon the news of the death of queen Elizabeth, he being at Warwicke at the great assize, came down from the bench, and with some of his friendes, proclaimed king James, which the judges of the circuit refused to doe." He was custos rotulorum of the county of Warwick; and one of the knights of the shire in the twenty-eighth year of queen Elizabeth, and in four other parliaments. He married Anne, daughter to Ralph Nevil, earl of Westmorland, and died in the year 1606, and the fourth of king James, leaving by her, Fulke, his son and heir; and one daughter, Margaret, married to Sir Richard Verney, of Compton-Mordak, in the county of Warwick, knight, ancestor to the present lord Willoughby of Brooke.

(First Lord.) FULKE GREVILLE, only son of the last mentioned Sir Fulke, was born in the year 1554. Being of the same age with his cousin Sir Philip Sidney, they had their juvenile education together, at a school in Shrewsbury. From this school Fulke Greville went to the university of Oxford, but soon removed to that of Cambridge, and was entered of Trinity college there. Having finished his academical studies, he went abroad, and by adding the knowledge of men to that of books, returned to his native country a most accomplished gentleman. On his arrival in England, his uncle, Robert Greville, at that time a servant to queen Elizabeth, introduced him into the court, where he was soon taken notice of as a most ingenious person, and greatly esteemed by Warwick. Whether it was finished by himself, or his successors, is not certain; but he was soon imitated in this piece of magnificence by others; and hence the waste of lands, for parks, became so frequent in after-ages, among the nobility in England. The same earl founded, on the north side of the town of Warwick, an hospital, or priory, for canons regular, in honour of the Holy Sepulchre, and of that order, causing it to be built on the same spot where the ancient parochial church of St. Helen formerly stood. He also endowed the church of our Lady, in Warwick, with several tithes and lands for prebends, intending to have made it collegiate, and to unite the church of All Saints in the castle to it, but died before he could complete it. By Margaret, his wife, who, some writers say, was the daughter of Rotrode, earl of Perch, but, according to others, sister of Rotrode, and daughter of Arnulph de Hesding, earl of Perch, he had two daughters, and five sons; viz. Roger, who succeeded him in the earldom; Henry; Geoffrey; Rotrode, bishop of Eureux; and Robert, who was sewer and justice of the dukedom of Normandy. He died in the twenty-third year of Henry III. A. D. 1123, and was interred in the abbey of Preaux, in Normandy.

ROGER DE NEWBURGH, the second earl of Warwick, was a witness to king Stephen's laws, and was one of those who adhered to Maud, the empress, against that king. He is reputed to have conquered Gowerland, in Wales, which his posterity for long time afterwards enjoyed; and wherein he founded a priory at Llangonith, which he dedicated to St. Kenned, and annexed as a cell to the abbey of St. Taurinus, at Eureux, in Normandy. He perfected the foundation of the priory begun by his father, and founded the collegiate church of our Lady at Warwick; as also the hospital of St. Michael, for lepers there, and the house of the Templars beyond the bridge. Having made very large grants and concessions to divers other religious houses and churches, as also having frequently visited the Holy Land, he was esteemed a devout and pious man. This earl having married Gundrede, daughter to William, earl of Warren, and sister, by the mother's side, to Walleran, earl of Meulent and Worcester, died in the eighteenth year of king Stephen, A. D. 1153, leaving three sons; William and Walleran, who were successively earls of Warwick, and Henry, who died without issue; as also a daughter, Agnes, married to Geoffrey de Clinton, the king's chamberlain. Henry, the third son, had for his patrimony, Gowerland, in Wales; but, on his death, without issue, it came to the earl his brother.

WILLIAM DE NEWBURGH, third earl of Warwick, on the assessment of the aid for marrying the king's daughter, in the twelfth year of king Henry II. certified the number of his knights fees to be one hundred and five; and half a knight's fee. In the twentieth year of the same king, he procured an addition of two knights to the five knights and ten serjeants, who before kept guard in the mote of Warwick castle, and appears to have lived in a splendor equal to that of any of his ancestors. However, he distinguished himself chiefly by his pious donations. He founded two hospitals in Warwick; the one of St. John, the other of St. Thomas; and having built a new church for the Templars there, bestowed upon them the manor of Shireburne, and other lands at Morton, in the county of Warwick. In the thirtieth year of king Henry III. he went into the Holy Land, where he died on the fifteenth day of November, A. D. 1184. This earl was twice married; first, to Margaret d'Eivill; secondly, to Maud, one of the daughters and coheirs of William, lord Percy, but leaving no issue, he was succeeded by his brother Walleran.

WALLERAN DE NEWBURGH, fourth earl of Warwick, notwithstanding his being heir to the title and estate of his brother, had not absolute possession of the earldom till the seventh year of Richard I. when he gave twenty marks to have the TERTIUM DENARIUM DE PLACITIS COMITATUS. Historians mention little more of him, except that he had two wives; Margaret, daughter of Humphrey de Bohun, earl of Hereford, and Alice, daughter of John de Harecourt, and widow of John de Limesi. By the former he left issue, Henry, his successor, and Walleran, who having obtained from his father, as his portion, the manors of Gretham and Cotesmere, in Rutlandshire, and sundry parcels of land in the county of Worcester, died without issue; also a daughter, Gundreda, who became a nun in the abbey of Pinley. By Alice, his second wife, he had issue only one daughter, Alice, married to William Mauduit, baron of Hanslope, in the county of Buckingham; which lordship he held by the serjeancy of being one of the hereditary chamberlains to the king in his exchequer. This earl Walleran died in the sixth year of king John, A. D. 1205.

HENRY DE NEWBURGH, fifth earl of Warwick, being in minority at the death of his father, was committed to the custody by all such as were lovers of arts and sciences. Being thus made known to the most polite and learned court at that time in Europe, and by the recommendation of his uncle Sir Henry Sidney, lord president of Wales, nominated to some beneficial preferments in that principality, he had an early opportunity of cultivating a friendship with those, who either then were, or afterwards became eminent in life: but of all the men of rank who then made a figure at the court of Elizabeth, his kinsman, Sir Philip Sidney, was his darling: he lived the companion and friend of this great man from his earliest youth, and when he died, wrote his life.

This fair prospect, which thus offered itself to Mr. Greville, for his being amply provided for at home, could not allay that ardour, which he strongly possessed, of engaging himself in services abroad, both by sea and land. The passion that chiefly prevailed among the youth of spirit at that time, was to go to foreign courts in the train of ambassadors; to assist at sieges or battles, under the conduct of famous generals; or to sail to the East or West Indies, in hopes of making discoveries of new countries, or conquests upon the Spaniards. On the other hand, queen Elizabeth constantly discouraged those irregular sallies of ambition; as she knew, that if they were indulged beyond what the service of the public required, the kingdom might be thereby deprived of the bravest subjects, and she of her most valuable servants. Sir Fulke, whose ambition to acquire honour or improvement in foreign countries, was equal to that of any of his age and rank, not being able to obtain leave from his royal mistress to go abroad so often as he desired, was bold enough to make several attempts to go without her permission: but on all those occasions, he was either recalled before he got out of England, or on his return, was received in such a manner, as was most proper to mortify him; being sometimes "made to live in her court," as he himself says, "a spectacle of disfavour, too long, as he conceived." The first excursion which he meditated was, as he informs us in his Life of Philip Sidney, when the armies of don John and duke Casimir were to meet in the Low Countries. Resolved to be a witness of the expected conflict, he made all necessary preparations for his journey, and by the queen's permission, had actually shipped his horses and equipage at Dover; but, to his great mortification, just as he was at the point of his departure, he was staid by the queen's mandate. After this, secretary Walsingham being sent ambassador to treat with those two princes, in a business which so much concerned christian blood and christian empire, Mr. Greville thought that whoever would venture to join that ambassador's train, although without leave, was in no danger of being staid. Accordingly he went over with the secretary, unknown. In his way home he went to Delft, where he waited on William Nassau, prince of Orange, by whom he was kindly received, having been the year before recom-

tody of Thomas Bassët, of Hedington, near Oxford; and, upon an inquisition taken in the twelfth and thirteenth years of king John, was certified to hold one hundred and seven knights fees of the king in capite. In the fifteenth year of that king, he came of age, and had a special writ, directing the sheriff of Warwickshire, to deliver unto him tertium denarium comitatus Warewici, as his ancestors used to have. This earl adhered to king John in his wars with the barons, notwithstanding that king, during the earl's minority, had given the feignory of Gower, in Wales, part of the inheritance of the Warwick family, to William de Braose, concerning which the succeeding earls had great disputes. Upon the difference which happened between king Henry III. in the twelfth year of his reign, and his brother Richard, earl of Cornwall, touching the castle of Berkhamsted, this earl, together with other barons, took up arms in support of the earl of Cornwall's claim; but the matter in dispute being compromised to the satisfaction of both parties, he was ever after firmly attached to the part of his sovereign. This Henry died in the thirteenth year of king Henry III. A. D. 1229, leaving by his first wife, Margery, the eldest of the sisters and coheirs of Henry d'Oily, of Hoke-Norton, in Oxfordshire, one son, and one daughter, viz. Thomas, who succeeded his father in the earldom; and Margery, who afterwards became heir to her brother. By his second wife, Philippa, one of the three daughters and coheirs of Thomas Bassët, of Hedington, he had no issue. This Philippa afterwards married Richard Seward, one of the rebellious barons against king John; but soon after was divorced from him, on account of his cruelty to her. She died about the thirtieth year of king Henry III. and was buried before the high altar in the monastery of Berencester, or Biffeter, in Buckinghamshire, founded by her father.

THOMAS DE NEWBURGH was of full age when his father died, and that year had livery of his lands, but had not seizin of the earldom until four years after: for at Whitsuntide, in the seventeenth year of king Henry III. the king then keeping his festival at Gloucester, he was girt with the sword of knighthood; as were also Roger Bigot, earl of Norfolk, and Hugh de Vere, earl of Oxford: and soon after, the king's precept, bearing date at Tewksbury, the twenty-fourth of May, in the same year, came to the sheriff of the county in these terms: "Rex cinxit Thomam de Warewic cingulo comitatus Warewici; et mandatum est vicecomiti Warwici, quod eidem comiti habere faciat de prædicto comitatu, id quod habere debet nomine Comitatus Warewici, et de quo prædecessores sui comites Warwici seisciti fuerunt, tanquam ad eos pertinente, nomine Comitatus Warwici." This Thomas married Ela, daughter of William Longespe, earl of Salisbury, base son to king Henry II. but dying without issue, on the twenty-sixth of June, in the twenty-sixth year of king Henry III. A. D. 1242, left his sister Margery, heir to the earldom, and was buried at Warwick. Upon the new-building of the choir, in the time of king Edward III. his monument, and divers more of his ancestors, were removed, and never set up again.

MARGERY DE NEWBURGH had been twice married in the life-time of her brother; first, to John Marshal, of the family of the earls of Pembroke; and, secondly, by the special appointment of king Henry III. to John de Plessetis, the king's particular favourite.

This JOHN DE PLESSETIS, in the year 1247, took upon him the title of EARL OF WARWICK, in the right of his wife, conformable to a clause in a fine levied that year, between him the said John de Plessetis, plaintiff, and William Mauduit, and Alice, his wife, desorcients, for settling certain manors and lands, parcel of the earldom of Warwick, on him the said John, during his life; and by which clause the said William Mauduit, and Alice his wife, did, as far in them lay, confer the said earldom on him for life, although he should have no issue by the countess his wife. In the month of August following, the king, in a permission given to him for felling certain oaks in the forest of Dene, affords him the title of COMES WARWICI, which after that time he constantly used. Margery, his countess, dying without children by either of her husbands, the inheritance of her family went to the issue of her aunt Alice, daughter of Walleran, earl of Warwick, who had been married to William Mauduit, baron of Hanslope, as above mentioned, and by whom she left a son and a daughter, to wit, William Mauduit, and Isabel. This John de Plessetis died on the twenty-sixth day of February, in the forty-seventh year of king Henry III. and was buried in the choir of the abbey of Missenden, in Buckinghamshire.

WILLIAM MAUDUIT, baron of Hanslope, son and heir of Alice, the daughter of earl Walleran, as before mentioned, on the death of the said John de Plessetis, became earl of Warwick, and had livery of the castle and manor of Warwick, with all the other manors and lands belonging to the family. He adhered to king Henry III. in the war with the barons, recommended to him by his friend Sidney. After a short stay with this excellent and experienced prince, who held several political conferences with him on the then present posture of public affairs, he returned to England; but the queen, highly resenting his presumption in going out of the kingdom without her permission, forbid him her presence for many months.

The frowns of Elizabeth were not however as yet sufficient to deter him from turning his thoughts to foreign exploits. In this he was encouraged by the sentiments and example of his beloved Sidney, who, in the midst of a court that esteemed, loved, and almost adored him, and where he was honoured with the favour of his royal mistress, languished after the glory of a mighty foreign expedition. He framed with himself a scheme of attacking the Spaniards in America; of subverting their government there; and of laying the foundation of an English settlement in its place, upon such a plan, as that it might become a durable establishment, and by degrees increase, till it extended its power from ocean to ocean. This design he communicated to no one except his friend Greville, who, to use Sir Fulke's own words, "having been bred up with him from his youth, he chose to be his loving and beloved Achates in this voyage." The two young adventurers knowing that the queen and her council would never consent, that he should go on an employment of so hazardous a nature, and so far from England, they secretly concerted the execution of the scheme with Sir Francis Drake. It was agreed between them, that Sir Francis should have the name and reputation of the project while in England; but that, when they set sail, the command should be divided betwixt him and Sir Philip; and, in the mean while, Sir Philip was to support and quicken the expedition with all his credit at court. Sir Francis soon had a squadron assigned him: all dispatch was used, and no public expence spared in the equipment. Sir Philip embarked a great part of his own fortune in the adventure; but carefully kept his design of going himself on board, a secret from all his relations and friends. When the fleet was ready, the two adventurers made use of some specious pretence to leave the court, and go to Plymouth, where the fleet then was, and where they were to wait for a favourable wind. In the mean while Sir Francis Drake's resolution failed; he durst not risk the queen's displeasure, but delayed his departure from time to time on various pretences, till at last the design of Sir Philip and Sir Fulke was known at court. The queen immediately dispatched messengers to Plymouth to stop them, or, if they refused to obey, to stop the fleet. Sir Philip had the courage to withstand his first message, the letters having been intercepted, and conveyed secretly into his own hands; but a second came by a peer of the realm, with an offer to Sir Philip, on the one hand, of an employment under his uncle, the earl of Leicester, then going general into the Low Countries; and on the barons, and had the misfortune to be surprised in his castle at Warwick, by John Gifford, governor of Kenilworth castle, on the part of the barons; who demolished the walls of his castle from tower to tower, and carried him, and his countess Alice, daughter of Gilbert de Segrave, prisoners to Kenilworth, and afterwards obliged him to pay one thousand nine hundred marks for his ransom. He died without issue, on the eighth of January, in the fifty-second year of king Henry III. A. D. 1267, leaving Isabel, his sister, at that time married to William de Beauchamp, eldest son and heir of Walkeline de Beauchamp, baron of Elmley, in the county of Worcester, sole heir to the earldom and estate. His body was buried with great solemnity in the abbey of St. Peter, at Westminster; but his heart was carried to Catesby, in Northamptonshire, and deposited in the nunnery there.

At the time of the conquest, the Beauchamps were considered as one of the principal families in Normandy. On the advancement of duke William to the English throne, they by his gift possessed divers considerable estates in this kingdom; and in the reign of king Henry I. were greatly enriched by the marriage of Walter de Beauchamp, with Emeline, sole daughter and heir of Urso de Abitot, hereditary sheriff of Worcestershire: but the great accession of wealth and dignity introduced into the family by the match with Isabel, heiress of Warwick, rendered it extremely powerful, inasmuch, that from this remarkable period it rose, as will appear in the sequel, through a series of great men, the earls of this line, to such a pitch of grandeur, that the Beauchamps became at last almost too great for subjects.

Amongst the chief persons who came into England with William the Conqueror, was HUGH DE BEAUCHAMP, who, in reward of his singular services, obtained from that monarch a grant of Belinghou, or Belingham, in Hertfordshire; Lincade, Solebery, and Latebery, in Buckinghamshire; and forty-three other lordships in the county of Bedford. The time of the death of this Hugh is not mentioned by any of our historians; but they inform us, that he left four sons, viz. Simon, who died without issue; Paganel, or Payne, who having married Rohais, daughter of Alberic de Vere, justicier of England, and widow of Geoffrey de Magnaville, earl of Essex, became the ancestor of the Beauchamps, barons of Bedford; Walter, of whom and his issue we shall particularly treat; and Milo, who settled at Eaton, in Bedfordshire: as also one daughter, Adeline, married to Walter d'Espece, lord of Kirkham and Helmesley, in Yorkshire.

WALTER DE BEAUCHAMP, third son of Hugh, was steward to king Henry I. He married Emeline, sole daughter, and at length heir, of Urso de Abitot, or, as he is called in Domesday, Urso de Wircestre, hereditary sheriff of Worcestershire, and constable of the castle at Worcester. Roger, brother of Emeline, had succeeded to his father's dignities and large possessions; but being deprived of them, for hastily ordering one of the king's officers to be put to death, and soon after departing this life without issue, all the lands of his inheritance were, by king Henry I. bestowed on this Walter de Beauchamp, with many privileges belonging thereto. The king at the same time granted to him the castle and sheriffalty of Worcester, to hold as freely as any of his ancestors had done; and confirmed to him all the lands which he had of the gift of Adeline, widow of Urso de Abitot.

This Walter left issue, by Emeline, his wife, two sons; first, William, of whom I shall speak hereafter; secondly, Stephen, who marrying Isolda, daughter of Robert, earl Ferrers, settled at Comerse and Fairsted, in Essex; and one daughter, Emma, married to Ralph, baron of Sudley.

WILLIAM DE BEAUCHAMP, the eldest son and heir, bore the office of steward to king Henry I. as his father had done; and obtained that king's confirmation thereof, together with livery of all his lands. After the death of king Henry, he adhered to the interest of the empress Maud; and on her landing in England, was one of the foremost of the nobility who joined her; whereupon king Stephen dispossessed him of his estates, as also of the sheriffalty and castle of Worcester, which he gave, together with the city, to Walleran, earl of Meulent. The empress having in the following year taken the king prisoner in the famous battle of Lincoln, she by her letters patent, bearing date at Oxford, granted and restored to this William de Beauchamp, the castle, with the outworks thereof, to hold of her in capite, together with the sheriffalty of the county, the forests, and whatever else of inheritance appertained thereunto, paying to her the like ferm, as his father, Walter de Beauchamp, had formerly done; in consideration of which grant he covenanted to be her leige-man against all persons whatsoever, and especially against the said Walleran, earl of Meulent, with whom she declared, that she would make no agreement the other hand, denouncing the severest displeasure in case of disobedience. Upon this, our disappointed adventurers returned to court, and left Sir Francis to pursue his voyage, from which he returned rather with wealth than honour.

When the earl of Leicester was sent general of the queen's forces into the Low Countries, Sir Fulke obtained from him the command of one hundred horse; but neither his humble suit to the queen, nor the intercession of his noble uncle and patron, backed by the interest of many other of his friends, could prevail on queen Elizabeth, to consent to his leaving her court.

Lastly, as he himself tells us, "the universal fame of a battle to be fought between the prime forces of Henry III. of France, and the religious of Henry IV. then king of Navarre, lifting him yet once more above this humble earth of duty, made him resolve to see the difference between kings present and absent, in their martial expeditions." So that, without acquainting any creature, the earl of Essex excepted, he shipped himself over, and at his return was kept from the queen's presence full six months, and then received after a strange manner: for that absolute princess, to sever ill example from grace, averred his going over to be a secret employment of hers; "protecting him," as he adds, "to the world, with the honour of her employment, rather than she would, for example's sake, be forced either to punish him further, or too easily forgive a contempt or neglect in a servant so near about her, as she was pleased to conceive it."

After those fruitless attempts to follow his own desires, the fire of youth beginning now to abate, Sir Fulke came to be sensible, as he says himself, "that it was sufficient for the plant to grow where the sovereign's hand had planted it: he therefore contracted his thoughts, and bounded his prospect within the safe limits of duty, and in such home-services as were acceptable to his sovereign."

The first account we meet with, of the civil and domestic employments appointed him by his uncle, Sir Henry Sidney, is in a letter of Sir Henry to the lords of the council, wherein, proposing to lessen the number of attorneys in the court held in the marches of Wales, and to regulate them under a principal officer or two by patent from her majesty, he recommends Mr. Fulke Greyille, together with his own secretary, Mr. Molyneux, for that purpose. About the year 1580, he obtained a patent for the office of clerk of the signet to the council in Wales: and some time after, he had likewise, by another patent, the clerkship of the council, to be executed by himself or his deputy: which offices are said to have brought him in yearly two thousand pounds. He was not however so much embarrassed with business, as to prevent his making a conspicuous figure in the grand entertainments which were made at court in the year 1581, when the ambassadors, and many of the French nobility, came over commissioners from Catherine de Medicis, to treat of a marriage between queen Elizabeth and the ment for the premises. She likewise at the same time restored to this William, the honour and castle of Tamworth, to hold as freely as Robert Despencer, brother of the before-mentioned Urfo de Abitot, enjoyed the same; the manors of Beckford, Weston, and Luffenham, in Rutland; and sixty pounds per annum, English lands, for his service; the constablership which the said Urfo de Abitot had; the office of steward to the king, which his father held of king Henry I. and all the lands and inheritances of his next ancestors who had been in arms against her, and that could not make fine with her for the same, unless some of their nearest kindred had served in war on her part; together with divers other considerable estates. Besides the sheriffalty of Worcestershire, which this William had by inheritance, he executed the like office for Warwickshire, in the second year of king Henry II. for Gloucestershire, from the third to the ninth year of king Henry II. and for Herefordshire, from the eighth until the sixteenth year of the same king, inclusive. The time of his death is uncertain; but by his wife Maud, daughter of William, lord Brose, of Gower, he left issue William de Beauchamp, his only son and heir.

This WILLIAM DE BEAUCHAMP died in the beginning of the reign of king John; and having married Joane, daughter of Sir Thomas Wallerie, knight, left issue, Wilikin, or Walter, his only son and heir, whose wardship and marriage was granted to Robert de Beauchamp, Geoffrey de Abetost, and William de Chenington; and afterwards to Roger de Mortimer, and Isabel his wife.

WALTER DE BEAUCHAMP in the seventeenth year of king John, was appointed governor of Elmley castle, and had the custody of the county in that year; but falling from his allegiance, and siding with the rebellious barons, was excommunicated, and had his lands seized on. This startled him so much, that he forthwith made his peace with the king, and Gualo, the pope's legate; and thereupon giving security, that he should for the future serve the king faithfully, and should not at any time withdraw from his service, he had restitution of his castle of Worcester, and the sheriffalty of that county, upon condition, that he should hold them for fourteen years after the king's full age, and then should restore them to him in as good plight as he received them, if the king so pleased. In the eighteenth year of king Henry III. he was one of the barons who rebelled against that king, at the instigation of Peter de Rupibus, bishop of Winchester, on account of the numerous Poistevins brought into England; but two years after he made his atonement, and paying a fine of fifty marks, besides the AURUM REGINÆ, obtained a new grant of the sheriffalty of Worcestershire. By Bertha, his wife, daughter of William, lord Brus, he had issue two sons, Walcheline and James.

WALCHELINE DE BEAUCHAMP died in the same year with his father; and having married Joane, daughter of Roger, lord Mortimer, had issue by her only one son, William, who married Isabel, sister and heir of William Mauduit, baron of Hanslope, and earl of Warwick.

ISABEL, upon the death of her brother without issue, became COUNTESS OF WARWICK in her own right; but having before that time entered into a holy state of life, in the nunnery at Cokehill, in Worcestershire, did not take upon her that title. Neither did William, her husband, according to the custom of those times, assume the title of earl; wherefore their eldest son, William de Beauchamp, who, as heir to his uncle, succeeded to his estate and the office of one of the chamberlains of the Exchequer in fee, had the title of EARL OF WARWICK, whilst his parents were living, as is evident from two passages in the testament of William, the father. In one of these he styles his son, William, EARL OF WARWICK; and in the other, speaking of his daughter-in-law, he gives her the appellation of COUNTESS. William, the father died in the fifty-fourth year of king Henry III. A. D. 1269, and was buried in the church of Friars Minors, in Worcester: but when Isabel died, does not appear. Besides William de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, they left issue three other sons, viz. John, to whom his father gave the lordship of Holt, in Worcestershire, and who was grandfather of John, created baron Beauchamp, of Kidderminster, by patent, the tenth of October, A. D. 1377; which branch of the family ended in heirs female, from one of whom Sir John Guise, of Gloucestershire, baronet, is descended: Walter de Beauchamp, of Powick and Alcester, from whom Sir Fulke Greyille, the first lord Brooke, was by Elizabeth, the heiress above-mentioned, lineally descended and inherited the manor of Alcester: Thomas de Beauchamp, who died unmarried, and four daughters; Sarah, the wife of Richard, lord Talbot; Joane, married to Sir Bartholomew de Sudley; Isabel, and Sibil, both of whom died young.

WILLIAM DE BEAUCHAMP was, in right of his mother, EARL OF WARWICK, baron of Hanslope, and one of the chamberlains

the duke of Anjou. Those noble personages, after having been nobly banqueted at Westminster, were further entertained, amongst other courtly diversions, with the martial exercise of tilts and tournaments, by Philip, earl of Arundel, Frederick, lord Windsor, Philip Sidney, and Fulke Greville, who were challengers to all comers: in which rencounters Fulke Greville behaved himself so gallantly, that he won the reputation of a most valiant knight.

On the twentieth of April, A. D. 1583, he was by patent, constituted secretary for the principality of South and North Wales; which office king James I. afterwards conferred on him for life: and in the year 1587, he was one of the four persons who carried the pall at the pompous funeral of his much beloved and lamented friend, Sir Philip Sidney. In the beginning of the year 1588, he was, among other persons of honour and quality, created master of arts by the university of Oxford; and when Ambrose Dudley, earl of Warwick, was on the ninth of April, A. D. 1589, interred in the chapel of Warwick, he was one of the principal mourners. In October, 1597, he received the order of knighthood; and two years after, was appointed treasurer of the navy for life. When orders were given out, in August, 1599, for drawing commissions for the great fleet that was set forth, in expectation of another invasion by the Spaniards, it is reported, that Sir Fulke Greville was to have one, as rear-admiral; but we hear no more of any such charge that he was intrusted with in the navy. In the forty-fourth and last year of queen Elizabeth, having bought up from private hands some claims upon the manor of Wedgenock, he obtained from the queen a grant of the ancient and spacious park thereunto belonging, for himself, his heirs and assigns, in as large and ample manner, as John, duke of Northumberland, or Ambrose, earl of Warwick, had held it. He was a member of parliament in several sessions, being many times elected knight of the shire with Sir Thomas Lucy; and it was affirmed, that the county could not make a better choice, they being learned, wise, and honest. At the coronation of king James I. in 1603, he was made a knight of the Bath, and soon after called, from being treasurer of the navy, to be chancellor and under-treasurer of the Exchequer, being at the same time appointed one of the privy-council. In the second year of that king, he obtained a grant of the castle of Warwick, with the gardens and other dependencies about it. He then found it in a ruinous condition, the towers and other strong places of it being used for the common gaol of the county; but at the expence of upwards of twenty thousand pounds, he repaired and adorned it for the seat of his family. Moreover, he made a purchase of the Temple grounds adjoining, and beautified them with large and stately plantations, with an intention, as it would seem, to put in execution, the design which George, duke of Clarence formerly had, of making a park of them under chamberlains to the king in his exchequer; and in right of his father, baron of Elmley, hereditary constable of the castle of Worcester, and hereditary sheriff of that county. Upon the ninth day of February, in the fifty-second year of king Henry III. he did his homage, as nephew and heir to William Mauduit, the last earl of Warwick, for all the lands descended to him by his father's death. He distinguished himself, among the great men of his time, by the eminent services he rendered to the crown, having been almost constantly in employments, civil or military, under Edward I. for twenty-six years of the reign of that king. In the second year of Edward I. he was sent, with other great lords, to the borders of Wales, to hear and redress the wrongs and trespasses committed in those parts, contrary to the form of the peace which had been concluded between king Henry III. and Leweline, prince of Wales. In the fourth year of king Edward I. he was made captain-general of all the king's forces in Cheshire and Lancashire, for the defence of those counties against the incursions of the Welch. Upon sundry occasions he assisted in person, in king Edward's wars against this principality, and did singular service, particularly in the twenty-third year of Edward I. when by stratagem, he routed a strong body of the Welch near Montgomery. He likewise served the king in his wars in Scotland, and, with John, earl of Surrey, in the twenty-fourth year of king Edward I. defeated the whole Scotch army at Dunbar, and took the town. In the year following he was summoned to attend the king into Flanders, but upon further consideration was left behind, and made governor of the castle and forest of Rockingham, in Northamptonshire, and also one of the governors of prince Edward, then a minor, whom the king had constituted his lieutenant during his absence. Before the end of the same year, he was appointed to march with prince Edward against the Scotch: but it does not appear that either the prince, or the earl of Warwick, went upon that expedition, which proved extremely unfortunate; for through the misconduct of the English generals, as well as by the valour and military skill of the famous Sir William Wallace, the English army was this year almost totally destroyed in Scotland. This earl was a great benefactor to the monastery of Thelesford, in Warwickshire, and to the abbey of Prioux, in Normandy; and departing this life in June, 1298, was buried in the chapel of our Lady, within the cathedral of Worcester, where his tomb still remains. He had issue by Maud, his wife, one of the daughters and coheirs of Richard Fitz John, son of John Fitz-Geffrey, justice of Ireland, and widow of Gerard de Furnival, three sons, viz. first, Guy, so named, in honour of the famous Guy, earl of Warwick, in the time of the Saxons; secondly, Robert; and thirdly, John; also five daughters; Isabel, married to Peter Chaworth, esquire; Maud, the wife of ——— Rithen; Margaret, married to John Sudley; and Ann and Amy, who were nuns at Shouldham, in Norfolk. This earl bore for his arms, gules, semé of cross crosslets, with a fesse, or: which cross crosslets were added to his coat, for his father used them not; but whether in token of any pilgrimage by him made into the Holy Land, or vow so to do, is uncertain.

GUY DE BEAUCHAMP, eldest son and heir, succeeded to the earldom of WARWICK, and in the same year that his father died attended the king into Scotland, and assisted at the famous battle of Falkirk, where he behaved so well, that, in reward of his conduct and valour, the king gave him all the castles and lands of Geffrey de Mowbray, lying in that kingdom, excepting the lordship of Okeford, near Roxborough; likewise all the lands of John de Strivelin, with the castle of Amesfeld, and the lands of Drungrey. In Michaelmas term following, he took possession of his office of chamberlain of the Exchequer; and was sworn into the office of hereditary sheriff of Worcestershire. He served king Edward I. several years after in that country, and, as a reward for his services, he obtained a grant, to himself and his heirs, of Bernard castle, in the bishopric of Durham, together with the town and lordship; as also the manor of Middleton, with the chases thereto belonging; and the manor of Gainsford; which lands were held for life by the wife of Hugh de Baliol; as also all the lands held by the wife of Alexander de Baliol, which were to have descended to John de Baliol, then the king's enemy and rebel. In the reign of king Edward II. he was one of the nobility who seized Piers Gaveston, the king's favourite, at Scardeburgh; of which the king having notice, he sent to desire they would spare his life; which the lords, at the request of the earl of Pembroke, agreed to do, and thereupon delivered him into the hands of that earl, who sent him to Wallingford; from whence he was taken by earl Guy, who carried him back to Warwick-castle, and from thence to Gaversithe, or Blacklow-hill, about a mile from Warwick, and there cut off his head. It seems, this great favourite had a particular spleen to the earl, and was wont to call him the Black Hound of Arden; for which, as we have seen, he paid with under his window; and which design hath been lately perfected by the present earl Brooke and Warwick, since he became lord of the manor. Upon the whole, he so repaired this great and venerable pile, as to render it, as Dugdale observes, "not only a place of great strength, but extraordinary delight, and the most princely seat within the midland parts of the realm." Besides other grants from the crown, he had one also of the manor and lands of Knowle, in the said county of Warwick; and he tasted the royal bounty as yet more, in such grants of land, than in any offices of state. In 1617, he obtained a special charter, confirming all such liberties as had been granted to any of his ancestors, in behalf of the town of Alcester, upon a new rent of ten shillings a year, then reserved to the king, his heirs and successors.

It appears from what has been said above, that he had, in his own person, the hereditary right of a peerage; being, by his grandmother, heir at law to Robert Willoughby, lord Brooke, who had been called up by writ of summons to the house of lords. But it was probably not at that time a point clear in law, that after an honour had been for some time in abeyance in the female line, it could afterwards be claimed by the heir at law; as indeed the question was but for the first time, and in this very case, decided in the house of lords, in the eighth year of king William III. on the petition of Richard Verney, esquire, of Compton-Mordak; whose claim to the peerage of Willoughby of Brooke was then admitted, he being grandson and heir to Margaret above-mentioned, who was only sister, and heir at law, to Sir Fulke Greville. But, however that point of law might then have been thought of, Sir Fulke accepted of letters patent, bearing date the nineteenth of January, in the eighteenth year of James I. by which he was advanced to the dignity of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord BROOKE, baron BROOKE, of BEAUCHAMP-COURT, in the county of Warwick, with limitations of that honour, in default of heirs male of his own body, to his kinsman, ROBERT GREVILLE, son to FULKE GREVILLE, of THORPE-LATYMER, in the county of Lincoln, esquire. The reasons assigned in the patent for his creation, were his faithful services to queen Elizabeth, and the then present king; and that he was of noble extraction, being descended of the blood of the NEVILS, the WILLOUGHBYS, and the BEAUCHAMPS. In September, 1621, his lordship resigning the office of chancellor of the Exchequer, in which he was succeeded by Richard Weston, afterwards earl of Portland, he was made one of the gentlemen of the king's bedchamber. He was also counsellor of state to king Charles I. and in the beginning of his reign was the founder of an history-lecture, in the university of Cambridge, with an allowance of a handsome salary to the professor thereof. Indeed there are many instances of his favours and beneficences to learning and learned men; and some of them have not only amply celebrated with his life. The earl thought fit, notwithstanding this bold step, to demand a pardon from the king; who was obliged to grant it him, but never loved him afterwards. They did not, however, live long together; for on the twelfth of August, A. D. 1315, the earl died at his castle of Warwick, as some insinuate, of poison, and was buried, pursuant to the directions given in his will, in the abbey of Bordesley. By Alice, his wife, daughter of Ralph, and sister and heir of Robert de Tony, of Flamslead, in Hertfordshire, and widow of Thomas de Leyburne, he left two sons; Thomas, who succeeded him, and John, who in the following reign distinguished himself by his military services, had the honour to carry the royal standard at the battle of Cressy, was several times captain of Calais, and admiral of the king's fleet; constable of the Tower of London, constable of Dover-castle, and warden of the Cinque Ports for life; admiral of the South, North, and West seas; and one of the founders of the noble order of the Garter; but died without issue, in the thirty-fourth year of king Edward III. and was buried between two pillars, on the south part of the cathedral church of St. Paul, in London, before the image of our Lady, where he had a noble monument, which was usually called Duke Humphrey's Tomb. Besides these two sons, earl Guy left five daughters; Maud, married to Geffery, lord Say; Emme, the wife of Rowland Odingfells; Isabel, married to John Clinton; Elizabeth, the wife of Thomas, lord Ashley; and Lucia, married to Sir Robert Napton, knight.

THOMAS DE BEAUCHAMP, earl of Warwick, was scarce two years old at his father's death; and therefore Hugh le Despencer had the custody of his lands, and probably of his person; but after the ruin of that great favourite in the beginning of the next reign, Roger, lord Mortimer, obtained the custody of Warwick castle, and all the earl of Warwick's lands, on account of a marriage intended between him and a daughter of that lord's; and two years afterwards the king received his homage by special favour, as if he had been of full age, tho' only in his seventeenth year, at which time he took upon him his hereditary offices of sheriff of Worcestershire and chamberlain of the Exchequer. Before he was twenty years of age the king made him governor of Guernsey, and the little islands adjacent. He attended the king in his wars in Scotland and France, and was present and did great service in the famous sea-fight in 1340. In the eighteenth year of king Edward III. he was constituted sheriff of Warwickshire and Leicestershire for life; and the same year created earl marshal of England. He was one of the marshals of the king's army sent into France, and one of the chief commanders, who, under the Black Prince, led up the van of the English army, in the famous battle of Cressy. In the battle of Poitiers, he fought so long, and so stoutly, that his hand was extremely galled with the exercise of the sword and battle-ax: however, he had the good fortune to take William de Melleun, archbishop of Seinz, prisoner, for whose ransom he had no less than eight thousand pounds; and in reward of his military services, he had an annual allowance of one thousand marks out of the king's Exchequer. He was likewise one of the founders of the most noble order of the Garter. In the thirty-seventh year of king Edward III. he attended prince Edward into Gascony; and from thence, with a train of three hundred horse, consisting of knights, esquires, archers, and servants, made a progress into the East, where he spent three years in warring against the infidels. In his return he brought along with him the son of the king of Lithuania, who was christened at London, by the name of Thomas, the earl himself standing godfather. His ardour for military achievements abroad, did not hinder him from distinguishing himself by his buildings, and pious and liberal donations at home. He rebuilt the walls of Warwick castle, which in earl Mauduit's time had been demolished, adding strong gates, and fortifying the gateways with imbatled towers: he likewise founded the choir of the collegiate church of St. Mary, built a booth-hall in the market-place of Warwick, and made the town toll-free. This great man was now of an age that might have excused him from any further fatigues in war; yet in the forty-third year of king Edward III. hearing that the English army, under the conduct of the duke of Lancaster and earl of Hereford, lay perishing with famine and pestilence in their camp, near Calais, and yet declined fighting with the French, who pressed them close; old as he then was, he got together hastily some choice troops, and sailing for Calais, by his bare appearance, dispersed the French, and relieved the English army. Not satisfied with this, he pursued them in their retreat, and wasted the country all round Calais: but there this great man was seized with the pestilence, of which he died, on the thirteenth of November, A. D. 1370, being then in the sixty-third year of his age. His body was brought over, and buried in the middle of the choir of the collegiate church, in Warwick, where his tomb is still to be seen, with the statues of him and his countess, who died a few weeks lebrated his excellent sense and ingenuity, but gratefully acknowledged his extraordinary liberality towards, and patronage of them. In 1597, by his assiduous applications to queen Elizabeth, he obtained the office of clarencieux king of arms for Mr. Camden, who very gratefully acknowledges his favours, not only by leaving to him in his last will a piece of plate, but in his Britannia, where, speaking of the father of lord Brooke, he adds, "Whose only son doth so intirely devote himself to the study of real virtue and honour, that the nobleness of his mind far exceeds that of his birth; for whose extraordinary favours, though I must despair of making suitable returns, yet, whether speaking or silent, I must ever preserve a grateful remembrance of them." He introduced the learned Dr. John Overal to the queen, and by his interest with her, procured for him the deanery of St. Paul's, in London. He was the rise and making of that eminent minister of state, Sir John Coke, knight, who by his means was preferred to be secretary of the navy, and who was afterwards master of the Requests, and at last secretary of state for twenty years together. But for his happy enfranchisement of John Speed, the historiographer, from a mechanic employment, and his commodious enablement of him to pursue the historical studies to which he had such an uncommon inclination, the hearty and unreserved acknowledgment he has publickly made, deserves to be written in letters of gold; where having mentioned, in his Theatre of Great-Britain, the extraordinary reparations which had been made of the decayed castle of Warwick by Sir Fulke Greville, he adds: "Whose merit to me-ward I do acknowledge, in setting this hand free from the daily employments of a manual trade, and giving it full liberty thus to express the inclination of my mind; himself being the procurer of my present estate." Sir Fulke Greville was not content with the mere encouraging of learning in others: from the time that he laid aside all further thoughts of going abroad, and determined to apply himself to home-services, he devoted his leisure hours to the amusement of writing, particularly in the poetical way. After the death of queen Elizabeth, calling to mind, as he tells us, in his Life of Sir Philip Sidney, the many duties he owed to that matchless sovereign of his, he resolved to write her life, or history, purposing to have set out with the union of the red and white roses, in the marriage of Henry VII. but finding he could not have the use of those papers, which he looked upon as absolutely necessary to complete his work in the substantial manner that might be expected, he laid aside that design, and disposed himself to revise the products of his earlier studies. Little of them appeared in print during his life-time; but since his death there have been several publications in his name, though it is not improbable, but that he has mentioned, himself, all the pieces of his writing, which he designed for the press: therefore we shall here subjoin an account of the writings weeks before him, excellently cut in white marble. By Catherine, his wife, daughter of Roger Mortimer, the first earl of March, created by king Edward III. he had seven sons, viz. first, Guy, who died before him, in the year 1359, and was buried at Vendosme, in France, where his monument is still to be seen; leaving by Philippa, his wife, daughter to Henry, lord Ferrers, of Groby, three daughters, Catherine, Elizabeth, and Margaret, all nuns at Shouldham, in Norfolk; secondly, Thomas, who succeeded him; thirdly, Reynburne, who left issue only one daughter, Eleanor, married to John Knight, of Hanslope, esquire; fourthly, William, who afterwards became baron Bergavenny, and of whom and his descendants we shall immediately treat; and John, Roger, and Hierom, who all died unmarried. Besides these seven sons, this earl had ten daughters, whose portraitures were drawn and set up in the windows on the south side of the choir of the collegiate church of St. Mary, at Warwick, viz. Maud, married to Roger de Clifford; Philippa, the wife of Hugh, earl of Stafford; Alice, married to John Beauchamp, of Hache; Joane, the wife of Ralph, lord Basset, of Drayton; Isabel, married first, to John le Strange, of Blackmore, and secondly, to Robert de Ufford, earl of Suffolk; Margaret, married to Guy de Montalt; Agnes, married, first, to ——— Cooksey, and secondly, to ——— Bardolf; Juliana, who died unmarried; Elizabeth, the wife of Sir Thomas de Ufford, knight of the Garter; and Catherine, who became a nun at Wroxhall, in Warwickshire.

WILLIAM DE BEAUCHAMP, fourth son of Thomas, earl of Warwick, and Catherine Mortimer, made his first campaign in 1366, under the famous John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, with whom he continued to serve throughout the whole reign of king Edward III. In the first year of king Richard II. he was appointed governor of the castle and county of Pembroke; and in the fourth year of the same king, lord chamberlain, with an annual pension of two hundred pounds for life. In the seventh of that king, he was captain of Calais; and continuing in that service, he was, in the tenth year of king Richard, constituted captain of the castles of Pembroke and Kilgaran, in Wales, and king's commissioner to treat with the earl of Flanders. It was at this juncture that he distinguished himself in a manner so peculiar, that it deserves to be ever remembered. Among other base schemes put into the head of Richard II. by his favourites, one was, to retire, when the duke of Gloucester, and the other lords were near London with an army, to France, and there purchase the assistance of that monarch; by giving up to him most of the fortresses he then held in that realm. When all things were ready at home for carrying this dark design into execution, and the king sent orders to William Beauchamp, to quit his command at Calais, and transmit certain letters to the court of France, he stoutly refused both. He declared, with respect to the former, that he was intrusted with this important fortress with the advice and consent of the nobility; and without their approbation he would not render up his command. As for the letters, guessing at their tenor, instead of sending them to Paris, he transmitted them to the duke of Gloucester in England. Afterwards, when John de la Pole, brother to the great favourite Suffolk, came with the king's orders, to take from him the command of Calais, he not only refused to yield it into his hands, but seized him, and carried him over prisoner to England; which at that time incensed the king to such a degree, as it intirely defeated the scheme of his ministers, that he caused him immediately, on his arrival, to be arrested, and committed to close custody; but soon after, either through fear or choice, he set him at liberty again. John Hastings, earl of Pembroke, and baron Bergavenny, in the forty-eighth year of king Edward III. had, with that king's licence, entailed the castle and lordship of Bergavenny, and other his lands in England and Wales, on his cousin, this Sir William Beauchamp, on failure of the heirs male of the body of the said John; and in that case enjoined him not only to bear the arms and take the name of Hastings, but to endeavour to obtain the earldom of Pembroke. The year after, this John, earl of Pembroke died, leaving issue only one son, John Hastings, his successor in the earldom and barony, who was slain in a tournament, on the thirteenth of December, A. D. 1390, and died without issue. Sir William Beauchamp, thereupon succeeding to the estates of the earl of Pembroke, was, on the twenty-third day of November, 1392, summoned to parliament, as baron Burgavenny, and so continued to be summoned to all succeeding parliaments until the time of his death. In the first year of king Henry IV. he was made a knight of the Garter, and constituted justice of South-Wales for life, and restored to the government of the town and castle of Pembroke and lordship of Tineby, with the addition of the castle and lordship of Kilgaran and county of Osterlow also for life, paying into the Exchequer seventy marks per annum. He died on the eighth of May, A. D. 1411, and, as directed by his ings which have been publickly ascribed to him, and refer the reader to the Life of Sir Philip Sidney, for what he says of those which he intended should be printed as his posthumous works.

First, Certain learned and elegant Works of the Right Honourable Fulke, Lord Brooke; written in his Youth and familiar Exercise with Sir Philip Sidney. London, printed by E. P. for W. Seyle, &c. fol. A. D. 1633. Containing, 1. A Treatise on Human Learning.—2. An Inscription upon Fame and Honour.—3. A Treatise of Wars.—4. The Tragedy of Abraham.—5. The Tragedy of Mustapha.—6. Cælica, on the Topick of Love.—7. A Letter to an Honourable Lady.—8. A Letter on Travels.

Secondly, The Five Years of King James I. or, The Condition of the State of England, and the Relation it had to other Provinces. Written by Sir Fulke Greville, late lord Brooke. Printed for R. W. 4to, A. D. 1643.

Thirdly, The Life of the renowned Sir Philip Sidney; containing Sir Philip's principal Actions, Councils, Designs, and Death; with the true Interest of England, as it then stood, in relation to all foreign princes; and particularly for suppressing the power of Spain, as stated by him; together with a short Account of the Maxims and Policies used by queen Elizabeth in her Government. Written by Sir Fulke Greville. Printed for Henry Seyle, 12mo. A. D. 1652.

Fourthly, The Remains of Sir Fulke Greville, Lord Brooke; being Poems of Monarchy and Religion, never printed before. Printed for Henry Herringman, 8vo. A. D. 1670.

His lordship having never been married, and being desirous to maintain his family in the rank to which he had greatly contributed to raise it, he freed from intail all the estates he had inherited from his ancestors; and adding to those, such as he had acquired by grant from the crown, or by purchase, he settled the whole, by his last will and testament, upon his cousin Robert Greville, (in whose favour he had obtained the reversion of his honours) and the heirs male of his body; with the remainder over to the heirs male of Sir Edward Greville, of Harold park, the third branch of his family.

This will was executed the eighteenth of February, A. D. 1627, and was then witnessed by several gentlemen at that time in his service; among whom was one Ralph Haywood, who had been long his servant. Some months afterwards, a codicil was added, granting annuities to those gentlemen, by name; omitting, however, this Haywood, whom he probably did not think intitled to his liberality. Haywood resented this neglect to such a degree, that on the first day of September, A. D. 1628, being alone with his lord in his bed-chamber, in Brooke-house, in Holbourn, he entered into a warm and insolent expostulation with him; for which being severely reprimanded by his lord, Haywood gave him a mortal stab with a knife, or, as others say, with his sword. The villain made his escape into another his will, was buried in the church of the Black Friars, in Hereford, next and beneath the tomb of John Hastings, earl of Pembroke, his cousin and benefactor. By his wife Joan, daughter of Richard, earl of Arundel, sister and coheir of Thomas, earl of Arundel, and widow of Humphry de Bohun, earl of Hereford, Suffex, and Southampton, he left issue, Richard, his only son, who succeeded him, and two daughters; Joane, married to James Butler, earl of Ormond, and Elizabeth.

RICHARD BEAUCHAMP, BARON BERGAVENNY, in reward of the many signal services which he did to king Henry V. in his wars abroad, was by that monarch, in the eighth year of his reign, advanced to the title of earl of Worcester, and for the better support of that dignity, obtained a grant of lands in Normandy, and other parts of France. It was not long that he lived to enjoy these marks of royal favour; for very soon after, he was wounded by a stone from a sling, at Nusembry, in France, of which he languished for some time, and then died. His body was interred at Tewksbury, at the end of the choir, near to the chapel of Roger Fitz-Hamon: and in him ended the male line of this branch of the family. By Isabel his wife, daughter of Thomas le Despencer, by his wife Constance, daughter of Edmund, duke of York, and sister and heir of Richard le Despencer, he left issue an only daughter, Elizabeth, who afterwards married Edward Nevil, a younger son of Ralph Nevil, earl of Westmorland, and carried with her all the lands whereof her father died seized, except the castle and lordship of Bergavenny, which by a special entail, made in the time of king Richard II. by William Beauchamp, then lord Bergavenny, was, on failure of issue male of his body, to resort unto Thomas Beauchamp, earl of Warwick. But, to return,

THOMAS BEAUCHAMP, second, though eldest surviving son of the last earl Thomas, succeeded to the EARLDOM OF WARWICK. Being at that time of the age of twenty-four years, he obtained livery of those lands which descended to him by the death of his father. In the fiftieth year of Edward III. he was made governor of the isles of Guernsey, Serke, and Alderney; and in the year following, viz. 1. Richard II. was retained by indenture to serve the king in his wars beyond seas, with two hundred men at arms and two hundred archers, having in his retinue one banneret, four knights, and one hundred and forty-four esquires. Two years afterwards he was chosen governor to the king, Richard II. then in minority, by the commons in parliament, as the man the best qualified for so great and important a charge. But it does not appear that he had either success or satisfaction in the exercise of his employment: for the young king soon came to shew a turbulent and untractable spirit, so as not to be managed by any but a few young and giddy favourites, who pushed him on to all manner of extravagance and iniquity, and brought him even to enter into contrivances to put to death the duke of Gloucester, his own uncle, and the earl of Warwick, his governor: whereupon these two great lords, putting themselves in arms in their own defence, constrained the king to hold a parliament, in the eleventh year of king Richard II. in which proper laws were passed for the security of the kingdom, against the insolence and oppression of favourites. Within a year or two after, the king having assembled his nobles, told them he was now of age to govern himself and the kingdom; and thereupon discharged some of his great officers and old counsellors, among whom was this Thomas, earl of Warwick. The earl therefore, being thus dismissed from court, retired to his castle at Warwick; where he lived some years in quiet, amusing himself with building, and other occupations suitable to his large fortune and liberal spirit. It was at that time he built the remarkable tower at the north-east corner of Warwick castle, which is called Guy's Tower, (the cost of which amounted to 395 l. 5 s. 2 d.) and completed the body of the collegiate church of our Lady at Warwick; both which were finished in the year 1394. In the mean while the king, having at last, by the means of his wicked ministers, brought about the murder of his own uncle, the good duke of Gloucester, sought how to free himself of this great earl, who, notwithstanding the peaceable and inoffensive retirement in which he lived, was still an object of his resentment and jealousy. He therefore invited the earl to a feast, who, suspecting no harm, came in an unguarded manner: there the king seized him as his prisoner: the earl put himself upon the parliament for justice; but by that parliament, in the twenty-first year of king Richard II. he was condemned to lose his head, for having been in arms with the duke of Gloucester against the king. That sentence however was remitted at the solicitation of the earl of Salisbury, who said, that the earl of Warwick had been drawn in by the duke of Gloucester, and that the Beauchamps had never been guilty of treason against the crown of England. The king's clemency extended no farther than to spare his life. The castle and manor of Warwick, with many fair lordships of his inheritance, were granted to Thomas ther room, which he locked; and before it could be broke open for him to be seized, he destroyed himself with the same instrument wherewith he had murdered his master. Lord Brooke languished a few days with his wound, but before he died, ordered another short codicil to be added to his will, in which he left handsome legacies to the surgeons and others who attended him on this occasion. He died the thirtieth of September, A. D. 1628, in the seventy-fifth year of his age, and was buried with great solemnity; Sir William Segar, knight, Garter; Sir Henry St. George, knight, Richmond herald; and Henry Chitting, esquire, Somerset herald, directing the funeral. His body was laid in his own vault, on the north side of the choir, in the church of St. Mary at Warwick, under a monument which he had erected himself, with this remarkable inscription:

“ Fulke Greville,
 “ Servant to queen Elizabeth, “ Counsellor to king James,
 “ And friend to Sir Philip Sidney.
 “ Trophæum peccati.”

Lord Bacon gives us a short and laudable character of this great man: but Sir Robert Naunton furnishes us with the following more ample and general character of him, as an eminent courtier of those times, where he musters him amongst the favourites of queen Elizabeth. His words are, “ Sir Fulke Greville, lord Brooke, had no mean place in her favour: neither did he hold it for a short term; for, if I be not deceived, he had the longest lease, and the smoothest time, without any rub, of any of her favourites. He came to the court in his youth and prime; for that is the time or never. He was a brave gentleman, and honourably descended from Willoughby, lord Brooke, and admiral to king Henry VII. Neither illiterate; for he was, as he would often profess, a friend to Sir Philip Sidney: and there are of his, now extant, some fragments of his poems, and of those times, which do interest him in the Muses, and which shew the queen's election had ever a noble conduct, and its motions more of virtue and judgment than fancy. I find that he never sought for, or obtained, any great place or preferment in court, during all the time of his attendance: neither did he need it; for he came thither backed with a plentiful fortune, which, as himself was wont to say, was the better held together by a single life, wherein he lived and died, a constant courtier of the ladies.”

Upon the death of Fulke, lord Brooke, the elder branch of the family, in the male line, ended; and, as we observed before, Margaret, his sister, carried the honours of the female line into the family of Verney. But Robert, of the second branch of the family, who succeeded him in his fortune and title, succeeded him likewise in the honour, of being next in male descent from the Thomas Holland, earl of Kent, and the heirs male of his body, and the rest of his lands to others. He himself was sent into the Isle of Man, there to remain a prisoner for life: but in the same year he was brought to the Tower of London, where he continued till the revolution, which soon afterwards happened, set Henry IV. on the throne, and restored him to his liberty and estate. This earl was knight of the most noble order of the Garter. He seems to have had a particular veneration for the memory of the celebrated old Guy of Warwick; having given to the tower he built, the name of Guy's Tower; and leaving to his son Richard, by his will, the sword and coat of mail of that champion; he himself having received them as an heir-love from his father. This earl Thomas died on the eighth of April, in the second year of king Henry IV. 1401, in the fifty-fifth of his age, leaving by Margaret his wife, daughter to William, lord Ferrers, of Groby, one son, Richard, his successor, and two daughters, who died nuns. He and his countess, who died the twenty-second of January, A. D. 1406, were buried in the south part of the collegiate church of Warwick, under a fair monument of white marble, having their portraitures engraven on brass inlaid thereon, still remaining.

RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP, EARL OF WARWICK, was one of the most considerable persons in this kingdom in the fifteenth century. At the coronation of king Henry IV. he was made knight of the Bath, being then only nineteen years of age; and in the fourth year of the same reign had livery of his lands. In the next year he marched with the forces appointed to suppress the rebellion of Owen Glendowr, against whom he behaved bravely, and took his standard in open battle. He was likewise in the famous battle of Shrewsbury against the Percies, where he gained great honour. In 1408, he obtained licence from king Henry IV. to visit the holy sepulchre at Jerusalem, and set out with a splendid retinue for that purpose. In the course of his journey he visited the courts of several princes, where he frequently engaged in tournaments and other acts of chivalry; in all which he acquitted himself with the greatest valour. On his return home, in the twelfth year of king Henry IV. he was retained with Henry, prince of Wales, to serve him as well in times of peace as of war, both in this realm, upon and beyond the seas, for two hundred and fifty marks per annum, to be paid out of the prince's Exchequer at Caermarthen; and whensoever he should be in that prince's court, to have four esquires and six yeomen with him, and diet there for them all. He was also appointed, in conjunction with the bishop of Durham and others, the same year, to manage a treaty with the king of Scots. At the coronation of king Henry V. he was constituted lord high-steward, as the patent expresses it, for his known wisdom and indefatigable industry. In 1415, he was declared captain of Calais, and governor of the marches of Picardy. In 1417, he was created earl of Aumale, or, as we usually call it, Albemarle, in reward for his bravery at the sieges and reduction of Caen, Dampfront, Caudebeck, Roan, and other places in France. In May following, he was sent to the court of France to treat of a marriage between king Henry V. and Catherine, daughter of king Charles VI. in which he succeeded, to the great satisfaction of his royal master. In the year 1420, he was elected a knight of the Garter. King Henry V. was so well convinced of his distinguished merit, that by his will he gave him the highest testimony of his respect for, and confidence in him, by directing, that he should have the tutelage of his son, then an infant, till he arrived at the age of sixteen; which was afterwards, upon the king's death, confirmed by parliament. In consequence of this, he was called from France, where he then served as one of the principal commanders under the duke of Bedford, regent of that kingdom, to take upon him the government of the young king: but his military services to the nation were held of so great importance, that after the death of the duke of Bedford, he was taken from this employment at home, and sent abroad as regent of France, and lieutenant-general of all the king's forces in that realm and in the duchy of Normandy, having with him an officer at arms, called Warwick herald, who received from him an annuity of ten marks a year. This great earl, among other his acts of piety, founded a chantry in the chapel of St. Mary Magdalen, at Guy's Cliff, causing the said chapel to be rebuilt, and the statue of the famous earl Guy to be placed therein. He died in the castle of Roan, on the thirtieth of April, A. D. 1439, having by his will ordered, that his body should be brought over into England, and deposited in a chest of stone before the altar, on the right hand of his father's tomb, in the collegiate church at Warwick, there to remain till the chapel which he had appointed to be built, adjoining to the church, should be finished; and then his body to be there buried, and a stately monument erected; all which was completed by the care of his executors. He was twice married. His first wife was Elizabeth, daughter and heir to Thomas, lord Berkley, vis-the first Sir Fulke, and Elizabeth, his wife, who, as we have already shewn, was not only heiress of the family of Willoughby, of Brooke, but was twice descended of the old earls of Warwick: for this Robert, now lord Brooke, and Dorothy, his sister, (married to Sir Arthur Hasterigg, of Nofely, in the county of Leicester) were the only issue of Fulke Greville, esquire, the eldest son of Robert Greville, of Thorp-Latimer, in the county of Lincoln, esquire, who was second son to the said Sir Fulke Greville, and Elizabeth, his wife. This (Second Lord.) ROBERT GREVILLE, while but an infant of four years of age, was in a manner adopted as a son, by his cousin, the lord Brooke, who from that time provided for his education and breeding, so as to render him worthy of that estate and dignity he intended to confer upon him. He returned from his travels beyond seas about the age of twenty; and in the same year was elected to serve for the borough of Warwick, in the parliament which was then called, but soon after unhappily dissolved. He succeeded his cousin, Fulke, lord Brooke, at the age of twenty-one, and soon after married lady Catherine Ruffel, eldest daughter to Francis, earl of Bedford.

The principles of government he had imbibed in his education, which were probably improved from his intimate connexion with the Bedford family, made him disapprove of the measures which were carried on by the court, in the beginning of the reign of king Charles I. So deeply was he affected with the grievances complained of at that time, and so discouraged at the gloomy prospect that overspread the nation, that he entered into a design with the lord viscount Say and Seal, to leave England, and settle in a corner of the world, remote from the oppression of a court. Those two noblemen procured from Robert Rich, earl of Warwick, an assignment of part of a large tract of land, in North-America, (now part of New-England) of which he had obtained a grant from the crown; and in the year 1635, sent over George Fenwick, esquire, to begin a settlement in that country, and prepare a place of retreat for them and their friends; in consequence of which, a town was there built, which thence bears the name of Saybrook. But when afterwards a spirit rose in England, in opposition to the arbitrary measures of that bad administration, and that there were hopes of reforming the abuses of government, he laid aside the thoughts of retiring from his own country, and was one of the first who assumed the boldness of asserting the cause of liberty, even in the face of the court. When the king, in his expedition against the Scotch, had summoned the nobility to meet him at York; and it was thought fit, by the whole body of the council, that a short protestation should be drawn, in which all men should "profess their loyalty and obedience to his majesty, and disclaim and renounce the having any intelligence, or holding any correspondence with the rebels." Of the English nobility, count Lisle, by whom he had three daughters; Margaret, married to John Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury, by whom she had one son, John, lord viscount Lisle, of whom the DUDLEYS, viscounts Lisle, and afterwards EARLS OF WARWICK, were descended; Eleanora, married first, to Thomas, lord Roos, of which marriage the dukes of Rutland are descended; and secondly, to Edmund Beaufort, marquis of Dorset and duke of Somerset. Elizabeth, the youngest daughter, was married to George Nevil, lord Latimer; of which marriage, the Willoughbys and GREVILLES, BARONS OF BROOKE, the Percies, earls of Northumberland, and some other considerable families, are descended. He took to his second wife, by special dispensation from the pope, because she was the widow of Richard de Beauchamp, earl of Worcester, his uncle's son, Isabel, daughter to Thomas le Despencer, earl of Gloucester, and by the death of her brother Richard, and her elder sister, Elizabeth, without issue, heiress of all his lands. By this, his second countess, Richard, earl of Warwick, had a son, Henry, who succeeded him, and Anne, who married Richard Nevil, earl of Salisbury. This noble earl, who was the fifth of his family who bore the title of Warwick, died possessed of an estate, amounting to no less than eight thousand six hundred and six marks, eleven shillings, and eleven pence halfpenny. The countess Isabel, on her return from France, retired to the monastery of Southwyke, where she died on the twenty-fourth of June, A. D. 1439. Her body was buried near that of her father, in the choir of the abbey of Tewkesbury, where a monument was soon after erected to her memory, in the chapel of St. Mary there, of her own foundation; but no part thereof remains, except the skreen and canopy.

HENRY DE BEAUCHAMP, EARL OF WARWICK, son of the last-mentioned Richard, was little more than fourteen years of age when his father died; and yet he had been for some time married to Cicely, daughter of Richard Nevil, earl of Salisbury. When he was not yet nineteen years of age, upon the tender of his service in defence of the duchy of Aquitaine, the king by his charter, dated the second of April, in the twenty-second year of his reign, created him premier earl of England, and, for a distinction between him and all other earls, granted to him, and the heirs male of his body, leave to wear a gold coronet upon his head, as well in his own presence as elsewhere, in all such assemblies, and upon all such feasts, as the like ornaments were worn. Within three days after this, he advanced him to the rank of DUKE OF WARWICK, with precedence next after the duke of Norfolk, and before the duke of Buckingham; bestowing on him a pension of forty pounds per annum, to be paid by the sheriffs of Warwickshire and Leicestershire. This extraordinary mark of royal favour was hatefully and enviously looked upon by the duke of Buckingham, who thought himself extremely injured thereby. Therefore, to prevent any ill consequences that might arise from the differences between these noblemen, an act of parliament was passed, which declared that, for appeasing the contention and strife moved between them for that pre-eminence, it was established that, from the second of December then next ensuing, they should take place of each other by turns; one that year, and the other the next; and so as long as they should live together: the duke of Warwick to have the first year's precedence; and he which should survive, to take place of the other's heir male as long as he lived; and from that time the heir male of each should take place of the other, according as it should happen that he had livery of his lands before him. After this the duke had a grant in reversion, from the death of Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, of the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Serke, Erme, and Alderney, for the yearly tribute of a rose; as also of the manor and hundred of Bristol, for the yearly rent of sixty pounds; as likewise of all the king's castles and manors within the forest of Dean, for the rent of one hundred pounds per annum. But, as if all these honours and grants had been insufficient to express the king's affection for this nobleman, Henry VI. went further, by declaring the said Henry, duke of Warwick, king of the Isle of Wight, and placing the crown upon his head with his own hands. But this Henry lived, as it were, only to receive these mighty honours, being taken off in the flower of his age, at his castle of Hanley, in Worcester-shire, on the eleventh of June, A. D. 1445, in the twenty-second year of his age. His body was carried to the abbey of Tewkesbury, where it lies interred in the middle of the choir, at the head of prince Edward, son and heir to king Henry VI. He left issue an only daughter, Ann, countess of Warwick, who, at his death, was little more than two years of age, being born at Kaerdiff, in February, 1443. This young lady was first under the tutelage of queen Margaret, and afterwards was committed to the care of William de la Pole, duke of Suffolk, at whose manor of Ewelme, in Oxfordshire, she departed this life on the third day of January, A. D. 1449, having not quite attained the age of six years, leaving her aunt Ann, sister of the whole blood to Henry, duke of Warwick, heir of the earldom, bility, the lord Say, and the lord Brooke, positively refused, in the king's own presence, to make any such protestation. They said, "If the king suspected their loyalty, he might proceed against them as he thought fit; but that it was against the law to impose any oaths or protestations upon them, which were not enjoined by law; and, in that respect, that they might not betray the common liberty, they would not submit to it." From that time lord Brooke proceeded in the measures of his party, with steadiness and resolution; and when afterwards the war broke out betwixt the king and the parliament, and all the great men in England ranged themselves on one side or the other, he adhered to that of the parliament, and was in such esteem with those of that party, that, as lord Clarendon says, "they had scarce a more absolute confidence in any man than in him." And yet, from the universal character he had of good-nature, justice, and love of his country, there is reason to believe, that had he lived to see to what a height the parliament afterwards carried matters, he would have disapproved of their conduct; and might have been instrumental in moderating the violence of that party, and in establishing a peace, founded upon the security of the constitution and the rights of the crown. Lord Clarendon seems indeed to have been of another opinion. But it is certain that the earl of Bedford, the person with whom he lived in the strongest connexions, not long after, openly disapproved of the violence of the parliament party, and came over from them to the king.

To leave conjectures about what might have been, and return to what really did happen. He engaged in the civil war on the side of the parliament; and such was his influence in Warwickshire, that he carried along with him almost the whole county. He was of so much the more consequence to his party, that by him they had the castle of Warwick, which, by being situated in the heart of England, and fortified by nature, proved a most convenient place of arms, and one of the strongest of their garrisons.

The lord Brooke having, in consequence of a commission from the parliament, in the months of June and July, 1642, arrayed the militia of the counties of Warwick and Stafford, repaired to London, to procure artillery and military stores for his castle; but before he went, he constituted Sir Edward Peito, of Chesterton, governor, and left with him one or two pieces of small cannon, and what muskets and ammunition he could spare. On his return with a suitable train of artillery, he was met by the earl of Northampton, at Edgell, with a considerable body of troops. The two lords at first prepared for action; but (says the author of the manuscript already mentioned) to prevent the effusion of blood, it was at last agreed between them, that lord Brooke should return back to Banbury with his ordnance, and that neither of them should fetch it from thence, without giving the other three days notice.

However

dom, and of the great inheritance of the family. She was buried in the abbey of Reading, near to the grave of Constance, lady Le Despencer, her great-grandmother, daughter to Edmund of Langley, duke of York. As for Cicely, duchess of Warwick, she afterwards espoused John, lord Tiptoft, earl of Worcester, and dying in July, 1450, was buried in the abbey of Tewkesbury.

RICHARD NEVILL, son and heir of Richard, earl of Salisbury, and grandson of Ralph, earl of Westmorland, and Joan, daughter of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, married, as we before mentioned, Ann, daughter of Richard, earl of Warwick, and sister to duke Henry. Upon the death of the young countess, he in right of his wife, assumed the title of WARWICK, and obtained from king Henry VI. letters patent, dated the twenty-third of July, A. D. 1449, confirming to the said Ann his wife, to him, the said Richard Nevill, during his life, to the heirs of this marriage, and to the heirs general of the said Ann, the dignity and title of the EARLDOM OF WARWICK, with all pre-eminences with which any of their ancestors, before the creation of Henry, duke of Warwick, had held it. After this the earl and his countess levied a fine, xv. Trin. 28 Henry VI. by which they entailed the castle of Warwick, with divers lordships in that and sixteen other counties, upon the issue of their bodies lawfully begotten, and in default thereof, upon the issue of her, with remainder to Margaret, eldest daughter of Richard Beauchamp, late earl of Warwick, and her heirs.

This RICHARD, now EARL OF WARWICK, and afterwards, on his father's death, earl of Salisbury, is he who is so well known in English history, by the title of the Stout Earl of Warwick, the King-maker. The power of the Warwick family, which had ever before been employed to maintain the honour of the crown, and the peace and welfare of the nation, no sooner came into his hands, than it began to be exerted in a very different manner. Richard finding himself of consequence enough to hold the balance of the families of York and Lancaster, and pursuing a strain of politics, which his predecessors the good Beauchamps would never have approved, rendered England, during the days of his power, a scene of constant confusion and bloodshed, and made or unmade kings, of this or the other house, as it suited his passions, or served his purposes. About the thirtieth year of king Henry VI. he took part with Richard, duke of York, father of Edward, earl of March, who was afterwards King of England, by the name of Edward IV. who did at that time put himself in arms, under pretence of reforming what was amiss in the government, but in fact with an intention to obtain the crown. From that time the earl passed his life in factious broils and intestine wars, destructive to his own family, as well as to his country; till at length, upon the fourteenth of April, A. D. 1471, he was slain in the battle of Barnet, which he fought against king Edward IV. endeavouring to replace Henry VI. upon the throne, whom some years before he had dethroned. His body, together with that of his brother John, marquis Montacute, being put into one coffin, was brought to London, where for three days they lay bare-faced, in St. Paul's church, and were afterwards buried with their ancestors, in the monastery of Burtleham, or Bisham, in Berkshire. In the thirty-sixth year of king Henry VI. this earl was appointed captain of Calais, where he became so popular, that every one wore his badge, no man esteeming himself gallant, whose head was not adorned with his Ragged Staff, nor any door frequented that had not his White Cross painted thereon. He was also admiral to that king, and styled Great Captain of the Sea, having for his support in that employment all tonnage and poundage in any port belonging to the king, and 1000l. per annum out of the revenues of the duchy of Lancaster. After the battle of Towton-field, he was by king Edward IV. made constable of the castle of Guynes for life, and lord great chamberlain of England for life; and in recompence of his services, had a grant in fee of the manors of Morend, in Northamptonshire, and of Atherstone and Fulbroke, in Warwickshire. By Anne his wife, he left two daughters, his only issue, whom he married into the royal family. Isabel, the eldest, was married to George, duke of Clarence, brother to king Edward IV. and Anne, the youngest, married first, to Edward, prince of Wales, son to king Henry VI. by whom she had no issue; and secondly, to Richard, the cruel duke of Gloucester, afterwards king of England, by the name of Richard III. who had killed the prince her husband in cool blood, after the battle of Tewkesbury, and who, when he became king, poisoned her, that he might secure himself upon the throne, by marrying the daughter of the late king Edward, his brother. To king Richard, her second husband, she bore a son, Edward, who died in his father's life-time, having been created earl of Salisbury by his uncle, king Edward IV. and on the twenty-fourth of August, A. D. 1483, in the first year of his father's reign, prince of Wales and earl of Chester.

After

However that may be, lord Northampton, on lord Brooke's return to London, came up to Banbury, with a powerful body of horse and foot, surprised the castle, and carried off the cannon. He was no sooner master of this artillery, than he marched to Warwick; and having summoned Sir Edward Peito to surrender the castle, upon his refusal, proceeded to besiege it. The siege was begun August the seventh, and continued till the twenty-third of that month; when the lord Brooke coming from London with a body of horse and foot, was met by part of the earl of Northampton's troops within five miles of Warwick, between Southam and Itchington, where a skirmish ensued, in which lord Brooke had the advantage. Upon this the siege was raised: lord Northampton retreated towards the North, and lord Brooke entered the castle, to the great joy of Sir Edward Peito, and his small garrison, who, though poorly provided with ordnance and military stores, had defended the place a full fortnight.

The lord Brooke remained at Warwick, or in the neighbourhood, till towards the end of September, when the earl of Essex, with the parliament army, arrived at that town. Having intelligence that the king's army was then at Worcester, the earl, with lord Brooke, and the whole army, advanced towards that place: but that he might not be impeded in his march, he left the most of his heavy ordnance, and what ammunition he had not immediately occasion for, at Warwick castle. The earl of Essex, on his approach to Worcester, finding that the king's army filed off towards Shrewsbury, and thence to the borders of Oxford and Warwickshire, prepared to follow them: but as his heavy carriages, from the badness of the roads, and the backwardness of the people in that country to furnish horses, could not be made to keep up with the army, it was thought proper that the lord Brooke should go on to Warwick, and from thence send supplies of ammunition to meet the army on their march. He arrived at that place the twenty-second of October: the day following, he sent from the magazines of the castle, some cart-loads of ammunition for the army, which the night before had come up to Kineton, within two miles of Edgehill, where the king's army then lay. Lord Brooke having thus dispatched his carriages, set out about one of the clock, the same day, to join the army: but while he was on the road, the engagement began; which he was soon informed of, by the crowds who fled on the first charge of the king's horse. He prevailed with many to return with him, and making what haste he could to join the battle, arrived in time to have some share, personally, in the success of the day, and in keeping the field the night following. His own regiment had marched with the general, and was one of those that fought in the right wing, which entirely broke the left of the king's army. The next day, in the evening, the earl of Essex, the rest of the nobility, and some others of distinction in the parliament

After the death of this earl, the countess, his widow, lived in great distress. The vast inheritance of the Warwick family was taken from her by authority of parliament, as if she had been naturally dead, and given to her two daughters, her heirs, Isabel and Anne before-mentioned. She herself was constrained to take sanctuary in the abbey of Beaulieu, in Hampshire. But afterwards, leaving that place privately, she went into the North, where she lived some years in a poor condition.

GEORGE PLANTAGENET, DUKE OF CLARENCE, in regard of his marriage with ISABEL, was, by his brother, king Edward IV. in the fourteenth year of his reign, created EARL OF WARWICK and Salisbury, being at that time lieutenant of Ireland, and great chamberlain to the king. He held his chief residence at Warwick castle, and being a great builder, began to strengthen and beautify the place by new works. He intended, had he lived, to have walled the town, and to have added an outwork to the castle; as also to have purchased the fields over against the castle, which formerly belonged to the Knights Templars, and thence bore the name of Templefields, in order to make a park under the windows of his castle: but before he could put those designs in execution, falling under the suspicion of his brother, the king, he was imprisoned in the Tower of London, and on the fifteenth of January, A. D. 1477, in parliament attainted of high-treason. On the eighteenth of February following, after he had offered his malspenny in the chapel of the Tower, he was drowned in a butt of malmesey, by consent of the king, his brother the duke of Gloucester assisting thereat with his own hands. His body was carried to Tewkesbury, and there buried near that of his duchess, who died of poison not long before him. By Isabel, his wife, he had issue two sons and two daughters. Edward, the eldest son, was afterwards earl of Warwick; Richard, the second son, died an infant, and was buried in St. Mary's church in Warwick. Margaret, the eldest daughter, was countess of Salisbury; and of her we shall hereafter take notice: the second daughter was born at sea, did not live to be christened, and was buried at Calais.

In the third year of king Henry VII. the old countess of Warwick was recalled from her obscure retreat, and by a new act of parliament, annulling the former, as against all reason, conscience, and course of nature, and contrary to the laws of God and man, (so are the words) and in consideration of the true and faithful service and allegiance by her borne to king

Henry VI. as also that she never gave cause to such disherison, restored unto the inheritance of her family, with power to alien the same, or any part thereof. It appears however, that this was only in order that she might transfer it to the king; for soon after, by her own special deed, and a fine thereupon, she passed the whole Warwick estate, amounting to no less than one hundred and fourteen lordships, together with the isles of Jersey, Guernsey, Serke, and Alderney, to king Henry VII. and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to herself the said countess, and her heirs for ever. The time of her death is not mentioned; but she was living in the fifth year of king Henry VII. as appears by an assignation of that king's, of the manor of Sutton, in Warwickshire, for her maintenance.

After the death of the old countess and her two daughters, EDWARD PLANTAGENET, eldest son of George, late duke of Clarence, and Isabel, his wife, became entitled to the EARLDOM OF WARWICK. He was a child of most unhappy fortune, having from his cradle been nursed up in prison. On the death of his uncle, king Edward IV. he was by his other uncle, Richard, duke of Gloucester, sent unto the castle of Sheriff-Hutton, in Yorkshire, where he remained till the death of Richard. Immediately after the battle of Bosworth, Henry VII. even before he quitted Leicester, caused him to be removed to the Tower of London, where he remained shut up in a more close condition than before, for no other offence, than being the only male Plantagenet at that time living. His miserable life however was but short: at the age of twenty-five years he was arraigned before the earl of Oxford, then high steward of England pro tempore, on a frivolous attempt of high-treason, in conspiring with Perkin Warbeck, to raise sedition, and destroy the king; and having been, by a promise of mercy, betrayed into a confession of what he had not been guilty of, was convicted, and soon after, in the fifteenth year of king Henry VII. 1499, beheaded on Tower-hill. In order to give a colour to so unjust a sentence, and more effectually to bar the claim of any who might pretend to be his heirs, an attainder was four years after, viz. on the twenty-fifth of January, in the nineteenth year of king Henry VII. passed against him in parliament; so that all the favour he had, was this, that being so put to death, his body should be sent to the monastery of Bisham, and buried with his ancestors.

MARGARET, sister to this EDWARD PLANTAGENET, EARL OF WARWICK, married Sir Richard Pole, knight, son of Sir Geoffrey Pole, knight, descended from a family of ancient gentry.

liament army, came to Warwick: the whole army followed them the day after, and went into quarters of refreshment there, and in the neighbourhood. The prisoners of note were conducted to the castle; the chief of whom (says the author of the manuscript before-mentioned) was the earl of Lindsay, who being shot near the knee, died of his wound as he entered the castle, before he could be carried into his chamber.

Not long after the battle, viz. January 7, A. D. 1642-3, the lord Brooke was appointed general, and commander in chief (under the earl of Essex) of the associated counties of Warwick and Stafford, and the parts adjacent. In consequence of this commission, having cleared Warwickshire of all opposition, he advanced into Staffordshire; and hearing that lord Chesterfield, with about three hundred men under his command, was in possession of Litchfield, resolved in the first place to dislodge them. He therefore took a troop of reformadoes, and four hundred foot, which he had from London; to which he added one hundred out of Warwick castle, two hundred out of Coventry, and about three hundred of the most forward of the country, who came and offered themselves; a troop of horse sent him by Sir John Gell, and one hundred dragoons; in all, about one thousand two hundred strong. With those, and one demi-culverin, and some small drakes, he advanced, and came before the town of Litchfield, on Wednesday the first of March. After some hot, but short service, he obliged lord Chesterfield to leave the town, and retire into the close, or yard belonging to the minster; a place, which by the strength of the walls, and its situation, was much more defensible. While his soldiers were assailing this place, and particularly St. Chad's church thereto adjoining, lord Brooke being withdrawn into an house, to give directions, as he was looking out of the window for that purpose, a musket-bullet struck him in the right eye, of which he immediately died. His soldiers were so exasperated at his death, that Sir John Gell being sent for, and supplying his place, the assault was renewed with more fury than before; the close was forced, and all within made prisoners.

Sir William Dugdale, speaking of this lord Brooke, gives this character of him: "A person he was, who for the nobleness of his extraction, and many personal endowments, deserved a better fate; at least to have fallen in a better cause; who (had he lived, it is believed by his friends) would soon have seen through the pretences of that faction."

Let us next see how his character (not only as a great man, but an able writer) appears in the hands of one of his own party, one of the most celebrated writers of his age: Milton, in a speech, in which he pleads for the LIBERTY of UNLICENSED PRINTING, addressing himself to the parliament, says, "I shall only repeat what I have learnt from one of your honourable number, a right honourable and pious lord, who, had gentry in Wales, who having valiantly served king Henry VII. in his wars, was made chief gentleman of the bedchamber to prince Arthur, and knight of the Garter. In the fifth year of king Henry VIII. she petitioned the king, that she might be allowed to inherit the state and dignity of her brother, the late earl of Warwick, and be styled countess of Salisbury. Her petition was granted; and the same year she obtained letters patent for all the castles, manors, and lands, of Richard, late earl of Salisbury, her grandfather, which by the attainder of the said Edward, earl of Warwick, came to the crown. But the fate of the Plantagenets overtook her. In the thirty-first year of king Henry VIII. she was condemned in parliament for high-treason; certain bulls from Rome having been found at Cowdray, her mansion-house. It was also charged upon her, that the parson of Warblington had conveyed letters from her to her son, cardinal Reginald Pole; and that she had forbid all her tenants to have the New Testament in English, or any new book privileged by the king. What other causes there might be, is uncertain; but we have sufficient testimony, that she behaved herself with great resolution, though seventy years of age, and would not confess any thing: nevertheless she had sentence of death passed upon her, without ever being heard; and two years after, without arraignment or trial, on the twenty-seventh of May, A. D. 1541, was carried to execution, and had her head cut off in the Tower. By Sir Richard, her husband, she left four sons and a daughter. Henry, the eldest, had summons to parliament, in the twenty-first year of king Henry VIII. by the title of lord Montagu, in respect of his descent from that noble family by his mother; but in the thirtieth year of king Henry VIII. being accused of high-treason, by Sir Geoffrey Pole, one of his younger brothers, he was arraigned and convicted at Westminster, and in the same year was beheaded on Tower-hill. He left issue by Jane, his wife, daughter to George Nevil, lord Bergavenny, two daughters, his heirs; Catherine, married to Francis, earl of Huntingdon, of whom the present family of Huntingdon are descended; and Winnifrede, married first, to Sir Thomas Hastings, knight, second son to George, earl of Huntingdon, and afterwards to Sir Thomas Barrington, knight; which daughters, upon their petition in parliament, in the first year of queen Mary, were restored in blood and honour. Geoffrey, Arthur, and Reginald, the three younger sons of this Margaret, countess of Salisbury, of whom cardinal Pole was the youngest, died without issue; and Ursula, her daughter, was married to Henry, lord Stafford.

After the death of Edward Plantagenet, earl of Warwick, the title lay dormant till the year 1547, when it was revived in favour of John Dudley, lord viscount Lisle.

This JOHN DUDLEY, EARL OF WARWICK, was son to Edmund Dudley, (who suffered death in the second year of king Henry VIII. for his oppressive administration under king Henry VII.) by Elizabeth, his wife; which Elizabeth, was eldest of the daughters and coheirs of Edward Grey, viscount Lisle, by Elizabeth, the eldest of the daughters and coheirs of Thomas Talbot, viscount Lisle, the grandson of John Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury, by Margaret, his wife, the eldest of the daughters of RICHARD BEAUCHAMP, EARL OF WARWICK. Thus this John Dudley was heir to the family of Lisle, and in the same line was descended from that of the old earls of Warwick; though not next in blood in this last family, as the immediate descendants of the countess of Salisbury were still in being. He was one of those court favourites whom fortune seems to take a pleasure in exalting, in order to render their fall the greater. In the year after his father was beheaded, he was restored in blood, and in the thirty-fourth year of king Henry VIII. was advanced to the title of lord viscount Lisle, and was left by that king one of his sixteen executors. In the first year of the reign of king Edward VI. he was, by letters patent, dated the sixteenth of February, raised to the title and dignity of EARL OF WARWICK, and thereupon had a grant of Warwick castle, Wedgenock park, the manor of Warwick, and divers other great lordships and lands in that county. He was also made lord high-chamberlain for life, and elected one of the knights of the Garter. In the fourth year of king Edward VI. he was made general warden of the North; in April following, earl marshal of England; and on the eleventh of October, in the sixth year of the same king, advanced to the dignity of duke of Northumberland. After the death of his royal master, he attempted to raise to the throne the lady Jane Grey, who was niece to king Henry VIII. and had married his fourth son, Guildford Dudley; for which treason he was attainted in the first parliament of queen Mary, and beheaded at Tower-hill, on the twenty-second of August, A. D. 1553. By Jane, his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Edward Guildford, knight, (which Jane, died on the twenty-second of January, A. D. 1555, and was buried at Chelsea, in Middlesex) he left issue seven sons, viz. Henry, who died at the siege of Bologne; John, who had he not sacrificed his life and fortune to the church and commonwealth, we had not now missed, and bewailed a worthy and undoubted patron of this argument. Ye know him, I am sure; yet I, for honour's sake, and may it be eternal to him, shall name him, the lord Brooke. He writing of episcopacy, and by the way, treating of sects and schisms, left you his vote, or rather now, the last words of his dying charge, which I know will ever be of dear and honoured regard with you; so full of meekness, and breathing charity, that next to the last testament of him who bequeathed love and peace to his disciples, I cannot call to mind where I have met with words more mild and peaceful. He there exhorts us to bear with patience and humility, those, however they may be miscalled, who desire to live purely, in such use of God's ordinances, as the best guidance of their conscience gives them; and to tolerate them, though in some difconformity to ourselves. The book itself will tell us more at large, being published to the world, and dedicated to the parliament, by him, who, both for his life and for his death, deserves, that what advice he left should not lie by without perusal."

After his death, which happened in the thirty-sixth year of his age, the parliament, by an ordinance, settled the wardship of the young lord Brooke, his son, upon Catherine, lady Brooke, his widow. And a few years after, the commons, on a message from the lords, voted five thousand pounds for the use of his youngest, a posthumous son. By this lady he had issue, in all five sons, viz.

1. Francis Greville, who succeeded him in honour and estate.
2. Robert Greville, who succeeded his brother.
3. Edward Greville, } both died batchelors.
4. Algernon Greville, }
5. Fulke Greville, born after the death of his father, who succeeded his brother Robert.

(Third Lord.) FRANCIS GREVILLE, the eldest son, succeeded as baron BROOKE; but dying unmarried in the same year with his father,

(Fourth Lord.) ROBERT GREVILLE, the second son, succeeded his brother as lord BROOKE. He was instrumental in the restoration of king Charles II. and was one of the six lords sent by the house of peers to Holland, with twelve of the house of commons, to present the humble invitation and supplication of the parliament, "That his majesty would be pleased to return, and take the government of the kingdom into his hands." He was appointed lord-lieutenant of the county of Stafford and city of Litchfield, on the twentieth of August, A. D. 1660. He was constituted recorder of Warwick for life, in a new charter granted to that corporation; which office his predecessors, Fulke, the first lord Brooke, Robert, lord Brooke, his father, and the earl of Bedford, his uncle, (during the minority of his brother Francis) had held before him. He was likewise chosen who was called earl of Warwick in his father's life-time, and died without issue; Ambrose, afterwards created earl of Warwick; Guildford, who was attainted and beheaded with his father; Robert, who was created earl of Leicester, and dying without issue by his wife Letitia, daughter of Sir Francis Knolles, knight, lies buried in St. Mary's chapel, in Warwick; another Henry, slain at St. Quintin's; and Charles, who died in his infancy: as also five daughters; Mary, married to Sir Henry Sidney, knight of the Garter; Catherine, married to Henry Hastings, earl of Huntingdon; Margaret, Temperance, and another Catherine, who all died young. His eldest surviving son, Ambrose, and Robert, a younger son, were, not long after, restored in blood. These two brothers became the greatest minions of fortune in the succeeding reign, both of them being in high favour with queen Elizabeth, especially Robert, afterwards earl of Leicester, who was the queen's distinguished favourite.

AMBROSE DUDLEY, the elder son, however, attained first to honours. On Christmas-day, in the fourth year of queen Elizabeth, A. D. 1557, he was made viscount Lisle, and two days after, by a new creation, advanced to the dignity of EARL OF WARWICK, and thereupon obtained a grant of Warwick castle, Wedgenock park, the manor of Warwick, and divers other lordships in that county, which came to the crown by the attainer of his father. He was also master of the ordinance, lieutenant-general of Normandy, chief butler of England, knight of the Garter, and privy-counsellor. This earl died on the twenty-first day of February, in the thirty-second year of queen Elizabeth, A. D. 1589, and was buried in the middle of our Lady's chapel, adjoining to the collegiate church of Warwick, under a noble monument, on which lieth his figure in armour, having, over all, the mantle of the order of the Garter, curiously cut in white marble. He married three wives; first, Ann, daughter and coheir of William Whorwood, esquire; secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Gilbert Taylbois, knight, and sister and sole heir of George, lord Taylbois; and thirdly, Ann, daughter of Francis, earl of Bedford, lord Russel, and knight of the Garter; but had not any issue by either of them. On his death, the title of Warwick became again extinct, and the lordships and lands which he had obtained by grant, part of the inheritance of the old earls of Warwick, reverted to the crown.

This title was again revived by king James I. who, in the year 1618, raised

ROBERT, LORD RICH, to the dignity of earl of WARWICK, in whose posterity it continued until the eighth day of September, A. D. 1759, when it again became extinct by the death of Edward Rich, earl of Warwick and Holland, without issue male. As that nobleman was not descended from the old family of Warwick, his advancement to the dignity was not attended, as in the two preceding creations, with a grant of any portion of the inheritance of the old earls: part of that inheritance was already out of the power of the crown. Queen Elizabeth had, in the year 1601, granted the large and ancient park of Wedgenock to Sir FULKE GREVILLE, afterwards lord BROOKE; and king James, in the year 1605, had granted to the same Sir Fulke, the castle of Warwick, the family seat of those old earls, with the gardens and other dependencies about it. The manor of Warwick remained in the crown till the subsequent reign, when it was granted by king Charles I. in his fourteenth year, to the aldermen and commonalty of London, to be held of the king, his heirs, and successors, as of the manor of East-Greenwich, in Kent, paying to the crown a fee-farm rent of 138l. 19s. 9d. The aldermen and commonalty, in the year 1631, sixteenth of king Charles I. sold it to William Bolton, of London; and it continued in his family till the year 1742, when it was purchased by FRANCIS, the present earl BROOKE, and earl of WARWICK, and by that means again united with the castle.

Having thus, for the satisfaction of the learned and inquisitive reader, given as full a history of the great and ancient earldom of Warwick, as the bounds of a note could possibly admit of, it remains only to shew in what manner SIR FULKE, LORD BROOKE, and the lords, his successors, are descended from that illustrious family.

Of the several families which sprung from that of Warwick, all of which are either now extinct, or by heiresses have transferred their estates and honours into other families, few have been more considerable, and none came farther down in a descent of males, than that of ALCESTER and POWYKE; from an heiress of which, this Sir Fulke, lord Brooke, was lineally descended.

WALTER DE BEAUCHAMP, the founder of that family, was brother to William, the first earl of Warwick of the Beauchamp line, being the second son of William de Beauchamp of Elmely, by Isabel, in her own right countess of Warwick. This Walter purchased the moiety of the manor of Alcester, in the county of Warwick, and had there one of his principal seats, chosen high-steward of Stafford, and Stratford upon Avon. He contributed much to the embellishment of Warwick castle, by fitting up the state-apartment there, at a considerable expence, and in a manner suited to the taste of the times in which he lived. He married Anne, daughter, and at last sole heir, to John Doddington, esquire, son and heir of Sir William Doddington, of Bremer, in the county of Southampton, knight, by whom he had six sons, viz.

1. John Greville,
2. Francis Greville,
3. Charles Greville,
4. Robert Greville,
5. William Greville,
6. Fulke Greville,

And two daughters,

1. Anne, married to William, earl of Kingston, and,

2. Doddington, to Charles, earl, and afterwards duke of Manchester.

He died at Bath the thirteenth of February, A. D. 1676, and leaving no male issue, was succeeded in honour and estate by Fulke, his youngest brother.

(Fifth Lord.) FULKE, LORD BROOKE, soon after the death of his brother, was chosen recorder of Warwick; and upon the renewal of the charter of that corporation, was therein constituted recorder for life. He married, while his brother was alive, Sarah, daughter of Sir Francis Dashwood, knight, and alderman of London; by whom he had issue four sons and seven daughters, viz.

1. Francis Greville.
2. Algernon Greville.
3. Doddington Greville, who died at Bath, unmarried, A. D. 1738.
4. Robert Greville, who died beyond the seas.

Of the seven daughters,

1. Catherine, the eldest, was married, first, to Baptist Noel, earl of Gainsborough, and secondly, to John Sheffield, duke of Buckingham.

2. Anne, died unmarried.

3. Elizabeth, was wedded to Francis, lord Guildford.

The three next daughters,

4. Sarah,

5. Mary,

6. Diana,

7. Henrietta, the youngest, was married to Sir James Long, of Draycote, in the county of Wilts, baronet.

The said Fulke, lord Brooke, died at his seat at Twickenham, in the county of Middlesex, in the sixty-eighth year of his age, on the twenty-second of October, A. D. 1710. Algernon, the second son, married Mary, daughter of lord Arthur Somerset, fifth son of Henry, duke of Beaufort, by whom he had two daughters; Mary, married to Shuckburgh Boughton, esquire, and Hester; as also one son, Fulke Greville, esquire, who by Frances, his wife, daughter of James Macartney, seats, called Beauchamp-Court, situated upon the Arrow, below Ouseley, and near Warwick, and another at Powyke, in Worcestershire. In the fifty-third year of Henry III. he was signed with the cross for a pilgrimage into the Holy Land, and had a legacy of two hundred marks bequeathed to him by his father, for the better performance of that voyage. He was steward of the household to Edward I. and attended that king to Flanders, and into Scotland, and was with him at the battle of Falkirk. In the twenty-ninth year of the same king, he was one of those lords in the parliament at Lincoln, who then signified to the pope, under their seals, the superiority of king Edward over the realm of Scotland, being there styled Dominus de Alcester; and in the following year assisted at the famous siege of Caerlewerock. He departed this life on the fourteenth of May, in the thirty-first year of king Edward I. and was buried in the church of the Grey Friars, near Smithfield, London, leaving issue, by Alice, his wife, daughter of ——— Tony, Walter Beauchamp, his eldest son and heir; secondly, William; thirdly, Giles; and fourthly, Roger, who left issue Roger, his only son and heir. This Roger last mentioned was seated at Lediard-Tregoez, in Wiltshire; and having married to his first wife, Sibill, eldest sister and co-heiress of Sir William de Parshall, knight, had in her right the manor of Bletesho, or Blettho, in the county of Bedford; and making the same his principal seat, both he and his posterity were denominated from that place. In the twenty-eighth year of king Edward III. he was appointed captain of Calais, and attended the king in his expedition into Gascogne. He was summoned to parliament, from the thirty-seventh year of king Edward III. to the third of Richard II. by the title of lord Beauchamp, of Blettho, and was lord chamberlain of the household to king Edward III. He died upon the third day of January, in the third year of king Richard II. and was buried at the Black Friars, in London. In the fourteenth year of king Henry IV. John, lord Beauchamp, of Blettho, the lineal descendant, sole heir, and great great-grandson of this Roger, died, leaving issue one son, and a daughter. John, the son, died unmarried; and Margaret, his sister, becoming the sole heir of this branch of the family, was married, first, to Sir Oliver St. John, knight, from whom the lords St. John of Blettho, as also the viscounts St. John, descended; and afterwards, to John Beaufort, duke of Somerset. Of this last marriage the only issue was Margaret, who was married to Edmund, of Hadham, earl of Richmond, and by him was mother to king Henry VII.

WALTER BEAUCHAMP, eldest son and heir of the aforementioned Walter de Beauchamp, of Alcester and Powyke, on the decease of his father succeeded to his estate. In the thirty-second year of king Edward I. he went in the expedition that was then made into Scotland; as he did at several other times, during the reign of this king, and of his successors. In the year 1317, upon the death of Guy de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, his kinsman, he had the custody of all the lands belonging to Warwick castle, together with that castle, during the minority of his heir. In the first year of king Edward III. he had a special commission to execute the office of constable of England, in a particular case. In the year following, 1328, he died, leaving no issue, and was succeeded by his brother William.

This WILLIAM BEAUCHAMP was likewise a military man, and had attended king Edward I. in several of his expeditions into Flanders and Scotland. In the tenth year of king Edward II. he had the sheriffship of Worcestershire granted to him, during the minority of the heir of his kinsman, Guy earl of Warwick. In the fourteenth year of king Edward II. he was made governor of St. Briavel's castle, in the county of Gloucester, and of the forest of Dean; and in the year following was constituted one of the king's commissioners for the safe custody of the city of Worcester. He died without issue; and to him succeeded his brother Giles.

This GILES BEAUCHAMP, in the fourteenth year of king Edward III. obtained licence to fortify his manor-house at Alcester, called Beauchamp's Court, with a wall of lime and stone, and to embattle it: and in the sixteenth year of the same king, he had the like licence to fortify his house at Freshwater, in the Isle of Wight. This Giles had issue John, his only son, who died in the life time of his father, A. D. 1351, leaving issue by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Sir John St. John, one daughter, Joane, married first, to Sir Thomas Butler, of Sudley; and secondly, to Sir John Belknap, knight, treasurer of Normandy: and two sons, viz. Sir William, who succeeded him; and Sir Walter, who was steward of the household to king Henry V. and by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter and coheir of Sir John Roch, knight, was father of Richard Beauchamp, bishop of Salisbury; as also of William Beauchamp, who having married Elizabeth, eldest daughter and coheir Macartney, esquire, had issue six sons; Algeron, who died young; William, James, Robert, Henry-Francis, and Charles; as also one daughter, Frances-Ann, married to John Crewe, of Crewe-hall, in the county of Chester, esquire. The above-mentioned Francis, the eldest son, having married the lady Anne Wilmot, eldest daughter of John, and sister and coheir of Charles, earl of Rochester, (and widow of Henry Baynton, of Spy-park, in the county of Wilts, esquire) died eleven days before his father, leaving issue, by the said lady Anne, two sons;

1. Fulke Greville, who succeeded his grandfather.

2. William Greville, successor to his brother.

Also two daughters;

1. Elizabeth, who died unmarried.

2. Catherine, wedded to the honourable Charles Egerton, youngest son of John, earl of Bridgewater.

(Sixth Lord.) FULKE, LORD BROOKE, survived his father and grandfather but five months: he died at University college, in Oxford, in February, 1711, and was succeeded by his brother William.

(Seventh Lord.) WILLIAM, LORD BROOKE, soon after he came of age, was chosen recorder of Warwick. He married Mary, second daughter and coheir of the honourable Henry Thynne, esquire, who was only son to Thomas, lord viscount Weymouth, but died in the life-time of his father. By this lady (who died on the twenty-ninth of March, 1720) he had three sons;

1. William Greville, born 1717, who died four months old.

2. Fulke Greville, born October 23, 1718, who departed this life, aged twenty-two months and six days; and

3. Francis Greville, born October 10, 1719, now earl Brooke, and earl of Warwick.

He died in the thirty-third year of his age, on the twenty-eighth of July, A. D. 1727.

(Eighth Lord, and present Earl.) FRANCIS, now EARL BROOKE, and EARL OF WARWICK, succeeded his father, as lord BROOKE, when but eight years old; and soon after he came of age, was chosen recorder of Warwick. In May, 1742, he married the honourable Elizabeth Hamilton, eldest daughter to the lord Archibald Hamilton, (a younger son of William, duke of Hamilton) by the lady Jane Hamilton, daughter to James, earl of Abercorn. On the fourteenth of April, A. D. 1743, he had a daughter, Louisa-Augusta, to whom his royal highness the prince of Wales was godfather, and the princess of Wales godmother; on the eleventh of May, A. D. 1744, a second daughter, Frances-Elizabeth, now the wife of Sir Henry Harpur, baronet; and on the sixth of July, A. D. 1745, a third, Charlotte-Mary, who married John, lord Garlies, son to the earl of Galloway, and died on the thirty-first of May, A. D. 1763. These daughters were born in London. The year following, he was, by letters patent, dated July 7, in the twentieth year of king George II. raised to the dignity of an earl, by the title of coheir of Gerard de Braybrook, and cousin and heir of Almeric de St. Amand, a baron of great antiquity, had summons to parliament, on the second of January, in the twenty-seventh year of king Henry VI. by the title of BARON BEAUCHAMP OF ST. AMAND. This Walter, baron Beauchamp, of St. Amand, was feued to the king, and chamberlain of North-Wales; and departing this life on the nineteenth of March, A. D. 1457, left only one son, Richard, who succeeded to the barony, but died without issue. The exact time of the death of Giles Beauchamp is unknown.

EARL

Sir WILLIAM BEAUCHAMP, eldest son of the last-mentioned Giles Beauchamp, succeeded to the estates of his father and grandfather. In the sixteenth year of king Richard II. he was made constable of the castle of Gloucester. In the third year of king Henry IV. he was sheriff of Worcestershire, and in the first year of Henry V. sheriff of Gloucestershire. He married Catherine, daughter and heir of Sir Gerard Ufflete, knight; and died in the year 1421, leaving issue Sir John Beauchamp, knight, his only son and heir; and one daughter, Elizabeth, the wife of Thomas Keinford, esquire.

Sir JOHN BEAUCHAMP was a person of considerable note in the court of king Henry VI. in the seventeenth year of whose reign, upon the death of Richard, earl of Warwick, he was appointed one of the trustees for the guardianship of all the castles and lands of the young earl during his minority. In the twenty-second year of the same king, he purchased, from Thomas de Botreaux, the other moiety of the manor of Alcester, which had continued in that family for divers descents. In the twenty-fifth year of king Henry VI. in consideration of the good and acceptable services performed by him to that monarch, as also to his father, Henry V. he was by patent, dated the second of May, advanced to the title and dignity of BARON BEAUCHAMP OF POWYKE, and had an annuity of sixty pounds, out of the fee-farm of the city of Gloucester, granted to him and his heirs, for the better support of that honour. At the same time he was constituted justice of South-Wales, with power to exercise that office by himself or sufficient deputy; and soon after, elected one of the knights of the Garter. This noble lord died in the year 1479, and was buried in a chapel adjoining to the north side of the choir of the church of the Dominican Friars at Worcester. By Margaret, his wife, daughter of Robert, lord Ferrers, he left issue only one son, Richard, who succeeded him.

This RICHARD, LORD BEAUCHAMP, of POWYKE, by virtue of a special licence from the bishop of Worcester, married, in the private chapel of the manor-house of Beauchamp Court, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Humphry Stafford, knight; and departing this life in the year 1503, left issue three daughters, his coheirs, viz. Elizabeth, the eldest daughter, married to ROBERT WILLOUGHBY, LORD BROOKE; Anne, to William Ligon, of the county of Worcester, esquire; and Margaret, to Richard Read, of the county of Gloucester, esquire; which Elizabeth, had the manor of Alcester, in reversion after her father's death, settled upon her at her marriage; her two sisters having afterwards, for their provision, Powyke, and other lands, in the county of Worcester.

ROBERT WILLOUGHBY, LORD BROOKE, was son to Sir Robert Willoughby; which Sir Robert Willoughby, (being son and heir to John Willoughby, a branch of the family of Eresby, as will appear by the table, by Anne his wife, one of the daughters and coheirs of Sir Edmund Cheney, of Brooke, in the county of Wilts) in consideration of his singular services and fidelity to Henry VII. was, in the seventh year of the reign of that king, raised by writ of summons to the dignity of a baron of this realm, by the title of LORD BROOKE; the title being taken from the place of his residence, Brooke, near Westbury, in Wiltshire, so called from the rivulet that runs there; and which place had formerly been the seat of John Pavely, lord of Westbury; from whom, by the above-mentioned marriage with the coheirs of Cheney, it descended to Sir Robert Willoughby. This Robert Willoughby, the second lord Brooke, having married the said Elizabeth Beauchamp, died on the tenth of November, in the thirteenth year of king Henry VIII. He had issue by her only one son, Edward. Edward married Elizabeth, daughter to Richard Nevil, lord Latimer; which Richard was lineally descended from George, lord Latimer, (third son to Ralph, the first earl of Westmorland, by Joan, daughter to John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster) and of Elizabeth, wife of the said George, daughter to Richard de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick. This Edward having issue by his wife, the said Elizabeth, died during the life-time of his father, leaving three daughters, Elizabeth, Anne, and Blanche, his heirs. Robert, lord Brooke, the father of Edward, after the death of the lord Beauchamp's daughter, married Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Grey, marquis of Dorset, by whom he had issue two sons, Henry and William,

EARL BROOKE, of Warwick castle, in the county of Warwick. And on the sixteenth of September, in the same year, he had a son, George, lord Greville, born at Warwick castle, the king doing him the honour of standing godfather by lord Conway, his proxy. On the first of March, A. D. 1748, he had a fourth daughter, born at London, who was christened Isabella, but died the same day; and on the twelfth of May, A. D. 1749, he had a second son, Charles-Francis, born at his house at North-end, in the county of Middlesex. On the death of the duke of Montagu, the king, on the sixteenth of July, A. D. 1749, was pleased to appoint him lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Warwick, in the room of his grace. On the third of February, A. D. 1751, he had a third son, Robert Fulke, born in London. In March, 1753, he was made knight of the most ancient order of the Thistle. On the thirteenth of November, A. D. 1759, he was by patent created EARL OF WARWICK, and afterwards obtained a grant, to him and his descendants, earls of Warwick, for bearing the crest anciently used by the earls of that county, viz. A BEAR ERECT, ARGENT, MUZZLED, GULES, SUPPORTING A RAGGED STAFF OF THE FIRST; and of which grant a copy is subjoined in the note *. On the twenty-sixth of August, A. D. 1760, his lordship had a fifth daughter, born in London, and christened Ann.

(TITLES.) The right honourable Francis Greville, earl Brooke, of Warwick castle, earl of Warwick, baron Brooke, of Beauchamp's Court, in the county of Warwick.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Brooke, of Beauchamp's Court, in the county of Warwick, by letters patent, dated the ninth of January, in the eighteenth year of king James I. A. D. 1620; earl Brooke, of Warwick castle, in the county of Warwick, by patent, dated the seventh of July, in the twentieth year of king George II. A. D. 1746; and earl of Warwick, by patent, dated the twenty-seventh of November, A. D. 1759.

William, who both died of the sweating sickness when young; and two daughters, viz. Elizabeth, married to John Pawlet, marquis of Winchester; and Anne, married to Charles Blount, son and heir to William, lord Mountjoy: the said two noblemen, in right of their wives, after the death of the lord Brooke, obtained, by order of king Henry VIII. in council, which was afterwards confirmed by act of parliament, part of the lands of this rich family: but the inheritance passed by Edward, his only son, to his three grand-daughters; and he, the said lord Brooke, died of a pestilential air, on the tenth of November, in the thirteenth year of king Henry VIII. A. D. 1521, and was buried in the church of Bere-Ferrers, leaving them, the said Elizabeth, Anne, and Blanche, his heirs.

But of those three ladies, Anne, dying unmarried, and Blanche, who was married to Sir Francis Dautrey, knight, dying without issue, ELIZABETH, the eldest, was left at length sole heir to the last lord Brooke, her grandfather; as also to her grandmother, Elizabeth, the eldest of the daughters and coheirs of the last lord Beauchamp of Powyke; and thus, in her own person, united the illustrious succession of those two noble families.

As the sole heir of her grandmother, she became seized in fee of the whole manor of Alcester; in consequence of which, letters patent of exemplification, in the possession of Francis, the present earl Brooke, and earl of Warwick, were, in the third year of queen Elizabeth, granted to her, then a widow, confirming all the grants of fairs, markets, &c. that had been made in the time of her ancestors, in behalf of the manor of Alcester. And as the sole heir of her grandfather, it appears, by an inquisition taken after her death, dated in the sixth year of queen Elizabeth, in the possession of the said Francis, earl Brooke and Warwick, that she died seized in fee, not only of the manor of Alcester, but of sundry other manors and lands, in the counties of Warwick, Worcester, Gloucester, Leicester, Lincoln, Somerset, and divers other counties; the whole amounting to so great a value, that she was truly esteemed one of the richest heiresses of her time, as well as one of the best descended.

Upon the death of Robert Willoughby, the last lord Brooke, her grandfather, the wardship of this young lady was obtained, as we observed above, by Sir Edward Greville, of Milcote, in the county of Warwick, knight. Sir Edward intended her for John, his eldest son; but she preferring in affection Fulke, his younger son, was married to him.

We have the following account of this marriage, in a manuscript, entitled, The Genealogie, Life and Death of Robert Lord Brooke; written in the year 1644, and at present in the possession of Francis, earl Brooke, and earl of Warwick. "In the days of king Henry the Eighth," says the author of that manuscript, "I read of Sir Edward Greville, of Milcote, who had the wardship of Elizabeth, one of the daughters of the lord Brooke's son. This knight made a motion to his ward, to be married to John, his eldest son; but she refused, saying, that she did like better of Foulke, his second son. He told her, that he had no estate of land to maintaine her, and that he was in the king's service of warre beyond the seas, and therefore his returne was very doubtfull. Shee replied, and said, that shee had an estate sufficient both for him, and for herselfe; and that shee would pray for his safetie, and waite for his coming. Upon his returne home, for the worthy service he had performed, he was by king Henry honoured with knight-hood; and then he married Elizabeth, the daughter of the lord Brooke's son."

* "TO ALL AND SINGULAR, to whom these presents shall come, Stephen Martin Leake, esquire, garter principal king of arms, sendeth GREETING.

"WHEREAS the Right Honourable FRANCIS, earl BROOKE, hath represented unto the Right Honourable Thomas, earl of Effingham, deputy (with the Royal approbation) to the Most Noble Edward, Duke of Norfolk, earl marshal and hereditary marshal of England, THAT his Majesty having been graciously pleased, by letters patent, under the great seal of Great-Britain, bearing date the thirteenth day of November last, in the thirty-third year of his reign, to grant unto him, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, the dignity, style, and title, of EARL OF WARWICK: AND being desirous to bear the crest anciently used by the Earls of Warwick, viz. a BEAR ERECT, argent, muzzled, gules, supporting a RAGGED STAFF of the first, (the same not being the right of any other person) did therefore request his Lordship's warrant for my granting the same unto him and his descendants, being Earls of Warwick: AND FORASMUCH as his Lordship, duly considering the premises, did, by warrant under his hand and seal, bearing date the ninth day of February last, order and direct me to grant and assign such crest accordingly: KNOW YE THEREFORE, That I, the said garter, in pursuance of the consent of the said earl of Effingham, and by virtue of the letters patent of my office, under the great seal of Great-Britain, do, by these presents, confirm and grant unto the said Earl Brooke, Earl of Warwick, the crest following, viz. On a wreath, a Bear erect, argent, muzzled, gules, supporting a Ragged Staff of the first; to be borne and used, for ever hereafter, by him the said Earl Brooke, Earl of Warwick, and his lawful descendants, being Earls of Warwick, without the lett or interruption of any person or persons whatsoever: IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I, the said garter principal king of arms, have to these presents subscribed my name, and affixed the seal of my office, the second day of April, in the thirty-third year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, GEORGE the Second, by the grace of God, King of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. and in the year of our Lord, 1760.

"S. MARTIN LEAKE, Garter."

(ARMS.) Diamond, on a cross within a border ingrailed, topaz, five pellets.

(CRESTS.) Out of a ducal coronet, ruby, a swan with wings expanded, pearl, beaked, of the first. And,

On a wreath of his colours, a bear erect, pearl, muzzled, ruby, supporting a ragged staff of the first.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two swans with wings expanded, pearl, legged, diamond, beaked and ducally collared, ruby.

(MOTTO.) "Vix ea nostra voco."

(CHIEF SEAT.) Warwick castle, in the county of Warwick.

G O W E R, Earl G O W E R.

AT the time of the conquest lived (according to some) Sir Alan Gower, lord of Sittenham, in the county of York, descended, as antiquaries all agree, from ancestors properly stiled Anglo-Saxons. Whether this Alan may be deemed the patriarch of this noble family is matter of doubt with others, who contend, that he lived in the reign of Henry II. and that he was then taxed with one hundred shillings in the sheriffs account for three parts of a knights fee; that he was the son of William Fitz-Guyer, of Sittenham, afore-said, who was the son of Guyer, seated at the same place*. We shall not pretend to determine this point, especially as the genealogy is not perfect till after the reign of Edward II. when

LAURENCE GOWER was concerned with Thomas, earl of Lancaster, in the murder of Piers Gaveston, earl of Cornwall, the favourite of Edward II. at Blacklow-hill, in Warwickshire, on the nineteenth of June, A. D. 1312, for which, about two years after, he obtained that monarch's pardon. His son,

Sir NICHOLAS GOWER, was returned knight of the shire for the county of York three several times, viz. in the twelfth, twenty-first, and twenty-second of Edward III. Of this gentleman we find nothing material upon record, excepting that he signalized himself as a gallant officer at the battle near Durham, so fatal to the Scots, on the seventeenth of October, A. D. 1346; and, having taken several prisoners, received the king's precept to convey them to the Tower of London. And we may form some notion of his manner of living, from his having seven horses and six valets in his retinue, when he obtained leave of king

Edward III. in 1350, to go to Rome. He had one † son,

Sir THOMAS GOWER, who married Agnes, daughter of Thomas Thwaites, of Lovetofts, in Yorkshire, by whom he had two sons, Thomas and John, and four daughters, entered in the table.

The youngest son,

Sir JOHN GOWER, the great poet and refiner of the English language, continued the line. Of whom Hollingshed, in his Chronicles, says, "John Gower descended of that worthy family of the Gowers, of Sittenham, in Yorkshire, studied not only the common laws of this realm, but also other kinds of literature, and had great knowledge of the same, namely, in poetical inventions, applying his endeavour with Chaucer, to garnish the English tongue, in bringing it from a rude imperfectness, into a more apt elegance: for, whereas, before those days, the learned used to write only in Latin or French, and not in English, our tongue remained very barren, rude, and imperfect; but now, by the diligent industry of Chaucer and Gower, it was within a while greatly amended, so as it grew not only rich and plentiful in words, but also so proper and apt to express that which the mind conceived, as any other language. Gower departed this life shortly after the decease of his dear and loving friend Chaucer, to wit, in the year 1402, being then come to a great age, and blind for a certain time before his death." We shall only subjoin what Stow in his Annals has said of this great genius. "John Gower, deceased, about 2 Henry IV. a man not unlike Chaucer, in excellency of wit, learning or possessions. He builded a great part of St. Mary

* In 41 Henry III. we find mention made of Sir Walter de Guyer, and in the eighteenth and twenty-second of Edward I. of Sir Robert de Guyer, supposed to be son of Sir Walter. After which, in the same reign, we find Sir John Gower, a man of eminence, but what relation he bore to the others is uncertain; however, hence we may collect, that about this time the name came to be written as it is now.

† According to some he had a second son, Sir Nicholas Gower, who by a daughter of Maleverer, of Arncliffe, had issue Thomas Gower, of Stanby, in Yorkshire, who married a daughter and heir of Ralph Crawthorn, of Crawthorn, in the same county, esq; from whom descended the Gowers of Stanby, who bear different arms from the Gowers of Sittenham, and by younger sons, the Gowers of Melfonby and Barrowby; also by the marriage of Agnes, sister and heir of William Garton, of Garton, in Holderness, the family of the Gowers of Garton are derived.

Overy's church, in Southwark, then new re-edified. On the north side of which church, he prepared for his bones a resting place, where somewhat after the old fashion, he lieth sumptuously buried in a tomb of stone, with his image also of stone lying over him, the hair of his head awbarne, long to his shoulders, and curling up, a small forked beard, and on his head a chaplet of roses red, four in number. An habit of purple, damasked down to his feet, a collar of esles gold about his neck. Under his head the likeness of three books which he compiled; 1. Speculum Meditantis, in French. 2. Vox Clamantis, in Latin. The third, Confessio Amantis, in English; which last book is extant in print; the second I have fair written, but the first I have not seen. His tomb, arched, was beautified with his arms, and the likeness of angels, with poesies in Latin. Besides, in the wall were painted three virgins crowned, one Charity, the second Mercy, the third Pity. All which is now washed out, and the image defaced, by cutting off his nose, and striking off his hands."

He had issue an only son,

THOMAS GOWER, who in the eleventh of Henry IV. was constituted one of the commissioners of array in the North-Riding of Yorkshire, and was made governor of Mans, in return for his signally brave conduct in the French wars, and continued in that post in the reigns of Henry V. and his successor till his death. During his stay in that government, he married a French lady, Joan —, of Alençon, and obtained an act of parliament in England, for the naturalization of his children. How many children he had is not ascertained; but his eldest son,

Sir JOHN GOWER, was standard-bearer to prince Edward, son of king Henry VI. and being taken prisoner at the battle of Tewkesbury, May 4, 1471, was there beheaded, by order of king Edward IV. on the seventh day of the same month.

This Sir John had issue by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Edward Goldsborough†, baron of the Exchequer, in 1 Henry VII. five sons,

1. Edward Gower.

2. John Gower, who accompanying Thomas, earl of Surrey, in 13 Henry VII. in his expedition into Scotland, was knighted for his valour in taking Ayton castle.

3. George Gower.

4. Robert Gower.

5. Walter Gower.

Also three daughters,

1. Joan, married to Hugh Clytherow, of Brantingham, in the county of York.

2. Ann, to Christopher Fenton, of Creak, in the same county, esquires; and

3. Elizabeth.

EDWARD GOWER, the eldest son and heir, received the honour of knighthood, and marrying Margaret, daughter of Sir Robert Constable, of Flamborough, in Yorkshire, knight, and relict of John St. Quintin, of Harpham, esquire, by her had two sons, and three daughters.

1. Thomas Gower, his heir.

2. Richard Gower, who by Agnes, his wife, daughter and coheir of William Leving, of Alcomb, in the county of York, had issue four sons, Edward, Thomas, Francis, and Ralph.

His three daughters were,

1. Catherine, married to Walter, son of Thomas de la River, of Bransby, in Yorkshire, esq;

2. Agnes, to Sir John Widdrington, of Widdrington, in Northumberland; and

3. Barbara, to Sir Henry, son and heir of the said Sir John Widdrington, by a former wife.

THOMAS GOWER, eldest son of Sir Edward, was constituted on July 16, A. D. 1543, 35 Henry VIII. receiver-general of all and singular the honours, &c. appointed for payment of the soldiers in garrison at Berwick, and supervisor of all the buildings and fortifications of that town, as also the castle of Warke. He was likewise marshal of Berwick; and in 1547, 1 Edward VI. being captain of a band of light horsemen in that army which then invaded Scotland, under the command of the duke of Somerset, he had the misfortune to be taken prisoner. He was afterwards made governor of Aymouth fort, six miles distant from Berwick; also master of the ordnance in the Scotch expedition, A. D. 1560. By his wife Anne, daughter of James Maleverer, esquire, and coheir to her grandfather, Sir William Maleverer, of Arncliffe, he had issue a son and successor, Sir EDWARD GOWER*, whose issue by his wife Barbara†, daughter to John Baxter, esquire, were three sons and three daughters, as in the table.

The eldest son,

THOMAS GOWER, had issue by his wife Mary, daughter of Gabriel Fairfax, of Steeton, in Yorkshire, four sons and two daughters, entered in the table. His wife surviving him, married, secondly, Sir Charles Kelke.

His eldest son,

Sir THOMAS GOWER, seated at Sittenham, was born in July, 1584. He had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him by king James I. and afterwards, on the second of June, A. D. 1620, was by the same monarch created a baronet.

He married Anne, daughter and coheir to John Doyley, of Merton, in Oxford, esquire, and by her (who died October 28, A. D. 1633, and was buried in the church of St. Clement's Danes, in London) had issue Sir Thomas Gower, his successor, Doyley Gower, a colonel of dragoons, in the service of Charles I. and other sons.

Sir THOMAS GOWER was knighted at Whitehall, June 24, A. D. 1630, and succeeded his father in his estate and title of baronet. He was a sufferer for his loyalty to Charles I. having been twice high-sheriff of Yorkshire, and attended on the king when he was shut out of Hull; and raised a regiment of dragoons, of which his brother, Doyley, before-mentioned, was colonel. He † Mr. Edmondson says Sadborough.

* In this we have followed Mr. Edmondson. Collins takes no notice of this knight.

† Collins makes this lady second wife to Sir Thomas Gower last-mentioned, and gives her children, which we have called her issue by Sir Edward, to the said Sir Thomas, not allowing that Anne Maleverer, who is styled by that author first wife, bore him any children.

had two wives, 1. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Howard, of Naworth castle, sister to Charles, earl of Carlisle; and, secondly, Frances II, daughter and coheir of Sir John Leveson, of Haling, in Kent, and of Lillehul, in Salop, by Frances his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Sondes, of Throwley, in Kent, elder brother of Sir Michael Sondes, baronet. By which last lady, this Sir Thomas Gower had issue two sons, Edward, and William, ancestor to the present lord Gower; also a daughter, Frances; but by his first lady had no issue.

Edward, the eldest son, died before his father, and by Dorothy, his wife, daughter of Thomas Wentworth, of Elmsall, in Yorkshire, esquire, had issue a son, Thomas; and a daughter, Frances, who was married to Sir James Wood, colonel of a regiment at the battle of the Boyne, in Ireland, July 1, A. D. 1690, and died that year without issue.

Sir Thomas, only son and heir of the said Edward, succeeded his grandfather in title and estate; and being a colonel of a regiment of foot, died in the camp at Dundalk, in Ireland, October 28, A. D. 1689, unmarried, whereby the title and estate devolved upon his uncle, Sir William Leveson Gower. Which

Sir WILLIAM LEVESON GOWER, also by the death of his nephew, Sir Thomas Gower, baronet, before mentioned, succeeded him in the title, and the antient paternal estate at Sittenham, &c. in Yorkshire. He was adopted heir to Sir Richard Leveson of Trentham, in Staffordshire, knight of the Bath, (brother to Sir John Leveson of Haling, in Kent, before mentioned) who having no children by Catharine his wife, daughter to Sir Robert Dudley, knight, duke of the empire, left him his whole estate. This Sir William Leveson Gower was one of the duke of Monmouth's bail, A. D. 1683, served in the four parliaments of Charles II. for Newcastle under Line, in Staffordshire, and was elected for the said borough to the convention-parliament in 1688, and in all other parliaments to the time of his death, which was in the month of December, A. D. 1691. He married Jane, eldest daughter of John Granville, earl of Bath, and at length coheir to her nephew William-Henry, the last earl of that family; and by her (who died on February 27, A. D. 1696) had three sons.

1. Sir John Leveson Gower, baronet.
2. Richard Leveson Gower,
3. William Leveson Gower,

Also two daughters,

1. Catherine, married to Sir Edward Wyndham, of Orchard-Wyndham, in Somersetshire, baronet, father by her of the late Sir William Wyndham; whose son and heir, Sir Charles Wyndham, became earl of Egremont.

2. Jane, wedded to Henry Hyde, the last earl of Clarendon and Rochester.

Sir JOHN LEVESON GOWER, baronet, born January 7, A. D. 1674-5, was elected to parliament, on the death of his father, for Newcastle under Line, and served for the same till March 16, A. D. 1703, when he was advanced to the degree and dignity of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Gower, baron Gower of Sittenham, in Yorkshire. He was sworn of the privy-council to the queen, on April 21, A. D. 1702, and at the same time was declared chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. His lordship, in 1706, was one of the commissioners that concluded the union between England and Scotland, being then chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. He departed this life at Belvoir castle, the duke of Rutland's seat, and was buried at Trentham, on September 10, A. D. 1709, greatly lamented, having been a bountiful housekeeper, and much esteemed for his affability and other shining qualities. He had to wife Catherine, eldest daughter to John Manners, duke of Rutland, and by her (who died on March 7, A. D. 1722, in the forty-seventh year of her age) had issue four sons and three daughters.

1. Catherine, born A. D. 1695, who died unmarried on the twentieth of April, A. D. 1712.

2. Jane, the wife of John Proby, esquire, of Elton-hall, in the county of Huntingdon, esquire. She died in childbed on the tenth of June, A. D. 1726, leaving issue John, created lord Carysfort, and other children.

The sons were,

1. John Leveson Gower, successor to his father.

2. William Leveson Gower, who on a vacancy, was elected knight of the shire for the county of Stafford, in December, 1720. At the general election, A. D. 1722, he was rechosen for the same county, and continued one of the representatives thereof till the thirteenth of December, A. D. 1756. On the twenty-sixth of May, A. D. 1730, he married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Grosvenor, of Eaton-Hall, in the county of Chester, baronet, by whom he had one daughter, Catherine, born August 28, A. D. 1731. The mother of this child died on the thirteenth of December, A. D. 1731.

3. Thomas Gower, born A. D. 1698, was elected member of parliament for Newcastle under Line, in 1722, and departed this life unmarried, on the twelfth of August, A. D. 1727.

4. Baptist Gower, chosen member of parliament for Newcastle under Line, upon the death of his brother, continued to serve for the same place till the end of the last parliament. On the seventh of May, A. D. 1745, he was appointed a commissioner of trade and plantations, which office he afterwards resigned.

The eldest son,

(First Earl.) JOHN LEVESON GOWER, succeeded to the barony upon the death of his father, and on the nineteenth of July, A. D. 1742, was appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Stafford; and four days after, appointed lord-privy-seal, and then sworn of his majesty's privy-council, at Kensington.

On May 12, A. D. 1740, his lordship was declared one of the lords justices during his majesty's absence in his German dominions. On July 29, A. D. 1742, he was appointed lord-lieutenant of the county of Stafford; and on April 25, A. D.

Mr. Edmondson makes this lady first wife to Sir Thomas, and the preceding Elizabeth Howard, the second. It matters not much how this point is settled, since the issue proceeded undoubtedly from Frances Levison.

1743, he was a second time appointed one of the lords justices, and on December 10, that year, resigned his place of lord privy-seal, which was conferred on the earl of Cholmondeley. He was the said year, September 15, unanimously elected recorder of the city of Litchfield, in the room of the earl of Uxbridge, deceased. On December 26, A. D. 1744, he was again constituted lord privy-seal; and in 1745, one of the lords justices whilst his majesty was abroad. On the breaking out of the rebellion that year, he raised a regiment of foot for the king's service. Whereupon his majesty, taking into consideration his great merits, was pleased to advance him to the dignities of a viscount and earl of Great Britain, by the name, stile, and title, of viscount Trentham, in the county of Stafford, and earl Gower, by letters patent, bearing date July 8, A. D. 1746; and in 1748, his lordship was again appointed one of the lords justices of the kingdom; also April 5, A. D. 1750, and March 30, A. D. 1752.

His lordship married first, on March 8, A. D. 1711-12, Evelyn, third daughter to Evelyn, duke of Kingston; and by her had four sons, viz.

1. John Gower, born A. D. 1713, who died on July 15, A. D. 1723.

2. William Gower, born March 20, A. D. 1715, who died unmarried on April 4, A. D. 1739.

3. Granville Leveson Gower, now earl Gower.

4. Richard Leveson Gower, born April 30, A. D. 1726.

Also six daughters,

1. Gertrude, born February 15, A. D. 1714, married to John, duke of Bedford.

2. Mary, born October 30, A. D. 1717, married Sir Richard Wrottesley, of Wrottesley, in Staffordshire, baronet, now chaplain in ordinary to his majesty, and dean of Worcester.

3. Jane, born A. D. 1719, died unmarried, A. D. 1737.

4. Frances, born August 12, A. D. 1720, married lord John-Philip Sackville, second son of Lionel, duke of Dorset.

5. Elizabeth, born January 19, A. D. 1723-4, in March, 1748-9, was appointed lady of the bedchamber to their royal highnesses the princesses Amelia and Caroline; and in 1751, married the honourable John Waldegrave, esquire, now earl Waldegrave.

6. Evelyn, born January 26, A. D. 1724-5, wedded to John Fitzpatrick, lord Gowran, of the kingdom of Ireland, afterwards earl of Upper-Ossory, seated at Ampthill-park, in Bedfordshire, and after his decease, secondly, to Richard Vernon, esquire.

The lady their mother dying on June 27, A. D. 1727, his lordship on October 31, A. D. 1733, married Penelope, daughter of Sir John Stonehouse, baronet, and relict of Sir Henry Atkins, baronet, by whom he had a daughter, Penelope, born at Trentham-hall, in June, 1734, (who died in the seventh year of her age) and her mother deceased there on Monday, August 19, following.

His lordship married, thirdly, Mary, daughter and coheir of Thomas Tufton, earl of Thanet, and widow of Anthony, earl of Harold, only surviving son of Henry, duke of Kent; by whom he had issue a daughter, Mary, who died in the seventh year of her age;

And three sons,

1. Thomas Gower, who was born at his lordship's house, in Brook-street, by Grosvenor-square, on August 23, A. D. 1738, and died about two years old.

2. John Gower, born in 1743, and appointed a captain in the navy, June 30, A. D. 1763.

3. Thomas Gower, who was born on July 4, A. D. 1743, and died an infant.

His lordship's second surviving son, the honourable Richard Leveson Gower, was chosen member for Tavistock, in Devonshire, and for the city of Litchfield, in the parliament summoned to meet on August 13, A. D. 1747, and died October 19, A. D. 1753, unmarried.

His lordship deceasing on December 25, A. D. 1754, at his house, in Brook-street, aforesaid, was succeeded in honour and estate by his eldest son, Granville, viscount Trentham, then member of parliament for Litchfield. The said

(Second, and present Earl.) GRANVILLE LEVESON GOWER, in 1744, was, on a vacancy, elected to parliament for Bishop's-Castle, in Shropshire; and to the next parliament summoned in 1747, was, with Sir Peter Warren, unanimously chose for Westminster; but in November, 1749, being constituted one of the lords commissioners for executing the office of lord high-admiral, his seat in parliament became vacated, which occasioned a hard contested election for Westminster, between his lordship and Sir George Vandeput, when, on closing the poll, he had a majority of upwards of one hundred and fifty voters. He was, at the general election, in 1754, returned for the city of Litchfield, and sat for the same till the death of his father.

On succeeding to the earldom, he was constituted lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Stafford. On December 19, A. D. 1755, he had a grant of the office of lord privy-seal, and in January following was sworn a privy-counsellor. Resigning the place of lord privy-seal, he was, on July 2, A. D. 1757, constituted master of the horse; and being in that office at the late king's demise, October 25, A. D. 1760, obtained the perquisites thereunto appertaining on such an event. His lordship was continued by his present majesty at the council-table; as also lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of Staffordshire; and on November 17, A. D. 1760, was nominated keeper of the great wardrobe, on the resignation of Sir Thomas Robinson, now lord Grantham. On April 23, A. D. 1763, he was declared lord chamberlain of his majesty's household, in the room of the duke of Devonshire; and, in that quality, stood proxy for the duke of Saxe-Gotha, on September the fourteenth following, at the baptism of his majesty's second son, Frederick, now bishop of Osnaburgh: but his lordship, on July 10, A. D. 1765, resigned his place of lord-chamberlain, which was then given to the duke of Portland. He retains his seat at the council-board, together with the offices of lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Stafford; and is also a governor of the Charter-house, and vice-president of the Middlesex-hospital.

He married two wives, first, in 1744, Elizabeth, daughter of Nicholas Fazackerly, of Penwitham, in Lancashire, and by her, who died in child-bed of the small-pox, on the nineteenth of May, A. D. 1745, had a son, John, born on the fourteenth preceding, who just living till he was baptized, died the same day.

His lordship, on March 28, A. D. 1748, married, secondly, Louisa Egerton, daughter of Scroop, duke of Bridgewater, by the lady Rachel Ruffel, his wife, sister to the present duke of Bedford: by her who died March 14, A. D. 1761, he had issue one son, (also an elder son, still-born, in the year 1755.)

George, commonly called viscount Trentham, born on February 9, A. D. 1758;

And three daughters, viz.

1. Louisa, born on October 22, A. D. 1749.
2. Carolina, born on December 2, A. D. 1753; and
3. Anne, born on February 22, A. D. 1761;

but the mother died on the fourteenth of the next month; and his lordship is yet a widower.

(TITLES.) Granville Leveson Gower, earl Gower, viscount Trentham, and lord Gower, baron of Stittenham, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, June 2, A. D. 1620, 18 James I. baron Gower, of Stittenham, in Yorkshire, by letters patent, March 16, A. D. 1702-3, 2 queen Anne; viscount Trentham, and earl Gower, July 8, A. D. 1746, 20 George II.

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth, barry of eight, pearl and diamond, over all, a cross flory, ruby, for Gower; second and third, sapphire, three laurel leaves erect, topaz, for Leveson.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a wolf passant, pearl, collared and chained, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two wolves, pearl, each having a collar and chain, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Frangas non flectes."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Trentham, in the county of Stafford, near Newcastle under Line.

HOBART, Earl of BUCKINGHAMSHIRE.

THIS noble family claim a lineal descent from Sir James Hobart, younger of two sons to Thomas Hobart, seated at Leynham, in Norfolk: which Thomas Hobart was, in the fifth generation, heir and representative of John Hobart, who was seated, or at least was owner of lands at De la Tye, in the county aforesaid, and who is the first mentioned in any pedigree of the Hobarts. We refer our reader to the table for the former part of their genealogy, and begin where we have something more to note than bare names and places of abode, with Sir James Hobart already mentioned.

SIR JAMES HOBART was entered at Lincoln's-Inn, and joining intense application to extraordinary natural parts, he made an early and considerable proficiency in the study of the law. In 1479, he was elected Lent reader to that society, of which he afterwards, the same year, became one of the governors, and continued such till A. D. 1508.

In the second of Henry VII. he was sworn of the privy-council, having been appointed attorney-general to that monarch, which post he enjoyed till the year 1510, when he departed this life full of honour, and left behind him the character of "a right good man, of great learning and wisdom." He had the honour of being made knight of the sword, at the creation of Henry, prince of Wales, afterwards king Henry VIII. on the eighteenth of February, A. D. 1504.

Besides his many benefactions to his parish church of Loddon, in Norfolk, where he was buried, which he built from the ground, he laid a fair bridge over the river Waveny, that divides Norfolk and Suffolk, and a fine causeway thereby.

He married Margaret, daughter to Peter Naunton, esquire, and by this lady, who died in 1484, and was buried at Loddon, had issue two sons,

1. Sir Walter Hobart, seated at Halles-hall, in Norfolk. He succeeded his father, and was sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, in 1536. He was twice married, first, to Ann, daughter of Sir Henry Heydon, knight; secondly, to Ann, daughter of John Ratcliff, lord Fitzwalter. From the former match, the Hobarts seated at Halles-hall, derive their descent, as from the latter do those of the name seated at Morley, in Norfolk.

2. Miles Hobart, ancestor to the present and late earls of Buckinghamshire. Which

MILES HOBART was seated at Plumpsted, in Norfolk, and marrying Eleanor, daughter of John Bleverhafet, had two sons,

1. Thomas Hobart.

2. John Hobart, seated at Wayte, in Norfolk. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Philip Tilney, knight, and had issue. From this match descended the Hobarts, seated at Wayte.

The eldest son,

THOMAS HOBART, succeeded his father at Plumpsted, and marrying Auderey, daughter to William Hare, of Beeston, in Norfolk, had issue Sir Miles Hobart, and a younger son,

Sir

Sir HENRY HOBART, a member of the honourable society of Lincoln's Inn, and afterwards, in the thirty-ninth of Elizabeth, one of the governors thereof, serving at the same time in parliament for the borough of Yarmouth. In the fourth year of king James I. he was appointed his majesty's attorney-general, and about the same time was constituted attorney-general of the court of Wards. On the twenty-second of June, in the ninth of king James I. he was appointed among the first governors of the Charter-house. In 1611, upon the first creation of baronets, he had the honour to be the ninth in the list; and on the twenty-sixth of November, A. D. 1613, was constituted lord chief-justice of the Common-Pleas, in which office he so happily blended skill and integrity, that he continued to enjoy it to the honour of the king and the benefit of the subject, till the twenty-sixth of December, A. D. 1625, when he departed this life, and had sepulture soon after in the middle isle, on the north side, in Christ-church, Norwich.

This gentleman is commemorated as a benefactor to the society of Lincoln's-Inn, in that he gave one hundred pounds towards new building the chapel, which was finished in 1623, and fulfilled his prophetic motto, non moriar sed vivam, in a literary sense, inasmuch as reports of several law-cases published by him are still extant; from the title of which we are further informed, that he was chancellor to both their highnesses Henry and Charles, princes of Wales.

He married, April 22, A. D. 1590, Dorothy, daughter of Sir Robert Bell, of Beaupre-hall, in Norfolk, knight, lord chief baron of the Exchequer, and by her had sixteen children, twelve sons, of which we shall note only four, the rest having died young.

1. Henry Hobart, born at Norwich, April 28, A. D. 1591, who died unmarried in his father's life-time.

2. Sir John Hobart, baronet, successor to his father.

3. Sir Miles Hobart, who continued the line.

4. Henry Hobart, born November 17, A. D. 1619.

The four daughters were,

1. Dorothy, born March 14, A. D. 1591-2, the wife of Sir Robert Crane, of Chilton, in Suffolk, knight and baronet. She died April 11, A. D. 1624.

2. Mary.

3. Elizabeth, born March 17, A. D. 1608, married to John Lisle, esquire. She died March 15, A. D. 1633, and was buried at Highgate chapel, in Middlesex.

4. Frances, married to ——— Hewet, esquire. She died May 21, A. D. 1632, and was buried at Highgate.

The eldest surviving son,

Sir JOHN HOBART, was born at Norwich, April 19, A. D. 1593, and had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him at the age of ten years, and at the age of thirty-two succeeded as baronet. He was seated at Blickling, in Norfolk, a manor his father had purchased, and where he had built a stately house; an estate formerly in the noble family of Boleyn, maternal ancestors to queen Elizabeth. He was also possessed of the estate at Plumpsted, upon the failure of the line of his cousin, Sir Thomas Hobart. He served in parliament 1 James I. for Corf-Castle, in Dorsetshire; also in that reign for Lestwithiel, in Cornwall, and for the borough of Thetford, 1 Charles I. and for the county of Norfolk, in the sixteenth of that reign. He married two wives, Philippa, daughter to Robert Sidney, earl of Leicester; and this lady deceasing in September, 1620, he secondly married lady Frances, daughter to John Egerton, first earl of Bridgewater, but left no issue male; whereupon the title and estate entailed, descended to his nephew,

JOHN HOBART, esquire, son and heir of his brother, Sir Miles Hobart, knight. Which

Sir MILES HOBART was born at Plumpsted, April 12, A. D. 1595, and knighted at Salisbury by James I. August 8, A. D. 1623. He was a member of that parliament which met, March 17, A. D. 1627-8, and distinguished himself in opposing the designs of the court; being among those members, who, March 2, A. D. 1628-9, foreseeing the dissolution of the parliament, forcibly held the speaker in the chair, whilst they published a protestation in the house, declaring, 1. Whoever shall bring in innovation of religion, or by favour or countenance seek to extend or introduce Popery or Arminianism, or other opinion disagreeing from the truth and orthodox church, shall be reputed a capital enemy to this kingdom and commonwealth. 2. Whoever shall counsel or advise the taking and levying of the subsidies of tonnage and poundage, not granted by parliament, or shall be an actor or instrument therein, shall be likewise reputed an innovator in the government, and capital enemy to the kingdom and commonwealth. 3. If any merchant, or person whatsoever, shall voluntarily yield, or pay the subsidies of tonnage or poundage, not being granted by parliament, he shall likewise be reputed a betrayer of the liberties of England, and an enemy to the same. On this the parliament was immediately dissolved, and Sir Miles Hobart was imprisoned for locking the door of the house during the publishing the aforesaid protestation. He was not discharged before the year 1631, and then was obliged to give sureties for his good behaviour. Whether he was again imprisoned, or what other hardships he underwent, does not appear; but dying before the civil wars broke out, his sufferings were esteemed so meritorious by the long parliament, that they voted, in the year 1646, that 5000 l. should be given to his children, in recompence thereof, and for opposing the illegalities of that time. He married Susan, daughter to Sir John Peyton, of Iselham, baronet, by whom he had issue John, his son and heir, and a daughter, Alice, married to John Jermy, of Bayfield, in Norfolk, esquire.

Sir JOHN HOBART, baronet, succeeding his uncle, as already mentioned, was returned as knight of the shire for the county of Norfolk, in the three last parliaments called by Charles II. By his wife Mary, daughter of John Hampden, of Hampden, Bucks, and widow of colonel Hammond, he had issue three sons and two daughters, of which Mary, the youngest died unmarried, and the eldest, Philippa, became the wife of Sir Charles Pye, baronet, of Cleston-Camville, in the county of Stafford.

The sons were,

1. Henry Hobart.

2. John

2. John Hobart, a brigadier-general, captain and governor of Pendennis castle, in the county of Cornwall, who died November 7, A. D. 1734, and was buried at Blickling.

3. Thomas Hobart, a member of Lincoln's-Inn, who died unmarried.

Sir HENRY HOBART, the eldest son, was knighted by king Charles II. when that monarch was upon a visit to his father at Blickling. He was elected one of the burgeses for Lynn-Regis, in the parliament that met at Oxford, 23 Charles II. and sat with his father, who served in the same parliament, as knight of the shire for Norfolk. He engaged among the first who appeared for the revolution; and in the convention-parliament, (being one of the knights of the shire for Norfolk) declared for the vacancy of the throne. He was gentleman of the horse to king William, and attended on him at the battle of the Boyne, in Ireland, July 1, A. D. 1690. In the seventh year of that prince's reign, he was again elected one of the knights of the shire for Norfolk, and constantly behaved himself like a man of honour, and a true patriot of his country; but in 1699, resenting some words spoken by Oliver Leneve, esquire, a duel ensued, wherein he was mortally wounded. He was buried at Thetford; and Mr. Leneve, being tried at Norwich, March 16, A. D. 1699-1700, was found guilty of manslaughter. Sir Henry's lady was the eldest daughter of Joseph Maynard, esquire, son and heir of Sir John Maynard, knight, one of the commissioners of the great seal in the reign of king William; which lady survived him, and died of a consumption, August 22, A. D. 1701; and by her he had issue one son,

John, late earl of Buckinghamshire; and three daughters,

1. Henrietta, married first to Charles Howard, ninth earl of Suffolk, and secondly, to the honourable George Berkeley, esquire, fourth son of Charles, second earl of Berkeley.

2. Catharine, wedded to lieutenant-general Charles Churchill, who was member in several parliaments for Castle-Rising, in Norfolk, colonel of the tenth regiment of dragoons, one of the grooms of the bedchamber to his late majesty, and governor of Plymouth, and died at Bath, April 27, 1745; and

3. Dorothy, who died unmarried.

(First Earl.) JOHN HOBART, only son of Sir Henry, was born 1692. He was educated at Clare-hall, in Cambridge, and afterwards was elected a member for the borough of St. Ives, in the county of Cornwall, in the first parliament called by George I. and in 1722, again for the said borough, also for the borough of Beer-Alston, in Devonshire. September 22, A. D. 1721, he was constituted one of the commissioners for trade and the plantations; and June 17, A. D. 1725, was installed one of the knights-companions of the most honourable order of the Bath. At the accession of his late majesty, he was made treasurer of the Chamber; and elected one of the knights of the shire for Norfolk, as also chosen for Beer-Alston. And, in consideration of his great merits, was advanced, May 28, A. D. 1728, to the dignity of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Hobart, baron Hobart, of Blickling, in the county of Norfolk:

and, January 31, A. D. 1739-40, was sworn lord-lieutenant of the county of Norfolk. On his lordship's resigning his post of treasurer of the Chamber, his majesty constituted him, December 24, A. D. 1744, captain of the band of gentlemen-pensioners; and January the third following, he was sworn of the privy-council. Also, September 5, A. D. 1746, he was advanced to the dignity of an earl of the kingdom of Great-Britain, by the name, stile, and title of earl of Buckinghamshire, and as such took his seat in the house of peers, November the sixteenth following.

His lordship married to his first wife, Judith, daughter to Robert Britiffe, of Baconsthorpe, in Norfolk, esquire, by whom he had issue three sons;

1. Henry Hobart, who died an infant.

2. John Hobart, now earl of Buckinghamshire, and,

3. Robert Hobart, who died in the eighth year of his age, May 22, A. D. 1733.

And five daughters, whereof

Dorothy, October 21, A. D. 1752, married Charles Hotham, esquire, colonel in the first regiment of foot-guards, and eldest son of Beaumont Hotham, esquire, one of the commissioners of the customs; and the others died infants.

The said lady, Judith, dying February 7, A. D. 1726-7, his lordship married, secondly, February 10, A. D. 1727-8, Elizabeth, sister to Robert Bristow, esquire, (who was one of the clerks comptrollers of his majesty's household, and after serving for Winchelsea in several parliaments, died in 1738); and by her had two sons, George, and Henry.

His lordship died at his house in St. James's-square, London, September 22, A. D. 1756.

George Hobart, the eldest son by the second marriage, was member in the last parliament for St. Ives, in Cornwall, and sits in the present for Beer-Alston, in Devonshire. In 1762, he was nominated secretary to the embassy at the court of Russia, when his brother, the present earl of Buckinghamshire, was appointed ambassador. On the twenty-second of May, A. D. 1757, he married Albinia, daughter of lord Vere Bertie, eldest son of Robert, first duke of Ancaster, by his second marriage, and by this lady has had issue four sons and four daughters. 1. George Hobart, born March 5, A. D. 1758, who died in July, A. D. 1759. 2. Robert Hobart, born May 4, A. D. 1760. 3. George-Vere Hobart, born September 12, A. D. 1764. 4. Charles Hobart, born February, A. D. 1766. The daughters were, 1. Albinia, born April 19, A. D. 1759. 2. Ann Maria, born September 17, A. D. 1761, who died young. 3. Maria, and 4. Harriot, twins, born A. D. 1762.

Henry Hobart, the second son of the first earl, by his second wife, married on the twenty-second of July, A. D. 1761, Ann-Margaret, daughter of John Bristow, of Quiddenham, in Norfolk, and sub-governor of the South-Sea company, and has two daughters, Ann-Catherine, born 1762, and Maria-Ann, born 1763.

(Second and present Earl.) JOHN HOBART, only surviving son of the first marriage, succeeded his father in the peerage, during whose life-time, in 1747, he was returned to parliament for the city of of Norwich, and for the borough of St. Ives, and took his seat for the former; at the next general election, in 1754, he was chosen knight of the shire for Norfolk. At the accession of the present king, his lordship was appointed one of the lords of his majesty's bedchamber, a post he enjoyed under the late king. January 15, A. D. 1756, he was appointed comptroller of the household, and sworn of the privy-council twelve days after.

On the seventeenth of July, A. D. 1762, his lordship was appointed ambassador-extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the court of Petersburg, and continued in that honourable employ till the first of January, A. D. 1765, when he had his audience of leave of the empress.

On the fifteenth of July, A. D. 1761, he married Mary-Anne, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Drury, of Overstone, in the county of Northampton, baronet, and by her has two daughters.

1. Henrietta, born April 7, A. D. 1762.
2. Caroline Hans, born February 24, A. D. 1767.

(TITLES.) John Hobart, earl of Buckinghamshire; baron Hobart, of Blickling, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, May 22, A. D. 1611, (9 James I.) baron Hobart, of Blickling, in Norfolk, May 28, A. D. 1728, (1 George II.) earl of Buckinghamshire, September 5, A. D. 1746, (20 George II.)

(ARMS.) Diamond, a stat of eight rays, topaz, between two flanches, ermine.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a bull passant, party per pale, diamond and ruby, all bezanté, and a ring in his nose, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side a stag; on the sinister, a talbot, both proper and regardant, each having a radiant collar and line, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Auctor pretiosa facit."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Blickling, near Alesham, in the county of Norfolk.

FITZ-WILLIAM, Earl FITZ-WILLIAM.

THE genealogy of this noble family is so accurately ascertained till the year 1565, by a number of witnesses, that we must not only avail ourselves of the labour and expence which accrued to Hugh Fitz-William, of Sprotburg, in the county of York, who collected the necessary records that year, but at the same time transcribe some particulars, which he, the compiler, thought it necessary to premise.

"The burninge of three great bagges of evidence of the Fitz-Williams, by Sir Henry Savell, of Tankersley, who married Elizabeth Suthill, sole daughter and heir to Margery Fitz-William, pretendinge title, by the right of his wyfe, to the lordshippes of Emley, Sprotburgh, Warenhall, Darington, Cromwell, Athwike, Rodington, Basforde, Hathelsey, Plomtree, and others; and meaninge thereby to deface the bloode and name forever, hath moved me, Hugh Fitz-William, nowe eldist sonne to John Fitz-William, late of Sprotburgh, and of Hathelsey, to gather together all such pieces of evidence and matter of recorde, as by diligent scrutiny I could fynde in the Towre, in the Exchequer, in the Rowles, and in the office of the Haraldes, thereby to maintayne the right of the said lordshippes to the bloode and name. And further to declare, from what noble progenyes the bloode and name are descendid, as well within this realme, as in forrayn contreyes. The which accordith with th'olde and new Testament, to mayntayne antiquity, nobility, and birthright.

"For the veryfyeing of every particular of this descent, and to shew that Hugh Fitz-William, fourth sonne to John Fitz-William, the younger, of Sprotburgh, and of Hathelsey, is now the next heir male of the Fitz-Williams, lordes of Emley; and for a perpetuall memory of the truth thereof, these gentlemen of the bloode and name, whose names are here under written, have subscribed with th' officers of armes; whereunto the three kings of armes have sette the seals of their offices, of every there severall provinces, the thirde day of Maye, in the yere of our Lord MCCCCCLXV, with their severall declaracions as followeth, verbatim, videlicet.

"Wheras it may right well seeme, fondry of honour and worshippe of this name, by slouth and negligence, have ben omittid and leste owte of this lyne, as Sir John Fitzwilliam, knight, in the dayes of king Henry the Third; Sir Raufe Fitzwilliam, baron of Graystoke, in the days of king Edward the First; Sir George Fitzwilliam, knight of the Bath, in the days of king Henry Theight; Sir William Fitzwilliam, of Windesore, knight, one of the privy-chambre to king Edward the Sixt, and o thrs; the offspringe whereof affirme, by reporte of their fathers, that they be descendid owte of Emley, and Sprotburgh. But I cannot fynde, by diligent scrutiny, howe, neither by my evidence, nor matter of recorde, to their greate displeasure, beinge utterly owte of helpe, withoute great coste of further serche. I have therefore thoughte it good, and my dutie by the lawe of nature, for justice sake, to preserve the rest of the lyne, and combyne them together, for that they be disperfid into severall countie of this realme, and is, by the lawe of God, successively inheritable to the same, accordinge, as they be sette owte with there due differences in this booke. Taking God to witnes, that I have not omitted, or left owte any one of the name, that I could by eny means have authorite for my doinges, either by evidence, or the memory of manne. And have traveylid with every one of the name, that I could heere of, fondry tymes, to my great costes and charges with them, and their freindes, to know by what auctoritie, either by mater of recorde, or memory of manne, that may menteyne ther descent and birtheright: and have set them foorth accordingly, and of as meny as I could obteyne auctoryte for the same. And for a perputall memory of the truthe herof, I have subscribid my name, the thirde daye of Maye, Anno Domini MCCCCCLXV, and in the viiith yere of the prosperous reigne of our sovereyne lady Elizabeth, by the grace of God queene of Englande, France, and Ireland, defendour of the faith, &c. By me Hugh Fitzwilliam de Sprotburgh, in com. Ebor. And hereunto also hath set my seale of armes [Lofenge] with the kinges of armes.

The rest of the family subscribed as follows:

"By me, William Fitzwilliam, of Milton, knight, and eldest brother of that house, have, with the rest of my bloode, subscribid hereunto.

"John Fitzwilliam de Milton, in com. Northampton.

"By me Brian Fitzwilliam de Geinsparke, in Essex.

"In the verifing of the truthe of this descent, I doo subscribe my name, William Fitzwilliam de Lincoln.

"I have perused the evidence of the originall of the particulars of this descent, and for the verifenge of the truth thereof, I have sett to my bande, with the reste of my bloode and name, by me Gervois Fitzwilliam, of Bentley.

"By me William Fitzwilliam, eldest sonne to John Fitzwilliam of Kingesley, in Hampshire.

"William Fitzwilliam de Plomtree.

"George Fitzwilliam of Hatbilsy.

"Thomas Fitzwilliam, eldest sonne to Frauncys Fitzwilliam of Fenton.

"By me John Fitzwilliam, sonne and heire to Richard Fitzwilliam, of Ringstede.

"Charles Fitzwilliam de Swandbie, in com. Nottingham."

Also Sir Gilbert Dethich, Garter; Hervey, Clarencieux; and William Flower, Norroy, kings of arms, signed the following certificates.

"I have exactly examyned this descent, with the recordes of myne office, and do fynde the same to agree with this booke; and that the above namyd Hugh Fitzwilliam, sonne to John Fitzwilliam, now is the next heire male of Sprotburgh and Elmeley, &c. and for the verification of the truth hereof, I have subribed my name, and set to the seale of myne office. Per me G. Dethicke, alias Garter principall Kinge of Armes, 1565."

"Although the order of this descent is sufficient to satisfie eny judge, alleadginge such auctoritie of recorde and evidence, beinge thoroughly perused and subscribid of the eldist of every severall braunche of the bloode, and name thereof, ratysfenge the true naminge and placinge of their cotes, with there due differences, of every one of their auncestors, that is to be knowne presently, either by mater of recorde, or memory of manne, fathers, mothers, uncles, auncles, brothren and sisters: Neverthelesse, beinge earnestly requested, I have conferrid the saide descent with the records of myne office, and also conferrid the evidence and recordes mentioned in the same with the originalls, brought unto me by Hugh Fitzwilliam, the next heire male, now of Emley and Sprotburgh, as it may appeere by the same. And in the verifing the truthe of every particular of this descent, I have subscribed my name, and sette the seale of myne office, the day and yeere above written, William Flower Harvey, alias Clarencieux Roy d'Armes.

"I Norroy Kinge of Armes, have thoroughly perused this descent of Hugh Fitzwilliam, with the bookes of my recordes; and for the verifenge of the truth thereof, I have subscribid my name, and set thereunto the seal of myne office." Per moy William Flower, alias Norrey Roy d'Armes.

The first mentioned in the said pedigree is

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-GODRIC, coulin to king Edward the Confessor. His son and heir,

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, beinge ambassador at the court of William, duke of Normandy, attended him in his victorious expedition into England, as marshal of his army, A. D. 1066; and for his bravery at the battle of Hastings, October 14, that year the conqueror gave him a scarf from his own arm. This Sir William Fitz-William married Emma, daughter and heir of monsieur de Solabis, a Norman knight; and by her was father of

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, who is said in the manuscript before-mentioned, and in several pedigrees by different antiquaries and heralds, to have wedded Eleanor, daughter and heir of Sir John Elmley, of Elmley and Sprotburgh, &c. in Yorkshire, and to have had issue,

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, lord of Elmley and Sprotburgh, who was living in 1117.

He, or one of his descendants, caused a cross to be set up in the high-street at Sprotburgh, with these words engraven on brass:

Who so is hungry, and list, well, eate,
Let him come to Sprodburgh to his meate;
And for a night, and for a day,
His horse shall have both corn and hay,
And no man shall ask him where he goith away.

Which cross was pulled down in the year of our Lord, 1520.

The son and heir of the last Sir William Fitz-William, was after his own name,

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, lord also of Elmley and Sprotburgh, who had to wife, Ella, daughter and coheir of William de Warren, earl of Surry, grandson of William, earl of Surry, by Gunered his wife, daughter of king William the Conqueror, by Maud, daughter of Baldwin, earl of Flanders, and Alice, daughter of Robert, king of France: which Baldwin was lineally descended from from Baldwin, Forestier de Ardern, first earl of Flanders, and his wife Judith, the widow of Ethelwolf, king of England, and daughter of Charles the Bald, king of France, son of Lewis, king of France, son of Charlemagne, king of France, and emperor of the Romans. By this great lady he had issue two sons, Sir William Fitz-William, and Roger Fitz-William, to whom William, earl Warren, gave the lordship of Grete-well, to him, his heirs and assigns, paying yearly, at Whitsuntide, two pair of gilt spurs.

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, the eldest son, succeeded to the inheritance of Elmley, Sprot-burgh, &c. in 1148, and married Albreda, daughter of Robert de Lisoures, and sister of the half-blood to Robert de Lacy, lord of Pomfret, alias Pontefract, and also widow of Richard Fitz-Eustace, constable of Chester. He died in 1184, and she was living in 1193; he had a son, Sir William Fitz-William, and a daughter, Donatia. The said

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, son of Albreda, is mentioned in several deeds without date, whereunto the arms the family now bear are appendant. He married Ella, daughter to Hameline Plantagenet, natural brother to king Henry II. and earl of Surry, in right of his wife Isabel, daughter of William de Warren, earl of Surry. By the said Ella, Sir William had a son and heir,

Sir THOMAS FITZ-WILLIAM, who married Agnes, daughter of Roger Bertram, baron of Mitford, in Northumberland, and sister of Roger; and had with her, by way of portion, the manor of Steinton, besides a rent of 50 s. yearly in the manor of Gretam, by grant from the said Roger, to him and such heirs as he should beget of the said Agnes. In 26 Henry III. the truce being broke between the king of England and Lewis VIII. king of France, he was commanded to repair to the king with horses and arms, according to the service he owed, in order to enter France, and thereby gain honour to himself and the kingdom. He obtained a charter for free warren in his lordships of Plumtree, in Nottinghamshire, Bam-brough, and Darrington, in Yorkshire; and for a market at his manor of Elmley every week, on Thursday, and a fair to be held every year, on the eve and day of Holy-Cross, and the three following days. In 1253, he granted, and confirmed, to Roche Abby, all those lands, tenements, &c. which they held in the town of Mar, by gift of Jordan, son of Philip de Mar. He also gave lands to Byland Abbey, and Hampal; likewise confirmed the gift of John, constable of Chester, his uncle, to Welbeck Abbey.

He left issue,

1. Sir William Fitz-William, who succeeded him.
2. Sir Roger Fitz-William, to whom he gave the lordship of Woodhall, whose descendants are entered in the table; and
3. Peter Fitz-William, to whom he gave lands in Denby, alias Denbigh.

Also four daughters,

1. Margaret, to whom he gave lands in Thorpe, Rytone, Lyme, and Hallyhope.
2. Agnes, to whom he gave lands in Hangthwaite, Adwick, and Stedfold.
3. Bartha, to whom he gave Steanton, and Ramira; and

4. Albreda, who was married to Sir Richard Walleis, of Burghwalleis, knight.

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, eldest son of Sir Thomas, married Agnes, daughter of Richard, lord Grey, of Codnor. To this Sir William, Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester, gave a fee of twenty marks per annum; and he was also seized of four knights fees in the honour of Pontefract, viz. one in Darrington, and three of Lizours, in Sprotburgh, Cateby, Athwick, and elsewhere. By fine, in 48 Henry III. he granted, in dower, to Agnes, his mother, the manor of Plumtree, in Nottinghamshire, during her life. By indenture, dated at Pontefract, March 25, A. D. 1287, 15 Edward I. he binds himself to king Edward and his heirs, in all his lands and chattels, and made oath to assist him and his heirs in all quarrels and enterprizes. In the same year, November 10, the king granted him licence to turn the highway, which was through the middle of his park at Elmley, provided he made another way of the same length and breadth, through the western part of that park, commodious for passengers, to contain in length three hundred and eighty perches, and sixty feet of land. In 19 Edward I. the king from Roxburgh, January 29, signifies, that, understanding his faithful knight, Sir William de Fitz-William, is in such an ill state of body, that he cannot well travel; and having sent him two armed men and two archers, who are in his army in Scotland; therefore he excuses his coming to him, and commands his being not molested on that account. His son and heir,

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, married Maud, daughter of Edward, lord Deyncourt; and was found by inquisition, bearing date the fifth of Edward II. to be one of the heirs of Roger Bertram, baron of Mitford. In the first year of Edward III. he was summoned to parliament among the barons of this realm; and in the fifth of that reign, gave lands to the nunnery of Hampall, near Doncaster, in Yorkshire. By his said wife, Maud, he had four sons,

1. Sir John Fitz-William, his heir.
2. Robert Fitz-William.
3. Thomas Fitz-William, who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Mablethorp, of Mablethorp, (otherwise Mallerthorp) in the county of Lincoln, knight, and from them the Fitz-Williams of that place are descended; and,
4. Richard Fitz-William.

By the same lady he was also father of five daughters, entered in the table.

Sir JOHN FITZ-WILLIAM, knight, the eldest son, married Joan, daughter of Sir Adam Reresby, and was seized of Skelton, and West-Drayton. He lived in the eighteenth year of the reign of Edward III. and died about the twenty-fourth, having had issue Sir John, his heir, and Elizabeth, married to Reginald, lord Mohun.

Sir JOHN FITZ-WILLIAM, son and heir of Sir John, was seized of the lordship of Shadestre, and John Thursby, archbishop of York, did homage to him in 1353, the 27th of Edward III. for lands held of him. In 36 Edward III. he founded the chantry of St. Edward, in the church of Sprotburgh: and having wedded Elizabeth, daughter daughter of William, lord Clinton, had by her three sons,

1. Sir William Fitz-William, his heir, ancestor to the present earl Fitz-William.

2. Richard Fitz-William, to whom he gave, in reversion, East, West, and Middle Haddlesey; and,

3. Edmond Fitz-William, for whose posterity, among which was William Fitz-William, created earl of Southampton, October 18, A. D. 1538, we refer our readers to the table.

Also three daughters,

1. Joan, first married to Thomas Stapleton, esquire, son and heir of Sir Miles Stapleton; and, secondly, to John Felton, esquire.

2. Anne, wedded to Sir Henry Hastings, of Pikerlingth, knight; and,

3. Isabel, to Sir Bryan Thornhill, knight.

The eldest son,

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, wedded Maud, daughter of Ralph, lord Cromwell, of Tatterhall, and coheir to her nephew, Ralph, lord Cromwell, treasurer of England in the reign of Henry VI. and by her was father of one son and two daughters, viz. Sir John, his heir; Joanna, married to Sir Henry Suthill, of Suthill-hall; and Elizabeth, to Sir Robert Rockley, of Rockley.

Sir JOHN FITZ-WILLIAM, the only son and heir, received homage from Henry Bowett, archbishop of York, as his grandfather, Sir John, had done from archbishop Thursby; and departed this life in 1418, 6 Henry V. By Eleanor, his wife, daughter to Sir Henry Green, of Drayton, he had a daughter, Maud, wedded to William Bosville, of Erdesley.

And also six sons,

1. John Fitz-William, for whose descendants see the table.

2. Nicholas Fitz-William, who was seated at Aldwick, and by Margery, his wife, daughter of John Causley, had a son, John, who died without issue.

3. Ralph Fitz-William, captain of the castle and county of Salvaterra in France, for whose descendants see the table.

4. Robert Fitz-William, who was seated at Bentley, and left issue, as in the table.

5. William Fitz-William, who died at Plumtree; and,

6. John Fitz-William, of Milton and Green's-Norton, in Northamptonshire, esquire, ancestor to the earl Fitz-William, with whom we proceed.

JOHN FITZ-WILLIAM, of Milton, &c. married Ellen (or Eleanor) daughter of William Villers, of Brokesby, in the county of Leicester, esq; and by her had three sons,

1. Sir William Fitz-William, his heir.

2. Bartholomew Fitz-William: And,

3. Richard Fitz-William, who was of the city of London; and by — his wife, daughter of — Harris, is said to have had a daughter — wedded to Robert Denham.

By the same lady, John Fitz-William, esquire, was also father of two daughters,

1. Elizabeth, successively married to Thomas Rolleston, of Rolleston (commonly Rolston) in Staffordshire, esquire; and Richard Francis, of Formark, in the county of Derby: and,

2. Mary, who also had two husbands; first, Thomas Waddington, esquire, and, secondly, Richard Ogle, of Pinchbeck, in Lincolnshire, esquire.

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, the eldest son, was of Milton, aforesaid, of Geinsparke (or Gaines-park-hall) in Essex, and also of the city of London, of which he was sheriff, A. D. 1506, 22 Henry VII. and where he was also alderman of Bread-street ward, and rebuilt the greatest part of the church of St. Andrew Underhaft at his own expence. He served the office of sheriff for Essex, A. D. 1514, 6 Henry VIII. and, in the 15th, for Northamptonshire. He had been for some time retained in the service of cardinal Wolsey, and retiring afterwards to his house at Milton, there gave his old master, the cardinal, kind entertainment, when he was in disgrace with Henry VIII. and being interrogated by his majesty how he durst entertain so great an enemy to the state; he answered the king, that he had not contemptuously or wilfully done it, in disobedience to his majesty, but only as the cardinal had been his master, and, partly, the means of his greatest fortunes: at which answer the king was so well pleased, that, saying he had few such servants, he immediately knighted him, and made him one of his privy-council. This noble knight was possessed of a great estate, and was very prudent, munificent, and charitable; which is apparent from his last will and testament, dated May 28, A. D. 1534, 26 Henry VIII.

He died at his house, in the parish of St. Thomas the Apostle, in London, on August 9, A. D. 1534, 26 Henry VIII. and was buried at Marham, where a tomb is erected to his memory.

He married, to his first wife, Anne, daughter to Sir John Hawes, of the city of London, knight. Milred was his second wife, second daughter to Richard Sackville, of Buckhurst, in the parish of Withiam, in the county of Sussex, esquire, ancestor to the present duke of Dorset; and his third wife was Jane, daughter to John Ormond, or Urmond, but by her he had no issue.

By the two former he had a numerous issue, all which, with their descendants, are properly entered in the table.

Proceed we with the eldest son,

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, who succeeded his father, A. D. 1534, at Milton, and Gaines-Park-Hall; and, by his will, had also the manors of Hennals, Madells, and Marshals, in the county of Essex; also the manors of Marham, Etton, Woodcroft, Butlers, Thorolds, Minskipes, and all and singular his other manors, lands, &c. in the counties of Northampton, Essex, and Lincoln, not otherways bequeathed by him in his will. He married Anne, daughter to Sir Richard Sapcote, of Elton, in the county of Huntingdon, knight, by whom he had four sons, and a daughter named Christian, first married to Sir Richard Wingfield, knight, lieutenant of Portsmouth; and secondly, to Sir George Delves, knight, one of the gentlemen pensioners to queen Elizabeth.

The sons were,

1. Sir William Fitz-William.

2. John Fitz-William.

3. Bryan Fitz-William, who was a captain, and, A. D. 1569 served against the rebels in the north north of Ireland; whither he went again, A. D. 1580, in company with Sir William Ruffel, son to the earl of Bedford, with one hundred and fifty horse, raised by the clergy of England. He died without issue. And another,

4. John Fitz-William, who was trained up in France, and when queen Mary involved England in a war, in behalf of her husband, Philip II. king of Spain, against the French monarch, Henry II. A. D. 1557, he was appointed maître de camp to the English auxiliaries. He also served in Ireland against the great rebel O'Neal, whom he defeated, A. D. 1567; and died without issue.

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, the eldest son, who was sole heir to his father, and succeeded him at Milton, &c. was born A. D. 1526, and being bred up under the tuition, and in the service of his kinsman, by the mother, John lord Ruffel, lord privy seal, and first earl of Bedford, of that noble family, was by him presented to Edward VI. by whom he was made marshal of the King's-bench; and was afterwards employed by queen Mary, in Ireland, under Thomas Ratcliff, earl of Suffex, the lieutenant of that kingdom. On July 24, A. D. 1559, the first of queen Elizabeth, he was, by letters-patent, made vice-treasurer, and treasurer at war, in the said realm, and so continued until the 14th year of that queen's reign. In the interim, notwithstanding his employments in those offices, the same queen called him to greater authority, making him five several times governor over that realm, as particularly hereafter followeth:

Imprimis, by letters patent, bearing date at Westminster, January 18, A. D. 1560, 2 Elizabeth, he was lord deputy, and received his oath, and her highness's sword, in the presence of divers of the nobility, and commons, at Christ-church in Dublin, February 15 following, and so continued until June 25, A. D. 1561.

Item, by letters-patent, dated January 10, in the third year of her reign, A. D. 1561, he was made lord justice the second time, and again received his oath, and her highness's sword, as aforesaid, at Christ-church, February 2 following, and so continued till June 5, A. D. 1562, viz. four months and three days.

Item, by other letters-patent, dated December 20, in the fourth year of her reign, he was made lord justice the third time, and likewise received his oath, and the sword, as before, at Christ-church, January 22 following, A. D. 1562, and so continued until the 20th of July, A. D. 1563, viz. six months and seven days.

Item, by other letters-patent, dated October 9, A. D. 1566, in the ninth year of the said queen's reign, he was made lord justice the fourth time, and also received his oath, and the sword, as aforesaid, at Christ-church, the same day, together with Dr. Weston, then lord chancellor (joined with him in the patent) and so he continued until the 28th of October, A. D. 1567, viz. twelve months and nine days.

Item, by other letters-patent, dated April 1, in the thirteenth year of her reign, he was made lord justice the fifth time, and then also received his oath, and the sword, as before, at Christ-church, the same day, A. D. 1570, being elected and chosen thereunto by the nobility and commons of the said realm, according to a statute in such case set forth and provided, and so he continued until the 11th of December, A. D. 1571, viz. eight months and eleven days; and then he was made lord deputy, by letters-patent, dated the 11th of December, A. D. 1571, in the 14th of Elizabeth, and received his oath, and the sword, as aforesaid, at St. Patrick's, the 13th of January following, and so continued three years and more, scilicet, until the 5th of August, A. D. 1575, which was three years, and seven months; at which time Sir Edward Fitton, knight, was sent over to be his successor in the office of vice-treasurer, and treasurer at war as aforesaid.

Item, by other letters-patent, dated the 20th of February, in the 30th year of her reign, A. D. 1588, he was made lord deputy of Ireland the second time, and received his oath, and the sword, at Christ-church, in the presence of the nobility, and divers of the commons, there assembled, the last day of June following, and so continued until the 11th of August, A. D. 1594, when Sir William Ruffel, youngest son of Francis earl of Bedford, succeeded him.

"This Sir William Fitz-William was not only eminent for his great services in Ireland, in which he continued between thirty and forty years, and discharged himself, in all his honourable employments in that kingdom, with great prudence and fidelity, whereby he justly merited his royal mistress's favour, and gained an universal applause and esteem, among the nobility and people of that realm; for her majesty, as a further mark of the trust and confidence she reposed in his abilities and fidelity for her service, was pleased to constitute him constable of Fotheringay-castle, in the county of Northampton, where he behaved himself with so much civility towards the queen of Scots, during her imprisonment, under his care, in that castle, that, the morning before she was beheaded, she presented him with the picture of her son, king James I. which picture is yet in the family."

We find this further mention of him in Cox's history of Ireland, "That in October, A. D. 1554, this Sir William Fitz-William, with Sir John Allen, and Valentine Brown, esquire, were commissioned by queen Mary, with Sir Anthony St. Leger, lord deputy of Ireland, for the management of the crown lands in that kingdom; also on the third of July, A. D. 1555, he was made keeper of the great seal, till September 13, when Hugh Curwen, archbishop of Dublin, was appointed lord chancellor." Fuller, in his Worthies of England, p. 285, recites, "That Sir William Fitz-William was five times lord deputy of Ireland, a sufficient evidence of his honesty and ability, queen Elizabeth never trusting twice, where she was once deceived in a minister of state. And she so preserved him in the power of his place, that sending over Walter, earl of Essex, to be governor of Ulster, the earl was ordered to take his commission from the lord deputy." And Sir John Davis, in his Discourse of Ireland, p. 257, relates, That he was very serviceable in the reduction of Ireland. First, in raising a composition in Munster; afterwards in settling the possessions of the lords and tenants in Monahan, one of the last acts of state (tending to the reformation of the civil government) performed in the reign of queen Elizabeth. His vigilance was very conspicuous in the memorable year of the Spanish invasion, A. D. 1558, when the routed Armada, in its return, dared not to land in Ireland, except against their wills driven by tempest, when they found the shore worse than the sea to them. He died on June 22, 1599, and lies buried at Marham, in Northamptonshire, where a noble monument is erected to his memory, exhibiting the figures of him and his lady, with the following inscription:

To the memory of
The Right Honourable Sir William Fitz-William, Knt. who by her Majesty Queen Elizabeth was three several Times made her Deputy, alias, Lord Lieutenant of the Kingdom of Ireland. He was also five several Times one of the Lords Justices of that Kingdom, and General and Commander in Chief of the Army there; near 30 Years; when being in a very advanced Age, and worn out by the Fatigues of the War, and the State there, he, by her Majesty's Permission, returned into this Kingdom, and retired to his Native Place,
Milton, where he died in June, 1599, and lies buried in this Chancel: He married Anne, Daughter of Sir William Sidney, and Sister to Sir Henry Sidney, Father of the first Earl of Leicester.
She lies also here buried by him.

He had issue by her two sons, and three daughters;

1. Mary, married to Sir Richard Dyer, nephew and heir of Sir James Dyer, of Great-Stoughton, in the county of Huntingdon, lord chief-justice, knight.

2. Philippa, married to Sir Thomas Coningsby, of Hampton-Court, in the county of Hereford, knight, ancestor to Margaret late countess of Coningsby; and,

3. Margaret, married to John Byron, esquire, son and heir of Sir John Byron, of Clayton in the county of Lancaster, knight, grandfather by her of John, first lord Byron.

The two sons were,

1. Sir William Fitz-William; and,

2. John Fitz-William, a captain in the wars of Scotland, who died without issue.

The eldest son,

Sir WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, succeeded his father, and resided at Milton, and Gaines-Park-Hall, aforesaid. He married Winifred, daughter to Sir Walter Mildmay, of Apethorp, in the county of Northampton, knight, chancellor of the Exchequer, and under-treasurer of England; and deceasing on August 5, A. D. 1618, 16 James I. was buried at Marham. He had by her two sons and a daughter, Anne, married to John Isham, of Picheley, in the county of Northampton, esquire, father by her of an only daughter and heir, Anne, successively wedded to William Lane, of Horton and Glendon, esquire, and Pierce Walsh, esquire.

The sons were,

1. Sir William Fitz-William, and

2. Walter Fitz-William, who was living unmarried, A. D. 1637, but died without issue.

WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, of Milton, and Gaines-Park-Hall, esquire, the eldest son, was, by letters-patent, bearing date at Westminster, December 1, 1620, 18 James I. created lord Fitz-William, of Liffer, alias Lifford, in the county of Donegall, in the kingdom of Ireland; and deceasing at his house in the Strand, on January 6, A. D. 1643-4, was buried at Marham aforesaid. He had issue, by Catherine, his wife, daughter of William Hyde, of South-Denchworth, in the county of Berks, esquire, and sister of Sir George Hyde, of Kingston-Lisse, in the same county, knight of the Bath, two sons, and three daughters, viz.

1. William Fitz-William, second lord Fitz-William.

2. John Fitz-William, who died without issue, in November, A. D. 1637.

The daughters were,

1. Winifred, who died without issue, A. D. 1635.

2. Catharine, who was married to Sir John Lee, of St. Edmundsbury, in the county of Suffolk, knight.

3. Ann, died unmarried.

WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM (eldest son and heir to William the first lord Fitz-William and dame Catharine Hyde) succeeded his father, and married Jane, daughter and coheir to Hugh Perry, alias Hunter, esquire, who was sheriff and alderman of London, second son of Thomas Perry, alias Hunter, of Wotton under Edge, in the county of Gloucester, by whom he had issue four sons and three daughters,

1. William Fitz-William, who died at six months old.

2. William, third lord Fitz-William, heir to his father.

3. Charles Fitz-William, who was a colonel of horse, A. D. 1689, and died in Ireland without issue.

4. Ferdinando Fitz-William, who deceased young.

The daughters were,

1. Catherine, who died young.

2. Jane, who was married to Sir Christopher Wren, knight, surveyor-general to her majesty queen Anne, and the architect of St. Paul's cathedral, London, to whom she bore an only child, Jane, who died unmarried, December 20, A. D. 1711.

3. Frances, who died young.

The said William, second lord Fitz-William, deceasing at his house in the Savoy, in the county of Middlesex, was interred at Marham aforesaid, February 21, A. D. 1658, and his lady surviving him, was buried at Marham, April 8, 1671.

WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, third lord Fitz-William, was born at the dutchy-house in the Savoy, April 29, A. D. 1643. His lordship, on the accession of George I. was constituted custos rotulorum of the city and liberty of Peterborough; and was created viscount Milton, in the county of West-Meath, and earl Fitz-William, of the county of Tyrone, in Ireland, by letters-patent, bearing date July 21, A. D. 1716, in the second year of his reign. His lordship married Anne, daughter, and, at length, sole heir, to Edmund Cremor, of West-Winch, in the county of Norfolk, esquire, by whom he had issue four sons, and six daughters,

1. William Fitz-William, eldest son, born at Milton, August 19, A. D. 1678, who died unmarried, November 25, A. D. 1699, and was buried at Marham.

2. Charles

2. Charles Fitz-William, second son, who died an infant.

3. John Fitz-William, who succeeded his father, and was earl Fitz-William.

4. George Fitz-William, who deceased young. The daughters were,

1. Catharine,
2. Frances,
3. Rachel,
4. Mary,

} died young.

5. Anna-Maria, who was married to Sir Charles Barrington, of Barrington-Hall, in the county of Essex, baronet, who died in January, A. D. 1714-15, and his lady, July 17, aged forty-one, leaving no issue, and was buried in her family vault at Marham.

6. Jane Fitz-William, who died young.

The said William, earl Fitz-William, departed this life December 28, A. D. 1719, in the seventy-seventh year of his age, and was buried at Marham, having survived his lady, who died February 4, A. D. 1716-17, aged seventy-one. He was succeeded by his only surviving son,

JOHN FITZ-WILLIAM, second earl Fitz-William, was member of parliament for the city of Peterborough, and custos rotulorum for the said city and liberty; and died August 28, A. D. 1728. He married Anne, daughter and sole heir to John Stringer, of Sutton upon Lownd, in the county of Nottingham, esquire, who died in 1726, and was buried at Marham, and by her had issue one son,

William Fitz-William, born January 15, A. D. 1719, the first English peer of this family, and three daughters,

1. Ann, born August 23, A. D. 1722, married to Francis Godolphin, esquire.
2. Elizabeth, born December 9, A. D. 1724.
3. Mary, born February 4, A. D. 1725, married to John Archer, of Welford, in the county of Berks, esquire.

(First Earl.) WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, the third earl Fitz-William, of Ireland, and the first of Great-Britain, being left a minor, was first of Eton school; and after having finished his travels abroad, was early distinguished by king George II. who, April 19, A. D. 1742, in the fifteenth year of his reign, created him a peer of Great-Britain, by the name, stile, and title of lord Fitz-William, baron of Milton, in the county of Northampton. September 6, A. D. 1746, his lordship was created a viscount, and earl of Great-Britain, by the name, stile, and titles of viscount Milton, and earl Fitz-William, of Norborough, in the county of Northampton; and appointed custos rotulorum of the city and liberty of Peterborough, November 23, 1741. At the funeral of Frederick, prince of Wales, April 13, A. D. 1751, his lordship was one of the six earls who supported the pall; and June 24, ensuing, was constituted one of the lords of his majesty's bedchamber.

June 22, A. D. 1744; his lordship married Anne Wentworth, eldest daughter of Thomas, marquis of Rockingham; and by her (who died, May 4, A. D. 1759, and was interred at Marham) he had issue six daughters, viz.

1. Anne, born March 24, A. D. 1744;
2. Charlotte, born July 14, A. D. 1746, and married to Thomas Dundas, esquire, one of the members for Richmond, in Yorkshire, eldest son of Sir Lawrence Dundas, of Aske-hall, in the said county, baronet, one of the representatives for Newcastle under Line, in Staffordshire.
3. Frances, born October 22, A. D. 1750;
4. Emilia-Maria, born December 12, A. D. 1751, and died August 8, A. D. 1752.
5. Henrietta, born March 21, A. D. 1752, and
6. Dorothy, born May 22, A. D. 1754.

His lordship had also two sons, viz. William, viscount Milton, now earl Fitz-William, and the honourable George Fitz-William, a posthumous child.

He departed this life August 10, A. D. 1756, and had sepulture with his ancestors at Marham. His lordship was succeeded in dignity and estate by his said eldest son, (Second, and present Earl.) WILLIAM FITZ-WILLIAM, of Great-Britain, and fourth of Ireland. His lordship was born May 30, A. D. 1748, and is the twenty-second in paternal descent from Sir William Fitz-Goderick, cousin to king Edward the Confessor.

(TITLES.) William Fitz-William, earl Fitz-William, viscount Milton, and lord Fitz-William, baron of Milton, English honours; also earl Fitz-William, viscount Miltown, and baron Fitz-William, of Liffer, alias Lifford, in the kingdom of Ireland.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Fitz-William, of Milton, by letters-patent, dated April 19, A. D. 1742, (fifteenth of George II.) viscount Milton, and earl Fitz-William, of Norborough, all in the county of Northampton, by letters-patent, dated September 6, A. D. 1746, (20 George II.)

(ARMS.) Lozengy, pearl and ruby.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, topaz, a triple plume of feathers, pearl.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two savage men, proper, wreathed about their heads and waists with oak leaves, and in their exterior hands a tree eradicated, the top broken off also, proper.

(MOTTO.) "Appetitus rationi pareat."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Milton, near Peterborough, in the county of Northampton.

[176]

HERBERT, Earl of POWIS.

THE ancient part of the genealogy of this truly respectable family, which has been already in part treated of in our account of the earl of Pembroke's ancestors, is fully and impartially set forth in the table. Antiquaries, as we have already observed, differ in their opinions concerning the legitimacy of Herbert Fitzherbert, who died A. D. 1205, confessedly the common ancestor of the Herberts since his time. Those who contend for the legitimacy of this gentleman, meet with no difficulty, in deriving his descent from the emperor Charlemain, who died in 814. Their opponents contend, that he was a natural son to Henry I. king of England, by Julian, daughter of Sir Robert Corbet, who was afterwards the wife of Henry Fitzherbert. In these points we leave the reader to determine for himself; allowing, however, that we have in our account of the earl of Pembroke's family, given one strong reason for our inclination to entertain the latter opinion.

We shall begin our account of this noble family with

Sir WILLIAM HERBERT, called William-ap-Thomas, seated at Ragland castle, and called by the Welch, Margoah Gles, or Gumrhi, who was created a knight banneret, in 1415. He married Gladys, daughter and heir of Sir David Gamm, knight, and widow of Sir Roger Vaughan, knight, by whom he had issue two sons and a daughter, Elizabeth, married to Sir Henry Stradling, of St. Donat's castle, in Glamorganshire, knight.

The eldest son, Sir William Herbert, created earl of Pembroke, May 27, A. D. 1468, (having been seven years before created baron Herbert, of Chepstow, &c. &c.) had a numerous issue; his eldest son succeeded him in the earldom, and surrendering it in July, 1479, was then created earl of Huntingdon. This second earl of Pembroke had a natural son, Sir Richard Herbert, of Ewyas, from whom the present earl of Pembroke is lineally descended. Notwithstanding the first earl of Pembroke had four sons, three of which were married, his male line ended in the fourth generation with Sir William Herbert, whose sole daughter and heiress, married the first baron Herbert, of Chirbury, and was one of two ladies, as will be seen, by whose intermarriages, the present earl of Powis claims a descent from the first earl of Pembroke.

Sir RICHARD HERBERT, (second son of Sir William Herbert) seated at Colbrook, was famed for his military exploits in support of the interest of the house of York, against that of the house of Lancaster; but in no one instance more so, than in the battle of Danes-Moor, near Edgecote, in Northamptonshire, a few miles from Banbury, when his prodigious size, and probably proportionable strength, (for Fuller says, he was a person of more than ordinary stature) joined to bravery, little less uncommon, enabled him with his pole-axe in his hand, to pass and return twice through the army of the Lancastrians, killing with his own hand one hundred and forty men, without receiving any mortal wound. Victory almost declared in favour of the house of York, when John Clapham, esquire, with five hundred men he had got together, bearing before them the standard of his master, Nevil, earl of Warwick, the great king maker, and crying, a Warwick! a Warwick! The Welchmen apprehending the immediate arrival of that earl and his army, without delay deserted the field, and in their flight, lost upwards of five thousand men, besides those taken prisoners; in which latter number, we must include Sir Richard, and his elder brother, the earl of Pembroke; who, while they were endeavouring to rally their forces, fell into the hands of the enemy, and were carried to Banbury, where they suffered decapitation, on the twenty-seventh of July, A. D. 1469, the day after that fatal engagement.

He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas-ap-Griffith-ap-Nicholas, and sister to Sir Rice-ap-Thomas, knight banneret, and by her had issue three sons,

1. Sir William Herbert, seated at Colbrook, in Monmouthshire, who married Jane, daughter of Sir William Griffith, of Penryn, knight, whose posterity, after some time, seated themselves at Kilcow, in Ireland, and became very numerous.

2. Sir Richard Herbert, ancestor to the present earl of Powis.

3. Thomas Herbert, seated at St. Pere, from whom the Herberts of Tintern, in Monmouthshire, derive their descent.

The second son,

Sir RICHARD HERBERT, was gentleman-usher of the privy-chamber to king Henry VIII. in the first year of whose reign, he was appointed constable of the castle of Abergavenny, and is recorded by his grandson, lord Herbert, as having been remarkably just in the exercise of the power lodged in him by virtue of that office.

He

He was seated at Montgomery, and having married Anne, daughter of Sir David-ap-Enion-ap-Leuelling Vaughan, he had issue three sons, entered in the table; of which the eldest,

EDWARD HERBERT, married Elizabeth, daughter of Matthew Price, of Newtown, in Montgomeryshire, and had issue five daughters, entered in the table, with their respective husbands.

Also three sons,

1. Richard Herbert, seated at Montgomery castle, as had been his father and grandfather, who lie buried there; but the time of their decease is not ascertained. He was father of Edward, first lord Herbert, of Chirbury, &c. who, we have already observed, married Mary, sole daughter and heir of Sir William Herbert, of the elder branch of this family; which lord Herbert was ancestor, as may be seen in the table, to six, who afterwards bore that title, three as male-representatives of himself, and three by virtue of a new creation; which title became extinct in 1738, and so continued till 1743, as will be seen. Florentia, the youngest daughter of Richard, second lord Herbert, married Richard Herbert, of Oakley-park, Montgomeryshire, of whom we shall treat among the lineal ancestry of the earl of Powis, and by which marriage his lordship has a second claim to descent from the first earl of Pembroke. The confusion which unavoidably attends this relation will vanish, upon inspecting the table, where the whole is in an accurate manner presented to the reader.

2. Matthew Herbert.

3. Charles Herbert, of Aston, in Montgomeryshire, whose line became extinct at the death of his grandson, Sir Arthur Herbert, created earl of Torrington, &c. without issue, on the fourteenth of April, A. D. 1716.

The second son,

MATTHEW HERBERT, was seated at Dolegeiog, in Montgomeryshire, and was returned to parliament for the county of Monmouth, in the fifth of Elizabeth. He married Anne, daughter of Charles Fox, of Bromfield, in Shropshire, by whom he had an only son and heir, FRANCIS HERBERT, who, for his loyalty to king Charles I. had his estates sequestered, and was obliged to compound for the same. He was seated at Dolegeiog aforesaid, and married two wives; first, Dorothy, daughter of Dr. Richard Parry, bishop of St. Asaph, but by her had no issue. He married, secondly, Abigail, daughter of William Garton, of Sussex, esquire, and by her had issue two sons.

1. Sir Matthew Herbert, seated at Bromfield, in Shropshire, who was created a baronet, A. D. 1663. He married Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Lacy, of Charlecotte, in Staffordshire, but died without issue.

2. Richard Herbert. Which

RICHARD HERBERT, of Dolegeiog, and of Oakley-park, in the counties of Salop and Montgomery, as we have already observed, by marrying Florentia, youngest daughter of Richard, second lord Herbert, of Chirbury, and sister and coheir to Henry, fourth lord Herbert, of Chirbury, gave an additionally noble descent to his successors.

He had issue two daughters,

1. Arabella.
2. Mary, first the wife of William Nichols, and afterwards of — Caesar.

Also two sons,

1. Francis Herbert.

2. George Herbert, who married Florentia, daughter of John Newton, and had issue several children. His eldest son, Francis Herbert, served in the tenth parliament of Great-Britain, and was included in the limitation of the patent of creation, which his cousin, the earl of Powis obtained, as baron Herbert, of Chirbury and Ludlow. This Francis, married Mary, daughter of John Baugh, of Stouchann, in Shropshire, and had issue two sons, Henry and Folliot, both of which died without issue; and two daughters, Mary, the wife of Frederic Cornwall, and Arabella.

The eldest son,

FRANCIS HERBERT, of Dolegeiog, and Oakley-park, married Dorothy, daughter of John Oldbury, of London, merchant, and dying on the twenty-seventh of February, A. D. 1718-19, had issue seven sons and nine daughters.

The latter were,

1. Florentia, } who died young.
2. Mary, }

3. Urania, born the 18th of Feb. A. D. 1707-8, married April 2, A. D. 1725, Coulson Fellowes, of Eggesford, in Devonshire, knight of the shire for the county of Huntingdon, in the ninth, tenth, and eleventh parliaments of Great-Britain.

4. Dorothy, born January 19, A. D. 1708-9, was married May 6, A. D. 1730, to John Harris, of Pickwell, in Devonshire, esquire. She died A. D. 1759.

5. Aftrea, } died young.
6. Mary, }
7. Florentia, }
8. Arabella, }
9. Arabella, }

The sons were,

1. Henry-Arthur Herbert.

2. Richard Herbert, born December 11, A. D. 1705, who served in the ninth and tenth parliaments of Great-Britain, for the borough of Ludlow, and departed this life on the seventeenth of May, A. D. 1754, unmarried.

3. Francis Herbert, who died unmarried in 1730.

4. Edward Herbert, } died unmarried.
5. Robert Herbert, }
6. John Herbert, }
7. John Herbert, }

The eldest son,

(Earl of Powis.) HENRY-ARTHUR HERBERT, born March 10, A. D. 1702-3, while a commoner, he was elected A. D. 1724, member for Blechingly, and served in three succeeding parliaments for the borough of Ludlow, the first of which met A. D. 1727. And his majesty taking into consideration his noble descent, and the extinction of the title of lord Herbert of Chirbury, was pleased to create him lord Herbert, of Chirbury, by letters-patent, dated December 21, A. D. 1743, 17 George II. Moreover, on the death of William Herbert, marquis of Powis, who died on March 8, A. D. 1747-8, and left his lordship his whole estate, he was further advanced to the dignity of baron Powis, Powis, of Powis-castle, viscount Ludlow, and earl of Powis, by letters-patent, bearing date May 27, 21 George II. In 1735, his lordship was constituted lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum for the county of Salop. His lordship, in 1745, being one of the thirteen peers, who were commissioned to raise each a regiment of foot, in order to suppress the rebellion, he completed his in Shropshire, in a very short time, and when it was clothed and armed, it was sent to Bristol, and other parts. And his lordship being lord-lieutenant of that county, by his interest there, the nobility, gentry, clergy, and freeholders, associated themselves in defence of his majesty's person and government.

His majesty was further pleased, in October 16, A. D. 1749, to grant unto him the dignity of a baron of the kingdom of Great-Britain, by the name, stile, and title of lord Herbert, baron Herbert, of Chirbury, and of Ludlow: to hold the same to him, and the heirs male of his body; and in default of such issue, to Richard Herbert, esquire, (brother to the said earl of Powis) and the heirs male of his body; and in default of such issue, to Francis Herbert, of Ludlow, in the county of Salop, esquire, and the heirs male of his body.

He was, by his present majesty, on May 22, A. D. 1761, constituted comptroller of the household. His lordship was soon after sworn of the privy-council; and in October, that year, resigning the place of comptroller of his majesty household, was invested with the office of treasurer of the household, which he gave up in July, A. D. 1765.

On June 23, A. D. 1761, his lordship was appointed lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the counties of Salop and Montgomery. He is also recorder of Shrewsbury, and ranks as lieutenant-general since February 10, A. D. 1759.

His lordship married, on March 30, A. D. 1751, Barbara, sole daughter and heir of the right honourable lord Edward Herbert, only brother of William, the last marquis of Powis, and of his wife, Henrietta, only daughter of James, earl of Waldegrave; and by her has issue one son, George-Edward-Arthur Herbert, viscount Ludlow, born July 7, A. D. 1755;

And four daughters,

1. Georgina Amelia, born January 10, A. D. 1752.

2. Augusta, born September 18, A. D. 1753.

3. Barbara - Henrietta, born October 6, A. D. 1757.

4. Henrietta Antonia, born September 3, A. D. 1758.

died young.

(TITLES.) Henry - Arthur Herbert, earl of Powis, viscount Ludlow, lord Herbert, of Chirbury, baron Powis, of Powis-castle, and baron Herbert, of Chirbury, and of Ludlow.

(CREATIONS.) Lord Herbert, of Chirbury, December 21, A. D. 1743, 17 George II. baron Powis, of Powis-castle, viscount Ludlow, and earl of Powis, May 27, 21 George II. Baron Herbert, of Chirbury and Ludlow, October 7, A. D. 1749, 23 George II.

(ARMS.) Party per pale, sapphire and ruby, three lions rampant, pearl, armed and langued, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a wyvern, with wings expanded, emerald, holding in his mouth a sinister hand, couped at the wrist, ruby.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a lion, pearl, semée of roses, armed and langued, ruby; and on the sinister side, a lion, sapphire, semée of fleurs-de-lis, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Fortitudine et Prudentia."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Powis-castle, and Ly-more, both in Montgomeryshire, and at Oakley-park, in Shropshire.

HUGHPERRY

THE MOST HIGH AND PUISSANT PRINCE HUGH PERCY (Smithson)

DUKE AND EARL OF NORTHUMBERLAND,

EARL PERCY,

BARON WARKWORTH,

AND

BARONET.

THE surname of this ancient and honourable family was, like many others, taken from the place where their possessions originally were, viz. Smithton, or Smytheson, in that part of Yorkshire called Richmondshire. In the fifteenth of Edward I. John de Smythton held lands in Smythton, and in the seventh of Edward III. Robert de Smythton, and Thomas de Smythton, are mentioned in an inquisition concerning the liberties of North Allerton in Richmondshire. In the reign of Richard II. William Smythton was possessed of several lands adjoining to Smythton, all which estates he settled upon his son and heir William Smytheson, of Newsham, in the parish of Kirby on the Mount, in the North Riding of the county of York, where the family resided till the reign of queen Elizabeth, when,

ANTHONY SMITHSON, of Newsham aforesaid, a lineal descendant of the above-named William, married Eleanor, the heir of Anthony Catheric, of Stanwick, esquire, which seat has ever since been in the family. He had a son,

Sir HUGH SMITHSON, (First Baronet) who eminently distinguished himself for his zeal and loyalty to Charles II. in whose cause he liberally employed his fortune, seeking all occasions to promote his majesty's interest during his exile, for which he was at length no small sufferer, having his estate sequestered as a recusant, after being twice fined for refusing to act as sheriff, to avoid taking the oaths imposed in those days of usurpation. But soon after the happy restoration of the royal family, his past sufferings were rewarded with honour, he being then deemed worthy to be created a baronet, for which he was justly qualified according to the first institution of that honourable order; and, as a farther token of the king's favour, in order to distinguish him from the rest of his family, on account of his personal merit, he was honoured with a different coat of arms, which his descendants (not willing to lay aside the antiquity of their descent, nor to have the merit of their ancestor forgot) have since born in chief quartered with the ancient arms of the family.

He married Dorothy, daughter of Jerom Royston of Plaistow, esquire, by whom he had issue four sons and two daughters.

1. Sir Jerom Smithson his successor.

2. Hugh Smithson, who married Alice Yeane, by whom he had a daughter, Ann, married to Sir Henry Johnson, of Bradenham, Bucks; whose daughter, Ann, became the wife of Thomas, earl of Strafford.

3. Anthony Smithson married Susannah, daughter of Sir Edward Barkham, of South-acre, in the county of Norfolk, baronet, by whom he had one son, Hugh Smithson, of Armin, in Yorkshire, and Tottenham in Middlesex, knight of the shire for the said county in several parliaments. This Hugh Smithson married first Hester, daughter of Michael Godfrey, of Woodford, in Essex, esquire, by whom he had several children; but they all died unmarried. He married, secondly, Constantia Hare, only daughter of Henry, lord Coleraine, of Ireland, by whom he had no issue, dying September 4, A. D. 1740, aged seventy-nine. His estate devolved upon his grace the duke of Northumberland.

4. N. N. died before his father.

The eldest son,

Sir JEROM SMITHSON, (Second Baronet) succeeded his father, and having married Mary, daughter and heir of ——— Wingate, of the county of York, esquire, had issue a daughter, Dorothy, married to Thomas Pullein, of Carleton, in the same county, and a son and successor,

Sir HUGH SMITHSON, (Third Baronet) who married Elizabeth, daughter to Matmaduke, second lord Langdale, and by her had several children, four daughters, who all embraced religious lives, and two sons,

1. Hugh Smithson, died unmarried before his father.

2. Lang-

2. Langdale Smithson, who married Philadelphia, daughter of William Revely, of Newby, within the county of York, and dying in his father's life-time, left issue one daughter, Dorothy, who died unmarried; and a son, Hugh Smithson, who became successor to his grandfather, of whom we must now treat, as

HUGH, Duke of NORTHUMBERLAND.

While he was a commoner, he served in the eighth, ninth, and tenth parliaments of Great Britain, for the county of Middlesex. On the sixteenth of July, A. D. 1740, he married Elizabeth, only daughter to Algernon, then earl of Hertford, and afterwards duke of Somerset, by which alliance he laid the foundation of future honours, which great as they are, derive an additional lustre from the superior qualifications of the noble bearer. The reader will find the Percy family paid due honour to, in the account of her grace the dutchess of Northumberland, as baroness Percy, &c. we shall therefore in this place confine ourselves to his grace.

On the death of Algernon, duke of Somerset, created earl of Northumberland, &c. with limitation to his son-in-law, and his daughter Elizabeth, he succeeded to the earldom of Northumberland, and barony of Warkworth; and took his place in the house of peers March 2, A. D. 1749-50. Also, pursuant to an act of parliament passed that session, assumed the name and arms of the illustrious and noble family of the Percys. By which act, to enable his lordship, and Elizabeth, countess of Northumberland, and baroness Percy, his wife, and their children, progeny, and issue, to take and use the name of Percy; and bear and quarter the arms of the Percys, earl of Northumberland, it is recited, "that on the marriage of the most noble Charles, duke of Somerset, with the most noble Elizabeth, dutchess of Somerset, who was the sole daughter and heir of the right honourable Joscelyne Percy, earl of Northumberland, and baron Percy, (and which said marriage was had and solemnized in the minority of both the said duke and dutchess) it was stipulated, and agreed, that for the preservation of the noble family, and name of the Percys, he, the said duke, and all, and every the issue of his body, on her the said dutchess, should, for ever, take upon him, and them, and be called, and named, only by the name and surname of Percy. But, that the said dutchess, under her hand and seal, January 30, A. D. 1687, having then attained her age of twenty-one years, did consent and agree, to wave and dispense with the said agreement, so entered into upon her marriage, for the said duke, and the issue of that marriage, to take the name and surname of Percy as aforesaid.

"And as Algernon, late duke of Somerset, did, in his life-time, express his desire, that the name of Percy should be used by, and be the surname, and family name of the earls of Northumberland, for the time being; in regard the said honour and dignity had been held and enjoyed by persons of that name, for many generations; Sir Hugh Smithson, now earl of Northumberland, and lady Elizabeth his wife, countess of Northumberland, and baroness Percy; as well out of their great regard to, and in compliance with the desire of the said late duke; as for preserving the noble and ancient family, and name of Percy, are willing and desirous, that the said name of Percy, and the coats of arms borne and quartered by the Percys, earls of Northumberland, should be established and confirmed, in, unto, and upon them, and their progeny and issue, by authority of parliament. Wherefore it was enacted, &c."

His lordship, who as before-mentioned, succeeded as earl of Northumberland, was on December 29, A. D. 1751, sworn one of the lords of the bed-chamber to his late majesty; and on March 20, A. D. 1753, constituted lord lieutenant, custos rotulorum, and vice-admiral, of the county of Northumberland, and lord lieutenant of the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne.

On March 29, A. D. 1757, his lordship was installed a knight of the most noble order of the Garter, at Windsor.

When the present king ascended the throne, on October 25, A. D. 1760, his lordship was appointed one of the lords of his bed-chamber, and continued in the offices of lord lieutenant, &c. of the county of Northumberland, and of the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne; and soon after admitted a member of his most honourable privy-council.

On December 29, A. D. 1762, his lordship took the oaths as lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Middlesex, and of the city and liberty of Westminster, being so nominated in the room of Thomas, duke of Newcastle; and among his other acts of munificence, has given a large and commodious house in King-Street, Westminster, as a Guildhall for that city and liberty, that which had formerly been used as such, adjoining to Westminster-hall, being too small, and otherwise inconvenient.

This noble peer was, on April 20, A. D. 1763, declared lieutenant-general and governor-general of Ireland. His lordship's manner of living in private life has always been uncommonly magnificent and elegant, like that for which the noble house of Percy was ever eminent and distinguished; and during his excellency's government of that kingdom, he supported his high rank with great dignity and splendor. His acts of bounty and benevolence were numerous and unlimited; and his administration was calculated to promote the happiness and interest of the people. Nothing but the manufactures of that country were seen at the levees of his excellency and his illustrious consort. Industry was encouraged; and the infamous and pernicious spirit of gaming suppressed.

On October 18, A. D. 1766, his majesty was pleased to grant unto the right honourable Hugh, earl of Northumberland, and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten on the body of Elizabeth, countess of Northumberland, his present wife, the dignities of an earl and duke of the kingdom of Great Britain, by the names, styles, and titles of earl Percy, and duke of Northumberland.

His grace, besides being a privy counsellor, and lord lieutenant, &c. of the counties of Northumberland and Middlesex, of the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne, and of the city and liberty of Westminster, is also vice-admiral of all America, fellow of the Royal Society, one of the trustees of the British Museum, one of the vice-presidents of the Society for the Encouragement of Arts,

PERCY, DUKE of NORTHUMBERLAND.

181

Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, president of the Middlesex hospital for sick and lame, and lying-in married women, in Mary le Bone Fields, and one of the vice-presidents of the Small-pox hospital in Cold Bath Fields, &c.

By his said dutchess (who inherits the ancient magnificence and hospitality of her renowned ancestors, and is one of the ladies of the bed-chamber to the queen, being so appointed at the first establishment of her majesty's household in 1761) his lordship is father of two sons,

1. Hugh Percy, commonly called earl Percy.
2. Algernon Percy, who was born at his lordship's house in Grosvenor-Street, on January 21, A. D. 1749-50.

Also a daughter,

Elizabeth-Anne-Frances, who in April 6, A. D. 1744, was likewise born in Grosvenor-Street, and departed this life, on May 28, A. D. 1761, at Northumberland house.

Hugh Percy, (stiled earl Percy) the eldest son aforesaid, was born at his father's house in Grosvenor-Street, on August 14, A. D. 1742; on October 26, A. D. 1764, he was constituted aid de camp to the king. On March 15, A. D. 1763, his lordship was unanimously elected member of parliament for the city of Westminster, in the room of William, viscount Pulteney, deceased, the only son and heir apparent of William Pulteney, late earl of Bath: and on July 2, A. D. 1764, wedded Anne, second daughter of John Stuart, earl of Bute.

(TITLES.) Hugh Percy, duke and earl of Northumberland, earl Percy, baron Warkworth, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, August 2, A. D. 1660, 12 Car. II. baron Warkworth, of Warkworth-Castle, in the county of Northumberland, and earl of Northumberland, October 2, A. D. 1749, 23 Geo. II. earl Percy, and duke of Northumberland, October 18, A. D. 1766 (6 Geo. III.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly: the first and fourth quarterly, 1. Topaz, a lion rampant, sapphire, being the armorial bearing of the ancient dukes of Brabant, and 2. Ruby, three lucies, or pykes, for Lucy: the second and third, sapphire, five fusils in fess, topaz, for Percy.

(CREST.) On a chapeau, ruby, turned up ermine, a lion passant, sapphire, his tail extended.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a lion, sapphire: on the sinister, an unicorn, pearl, collared gobonè, topaz, and sapphire, with a chain appendant and reflecting over his back, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Esperance en Dieu."

(CHIEF SEATS.) Sion-house, in the county of Middlesex; Alnwick-castle, Warkworth castle, and Prudhoe-castle, in the county of Northumberland; Stanwick, and Ayrmin, in Yorkshire.

WYNDHAM, Earl of EGREMONT.

THIS nobleman derives his descent from Ailwardus, an eminent Saxon, in the county of Norfolk, who, soon after the Norman conquest, being possessed of lands in Wyndham, (now wrote Wyndham) in that county, assumed his surname from thence.

RICHARD DE WYMONDHAM, son of Ailward, was father of,

RICHARD DE WYMONDHAM, who had issue

JOHN DE WYMONDHAM, a benefactor to the priory of Windham; who, by Margaret, daughter to Robert de Churchon, had issue another,

JOHN DE WYMONDHAM, of Wichlewood, and Crountheorpe, in the county of Norfolk; which were their principal seats for many generations, and are yet a part of the possessions of a branch of the family. His brother,

THOMAS DE WYMONDHAM, chanter of Litchfield, was a baron of the exchequer, A. D. 1260, and on the fourth of April, A. D. 1267, was constituted treasurer of England; also the year after, bearing the title of chanter of the church of Litchfield, had his patent renewed. In 52 Hen. III. he had a grant of fifty marks per annum, for the better maintaining himself in the office of treasurer, wherein he continued till A. D. 1279.

The son of the elder brother,

RALPH DE WYMONDHAM, was father of WILLIAM DE WYMONDHAM, who possessed the manors of Crountheorpe, and Wichlewood, A. D. 1317, wherein he was succeeded by his son,

JOHN DE WYMONDHAM, who, by Catherine his wife, daughter of John de Redisham, had issue three sons,

1. Thomas de Wyndham.

2. Sir Richard de Wyndham, knight, who, in 30 Edw. III. had the king's protection, going into his service in Brittany, under his son Edward, prince of Wales; and in that year was at the famous battle of Poitiers, wherein the French king was taken prisoner.

3. Henry de Wymondham, prior of Wyndham.

THOMAS DE WYMONDHAM, in the pedigree of the family, is made elder brother to Sir Richard. He married Margaret, daughter of Walter Walcot, and had issue,

JOHN DE WYMONDHAM, who had to wife Elizabeth, daughter of John Sharington, by whom he was father of,

JOHN DE WYMONDHAM, who wedded Margaret, daughter of Robert Segrave, and had issue John, his son and heir, which,

JOHN DE WYMONDHAM, was of Croun Thorpe, and of Felbrigge, in the county of Norfolk; which last estate he purchased of the trustees of Sir John Felbrigge, knight of the Garter. He was an eminent friend to the house of Lancaster; and in 38 Hen. VI. was joined in commission with Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk, and others, to withstand the attempts of the earl of Warwick. Also, in the same year, was one of the knights for the county of Norfolk, in the parliament held at Coventry, wherein the earl of Warwick, and other accomplices of the duke of York, were attainted of high-treason. He had to wife, Margaret, daughter of Sir Robert Clifton, of Bokengham castle, in the county of Norfolk, and widow of Sir John Hastings. By this lady, who died A. D. 1456, he had issue two sons,

1. Sir John Wyndham.

2. Sir Roger Wyndham, who died without issue. And two daughters,

1. Ela, married to Thomas Falstaffe.

2. Isabel, married to Simon Wiseman, esquire.

Sir JOHN WYNDHAM, the eldest son, in 2 Hen. VII. was in the battle of Stoke, near Newark, against the earl of Lincoln, Lambert Simnel, and their adherents, where he received the honour of knighthood, immediately after the victory, for his valiant behaviour: but being afterwards engaged in the interests of the house of York, he was apprehended; and on the second of May, in 17 Hen. VII. arraigned in Guildhall, London, where being found guilty of high-treason, as an accomplice of Edmund de la Pole, duke of Suffolk, he, with Sir James Tyrrell, lieutenant of Guisnes-castle, were beheaded on Tower-hill, May 6, following; and their bodies and heads were buried in the Augustine Friars church of London, as Stow writes.

He had two wives; first, Margaret, daughter to John Howard, duke of Norfolk, by whom he had issue,

1. Sir Thomas Wyndham, his son and heir.

2. Edward Wyndham.

3. George Wyndham, archdeacon of Norwich, and master of the college of Rushworth, in Norwich; who, together with his brethren, the friars of that college, in 26 Hen. VIII. swore fealty to the king, queen Anne, and the issue begotten on her body; also that they will make known, preach, and persuade the people to do the same, whenever place and opportunity shall serve.

Likewise four daughters,

1. Anne, wife of Thomas Radcliffe, esquire.

2. Elizabeth, wife first of Sir Francis Calthorpe, of Ingham, in the county of Norfolk, and afterwards of Sir John Culpeper, knight.

3. Dorothy, and

4. Frances.

The second wife of Sir John Wyndham was Eleanor, daughter of Norman Washbourn, esq. and widow of Richard Scrope; by whom he had only a son Francis, who died young. Which lady died in 21 Hen. VII. as appears by the probate of her will, bearing date December 11, 21 Hen. VII. A. D. 1505. She therein writes herself, Eleanore Wyndham, widowe, late wife of Sir John Wyndham, knight; and orders her body to be buried in the choir of the Austin Friars, in Norwich, beside the high-altar there.

Sir THOMAS WYNDHAM, of Felbrigge, eldest son, was one of the commanders of that fleet which, sailing from Dover, and scouring the seas, came into Portsmouth about the middle of May, in 4 Hen. VIII. also attended Sir Edward Howard, lord admiral, in the expedition to Biscay the same year, and was by him knighted in Croyton-Bay, in France. He was also with that admiral, when he was drowned in the attempt on Brest: and being one of the knights of the king's body, attended his majesty at the sieges of Therouene and Tournay, where he did good service; as also in other places; and was of his privy council.

In 12 Hen. VIII. he attended the king, at his conferences with the French king, between Guyennes and Ardres, having in his retinue, a chaplain, eleven servants, and eight horses.

He died A. D. 1522, and was buried in the midst of the chapel (Weever says in the Chapter-house) joining to the cathedral church of Norwich, where a fair monument was erected to his memory, which was much defaced A. D. 1630, and part of the inscription only remained, as follows.

Orate pro Animabus Thome Windham Militis, Eleanore & Domine Elizabeth uxorum ejus. Qui quidem Thomas fuit unus consiliariorum Domini Regis Henrici octavi, ac unus militum pro corpore ejusdem Domini Regis, nec non vice admirallus.

Also in the said chapter-house was this inscription, thus maimed in 1630.

Orat. . . Tho. Wyndham militis & Elizabeth uxoris ejus. unus constabul. Domini Regis Hen. 8. ac un. . . . militum pro corpore.

This Sir Thomas had two wives, first Eleanor, daughter and coheir of Sir Henry Scrope, of Upsale, in Yorkshire, knight, by whom he had issue,

1. Sir Edmund Wyndham, of Felbrigge.

2. Sir John Wyndham, of Somersetshire, ancestor to Charles, now earl of Egremont.

And three daughters,

1. Margaret, wife of Sir Andrew Lutterell, of Dunstar-castle, in the county of Somerset, knight.

2. Mary, married to Sir Erasmus Paston, of Paston, in the county of Norfolk, knight, ancestor to the earls of Yarmouth.

3. Elizabeth, of whom there is no further mention.

The second wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry Wentworth, of Letheringset, in Norfolk, knight, by whom he had Sir Thomas Wyndham, knight, who, by his father's will, had the manor, &c. of Whighton in Yorkshire, the moiety of the manor of Bowking called Dorwarde, and the moiety of the manor of Alesforde. He was a very eminent sea-commander, and progenitor to the Wyndhams of Stokesby, Clere, and Craik, in the counties of York, and Durham.

Sir EDMUND WYNDHAM, eldest son, was knighted in 28 Hen. VIII. at the creation of Edward

Sey-

Seymour, lord viscount Beauchamp; and was the year following sheriff of Norfolk; also in 2 Edward VI. much and deservedly trusted, on the insurrection of Ket, the tanner, in that county. He was in great favour with king Henry VIII. and had from him several beneficial grants of lands, belonging to the dissolved abbies in Norfolk, and elsewhere. He married Susan, daughter of Sir Roger Townshend, of Raynham, in Norfolk, knight, by whom he was father of three daughters, married into the families of Hevingham, Pope, and Conningsby; also of three sons; 1. Roger, who died without issue; 2. Sir Francis Wyndham, who in 15 Elizabeth, was, with others, commissioned in the county of Norfolk, to enquire into all offences committed, contrary to an act of parliament in 1 Elizabeth, For uniformity of common prayer, and service of the church, and administration of the sacraments. The year after he was one of the governors of Lincoln's-inn. In A. D. 1577, 19 Elizabeth, he was called to the degree of a serjeant at law; and in Michaelmas term, 21 Elizabeth, made one of the judges of the court of Common Pleas. He was buried in the church of St. Peter's in Norwich, and a stately monument was there erected to his memory, with his effigies from his middle, in his judge's robes, with a black cap on his head, his right hand leaning on a death's head, and in his left hand a book: with an arch over his head, supported by pillars, on the top of which are his arms and crest; but no inscription was thereon in Weever's time. Thomas, third son of Sir Edmund, died unmarried, and a monument is erected to his memory, in the church of Felbrigg, in Norfolk, with this inscription.

Here lieth the body of Tho. Windham, Esq; (third sone of Sir Edmond Windham, Knt. deceased) who lived a single life, and died the 20th day of December, in the yeare of our Lord 1599, and of his age the ——— to whose worthy memorie Sir John Windham, of Orchard, in the county of Somerset, Knt. being his cosin and heire, hath set this marble.

Livest thou Thomas, yeas, where, with God on highe,
Art thou not dead, yeas, and here I lye.

I that with men on earth did live to die,
Died for to live with Christ eternallie.

But the three sons leaving no issue, the manors of Crownthorpe, and Felbrigg, with the rest of the ancient patrimony of the family, by the entail of Sir Thomas Wyndham, descended to the issue of his second son Sir John Wyndham, of whom we are principally to treat,

Sir JOHN WYNDHAM, by the will of his father, Sir Thomas, was possessed of the manors of Wulterton, and Melton Constable, in the county of Norfolk; and by marriage with Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of John Sydenham of Orchard, in the county of Somerset, had that estate in right of his wife, and made it his principal residence, which now retains the name of Orchard Wyndham. He was knighted at the coronation of king Edward VI. and living at Orchard, to a great age, died in the 16th of Elizabeth, as the probate of his last will shews.

He, with his lady, lie buried in St. Decuman's church, under a tomb, built of freestone, four feet high, three broad, and seven in length, on the top whereof are their effigies, engraved at full length, on two plates of brasse, and inlaid, over their respective epitaphs: which tomb stands under a triumphal arch, supported by four pillars, after the Gothick manner, neatly carved, and adorned with the arms of the family, and other devices. On two plates of brasse, are the following epitaphs:

Althoughe a man be never so possesse
Withe all the gyftes that fortune can bestowe,
And thoughe his mynde be bewtified and bleste,
With everye grace that from the Heavens do flowe,
Yet at the laste, this fickle life we owe,
Perforce must fele the stroke of fatal knyfe,
Suche is the fraytie of our present lyfe.
A perfeight patterne to approve the same,
Lo here the corps of Syr John Wyndham, Knight
Whose faultles lyfe hath purchast such a fame,
As deathe with all his darts shall never frighte;
The sonne it selfe shall soner lose his lighte,
Then he shall want his well deserved praise,
Suche were the deedes of his forepassed daies.
This worthie Knight of knightlie parentage,
In Norfolk borne, the middle sonne of thre,
Who when he was but yet of fornige age,
Put forth such buddes of prooffe what he wolde be,
As being stirred with zeale to heare and see,
The worlde, whereby him selfe mighte advaunce,
He paste the seas to serve the King of Fraunce.
Where entertaynde in place of good accompte,
Here to the Prince in favour lyved still,
Till care of countrey soil (which doth surmounte)
Did drawe him home, where bending witte and will,
To feates of armes and other warlike skill,
His liege in lieu of loyal service done,
Advaunste him to the seate of knightlie rome.
Thus happelie led this worthie Knighte his life,
And died in faith by Christ of future joye,
How good and vertuous Ladye to his wyfe
He had, what seed hir epitaphe dothe show.
To us behinde thereby this fruyte dothe growe,
First in his deathe Godes power and praise is known,
Then by his life we learn to mende our owne.

An epitaphe uppon the deathe of the Ladye Elizabeth Wyndham.

That goodly grafte which earste in Orchard grew,
Drawn by discente from worthie Sydnams race,
Loe here yt lyes by aime of outward vewe,
Wrapte in the webbe of thrice unhappy case,
But yet indeede (through undeserved grace)
Is planted nowe in such a pleasant soyle,
As springs for aye, and yet requires no toyle.
What cause hir deathe dothe offer to lamente,
None knowes so well as Sir John Wyndham, Knight.
Withe whome twyse two and forty yeres she spente,
In blisfull state of bothe theire hartes delyghte,
To whome hir frutefull wombe broughte unto lighte,
A race of children fittinge hir degree,
Of daughters fixe, hir sonnes were fower and three.
Those goodly gyftes that did hir minde possesse,
As zealous love to God and to his lawes,
Hir awnswringe lyfe to that she did professe,

Hir

Hir redye hande to helpe the poorest cause,
(Since fame refounds) my fillie penne shall pawse,
And praie to God that we which here abyde,
Maye treade the stepps of such a parfright guyde,
Obiit primo die Januarii, 1571.

Their children were,

1. John, of whom hereafter.
2. Edmond, ancestor to the Wyndhams of Kentsford, Cathangre, Pillesdon, Yale, and Trent*.
3. Hugh, ancestor to the Wyndhams of Wiveliscombe, in Somersetshire.
4. Charles Wyndham, ancestor to the Wyndhams of Sandhill, in Somersetshire.

He had also four daughters,

1. Margaret, wife of John Fraunceis, of Combflory, in the county of Somerset, esquire.
2. Eleanor, wife of Thomas Carne, of Wenny, in the county of Glamorgan, esquire.
3. Catharine, wife of Christopher Wood, of Taunton, in the county of Devonshire, esquire, and,
4. Elizabeth, wife of — Welch, esquire.

JOHN WYNDHAM, the eldest son, died in his father's life-time. He married Florence, daughter of John, and sister and coheir to Nicholas Wadham, of Merifield, in the county of Somersetshire, esquire, (founder of Wadham college, in Oxford) by whom he had an only son. He lies buried in the church of St. Decuman's, with his and his lady's effigies, engraved in brass, of about four feet in length, and underneath, the following inscription, on two plates of brass.

Here lieth the bodies of John Windham, Esq; son and heire of Sir John Windham, of Orchard, in the countye of Somerset, Knight, deceased, who died (his father then living) the 25 day of August, in the yeare of our Lorde, 1572, and of his age about 56, and of Florence his wife, one of the daughters of John Wadham, of Merefield, in the countie of Somerset, Esq; and coheire of Nicholas Wadham, of Merefield aforesaid, sonne of the said John, and brother of her the said Florence, who died the 26th day of Februarie, in the year of our Lorde 1596, and of her age 58. They had issue only Sir John Windham, of Orchard aforesaid, who of his dutifull affection to the memorie of his dere parents, hath here placed this monument.

MARITVS. WHEN CHANGELESS FATE TO DEATH DID CHANGE MY LIFE,

I PRAY'D IT BE TO GENTLE TO MY WIFE.

Vxor. BUT SHE WHO HEART AND HAND TO THEE DID WEDD,

DESIRED NOTHING MORE THAN THIS THIE BEDD.

FATVM. I BROUGHT YOURE SOVLES THAT LINCKT WERE EACH IN EITHER,

TO REST ABOVE YOURE BODIES WERE TOGETHER.

Sir JOHN WYNDHAM, of Orchard, who erected this monument, was also of Felbrigge, in Norfolk, on the death of the last male heir of Sir Edmond Wyndham, in 41 Elizabeth; and, in 1st of James I. was sheriff of Somersetshire. He was buried at St. Decuman's, where the following inscription is engraved, on one entire piece of black polished marble, about ten feet high and five broad. Between the motto and inscription are the busto of him and his lady, cast in brass and gilt, and let into the marble, as follows, which sets forth his marriage, &c.

VENI DOŖE IHESV VENI CITO.

MEMORIE JOANNIS WINDHAMEQVESTRI ORDINE INSIGNIS
ANTIQA ET ILLVSTRI GENTE WINDHAMIORVH DE FEL-BRIGG

* Which Edmond Wyndham, of Kentsford, in the county of Somerset, married Mary, daughter and coheir of Richard Chamberlaine, esquire, alderman of London, and had several children; Sir Hugh Wyndham, his fourth son, was created a baronet, August 4, A. D. 1641; but by Mary, daughter of Christopher Alanfon, of London, esquire, leaving only daughters and coheirs, his title became extinct. Sir Thomas Wyndham, elder brother to Sir Hugh, was of Kentsford, and married Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Coningsby, of Hampton-court, in the county of Hereford, esquire, by whom he had several children. Most of his sons engaged in the service of king Charles I. Colonel Francis Wyndham, his fourth son, is memorable for conducting king Charles II. to his seat at Trent, after the battle of Worcester, where he entertained the king with the following remarkable passage of his father, Sir Thomas Wyndham. "That, not long before his death, in the year 1636, he called unto him his five sons (having not seen them together in some years before) and discoursed unto us (said he) of the loving peace and prosperity this kingdom had enjoyed, under its three last glorious monarchs; of the many miseries and calamities which lay fore upon our ancestors, by the several invasions and conquests of foreign nations, and likewise by intestine insurrections and rebellions. And notwithstanding the strange mutations and changes in England, he shewed how it pleased God, in love to our nation, to preserve an undoubted succession of kings, to sit on the regal throne. He mentioned the healing conjunction of the two houses of York and Lancaster, and the blessed union of the two crowns of England and Scotland; stopping up those fountains of blood, which, by national feuds and quarrels kept open, had like to have drowned the whole island. He said, he feared the beautiful garment of peace would shortly be torn in pieces, through the neglect of magistrates, the general corruption of manners, and the prevalence of a puritanical faction, which (if not prevented) would undermine the very pillars of government. My sons! we have hitherto seen serene and quiet times; but now prepare yourselves for cloudy and troublesome. I command you to honour and obey our gracious sovereign, and in all times to adhere to the crown; and though the crown should hang upon a bush, I charge you forfake it not. These words being spoken with much earnestness, both in gesture and manner extraordinary, he rose from his chair, and left us in deep consultation what the meaning should be of—The crown hanging upon a bush. These words, Sir, (said the colonel) made so firm an impression in all our breasts, that the many afflictions of the sad times cannot raze out their indelible characters. Certainly, these are the days which my father pointed out in that expression; and I doubt not, God hath brought me through so many dangers, that I might shew myself both a dutiful son, and a loyal subject, in faithfully endeavouring to serve your sacred majesty, in this your greatest distress."

This colonel Windham was, in the civil war, governor of Dunstar castle, and for his services therein, and particularly for affording the king so generous an asylum at his house, was advanced to the dignity of a baronet. He married Anne, daughter and coheir of Thomas Gerard, of Trent, esquire, by whom he had that estate; but this title became extinct, on the death of Sir Francis Wyndham, of Trent, baronet, in his minority, in April, A. D. 1719, and his sister and heir was married to Henry Bromley, of Horseheath, in the county of Cambridge, esquire, knight of the shire for that county, ancestor to the now lord Mountfort.

QVO GAVISVS EST IVRE HEREDITARIO
IN AGRO NORFOLCIENCI ORIVNDI
ET CHARISSIMÆ VXORIS JOANNÆ FILIÆ HEN. PORTMAN
DE ORCHARD IVXTA TAVNTON EQVITIS AVRATI
CASTISSIMO CONIVGIO LIBEROS SVSCIPERVNT
MASCULOS NOVEM SEX FILIAS
QVINQVAGINTA DVOS ANNOS CONTINVO IN HAC PAROCHIA
STI DECUMANI IN ÆDIBVS SVIS DE ORCHARD FAMILIAM ALVERVNT
PATRIÆ IVDICIO ET POPVLI TESTIMONIO
PIETATē ET PROBITATē SVMME CONSPICVI
HORVM CINERES HIC CLAVSI ÆTERNVM DIEM
ET SVAS ANIMAS ET SVVM PRÆSTOLANTVR REDEMPTOREM
ILLE 1 APR. ILLA 13 SEP.
1645 OBIERE. 1633
ÆTATIS SVÆ ÆTATIS SVÆ
87 68

They had nine sons and six daughters,

1. John, his eldest son, succeeded him in the Somersetshire estate.
2. Henry, died unmarried.
3. Thomas Wyndham, of Felbrigge, and Croun-thorpe, from whom the Wyndhams of that place are descended; whereof Ash Wyndham, esquire, represented the county of Norfolk in parliament, in the reign of queen Anne, and died aged 78, on the fifth of April, A. D. 1749, and was succeeded in his estate, by his only son, William Wyndham, esquire.
4. Humphry Wyndham, ancestor to the Wyndhams, of Dunraven-castle, in the county of Glamorgan, and Clower Wall, in the county of Gloucester.
5. George, who died unmarried.
6. Sir Hugh Wyndham, of Stilton, knight, who was called to the degree of serjeant at law, the first of June, A. D. 1660; and June 20, A. D. 1670, constituted one of the barons of the exchequer.
7. Sir Wadham Wyndham called to the degree of serjeant at law, June 4, A. D. 1660, and appointed one of the judges of the King's Bench the 24th of November following, ancestor to the Wyndhams of Nonington, Dinton, Salisbury, and Spargrove; and to Thomas Wyndham, late lord-chancellor of Ireland.
8. Sir George Wyndham, from whom the Wyndhams, of Cromer, in the county of Norfolk, are descended; and
9. Francis Wyndham, who died unmarried.

Two of the sons, Henry and George, lye buried together in St. Decuman's church, under an handsome monument, of alabaster, whereon are the effigies of the two brothers in armour, both on their knees; one of them a cloak on, and a book before him. Under it is the following inscription:

HOC SAXVM EFFIGIES REFERT DVORVM FRATRVM, HEN-RICI WINDHAM
ET GEORGI SENIORIS: QVOS INTER NUMEROSAM PROLEM, SVSCEPIT
JOHANNES WINDHAM MILES, E' CONIVGE JOANNA FILIA HENRICI
PORTMAN MILITIS, APVD OXON. GRADVS ACADEMICOS
OBTINERVNT
VNDE TRANSLATI, ILLE IBI STVDIJS CIVILIBVS, NEC NON THEOLOGICIS
GNAVITER NIMIS INSVDASSET, APVD ORCHARD DECU-BVIT. HIC VERO

MILITÆ AMORE INCITATVS, PRIMO INSTRUCTA CLASSE REGIA,
VLTRA COLUMNAS HERCULIS CONTENDIT, INDE REVERSVS, BELGIAM PETIIT, IBIQ. PRÆFECTVRA BREVI POTITVS, INTER
MILITES, FERVENTI MORBO CORREPTVS HVISDONI COR-RVIT
VBI NECESSITATI PAUPERVM HVIVS PAROCHIAE SVPE-DITARE
ET HOC IN SVI FRATRISQ. MEMORIAM EXTRUERE
PROPRIIS SUMPTIBVS, CVRAVIT.

HENRICVS PRIMOGENITVS 9 Nov. 1613. ANNO ÆTATIS 30.

O B I I T

GEORGIVS SEPTIMOGENITVS 3 Ivnii 1624. ANNO ÆTATIS 32.

His daughters were,

1. Joan, wife of John } in the county of Gifford, of Brightley. } Devon, esquires.
2. Margaret, wife of John } Courtenay, of Molland, }
3. Florence, wife of John Harris, of Hean.
4. Rachel, wife of Thomas Moore, of Heitefbury, in the county of Wilts.
5. Margery, wife of Thomas Carew, of Crocomb, in the county of Somerset, esquire, and
6. Anne, wife of Sir John Strode, of Parnham, in the county of Dorset, knight.

The eldest son,

JOHN WYNDHAM, married Catharine, daughter of Robert Hopton, esquire, sister and coheir to Ralph, lord Hopton. He died in 1649, and was father of,

1. Sir William Wyndham, baronet, who succeeded him.
2. Thomas Wyndham, of Witham, and three other sons, that died unmarried.

Also of four daughters,

1. Florence, wife of Sir John Malet, knight.
2. Mary, of William Okeden.
3. Anne, of Anthony Bullen.
4. Catharine, married first, to John Specost, and afterwards to John Tanner, esquires.

Sir WILLIAM WYNDHAM, was created a baronet, A. D. 1660, and having worthily served his country in parliament, and many other stations, died at Orchard, in 1663, and was buried at St.
Decuman's, with his ancestors; where there is a noble monument erected to his memory, of black and white marble, finely decorated and embellished with figures of cherubims heads, angels, arms,
&c. with this inscription:

To the Memory

Of the most worthy of. Immortal Memory

Sir WILLIAM WYNDHAM, of Orchard Wyndham, Knt. and Bart.

Chiefe of the Antient Great and Noble Family of WYNDHAM of FELBRIG in the county of NORFOLKE, Who

Haveing Heroically trod in the steps of his ancestors in their Faithfull and Important services to the Crowne; and in particular having with blessed

Sucesse like another Curtius, Devoted himself, and his very weighty Interest to the closeing the dreadfull Breach of the late Monstrous Divisions;

Betooke himself

On the nine and twentyeth day of October, in the one and fiftyeth year of his age, to the Enjoyment of his more glorious Immortality; and in the year of our Lord 1683,

His Lady

FRANCES (daughter of ANTHONY HVNGERFORD, of Fayrly Castle, Esq;)

A a a

By

By whom he had five sonnes and six daughters, the hopeful Remainder of which number were at the time of his death two sonnes EDWARD and HUGH, and fower daughters

RACHELL, Lady Speke,
ELIZABETH wife of THOMAS ERLE, Esq;
FRANCES wife of NATHANIEL PALMER, Esq;
and IOANE unmarried,
Hath

As a Small Instance of her Great Veneration,
For the Memory of her most deare Husband Erected this.

By Frances, his said wife, daughter of Anthony Hungerford, of Farley-castle, in the county of Wilts, esquire, he had issue John and William, who died unmarried in their father's life-time; Sir Edward Wyndham, who succeeded him; and Hugh. Rachel, wife of Sir George Speke, of Haselbury, in Wilts, baronet, and afterwards of Richard Mufgrave, esquire; Elizabeth, married to Thomas Erle, of Charborough, esquire, general of the foot, and privy-counsellor to queen Anne, and Geo. I. Frances, wife of Nathaniel Palmer, of Fairfield, in the county of Somerset, esquire; and Joan, wife of William Carey, of Clovelly, in the county of Devon, esquire.

Sir EDWARD WYNDHAM, baronet, married Catharine, daughter to Sir William Levison Gower, baronet, sister to John Lord Gower; by whom he had issue, Sir William Wyndham, and one daughter, Jane, born February 24, A. D. 1689-90, married to Sir Richard Grosvenor of Eton, in Cheshire, baronet.

Sir WILLIAM WYNDHAM, baronet, only son and successor, was by her majesty queen Anne, made master of the buck-hounds, and on the 18th of June, A. D. 1711, constituted secretary of war, and sworn one of her majesty's privy-council; which place he resigned on his being made chancellor of the exchequer, August 17, A. D. 1713. He served as knight of the shire for the county of Somerset, in the three last parliaments of her reign, and in every parliament after, to his death. He was twice married, first, July 21, A. D. 1708, to Catharine Seymour, second daughter of his grace, Charles, duke of Somerset, by whom he had two sons, * and two daughters,

1. Sir Charles Wyndham, his successor, late earl of Egremont.

2. Percy Wyndham, born August 23, A. D. 1723, of Shortgrove, in Essex, esquire, inheriting the estate of his uncle, Henry, earl of Thomond, at whose decease he assumed the name and arms of O'Brien, and was created baron of Ibrican, and earl of Thomond, in Ireland, November 30, A. D. 1756. He was admitted of the privy-council, A. D. 1757, appointed treasurer of the household to his present majesty, March 13, A. D. 1761, and on the second of November following, cofferer of the household. In 1764, he was constituted lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of Somersetshire.

1. Catharine, born December 18, A. D. 1716, who died unmarried in April 1734.

2. Elizabeth, married in 1749, to George Grenville, esquire, second son of the right honourable Hester, countess Temple, and next brother to the present earl Temple.

His second lady was Maria-Catharina, daughter of M. Peter D. Jonghe, of the province of Utrecht, in Holland, and relict of William, marquis of Blandford, who died August 24, A. D. 1731, also sister to the countess of Denbigh; but had no issue by her. He died at Wells, in Somersetshire, after an illness of a few days, June 17, A. D. 1740. He was in person very amiable, and accomplished in all parts of fine breeding; well read in learning, and of a happy memory; of great honour and integrity, in every act of life; and strictly attached to what he thought the interest of his country. He was esteemed one of the best speakers in the house of commons, where his eloquence was well heard.

He was succeeded in dignity and estate by his eldest son, (*Second Earl of Egremont.) Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM, baronet, born August 19, A. D. 1710, who succeeded to the titles of earl of Egremont, and baron of Cockermouth, by the death of his grace, Algernon, duke of Somerset, without heir male, who had been created earl of Egremont, and baron of Cockermouth, in the county of Cumberland, by letters patent, bearing date October 3, twenty-third of George II. with limitation of the honours to his said nephew, Charles, late earl of Egremont, and his heirs male; and in default of such issue, to his brother, Percy Wyndham O'Brien, esquire.

His lordship, before his accession to the peerage, was elected to parliament upon a vacancy for Bridgewater, in Somersetshire, A. D. 1735. At the next general election, A. D. 1741, for Appleby, in Westmoreland, and, A. D. 1747, for Taunton, in Somersetshire. He succeeded as earl of Egremont, &c. Feb. 7, 1750, and, on the thirtieth of April, A. D. 1751, he took the necessary oaths as lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Cumberland. His lordship had the honour of being appointed ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary at the congress to be held at Augsburg, May 23, A. D. 1761. He was appointed one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, and admitted of the privy council, in October 1761. In A. D. 1763, he was appointed lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Suffolk. Soon after which he departed this life, on the twenty-first of August that year. His remains were deposited, with those of his ancestors, at St. Decuman's.

By his wife Alicia Maria, daughter of George, baron Carpenter, in Ireland, and sister to George, late earl of Tyrconnel, in Ireland, whom his lordship married, on the twenty-second of February, A. D. 1750-1, he had issue four sons and three daughter.

1. George Wyndham, his successor.

2. Percy-Charles Wyndham, born September 27, A. D. 1757.

3. Charles-William Wyndham, born October 8, A. D. 1760.

4. William-Frederic Wyndham, born April 7, A. D. 1763.

* We find another son registered William, born January 19, 1719.

† The duke of Somerset, to whom the patent for this title was granted, must be reckoned the first earl.

The daughters were,

1. Elizabeth-Alicia-Maria, born November 29, A. D. 1752.
2. Frances, born July 9, 1755.
3. Charlotte-Catherine, born September 5, 1756, who died young.

(Third, and present Earl.) GEORGE WYNDHAM, called in his father's life time, lord Cockermouth, succeeded to the earldom, &c. he was born on the seventh of December, A. D. 1751.

(TITLES.) Charles earl of Egremont, baron of Cockermouth, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet December 3, A. D. 1662, 13 Charles II. and earl of Egremont, and baron of Cockermouth, both in the county of Cumberland, October 3, A. D. 1749, 23 George II.

(ARMS.) Sapphire, a cheveron, between three lions heads erased, topaz.

(CREST.) A lion's head, erased, within a fetterlock, topaz, but whether granted by the house of York, whose cognifance was a fetterlock, or in allusion to the family of Felbrigge, who also bore it, is not known.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side a lion rampant, sapphire, winged invertedly, topaz. On the finifter side a griphon, pearl, guttè de fang.

(MOTTO.) "Au bon droit."

(CHIEF SEATS.) Orchard Wyndham, and Witham, in Somersetshire, Petworth, in Suffex, and Wrefil castle, in Yorkshire.

G R E N V I L L E - T E M P L E, E a r l T E M P L E.

THE family of Temple, from whom this lord is maternally descended, is said to be derived from Leofrick, earl of Mercia, who founded the abbey of Coventry, and dying A. D. 1087, was buried in that monastery. He married the famous lady Godiva, who is reported to have rode naked through Coventry, to obtain some immunities from her husband to that place, in memory whereof the picture of the earl and his lady were set up in Trinity church, in the reign of king Richard II. His right-hand holding a charter, with these words written thereon :

I Lurich for Love of thee,
Do make Coventry toll-free.

And they have to this day an annual procession on the Friday after Trinity Sunday, representing Godiva, so riding through the town. They had three sons, Algar, earl of Mercia, Montgomery, and Henry. They were denominated from the manor of Temple in the hundred of Sparkenho, standing in Welborough: Mr. Burton, in his description of Leicestershire, says, that the old earls of Leicester gave it to the Knights Templars, who usually called their lands after the name of Temple and that they granted it to one whose family was called Temple, and that Henry de Temple was lord of Temple, and Little Shepey, in the reign of king John. In the time of Henry III. John de Temple (son of Henry) gave lands in Shepey, to the abbey of Miraval, and Richard Temple his son is mentioned, the 24th of Edward I. but whether it be the same, or Richard his grandson (who was living the 23d of Edward III. and is commemorated in the north-east window of Shepey church) cannot be ascertained. In the said window is a picture of a man kneeling, under whom is written,

Richardus de Temple.

And in the church is a monument, with this inscription, in the characters of the age:

Hi jacet Corpus Nicolî Temple, Armigeri,
& Elizabethæ Uxoris ejus, qui quidem
Nicholaus obiit 1506.

This NICHOLAS TEMPLE was son of Richard, son of Nicholas, son of Richard last mentioned. He was succeeded by Robert his brother, father of Richard, whose son Roger was father of Richard and of Edmund, whose son, PETER TEMPLE, purchased several manors in the county of Warwick, and also the manor of Stow, in the county of Buckingham, in the reigns of king Edward VI. and queen Elizabeth. In the church of Dorset, in the county of Warwick, is this memorial on a marble, where have been two portraitures in brass.

"Here under this stone lieth the body of Peter Temple, Esquire, who departed out of this world at Stow, in the County of Buckingham, the 28th Day of May, Anno 1577, whose Soul God hath in his blessed keeping."

He married Millicent, daughter of William Jekyll, of Newington, in Middlesex, esquire, and had two sons, whereof Anthony Temple, the youngest, was father of Sir William Temple, from whom descended the famous Sir William Temple, baronet, and Henry Temple, now viscount Palmerston, in Ireland.

JOHN TEMPLE, the eldest, who was born A. D. 1542, succeeded his father. He died on the 9th of May, A. D. 1603, in the sixty-first year of his age, and lies buried in the said church of Dorset, as appears by an inscription fixed in the wall, between two Corinthian pillars; and having married Susan, daughter and heir to Thomas Spencer, of Everton, in the county of Northampton, esquire, left six sons and six daughters,

1. Millicent, married to Edward Saunders, of Bricksworth, in the county of Northampton, esq.
2. Dorothy, married to Paul Risley, of Chetwood, in the county of Buckingham, esquire.
3. Catherine, married to Sir Nicholas Parker, of Willington, in Sussex, knight.
4. Susanna, married to Sir Thomas Denton, of Hillefden, in Buckinghamshire, knight.
5. Mary, married to John Farmer, of Cookham, in Berkshire, esquire; and,
6. Elizabeth, married to William, the first viscount Say and Sele.

Of the sons, which were Thomas, George, John, Sir Alexander, William, and Peter,

Sir THOMAS TEMPLE, the eldest, succeeded, and was knighted; and in the 10th of James I. was created a baronet. He married Hester, daughter of Miles Sandys, of Latimers, in the county of Buckingham, esquire, by whom he had four sons and nine daughters, who lived to be married, and multiplied so exceedingly, that this lady, who survived him, saw seven hundred descend from her, besides a new generation of marriageable females, just at her death, which is affirmed by Dr. Fuller, in his Worthies of England; who relates, that he bought the truth of it by a wager he lost on it. The last of these was lately living, viz. the daughter of Sir Henry Gibbs, of Hunnington, in the county of Warwick, who died in December, A. D. 1737, in extreme old age. An original picture of this lady Temple is at Stow.

Their sons were,

1. Sir Peter Temple.
2. Sir John Temple, who married Dorothy, daughter and coheir of Edmund Lee, of Staunton-Barry, in the county of Buckingham.
3. Thomas Temple, doctor of laws.
4. Miles Temple, who all had issue.

The daughters were,

1. Susan, married to Sir Edward Clark, of Ardington, in Berkshire, knight.
2. Hester, married to Sir John Rous, of Rous-Linch, in the county of Worcester, knight.
3. Bridget, married to Sir John Lenthal of Cresson, in the county of Oxford, knight.
4. Martha, married to Sir Thomas Peniston, of Leigh, in Sussex, baronet.
5. Elizabeth, married to Sir Henry Gibbs, before-mentioned.
6. Catharine, married to Sir William Ashcomb, of Avellscot, in the county of Oxford, knight.

7. Anne, married to Sir William Andrews, of Lathbury, in Bucks, knight.

8. Margaret, married to Sir Edward Longueville, of Wolverton, Bucks; and had a daughter Margaret, who was the second wife of John Diby, of Gothurst, esquire, and had two daughters, Margaretta-Maria, married to Sir John Conway, baronet; and Charlotta-Theophila, to Richard Mostyn, esquire, youngest son of Sir Roger Mostyn, baronet; and Millicent, married to — Ogle, esquire.

Sir PETER TEMPLE, his heir, was knighted in his father's life-time, and from the first of Charles I. to the time of the usurpation, was a member of parliament for Buckingham, but died soon after. He married, first, Anne, daughter to Sir Arthur Throckmorton, of Paulers-Perry, in the county of Northampton, knight, by whom he had only two daughters,

1. Anne, married to Thomas Roper, viscount Baltinglass.

2. Martha, married to Weston Ridgeway, earl of Londonderry, in Ireland, whose son Robert Ridgeway, the last earl of Londonderry, of that name, left two daughters his coheirs, Lucy, married to Arthur, now earl of Donnegal, and Frances, married to Thomas, the first earl of Londonderry, of the name of Pitt. By his second wife Christian, daughter of Sir John Levison, of Haling, in Kent, knight, he had two daughters, Francis and Hester, and

Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, his heir, who likewise serving for the aforesaid town, in the parliament that restored king Charles II. was, for his faithful services, made a knight of the Bath. In 1668, he was ambassador-extraordinary to Aix-la-Chapelle; on the 19th of April, 1689, appointed one of the commissioners of the customs, and sat in all the parliaments from A. D. 1660, till A. D. 1694, the time of his death. He married Mary, daughter to — Knap, of Weston, in the county of Oxford, esquire, and had four sons, and six daughters, whereof two died young; Christian, third daughter, was married to Sir Thomas Lyttleton, of Frankley, in the county of Worcester, baronet, and was mother of the lord Lyttleton; Maria, married first, to Dr. West, prebendary of Winchester, by whom she had Temple West, esquire, vice-admiral of the blue, who, on the nineteenth of November, A. D. 1756, was made a lord of the admiralty, and sworn of his majesty's privy-council; and, secondly, to Sir John Langham, of Cottesbroke, in the county of Northampton, baronet. Hester, the second daughter, late countess Temple; and Penelope, married to Moses Berenger, of the city of London, esquire. Of the sons, which were Richard, Purbeck, Henry, and Arthur, the three latter died unmarried, and,

(First Viscount.) RICHARD TEMPLE, on his father's death, was chosen to parliament for Buckingham; and in 1705, for that county; April 12, A. D. 1703, he was made lord lieutenant of the said county. He likewise in queen Anne's reign eminently distinguished himself in the wars in Flanders, Germany, &c. and on February 12, A. D. 1701-2, was made a colonel; on June 1, A. D. 1706, a brigadier; on January 1, A. D. 1708-9, a major-general; and on January 1, A. D. 1709-10, a lieutenant-general; and by king George I. he was created baron and viscount Cobham, and to his heirs; and in default, the dignities of viscountess and baroness Cobham, to Hester Grenville, sister of the said Richard, baron of Cobham; and the dignities of viscount Cobham, and baron Cobham, to the heirs male of her body, lawfully begotten; begotten; and in default, the said dignities to dame Christian Lyttleton, third sister of the said Richard, lord Cobham, and to the heirs male of her body. He was also in that reign, made one of the privy-council, ambassador to the emperor, and colonel of his majesty's own royal regiment of horse; and on January 30, A. D. 1727-8, he was again appointed lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Bucks, and sworn of his majesty's privy-council; and was likewise governor of the island of Jersey, and keeper of Windsor-forest, and the parks and warrens there. This noble lord married Anne, daughter to Edmund Halsey, esquire, member of parliament for Southwark, but had no issue. In 1733, his lordship resigned his posts in the army; in July, A. D. 1742, he was appointed field-marshal of his majesty's forces, and captain and colonel of the first troop of horse-grenadier guards; and in June 1745, colonel of the late general Churchill's dragoons. His lordship dying September 13, A. D. 1749, was succeeded, pursuant to the limitation, by his eldest surviving sister,

(First Countess.) HESTER TEMPLE, viscountess Cobham, whom his majesty on October 18, A. D. 1749, was pleased to create countess Temple, and the dignity of earl Temple, to her heirs male. She was married to Richard Grenville, of Wotton, in Bucks, esquire, of whose family we shall now treat.

THIS FAMILY has been seated at Wotton, above 600 years, and as Prince in his Worthies of Devonshire, and the late lord Lansdown, observe, is a collateral branch of the family of Granville, in Devonshire, though their names are differently spelt. Richard de Granville, who came in with William the Conqueror, married a daughter of Walter Giffard, earl of Buckingham, and Longville, and had issue Richard, ancestor of the earl of Bath; and other sons, from one of whom descended Richard de Grenville, who was possessed of Wotton, in the reign of king John; from him descended Sir Eustace Grenville, who lived in the reign of king Edward I. and wrote himself of Chilton and Wotton, had several sons and daughters; and Richard, to whom he gave the manor of Wotton, married Joan, daughter to William, lord Zouch, of Harringworth, and had William, his heir, who married Agnes, daughter of William Wrightham, of Hadenham, and had two sons, Thomas, and William, of which the eldest died at Wotton, A. D. 1402; and by Elizabeth Morest, his wife, had three sons, Richard, his heir, and John, and William, who died without issue. Richard, the eldest son, married Christian Lancelove, and had issue, Eustace, his heir, John, and Agnes.

EUSTACE GRENVILLE, the eldest son, married first, Margery Brian, by whom he had no issue; secondly, Elizabeth, daughter, and at length sole heir to Baldwin, son and heir to John Boteler, son and heir to John Boteler, by Joan his wife, daughter and heir of John Waldegrave, by Maud his wife, one of the two daughters and coheirs of Guy de Bretton, serjeant at law, by Joan his wife, daughter and heir to Thomas Grey, son and heir of Robert, lord Grey, of Rotherfield, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter and coheir of William de la Planch, of Haversham, in the county of Bucks; and the earl Temple, being lineal heir to the said

Elizabeth Boteler, has a right to quarter the arms of all the said heiresses; they had issue three sons, Thomas, Richard, and Eustace.

RICHARD GRENVILLE, becoming heir to his father, married Joan, daughter of — Littleton, of the county of Stafford esquire, and dying October 18, A. D. 1519, left issue,

1. Edward Grenville.
2. George Grenville, who was serjeant of the buck-hounds to king Henry VIII.
3. Anne, married to John Jocelyn, of the county of Bucks, esquire.
4. Fortune, married to — Power, of Bleechenden, in the county of Oxford, esquire.

The eldest son,

EDWARD GRENVILLE, of Wotton, esquire, was sheriff of the counties of Buckingham, and Bedford, A. D. 1527, 19 Hen. VIII. and married Isabel, daughter of Thomas Denton, of Caversfield, in the county of Buckingham, esquire, by whom he had issue five sons and a daughter. His last will and testament is curious, and well-worded for the time it was written; and shews his prudence and judgment. "In the name of God, Amen, the second day of March, 1536, I Edward Greneville, of Wotton Underwood, in the county of Buckingham, esquire, being in health of body and mind; and considering the uncertainty of this world, and the great affliction that now is daily, make my last will, &c." He leaves his soul to God, the blessed Mother, and all the company of Heaven. "My body to be buried within my chapel at Wotton, if it fortune me to depart there." He bequeaths to the high altar at Wotton, 2d. for unremembered tythes, and to the parish of Wotton, 20s. He bequeaths annuities to his younger sons, Richard, George, and Ranulph, his fourth son, till they be of age: payable out of the profits arising from Burwell's Manor. And to whichever of his sons is his heir, at the time of his death, and of the age of 22 years, several implements of household stuff, &c. to be delivered by his wife, and other executors, if they think his heir have any Towardness in him; else not to deliver the premises, till he be 23 years old. He bequeaths to his wife, all his other household stuff, and also his beasts and cattle; of which he would have, after his debts are paid, one half to be kept for his younger children, in a stock for their increase, by the advice of his wife, and other executors, until they are every one xxiii years old. The residue of his goods, chattels, &c. not bequeathed, he gives to Isabel, his wife, George Greneville, his brother, and Christopher Westcote, to dispose of them for the health of his soul, and his friends, and all other things, as shall be thought convenient by their discretion; whom I ordein my true and faithful executors, with full power to mynister in wryting, in the forme of the law, thys my testament in part, or in all, so that they change not the matter in my will. In witness whereof, I the said Edward have wrytten this will and testament with my hand. And died the fourteenth of April following, leaving Edward Greneville, his son and heir, twelve years old.

His five sons were:

1. Edward Greneville, esquire, born May 8, 17 Hen. VIII. who had livery of his lands in 2 Edward VI. and married Alice, daughter of William Hazlewood, of Alford, in the county of Chester, who, after his death, was wedded to Walter Dennis, esquire. He sold the estate, called Grenville's Manor, in Hadenham, to William Wright. He lies buried in the isle appropriated for the burial place of the family in the church of Wotton, where there is a tomb erected to his memory, with this inscription.

Here under lieth the Body of Edwarde Greneveile, Esqueir, late Lord of this Towne, who married Alice, the Daughter of William Hazlewood, and had Issue by her one Son, who died yonge. Which Edwarde deceased the xxxi of October, 1585.

2. Richard Grenville, esquire, second son, was heir to his brother, and succeeded him in the estate at Wotton, &c. of whom we shall further treat.

3. George Grenville, born the 22d of April, 21st of Henry VIII. who died without issue.

4. Ranulph Grenville, born the 28th of July, 24th of Henry VIII. who also died without issue; as did William and Mary, in their infancies, in the life-time of their father.

We now return to

RICHARD GRENVILLE, of Wotton, esquire, born the 28th of October, 9th of Henry VIII. who succeeded his brother Edward in 1585. He married Mary, daughter of John Gifford, of Hill-eldon, in the county of Buckingham, esquire, by whom he had issue,

1. Edward Grenville, his eldest son, born the 4th of July, A. D. 1561, and lived to a man's estate; who was first a captain of a pinnace, called the Swallow, and after of a bark, called the Thomas, under Sir Francis Drake, and died at Carthage, unmarried.

2. Dorothy, born A. D. 1562, and married to Sir Walter Cope, of Kensington, in the county of Middlesex, knight, who had issue by her Isabella, his daughter and heir, married to Henry, earl of Holland.

3. Elizabeth, born A. D. 1563, who died unmarried.

4. Isabel, born A. D. 1565, married to ——— Dudley, of Chopwell.

5. Richard Grenville, born September 10, A. D. 1567, who had issue.

6. Anne, born November 6, A. D. 1569, died unmarried.

7. Another Edward Grenville, born January 17, A. D. 1572; who married Dorothy, daughter of Sir John Thynne, of Longlete, ancestor to the present lord viscount Weymouth, and had issue by her a daughter, Susanna.

8. John Grenville, born July 6, A. D. 1577, who died unmarried, January 25, 7th of James I.

Their father, Richard Grenville, esquire, died on the 7th of November, A. D. 1604, aged upwards of eighty years, having settled his estates by will, bearing date the 6th of December, A. D. 1603, on his three sons; to whom succeeded his eldest surviving son Richard, born A. D. 1567.

RICHARD GRENVILLE, esq. married Frances, daughter to Thomas Saunders, of Long-Merston, in the county of Hertford, esquire, remarried to Thomas Tyrrel, of Castle-Thrapp, in the county of Buckingham, esquire, who was buried at Wot-ton, January 30, A. D. 1647. By her first husband, who was buried at Wotton, April 8, A. D. 1618, she had four sons and two daughters.

1. Richard Grenville, successor to his father.

2. Francis Grenville, born at Ludgarshall, the 7th of October, and baptized there October 10, A. D. 1613; who died the 3d of February, A. D. 1636, unmarried.

3. Edward Grenville, born at Ludgarshall, 12th of September, A. D. 1614, and baptized there the 18th; who married Andrea, daughter of John Duncombe, esquire, and A. D. 1639, purchased the manor of Foxcot, in the county of Buckingham, and rebuilt the greatest part of the mansion house there. He was buried in the chancel of the church of Foxcot, with this epitaph on a brass plate on a grave-stone:

Hic jacet Edwardus Grenville, filius tertius Richardi Grenville, Armigeri, de Wotton Underwood, in hoc Comitatu Bucks; qui natus fuit 12 die Sept. 1614, denatus 17 die Aprilis, 1661.

He had two sons, Edward Grenville and George Grenville, and one daughter, Frances, married to Philip Raleigh, esquire. Edward, his eldest son, died soon after his father; and George, in June, W. D. 1693. By the death of which two sons without issue, the manor of Foxcot came by intail to Richard Grenville, of Wotton, esquire, grandson to Richard, who was eldest brother to Edward, the purchaser of this estate.

4. George Grenville, born at Ludgarshall, 31st of October, and baptized there November 12, A. D. 1617, who died young, and was buried July 10, A. D. 1631.

The two daughters were,

1. Margaret, baptized December 14, A. D. 1615.

2. Susan, baptized December 12, 1616; who both died young.

RICHARD GRENVILLE, esquire, who A. D. 1618 succeeded to the estate of his father, was born on the 8th of August, A. D. 1612. He was sheriff of Buckinghamshire, A. D. 1641; and A. D. 1642, the lord Paget being, by ordinance of the parliament, appointed lord lieutenant of Buckinghamshire, he named Hampden, Goodwyn, Grenville, Tyrrel, Winwood, and Whitlock, to be his deputy lieutenants, who were approved by the parliament. He was elected one of the knights for Buckinghamshire in three several parliaments, A. D. 1654, 1656, and 1658. He had to his first wife, February 9, 1634, Anne, daughter of Sir William Borlase, junior, of Marlow, in the county of Buckinghamshire; by whom he had issue,

1. Anne, born April 18, A. D. 1641, who died unmarried, and was buried at Wotton, A. D. 1661.

2. Amy, who died in two hours after her birth, and immediately after her baptism, January 31, A. D. 1741-2.

3. Richard Grenville, born in King-street, Covent-Garden, London, January 14, A. D. 1646, of whom his mother died in child-bed the next day, in the 29th year of her age, and was buried at Wotton, January 30, A. D. 1646.

His second wife was Eleanor, daughter of Sir Timothy Tirrel, of Oakley, and relict of Sir Peter Temple, of Stanton-Barry, Buckinghamshire, who survived him, without any issue by him, and died A. D. 1671. He lies buried in the isle of the church

church of Wotton, under a tomb, with this inscription.

Here lieth the body of Richard Grenville, Esq; Lord of this manor, who died the 10th of January, A. D. 1665, in the 54th year of his age.

His only son and heir,

RICHARD GRENVILLE, esquire, was high-sheriff of Buckinghamshire, A. D. 1671; and was buried at Wotton, July 4, A. D. 1719. He married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Peter Temple, of Stanton-Barry, in the county of Buckingham, and of Eleanor his wife abovementioned, by whom he had issue,

1. A daughter, still-born, September 1, 1670.
2. Eleanor, born November 10, 1672, and was buried at Wotton, February 13, A. D. 1688.
3. Penelope, born April 6, 1674, married to Sir John Conway, of Boddrydan, in Flintshire, and died A. D. 1745.

Also a son,

RICHARD GRENVILLE, of Wotton, esquire, born 23d of March, A. D. 1677-8, and baptized April 10, A. D. 1678, who served in parliament for Wendover, and afterwards for the county-town of Buckingham: and departing this life February 17, 1726-7, was buried with his ancestors in their isle of the church at Wotton, the 22d of February following. He married, A. D. 1710, Hester, second daughter of Sir Richard Temple, of Stow, near Buckingham, baronet, and sister to Richard, lord viscount Cobham.

By this lady, who deceased October 6, A. D. 1752, he had issue six sons and one daughter; whereof Henry, the third son, born April 4, A. D. 1714, was buried at Wotton, May 6, A. D. 1716: and Thomas, the youngest son, born April 4, A. D. 1719, who was, on a vacancy, in December, A. D. 1746, elected member of parliament for Bridport, having been brought up in the sea-service, and being captain of the Romney, took a Spanish prize of very great value; and, being afterwards captain of the Defiance, lost his life, May 3, 1747, in that memorable naval fight, when the whole fleet of French men of war were taken. How very great, and how early a share he had in the success of that important day, every one knows: we will therefore only add, from the public papers, the following most amiable picture of him; to the striking likeness of which, in every feature, there are yet so many living witnesses.

Ye weeping Muses, Graces, Virtues, tell,
If, since your all accomplish'd Sidney fell,
You, or afflicted Britain, e'er deplor'd
A Loss, like that these plaintive Lays record;
Such spotless honour, such ingenious truth,
Such ripen'd wisdom in the bloom of youth;
So mild, so gentle, so compos'd a mind,
To such heroick warmth and courage join'd!
He too, like Sidney, nurs'd in Learning's arms,
For nobler war forsook her peaceful charms;
Like him, possess'd of every pleasing art,
The secret wish of every virgin's heart;
Like him, cut off in youthful glory's pride,
He, unrepining, for his country dy'd.

His body was brought home, and buried at Wotton.

The eldest son,

(Present Earl.) RICHARD GRENVILLE-TEMPLE, now earl Temple, viscount and baron Cobham, born September 26, A. D. 1711, served first in the parliament summoned to meet June 13, A. D. 1734, and in the succeeding parliament, which sat first on business December 4, A. D. 1741, served as one of the knights of the shire for the county of Buckingham; and the next parliament, which met November 12, A. D. 1747, for the town of Buckingham, of which he was elected high-steward on the decease of his uncle, Richard, lord viscount Cobham. On May 9, A. D. 1737, he married Anna, one of the daughters and coheirs of Thomas Chambers, of Hanworth, in the county of Middlesex, esquire, by the lady Mary, his wife, eldest daughter of Charles, earl of Berkley, by Elizabeth his wife, sister to Edward, earl of Gainsborough. His lordship was sworn of the privy council, and appointed first lord of the admiralty in 1756, and the following year, was constituted lord privy-seal. In 1758, he was appointed lord lieutenant of the county of Buckingham, and installed a knight of the most noble order of the Garter, May 6, A. D. 1760. His lordship's issue was only one daughter, Elizabeth, born September 1, A. D. 1738, who died on the fourteenth of July, A. D. 1742.

2. George Grenville, born October 14, A. D. 1712, has served in four several parliaments for the town of Buckingham, being now one of the representatives of that place. On the twenty-fifth of December, A. D. 1744, he was appointed a lord commissioner of the admiralty, and on the twenty-third of June, A. D. 1747, one of the lords of the treasury. On the sixth of April, A. D. 1754, he was appointed treasurer of the navy, and at the same time, sworn one of his majesty's privy-council. On the fifteenth of April, A. D. 1762, he was constituted one of the principal secretaries of state to his present majesty, and in October following, first lord of the admiralty. On the thirteenth of April, A. D. 1763, he was further advanced to the honours of prime-minister, being then appointed first lord of the treasury, and chancellor, and under treasurer of the exchequer, which posts he afterwards resigned. In 1749, he married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Wyndham, baronet, and sister to Charles, earl of Egremont, by his wife Catharine, daughter of Charles, duke of Somerset, and by her, has had issue, four sons and five daughters. 1. Richard Percy Grenville, born March 12, A. D. 1752, and died young. 2. George Grenville, one of the tellers of the exchequer, born June 17, A. D. 1753. 3. Thomas Grenville. 4. William Wyndham Grenville. The daughters were, 1. Mary Hester, born January 19, A. D. 1750-1, died young. 2. Charlotte, born September 14, A. D. 1754. 3. Elizabeth. 4. Hester. 5. Catharine.

3. James Grenville, born February 12, A. D. 1755, was appointed a lord of trade in 1746. In 1755, he was appointed deputy paymaster of the forces, and in 1761, was constituted cofferer of the household, and sworn of the privy council. He served first in the parliament summoned to meet June 25, A. D. 1741, for Old Sarum. And at the succeeding general election, was chosen for Bridport. He was returned in the last, and serves in the present parliament for Buckingham, and is one of the joint vice-treasurers of Ireland, also receiver of the crown and fee-farm rents for the counties of Warwick and Leicester. He married Mary, daughter of James Smith, of Harding in Hertfordshire, esquire, and had issue two sons, James and Richard.

in

4. Henry Grenville, baptized September 15, A. D. 1717; in 1747, he was appointed governor of Barbadoes, where he continued till 1753. In 1762, he was appointed ambassador at the Ottoman Porte, and in 1765, was constituted commissioner of the customs.

5. Thomas Grenville, captain of a man of war, was killed in an engagement with the French squadron, May 6, A. D. 1747. He lies buried at Wotton.

The sister of these gentlemen, Hester Grenville, now baroness Chatham, was married November 6, A. D. 1744, to William Pitt, esquire, since created earl of Chatham. For an account of their issue, see his lordship's table.

(TITLES.) Richard Grenville, earl Temple, viscount Cobham, and baron Cobham.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Cobham, and viscount Cobham, May 23, A. D. 1718, (4 Geo. I.) earl Temple, October 18, A. D. 1749, (23 Geo. II.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth, vert on a cross pearl, five torteaux ruby, for Grenville. Second and third quarterly, topaz, an eagle displayed diamond, and pearl, two bars diamond, each charged with three martlets topaz.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, a martlet close, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a lion, party per fess, embattled topaz, and ruby. On the sinister, an horse pearl, powdered with eaglets, diamond.

(MOTTO.) "Templa quam dilecta."

(CHIEF SEATS.) Stow, near Buckingham; Wotton Underwood, in Buckinghamshire.

HARCOURT, Earl HARCOURT.

THIS ancient and noble family derive their descent from

BERNARD, a Dane by birth, but of the blood royal of Saxony, who was chief counsellor and second in command to Rollo, the first duke of Normandy, minister to duke William Longaspatha, guardian to his son Richard II. duke of Normandy, and regent of the duchy during his minority. He obtained the lordships of Harcourt, Cailleville, and Beauficel, A. D. 876, in reward for his services. To Mr. Edmondson the public are much obliged for a curious and accurate pedigree of the descendants of this noble warrior, who married a lady of the royal family of Burgundy, named de Sprote, by whom he had a son, TORF, surnamed the RICH, who gained the additional grants of Torville, Torcy, Torny, and Pontautou. By his wife Ertemberga, daughter of Launcelot de Briquebec, a nobleman of Danish extraction, he had three sons,

1. Touroude, or Turnulph, lord of Pont-audemer, Torville, Torcy, Pontautou, and Bourgroude, joint guardian and governor with his brother, to William duke of Normandy, during his minority. He married Weva, sister to Gunora, wife of Richard II. duke of Normandy, and from this match, the Beaumonts, earls of Leicester, Wallerans, earls of Warwick, &c. derive their descent.

2. Turchetil.

3. William de Torville.

TURCHETIL, lord of Turqueville, Turquerage, &c. was joint guardian and preceptor with his brother, to William duke of Normandy, during his minority, and was basely murdered for his attachment to him. He married Adeline de Montfort, sister of Touftain, lord of Montfort sur Risle, by whom he had issue a daughter, Lesseline, married to William, earl of Eu, Exmes, and Montreuil; also two sons, Anchitil, and Walter de Turqueville, of which the eldest,

ANCHITIL, took the name of HARCOURT, and by his wife Eye de Boessey, lady of Boessey de Chastel, had issue one daughter, Agnes, married to — Formerville, and six sons.

1. Errand, or Anguerrand de Harcourt, commander of the archers of Val de Ruel, in the descent made upon England, by William the Conqueror; after whose coronation, he returned into Normandy. He married Emma D'Estouteville.

2. Robert de Harcourt.

3. John de Harcourt.

4. Arnold de Harcourt, was sent for out of Normandy, by William the Conqueror, A. D. 1068, to oppose the invasion of England, by the Danes, in an engagement with whom, he was slain.

5. Gervase de Harcourt.

6. Ivo de Harcourt.

7. Renald

7. Renauld de Harcourt.

The second son,

ROBERT DE HARCOURT, surnamed the STRONG, built the castle of Harcourt, and came into England with the Conqueror. By his wife Colede D'Argouges, he had issue seven sons,

1. William de Harcourt.

2. Richard de Harcourt, founder of the commandery of St. Stephen, at Reneville: he became a Knight Templar, and grand prior of France, and was at length interred at St. Stephen's aforesaid.

3. Philip de Harcourt, dean of Lincoln, archdeacon of York, nominated to the bishopric of Salisbury, and appointed bishop of Bayeux: he died A. D. 1163, and was buried at Bayeux.

4. Henry Harcourt.

5. Baldwyn Harcourt.

6. Errand Harcourt.

7. Rollo de Harcourt, settled in England. His wife was Rocfia, sister and coheir of William, son of Pain Peverell, lord of Brunne, and standard-bearer to Robert Curtois, in the Holy Land. He had an only daughter, Albreda, the wife of Sir William Trufbut, of the county of York.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM DE HARCOURT, took part with Henry I. in his dispute with his brother Robert, and commanded the troops which defeated Waleran, earl of Meullent, in the battle near Bourgtouroude, in 1123, and had in reward for his services large possessions assigned him. He married Hue D'Amboise, and had issue three sons and two daughters.

The latter were,

1. Peretta, the wife of John, lord Hellenvillier, in France.

2. Beatrix, the wife of Robert Bassett.

The sons were,

1. Robert de Harcourt, baron of Harcourt, Elboeuf, la Sauffay, and Beaumefnel, Poligny, Boessey le Chastel, and Reneville; ancestor of John de Harcourt, viscount of Chatelleraut, baron of Elboeuf, Brione, D'Arcot, Mezieres, L'Islebon, Gravenston, &c. in whose favour the barony of Harcourt was, by king Philip de Valois, erected into a comté in March 1338, and from whom descended the Harcourts, counts of Harcourt and Aumalle, and the marquises of Montmorency, A. D. 1578; as also Peter de Harcourt, baron of Beuvron, Beaufou, &c. in recompence of whose services the baronies of le Motte, Mery, Cleville, and Vareville, were, by letters mandatory, A. D. 1593, erected into a marquise, called la Motte Harcourt. From this Peter, descended Henry, marshal of France, for whom the marquises of Thary and la Motte Harcourt, were united and erected into the dukedom of Harcourt, A. D. 1700, and made a peerdom of France, A. D. 1709. Robert de Harcourt was also ancestor to the Harcourts, barons Boneftable and Montgomery, extinct, and of the Harcourts, present barons of Ollonde.

2. Ivo de Harcourt.

3. Simon de Harcourt, who married Adeliza, daughter and coheir of Osbert de Arden, of Kingbury, in Warwickshire.

The second son,

Ivo DE HARCOURT, succeeded to his father's possessions in England, and had issue one daughter,

Lucy, who married a gentleman of the name of Daunley, and two sons, John and Robert; of the eldest we know nothing.

The youngest,

ROBERT DE HARCOURT, was sheriff of Warwick, and Leicester, in the years 1199, 1201, 1202. He married Isabel, daughter and heir of Richard de Camville, and by her obtained the lordship of Stanton, which ever since has been called Stanton-Harcourt. This lady's father was the third son of Richard de Camville, founder of Combe abbey, in Warwickshire, who was the son of Gerrard de Camville, lord of Lilbourne, near Creek, in Northamptonshire. Her mother was Milicent, cousin of queen Adeliza, or Adelia, daughter of Godfrey, first duke of Brabant, and second wife of king Henry I. from whom she received, at the time of her marriage, the lordship of Stanton, in Oxfordshire, which was confirmed afterwards by king Stephen, and king Henry II.

The issue of this Robert, and Isabel, were,

1. William de Harcourt.

2. Oliver de Harcourt, who joining the party of the dauphin, was taken prisoner at the battle of Lincoln, A. D. 1217.

3. John de Harcourt, seated at Rolege, in Leicestershire: he married Hawis, daughter of Sir William Burdet, knight.

4. Sir Robert de Harcourt married Dionysia, daughter and coheir of Henry Pipard, of Lapworth, in Warwickshire.

5. Alice, married first, to John de Limesi, secondly, to Walleran de Newburg, earl of Warwick.

Robert de Harcourt, dying A. D. 1202, was succeeded at Stanton, by his eldest son, WILLIAM DE HARCOURT, who was called the Englishman, to distinguish him from others of the same name. He joined king John, in opposition to Lewis, the dauphin of France, and the rebellious barons, A. D. 1216, and was with Sayer de Quincy, earl of Winchester, and others, at the siege of Damietta, in the Holy Land, A. D. 1218. The year following, we find him governor of Tamworth-castle.

He married Alice, daughter and coheir of Thomas Noel, lord of Ellenhall, Ronton, &c. (elder brother to Philip Noel, ancestor to the earl of Gainsborough,) by his wife Margaret, sister of Guy le Strange, of Knock, in Shropshire. By this marriage he obtained the lordships of Ellenhall, Leighford, Bridgeford, &c. in Staffordshire, and Grandborough, in Warwickshire, &c. Their issue were, a daughter, Helen, the wife of Hugh Bigot, justicier of England; and two sons, of which the youngest, Sir Henry Harcourt, was knighted A. D. 1278, and died A. D. 1293, leaving issue by his wife Emma, daughter and heir of William Maunsel, of Erdington, in Warwickshire, (who afterwards married Edward Pipe,) an only daughter and heir, Margaret, the wife first, of John Pipe, son to the above mentioned Edward, secondly, of John de Saundersted.

The eldest son,

Sir RICHARD HARCOURT, became lord of Stanton Harcourt, &c. at the decease of his father. He died A. D. 1258, having married Orabella, daughter of Sayer de Quincy, earl of Winchester, by Margaret, his wife, sister and coheir of Robert Fitz Parnel, esquire, of Leicester, with whom

C c c

whom he obtained the manors of Bosworth, Elflow, or Ailiston, and Charnwood, in the county of Leicester.

His issue were, two sons and a daughter, Maud, married to Sir Giles Penyston, baronet.

1. Sir William de Harcourt.

2. Sayer de Harcourt, who joining the earl of Leicester, against Henry III. was taken prisoner in the battle of Eversham, A. D. 1266, in which same year, he was thrown into prison, disseized of his lands, and departed this life.

The eldest son,

Sir WILLIAM DE HARCOURT, took part with the rebellious barons. He married first, Alice, daughter of Alan la Zouche, by whom he had two daughters, Margery, the wife of John Cantelupe, and Orabella, who died A. D. 1279, the wife of Sir Fulke Pembrugge. He married secondly, Hillaria, daughter of Henry, lord Hastings, by whom he had an only son, RICHARD DE HARCOURT, who on the demise of his father, A. D. 1278, succeeded to his lordships, &c. He procured in 1293, a grant of the fairs and markets of Bosworth, in Leicestershire, and married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Beke, and sister and coheir of Walter, lord Beke, of Eresby, in Lincolnshire, lineally descended from Walter Bec, who had a fair inheritance in Flanders, and came into this realm with William the Conqueror, and of his gift had Eresby, and divers other fair lordships.

He had two sons, the youngest, Nicholas Harcourt, was rector of Sheppey, in Leicestershire; and the eldest,

Sir JOHN HARCOURT, was knighted, A. D. 1306, and married two wives, first, Ellen, daughter of Eudo la Zouche, of Mellefentree, secondly, Alice, daughter of Peter Corbet, of Caus castle, in Shropshire. By the latter, he had no issue; but by the former, was father of an only son,

Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT, who succeeded his father at his demise, A. D. 1330. He died June 6, A. D. 1349, having married Jane, daughter of Richard, lord Grey, of Codnor. By this lady, who afterwards married Ralph de Ferrers, and died August 19, A. D. 1369, he had issue two sons.

The eldest was, Sir Richard Harcourt, who married Joan, daughter and heir of Sir William Shareshull, lord chief justice of England, by whom he had a daughter, Elizabeth, who upon her father's demise in 45 Edward III. was found by inquisition, daughter and heir of Richard Harcourt, son of Sir William Harcourt, knight, and married to Sir Thomas Astley, (of Nelston, Leicestershire, second son of Thomas, lord Astley,) from whom the Astleys of Patterhal, in Staffordshire, are lineally descended. Whereupon the estate of Stanton-Harcourt, upon the death of Sir William, devolved upon the second, but only surviving son,

Sir THOMAS HARCOURT, who was knighted before 41 Edward III. for then the king grants his general letters of attorney to hold for one year, to Sir Thomas Harcourt, knight, going in his service into Milan, with his son Lionel, duke of Clarence. He married Maud, daughter of Robert, lord Grey, of Rotherfield, and widow of Sir John Botetort, lord Botetort. By this lady, who died January 30, A. D. 1391, he had issue two sons,

Thomas, and Sir Richard, and three daughters, Joane, Catherine, and Isabel, the eldest of which married Thomas Erdington, of Erdington, in Warwickshire. He died April 12, A. D. 1417, (having been knight of the shire for the county of Oxford, in 1376) and was succeeded by his eldest son, THOMAS HARCOURT, who died June 3, A. D. 1460, and was buried at Stanton Harcourt. By his wife Joan, daughter of Sir Robert Francis, he had a numerous issue; his two daughters, Alice and Isabel, died young.

The sons were,

1. Sir Robert Harcourt, } of both whom
2. Sir Richard Harcourt, } hereafter.

3. John Harcourt.

4. William Harcourt, (steward to George, duke of Clarence) whose only daughter and heir, Isabel, married William Moseley, of Moseley, in Staffordshire.

5. George Harcourt, died young.

The eldest son,

Sir ROBERT HARCOURT, signalized himself in the wars of Henry VI. and Edward IV. was chosen one of the knights companions of the Garter, before the third year of king Edward IV. when he was present, with other knights of the order, with the king at a chapter held at Windsor, April 22. The year after, 29 April, 4 Edward IV. he was excused attending in chapter at Windsor, as, by the king's order, he was assigned, with other knights of the Garter, for defence of the northern borders. In 7 Edward IV. he was commissioned with the earl of Warwick, and others, to treat with Lewis, the French king, about a peace, truce, cessation of arms, or alliance. He lost his life in the service of that king, being slain by the Staffords; and his death is placed by Vincent, to be on November 14, 10 Edward IV. A monument is erected to his memory in the church of Stanton-Harcourt, exhibiting the figures of him and his lady; he in the habit of the garter over his armour, with his sword by his side; and on her effigies is the garter just above the elbow on the left arm, with the motto, Hony soit qui mal y pense. From which, and other authorities, Mr. Antis has observed, that anciently the ladies of the knights had not only the habit of the order, which was fennec of Garters, but that they had also the ensign of the garter delivered to them. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Byron, of Clayton, in the county of York, by whom he had issue, besides three younger sons, who died without issue, Sir John Harcourt, his son and heir, who, on the death of his father, was twenty years of age; and by Anne, his wife, daughter of John Norris, of Bray, in the county of Buckingham, esquire, had issue Sir Robert Harcourt; who, in 10 Henry VII. was made one of the knights of the Bath, at the creation of the duke of York; and in the twelfth of that reign, behaving himself with great valour at the battle of Black-heath, against James, lord Audley, and the Cornish rebels, the king conferred on him the honour of knight banneret. He married Anne, daughter of Thomas Lymerick, by whom he left issue a son, John, who died without issue in his life-time, and four daughters, his coheirs; Elizabeth, the third wife of Robert Gaynesford, of Hampton-Poyle, in the county of Oxford, esquire, Letitia, first married ried to Humphry Peshall, esquire, and secondly, to Thomas Nevill, esquire; Eleanor, married to Sir Richard Bekingham; and Catherine, wife of Thomas Stoner, esquire.

Having brought the eldest branch to a period, we must proceed with,

Sir RICHARD HARCOURT, second son of Thomas Harcourt and Joan. He had three wives, first Edith, daughter and heir of Thomas St. Cleve, by whom he had a son and successor, Christopher, and a daughter, Anne, married first to Henry Fienes, lord Say and Sele, and, secondly, to John, son of Simon Montfort.

He married, secondly, Eleanor, daughter of Sir Roger Lewknor, knight; by whom he had a son, John Harcourt, of Ranton, in Staffordshire; who married Margaret, daughter of William Bray, of Lembridge, in Herefordshire.

He married, thirdly, Catherine, the widow of Sir Miles Stapleton, knight, and by her, who survived him two years, had a son, William Harcourt.

This Sir Richard died October 1, A. D. 1487, and was succeeded by his only son of the first marriage,

Sir CHRISTOPHER HARCOURT, who also upon the death of Sir Robert, of the elder branch, without male issue, succeeded to the manor of Stanton-Harcourt, in Oxfordshire. He married Joan, daughter and heir of the aforesaid Sir Miles Stapleton, and had issue three sons, of which the first and third died unmarried. He died A. D. 1474, and was succeeded by his second, but eldest surviving son,

Sir SIMON HARCOURT, who was one of those who, in the 5th of Henry VIII. was knighted for their valour at the sieges of Teroven, and Tournay, and the battle that ensued, called by our historians the battle of Spurs. He married first, Agnes, daughter of Thomas Darell, of Scotney, in Shropshire, esquire; and secondly, Elizabeth, relict of Sir Richard York; but had issue only by his first wife, two sons and a daughter,

1. John Harcourt.
2. Edmund Harcourt.
3. Florence, married to Sir John Cotesmore, kt.

He died January 16, A. D. 1547, and was buried at Stanton Harcourt.

Sir JOHN HARCOURT, the eldest son, was knighted, and seated at Stanton-Harcourt. He married Margaret, daughter and heir of Sir William Barentyne, of Haselyn, in the county of Oxford, knight, by whom he had issue seven sons and nine daughters, entered in the table.

His eldest son,

Sir SIMON HARCOURT, was knighted by king Henry VIII. and served the office of sheriff, for the counties of Oxford and Berkshire, and dying July 27, 1577, was buried at Stanton Harcourt. He had three wives; but by his second, Grace, daughter of Humphry Fitz-Herbert, of Upall, in the county of Hereford, relict of William Robinson, of Drayton Bassett, in the county of Stafford, esquire; and his third wife, Jane, sister to Sir John Spencer, he had no issue. His first lady was Mary, daughter and coheir of Sir Edward Aston, of Tixfall, in the county of Stafford, knight, by whom he had issue six sons and four daughters,

1. Walter Harcourt.

2. John Harcourt, who married Mary, daughter of Walter Jones, of Witney, in Oxfordshire, and widow of Bryan de Cogges, and had issue, Essex Harcourt.

3. Robert Harcourt.

4. Edward Harcourt, who married Anne, daughter of Robert Colyer, of Darleston, in Staffordshire.

5. William Harcourt, who married Catherine Smith.

6. Francis Harcourt.

The daughters were,

1. Jane, the wife of John Grey, of Enfield, in the county of Stafford, esquire, ancestor to the present earl of Stamford.

2. Elizabeth, wife of Richard Chamberlayn, of Astley, in the county of Warwick, esquire.

3. Frances; and,

4. Jane.

His eldest son,

Sir WALTER HARCOURT, had the honour of knighthood conferred on him, by the earl of Essex, at Rome. He had to wife Dorothy, daughter of William Robinson, of Drayton Bassett, in the county of Stafford, esquire; by whom he had issue two sons and three daughters.

1. Robert Harcourt, aged nine in 1583.

2. Michael Harcourt, captain of a ship under Sir Walter Raleigh.

His daughters were,

1. Grace, who died young, June 13, 1583.

2. Jane, married to William Essex, of Lamburn, in Berkshire, baronet; and,

3. Elizabeth, maid of honour, A. D. 1607, to Anne, the queen of king James I.

His eldest son,

ROBERT HARCOURT, esquire, married, first, Elizabeth, daughter of John Fitz-Herbert, of Norbury, esquire; and dying without issue by him, he took for his second wife, Frances, daughter of Geffery Vere, third son of John de Vere, the fifteenth earl of Oxford, and sister to the famous brothers Sir Francis Vere, and Horace, lord Vere, of Tilbury.

He had issue by her three sons,

1. Simon Harcourt, of whom we shall further treat.

2. Francis Harcourt, who died unmarried.

3. Vere Harcourt, who married Lucy, sole daughter of Sir Roger Thornton, of Snailwell, in the county of Cambridge, whose descendants are entered in the table.

He had also four daughters,

1. Elizabeth, who died an infant.

2. Jane, married to Henry, son of Sir Giles Wroughton, knight.

3. Dorothy, the wife of Henry Chetwynd, of Highwood, in the county of Stafford, esquire; and,

4. Margaret, born 1607, who died the same year.

The eldest son was,

Sir SIMON HARCOURT, who first entered on the stage of war, in the Low-Countries, against the Spaniards; and was major of the regiment under that great general Sir Horace Vere, baron of Tilbury, whose sister his father had married: and at Kirby-hall, in Essex, the seat of the said lord Vere, were the pictures of his officers, and among them this Simon Harcourt's, who is mentioned to be one of his scholars, in the Epistle to the reader, before Sir Francis Vere's Commentaries. He was knighted at Whitehall, the 26th of June, 1627: and and Sir John Temple, in his History of the Irish rebellion, Appendix, p. 52, gives this account of him: The lords justices and council were shut up within the city of Dublin, in a most miserable condition, desperately threatened on every side, until the most happy and welcome arrival of that truly valiant gentleman and gallant commander Sir Simon Harcourt, who being designed governor of the city of Dublin, was dispatched away by special order of parliament, with his regiment, for the preservation of that place; and landed there on the last day of December, 1641, to the great joy and comfort of all his majesty's protestants and well-affected subjects, and to the terror of the rebels in arms.

Borlace, in his Reduction of Ireland, p. 241, says he was a long experienced and excellent officer, worthy the memory of the best prince, and most grateful people; who afterwards was, by an especial order, admitted into the privy-council.

He was on his landing with his regiment (which consisted of twelve hundred men) immediately invested with the government of Dublin; and, on the 10th of January, dislodged the enemy from Swords, a village six miles from the city, and raised the blockade. Of his last exploit, it is thus recited: on the 26th of March, 1643, Sir Simon Harcourt, with a small party, marched out of Dublin, towards Wicklow, and finding the rebels possessed of the castle of Carrickmain, but four miles from the city, he sent back for two great guns to batter it; but before they arrived, viewing the castle with two hundred firelocks, Sir Simon, in giving orders to his men, was slain by a shot from the castle; which so enraged them, that within a few hours after the guns came up, they, under the command of colonel Gibson, made a breach, and entering the castle, put all therein to the sword, refusing quarter to those rebels that had slain their most beloved colonel. This Sir Simon having married Anne, daughter to William lord Paget, who married, secondly, Sir William Waller, of Osterley Park, had a son and heir,

Sir PHILIP HARCOURT, who was knighted at Whitehall, June 5, A. D. 1660, and was elected one of the knights of the shire for the county of Oxford, to the parliament summoned to meet at Oxford, the 21st of March, A. D. 1680-81. He died in April, A. D. 1688; and by Anne his wife*, daughter of Sir William Waller, of Osterley Park, in the county of Middlesex, knight, left issue Sir Simon Harcourt, of whom we are principally to treat.

(First Viscount.) Sir Simon Harcourt was educated in Pembroke college, in Oxford, and in the Inner-Temple, London; and from the year, 1690, to the first of queen Anne, was a member of parliament for the borough of Abington, in Berkshire. On the 2d of June, A. D. 1702, he received the honour of knighthood, and at the same time was made the queen's solicitor general. And her majesty gracing the University of Oxford with her royal person, in convocation, he was, among other noble and honourable persons, then attending on her majesty, created doctor of laws, August 27, A. D. 1702. On the 23d of April, A. D. 1707, he was declared her attorney-general, which office he sustained with great dignity, but quitted with greater, on the 12th of February following, by a voluntary surrender of it, then made and enrolled; perhaps the only instance our records furnish.

On September the 19th, A. D. 1710, he was recalled to that eminent employment, which he had quitted; and on the 19th of October following was made lord keeper of the great seal; and was sworn of the privy-council on the 3d of September, A. D. 1711. He was created lord Harcourt, baron of Stanton-Harcourt, in Oxfordshire. The preamble to the patent sets forth his eminent abilities, as follows:

“ There is nothing wherein we more willingly exercise that royal authority which God has entrusted us with, than by rewarding true merit and virtue, and advancing to all suitable dignity, men who have merited well of us, and whose ancestors have been remarkably famous in their generation. Among these, none is more conspicuous than our well-beloved and very faithful counsellor Sir Simon Harcourt, knight, keeper of our great seal; a gentleman recommended to us by a long descent of progenitors of very ample fortunes, and renowned for their warlike actions ever since the Norman times; one of whom, for his bravery signalized under the standard of Edward IV. was made knight of the Garter: another, fighting courageously against the Irish rebels, in the cause of his royal master king Charles, the best of princes, was the first Englishman that fell a sacrifice to their fury. Nor is there one of all that race, descended from such noble ancestors, who has not been eminent for his love to his country, and loyalty to his prince. He suffered, indeed, in his paternal inheritance, which was diminished by the fury of the civil wars, but not in his glory, which being acquired by military valour, he, as a lawyer, has advanced by the force of his wit and eloquence; for we have understood, that his faculty in speaking is so full of variety, that many doubt whether he is fitter to manage causes in the lower court, or to speak before a full parliament; but it is unanimously confessed by all, that among the lawyers he is the most eloquent orator, and among the orators the most able lawyer. To this praise of his eloquence, he has added those domestic virtues, magnanimity and fidelity; supported by which, he has resolutely persevered in maintaining the cause he had undertaken, and in despising danger; and has kept the engagement of friendship, whether in prosperity or adversity, sacred and inviolable. Whom therefore, furnished with such great endowments of mind, all clients have wished to defend their causes; not without reason we preferred to be one of our counsel at law; whom we a second time called to be our attorney-general, which office he had before sustained with honour, as far as it was thought convenient; whom lastly, since we perceived that all these things were inferior to the largeness of his capacity, we have advanced to the highest pitch

* He married, secondly, Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Lee, of Unkerwyke, Buckinghamshire, esquire; the descendants of which marriage, the reader will find in the table.

John Lee, of Unkerwyke, Buckinghamshire, esquire; the of forensical dignity, and made him supreme judge in our court of equity. He still continues to deserve higher of us, and of all good men; and is so much a brighter ornament to his province, as it is more honourable than the rest he has gone through; he daily dispatches the multitude of suits in Chancery, he removes the obstacles which delay judgment in that court, and takes special care that the successful issue of an honest cause, should cost every plaintiff as little as may be. Which things, as they are very grateful to us, honourable to himself, and beneficial to the commonwealth, we think them deserving of higher reward. Therefore, that the most upright asserter of justice, may not be without a vote in the most supreme court; that he who can think and speak so excellently well, should not be silent in an assembly of the eloquent; we grant him a place among the peers, and that he may add some splendor to that order, from which both he and his posterity will deserve so much: and that the same feat, which is known at this time, and has been for above six hundred years, by the name and patrimony of Harcourt, be honoured with that title, which we now confer, and will continue (if God permit) from generation to generation. Now know ye, &c."

On the 7th of April, A.D. 1712, he was declared lord high chancellor of Great Britain; and on the demise of queen Anne, being then lord chancellor, was one of the lords justices till king George I. arrived in England, who was pleased on the 24th of July, in the seventh year of his reign, to create him lord viscount Harcourt; and, on the 25th of August, A.D. 1722, he was sworn at Kensington of his majesty's privy council, and then took his place at the board. In 1723, 25, and 27, he was one of the lords justices during his majesty's absence. His lordship died on the 29th of July, 1727, in the sixty-seventh year of his age, and left no issue by his second wife Elizabeth, daughter to Richard Spencer, of the county of Derby, esquire, and widow of Richard Anderson, esquire; nor by his third, Elizabeth, daughter to Sir Thomas Vernon, of Twickenham Park, in the county of Middlesex, and relict of Sir John Walter, of Saresden, in Oxfordshire, baronet, who survived him.

But by his first lady, Rebecca, daughter of Thomas Clark, esquire, and widow of Sir Samuel Asty, knight, he had three sons and two daughters.

1. Anne, married to John Barlow, of Slebeck, in the county of Pembroke, esquire, and died in November, A.D. 1733.

2. Arabella, married to Herbert Aubery, of Cley-Hanger, in the county of Hereford, esquire.

The sons were,

1. Simon Harcourt.

2. Philip Harcourt,

3. Walter Harcourt,

} died young.

SIMON HARCOURT, the eldest, died in the lifetime of his father, A.D. 1721, and was buried in the church of Stanton-Harcourt, in the county of Oxford, where a monument is erected to his memory; and the celebrated Mr. Pope has left this memorial of him.

To this sad shrine, whoe'er thou art! draw near,
Here lies the friend most lov'd, the son most dear:

Who ne'er knew joy, but friendship might divide;
Or gave his father grief, but when he dy'd.
How vain is reason, eloquence how weak!
If POPE must tell what HARCOURT cannot speak:
Oh let thy once lov'd friend inscribe thy stone,
And, with a father's sorrows, mix his own.

He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Evelyn, esquire, and sister to Sir John Evelyn, of Wotton, in the county of Surry, baronet; and by her (who died April 6, A.D. 1760, and was buried at Stanton Harcourt) had issue one son and four daughters.

1. Elizabeth, who died unmarried, September 28, A.D. 1765, and was buried at Stanton Harcourt.

2. Ann, who died an infant.

3. Martha, married in April, A.D. 1744; to George Venables Vernon, of Sudbury, in Derbyshire, since created lord Vernon.

4. Mary, died an infant.

(Present Earl) SIMON HARCOURT, the only son, succeeded his grandfather as viscount Harcourt. He was appointed one of the lords of the bedchamber to his late majesty, George II. in May, A.D. 1735. In A.D. 1743, his lordship attended the king at the battle of Dettingen; and, A.D. 1745, when the rebels began to make head in the north, he was one of those who raised regiments for the service of the crown. In consideration of this his loyalty, and his many other services and merits, his majesty was pleased to advance this nobleman to higher dignity, by creating him earl Harcourt, and viscount Harcourt, of Newnham Courtrey, by letters patent, bearing date December 1, A.D. 1749.

Upon the demise of Frederic, prince of Wales, his lordship had the honour of being appointed governor to his son (our present gracious sovereign) which he resigned A.D. 1752. On the 30th of April, A.D. 1751, he was sworn of the privy council. On the 8th of March, A.D. 1755, he was promoted to the rank of major general in the army; and on the 30th of February, A.D. 1759, to that of lieutenant-general.

In A.D. 1761, he was appointed ambassador extraordinary to the court of Mecklenburg Strelitz, and had the honour of conducting her present majesty to England, after which he acted as master of the horse, to which office he had been appointed on the 1st of August, previous to his embassy. He was sworn also of his majesty's privy-council, and on the 21st of April, A.D. 1763, he was constituted lord-chamberlain of the queen's household, which honourable employ his lordship still enjoys.

In October, A.D. 1735, he married Rebecca, sole daughter and heir of Charles le Bals, of Pipewell-abbey, in Northamptonshire; and by her ladyship, who departing this life on the sixteenth of January, A.D. 1765, and was interred at Stanton Harcourt, had issue two sons and two daughters.

The latter were,

1. Elizabeth, born January 16, 1738-9, married to Sir William Lee, of Hartwell, Buckinghamshire, baronet.

2. Anne, died an infant in August, A.D. 1746, and was buried at Stanton Harcourt.

The sons are,

1. George-Simon Harcourt, called viscount Newn-

Newnham, born August 1, A. D. 1736. His lordship, who is member in the present parliament for St. Alban's, married September 26, A. D. 1765, Elizabeth, daughter of George, lord Vernon, by Martha, sister to Simon, lord Harcourt.

2. William Harcourt, born March 20, 1743.

(TITLES.) Simon Harcourt, earl Harcourt, viscount of Newnham Courtney, and baron Harcourt of Stanton Harcourt.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Harcourt of Stanton-Harcourt, in the county of Oxford, September 3, A. D. 1711, (10th of queen Anne) viscount of the same July 24, A. D. 1721, (7th of George I.) and viscount of Newnham Courtney, in the county of Oxford, December 1, 1749, (23 George II.)

(ARMS.) Ruby, two bars, topaz.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, topaz, a peacock close, proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two lions, topaz, each gorged with two bars gemels, ruby.

(MOTTO.) "Le bon temps viendra."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Stanton Harcourt, Coke Thorpe, and Newnham Courtney, all in the county of Oxford.

CONWAY, Earl of HERTFORD.

THE descent of this noble family is the same with that of his grace the duke of Somerset; in our account of whose ancestors we have had occasion to note Sir Edward Seymour, of Bury Pomeroi, baronet, who married two wives; from the former of which his grace, from the latter, the earl of Hertford, is descended.

Sir Edward Seymour's second wife, was Lettice, daughter of Alexander Popham, of Littlecote, Wiltshire. She died March 16, A. D. 1728, having borne to him issue, six sons and one daughter, Anne, married to William Berkeley Portman, of Orchard Portman, in Somersetshire, esquire.

The sons were as follows,

1. Popham Seymour, born A. D. 1675, was the adopted heir of Edward Conway, earl Conway, who died without issue, and by his last will and testament, dated August 9, A. D. 1683, devised all his lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in England and Ireland, to his cousin Popham Seymour, for life, and to his heirs male; remainder for want of issue, to his brother Francis, and his heirs male; remainder to his brother Charles, and his heirs male; remainder to his own right heirs for ever: and in the close thereof expresses, "my desire is, that the said Popham Seymour, and his children, do presently after my death, take upon him the name of Popham Conway, and to each of his brothers, and their children, if the estate should fall to them, as my cousin Mr. Edward Seymour, their father, did engage to me they should. This gentleman (Popham Seymour) accordingly assumed the name of Conway; but receiving a wound in his neck, in a duel with colonel Kirk, on the 4th of June, A. D. 1699, he languished therewith a fortnight, and then departed this life.

2. Francis Seymour.

3. Charles Seymour.

4. Henry Seymour.

5. Alexander Seymour.

6. John Seymour.

(First Lord.) FRANCIS SEYMOUR, the second son, succeeded his elder brother, and assumed the name of Conway. He was twice elected to parliament for Bramber, in 1701, and 1702. Through the interest of his father with her majesty, he obtained letters patent bearing date March 17, A. D. 1702-3, creating him a peer of England, by the title and title of baron Conway, of Ragley, in Warwickshire. He was also on the twenty-eighth of June, A. D. 1703, by privy-seal dated at Kensington, created a peer of the kingdom of Ireland, by the title of baron Conway, and Kilulagh, in the county of Antrim, where he possessed a great estate, part of the inheritance of Edward, earl Conway: his patent for that honour, bears date at Dublin, October 16, A. D. 1703, and on the third of October, A. D. 1721, he took his seat in the parliament of Ireland, and was sworn of the privy-council in that kingdom, on the seventeenth of October, A. D. 1723. In 1728, his lordship was constituted governor of Carrickfergus.

This nobleman married on the seventeenth of February, A. D. 1703, Mary, third daughter to Laurence Hyde, earl of Rochester, and by her who died January 25, 1708-9, and was buried at Arrow, in Warwickshire, had issue four daughters,

1. Letitia, born October 17, A. D. 1704, died unmarried, A. D. 1723.

2. Mary, born August, A. D. 1705, married to Nicholas Price, of St. Field, in the county of Downe, Downe, in Ireland. She died in child-bed of her first child.

3. Henrietta, born A. D. 1706, } died un-
4. Catherine, born A. D. 1708, } married.

His lordship married secondly, Jane, daughter of — Bowden, of Drogheda, by whom he had a daughter, Jane, who died unmarried, May 5, A. D. 1749. This lady died in child-bed at Sandywell, February 13, A. D. 1715-16, and was buried at Arrow.

He married thirdly, in July, A. D. 1718, Charlotte, daughter of Sir John Shorter, lord mayor of London, in 1688; and by her, who surviving him, died February 12, A. D. 1733-4, had issue two sons and one daughter, Anne, married in 1755, to John Harris, of Hayne, in Devonshire, esquire, master of his majesty's household.

The sons were,

1. Francis Seymour Conway.

2. Henry Seymour Conway, who was chosen on the nineteenth of October, A. D. 1741, one of the knights of the shire for the county of Antrim, in the parliament of Ireland; and in the same year, was elected for Higham Ferrers, to sit in the parliament in England. In the parliament summoned to meet August 13, A. D. 1747, he served for Penryn; in that which met A. D. 1754, for St. Maws, in Cornwall; and sits in the present parliament for Hertford. In 1741, he was constituted captain-lieutenant in the first regiment of foot-guards, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel; and in April, A. D. 1746, was appointed colonel of a regiment of foot, also promoted to the command of a regiment of dragoons in Ireland, December 21, A. D. 1751. On the seventh of February, A. D. 1756, he was promoted to the rank of major-general, and on the twenty-fifth of August, A. D. 1759, to that of lieutenant-general: on the tenth of July, A. D. 1765, he was constituted one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state. On the nineteenth of December, A. D. 1747, he married Caroline, widow of Charles Bruce, earl of Aylesbury, and only daughter of John Campbell, esquire, now duke of Argyle, by whom he has issue one daughter, Anne, born November 8, A. D. 1748.

His lordship dying February 4, A. D. 1734, was succeeded in his honours, &c. by his eldest son, (Present Earl.) FRANCIS SEYMOUR CONWAY, who took his seat in the house of peers, November 15, A. D. 1739. And his majesty on the third of August, A. D. 1750, was pleased to create him earl of Hertford, and viscount Beauchamp, to him and his heirs male, with remainder to the heirs male of his brother Henry Conway, which honours were conferred on his great ancestor Edward, duke of Somerset, and expired with Algonon, duke of Somerset. In 1751, he was appointed lord of the bed-chamber to George II. and on the twenty-ninth of May, A. D. 1757, was installed knight of the Garter. On the tenth of June following, he was constituted lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Warwick. On the twenty-ninth of April, A. D. 1763, he was appointed ambassador-extraordinary, and plenipotentiary at the court of France. On the first of August, A. D. 1765, he was appointed lord-lieutenant of Ireland. In 1766, he was constituted lord-chamberlain of the king's household, and soon after, was appointed master of the horse to his majesty. His lordship is recorder of Hertford.

On the twenty-ninth of May, A. D. 1741, he married Isabella, youngest daughter of Charles, duke of Grafton, by whom he had the following numerous issue.

Seven sons.

1. Francis, called viscount Beauchamp, born February 2, A. D. 1742-3.
2. Henry Seymour Conway, born December 15, A. D. 1745.
3. Robert Seymour Conway, born December 20, A. D. 1748.
4. Edward Seymour Conway, born May 18, A. D. 1757.
5. Hugh Seymour Conway, born April 29, A. D. 1759.
6. William Seymour Conway, born October 3, A. D. 1760.
7. George Seymour Conway, born July 21, A. D. 1763.

And six daughters.

1. Ann, born August 1, A. D. 1744.
2. Sarah Frances, born September 27, A. D. 1747.
3. Gertrude, born October 9, A. D. 1750.
4. Frances, born December 4, A. D. 1751.
5. Elizabeth, born March 3, A. D. 1754.
6. Isabella Rachel, born December 25, A. D. 1755.

(TITLES.) Francis Seymour Conway, earl of Hertford, viscount Beauchamp, baron Conway, of Ragley, (and baron Conway, and Killultagh, in Ireland.)

(CREATIONS.) Baron Conway, of Ragley, in Warwickshire, March 17, A. D. 1702-3, (2 queen Anne) viscount Beauchamp, and earl of Hertford, August 3, A. D. 1750 (24 Geo. II.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly: first and fourth diamond, on a bend cottized pearl, a rose between two annulets, ruby, for Conway: second and third quarters are quarterly, first and fourth topaz on a pile, ruby, between six fleurs de lis, sapphire, three lions passant, guardant, topaz, being a coat of augmentation, second and third ruby, two wings conjoined in lure, for Seymour.

(CREST.) On a wreath, the bust of a Moor side-faced, couped proper, and wreathed about the temples, pearl and sapphire.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two Moors habited as in the plate of his arms, each wreathed as the crest; holding in their exterior hands a shield, sapphire, garnished topaz, the dexter charged with the sun in its splendor, the other with a crescent pearl.

(MOTTO.) "Fide & amore."

(CHIEF SEATS.) Taplow, Bucks; Ragley, Warwickshire; and at Lisburne, in the county of Antrim, in Ireland.

NORTH,

N O R T H, Earl of G U I L F O R D.

THE ancestor of this noble family was, ROBERT NORTH, esquire, who lived in the reign of Henry V. and having married Alice, daughter of John Harcourt, of Oxfordshire, had a son, and a daughter, Ellen, who became the wife of John Parker, of Norton Lees, in Derbyshire.

The son,

THOMAS NORTH, seated at Walkeringham, in Nottinghamshire, had issue,

ROGER NORTH, who dying, A. D. 1495, left two sons, Thomas and Roger, from the former of which the Norths of Walkeringham derive their descent: the younger son, ROGER NORTH, died A. D. 1509. By Christian his wife, daughter of Richard Warcup, of Sconington, near Appleby, in Kent (widow of Ralph Warren) he had issue two daughters, Joan, wife of William Wilkinson, of London, merchant; and Alice, the wife of Thomas Burnet, auditor of the exchequer.

Also a son and heir,

Sir EDMUND NORTH, who was born about the year, A. D. 1496, (12th of Henry VII.) and was trained up in the study of the laws, in which he made so fair a progress, that he came to be of council for the city of London.

In the 22d of Henry VIII. he, with Sir Brian Tuke, knight, were constituted clerks of the parliament, an office of much more respect than now it is, being afterwards enjoyed by Sir William Paget, the secretary of state, and so it came to Sir John Mason, and others. About the same time he married his first wife, who, having had two husbands, brought him such an increase of fortune, as, not long after, he purchased his manor of Kirtling. In 1536, he became one of the king's serjeants at law, being so stiled by the king in a grant then made to him: and on the surrender of his office of clerk of the parliament, in 32 Henry VIII. was made treasurer of the court of augmentations, an office newly erected on the dissolution of monasteries. In 33 Henry VIII. he was a knight, and elected one of the representatives for the county of Cambridge; and in 36 Henry VIII. was chancellor of the court of augmentations, jointly with Sir Richard Rich, and, within a few months following, sole chancellor of that court, by resignation of the said Sir Richard Rich. Which office he enjoyed alone above four years, and might have made a greater addition to his fortune than what he left, had he not been a person of very great integrity. In 37 Henry VIII. he was in commission with the bishop of Westminster, the bishop of Worcester, and the bishop of Chichester, to see that the dean and chapter of the several cathedral churches of Canterbury, Rochester, Westminster, Winchester, &c. then lately founded and erected, distribute annually each, a certain sum of money in alms among poor householders, and for the repair of the highways, which by their several statutes and ordinances they were obliged to perform. He was now made a privy counsellor, and had frequent grants of land from the king, as a testimony of his favour, and of the good services done him. But, as it was usual in this king to throw down those he had raised, he was watchful not to offend him. However, one morning there came a messenger from the king to him, to command his immediate repair to court. He then resided at the charter-house, and one of his servants, an attendant in his bed-chamber, when the message was delivered, observed his master to tremble at it; but he made the utmost haste to wait on the king, and took with him his said servant. He found the king walking, and, on his admittance, continued doing so with great earnestness, looking at him with an angry eye, which was received with a very still and sober carriage. At last the king broke out in these words: "We are informed you have cheated us of certain lands in Middlesex." And receiving no other than a plain and humble negation; the king after some little pause, replied, "How was it then, did we give those lands to you?" Whereunto Sir Edward answered, "Yes, Sir, your majesty was pleased so to do." The king on this, after a small pause, put on a milder countenance, and, calling him to a cupboard, conferred privately with him a long time, whereby his said servant (as Dudley, the second lord North was informed) saw the king could not spare his master's service as yet; but whether the cause lay in the king's occasions, or in his humble behaviour and answers, must be left to the judicious to determine. Ever after this he was in high esteem with Henry VIII. and among divers of the nobility and others whom he most trusted (being upon his death-bed) he was constituted one of his executors, as also appointed to be of council to his son and successor, Edward VI. and had a legacy in his will of 300l.

On king Edward's accession to the crown, he was again elected one of the knights of the shire for the county of Cambridge, in the parliament then called; in which an act being passed for the alteration of religion, and a communion-book printed in English, he was one of the privy-council who signed the letters missive, dated the 13th of of March, to be sent to the several bishops in England for the use of it, to commence at Easter following. He continued of the privy-council all king Edward's reign, and was chosen again knight of the shire for Cambridge, in the second and last parliament called by that king, being specially recommended by his letters to the sheriff of that county. When by the duke of Northumberland's practices the lady Jane Grey was proclaimed queen, he was one of the council who signed that letter sent to the lady Mary, afterwards queen, wherein they acknowledge the lady Jane to be their lawful sovereign. But this was no hindrance to queen Mary's favour, having otherwise manifested himself a faithful subject, so that, on her accession, he was of her privy-council; and in the first year of her reign in consideration of his great merits and abilities, he was advanced to the dignity of a baron of this realm by summons to parliament, and took his place in the house of peers on the 7th of April. The year following he waited on the prince of Spain on his landing at Southampton, accompanied him to Winchester, where, on the 25th of June, his marriage with the queen was completed.

After which, in 1 Elizabeth, 18 December, he was constituted one of the lords commissioners to consider and allow of the claims which those should make, who were to perform any service by tenure, on the day of that queen's coronation; and was constituted lord lieutenant of Cambridgeshire, and the isle of Ely; which was confirmed to him by another patent in the second year of her reign. And by his testament bearing date the 20th of March, 6 Elizabeth, bequeathed his body to be buried at Kirtling (now called Carthlage) in the county of Cambridge, and gave to his son and heir Sir Roger North, knight, his parliament robes, beseeching God to bless him, and give him his grace truly and faithfully to serve the queen, and this realm, and to beware of pride and prodigal expences. He was so fearful of both his sons unthriftiness, that he entailed his estate to prevent alienations, as strongly as the law of those times would bear, with a remainder to his kindred of Walkeringham.

He married to his first wife, Alice, daughter to Oliver Squire, of Southby, near Portsmouth, in the county of Southampton, widow of Edward Myrffyn, of London, son to an alderman of that city, and also the relict of John Brigadine, of Southampton, with whom he had a considerable fortune.

He had to his second wife, Margaret, daughter to Richard Butler, of London, widow of Sir David Brooke, knight, lord chief baron of the exchequer, who survived him, and had sepulture in the chancel of St. Lawrence Jury, London, where, on her tomb, is this epitaph.

Lo here the Lady Margaret North, in tombe and earth doth lye;

Of husbands four the faithful spouse, whose fame shall never dye.

One Andrew Fraunces was the first,
the second Robert hight,

Sirnamed Chartsey, Alderman;

Sir David Brooke, a Knight,

Was third. But he that passed all,

and was in number fourth,

And for his virtue made a lord, was call'd, Sir Edward North.

These all together do I wish a joyful rising day:

That of the Lord, and of his Christ,

all honour they may say.

Obiit 2 die Junii, An. Dom. 1575.

The said Edward, Lord North, departed this life, at his house called the Charter-house, in the suburbs of London, on Sunday, the last of December, A. D. 1564 (7 Eliz.) and was buried in a vault under the chancel at Carthlage, on the south side, which he had caused to be made for that purpose, where is this memorial on a monument of black marble.

Serva Fidem

Edwardum finxit Nortum natura beatum addidit et Magnas gracia Regis opes providus et sapiens claros suscepit honores et tamen in tanto comis honore fuit que natura dedit que gracia principis auxit omnia mors una sustulit atra die

qui obiit ultimo Decembris

Anno Domini

1564.

Habuit filios Rogerum nunc Dominum North, et Thomam filias vero Christianam et Mariam quarum altera Willi Comitis Wigornie uxor altera Henrica dno Scroop nupta.

“By his picture, whereof there is yet a copy remaining, he appears to have been a person of a moderate stature, somewhat inclined to corpulency, and a reddish hair. As to his character, it can only appear from what has been said of him; and his letters shew he rather affected the delivery of a full and a clear sense, than any curiosity of style or expression. The bravery of his mind may best be judged of, by his delight to live in an equipage rather above than under his condition and degree; and by his magnificence in buildings, which were very noble for materials and workmanship, as may appear by the two houses he set up at Kirtling and Charter-house. His piety, charity, and love of learning, is evident from his bestowing the parsonage of Burwell, on the university of Cambridge; as also the vicarage of Burwell. And to Peterhouse, the ancientest college of that university, as a token of his gratitude for what he gathered there in the way of learning, the parsonage of Ellington. He provided chapels in such houses he built, which shews a desire in him of an assiduity in the service of God by himself and family; which care of providing peculiar places for divine service, within families, was too much neglected in the following age, as may be witnessed by many great and stately houses then built. He also built a chapel for the interment of his posterity, adjoining to the south part of the chancel in Kirtling-church; for though the main superstition was expired, yet burials in those days were attended with the performance of much religious duty.”

On the inquisition taken the 26th of April, in 7 Eliz. the jury found that he died seized, in the county of Middlesex, of the manor of Harrow on the Hill, with the rectory thereof, and the capital messuage called the Parlonage-house; also the advowson of the vicarage of Harrow; the manor of Wood-hall; the manor of Hegeston; the manor of Suddebury, parcel of the liberty of Pinner Park, held of the king in capite, by the service of one knight's fee: also the manor of Hesse, alias Heisse, held of the archbishop of Canterbury: the Charter-house near London, and Charter-house Wood, in Tottenham, held of the king in capite: and lands called Welbeech, Sheepcroft, and Lambcroft, in the parish of Islington: Hurst, the forest of Shippeley, and Weybridge, in Surry. In Cambridgeshire, the manor of Kyrting, with the apurtenances, and advowson of the vicarage of the church; and advowson of the vicarage of the church of Asheley: the manor of Bampstedes, in Kirtling; the manor of Bampstedes, in Ditton, and Ditton Valence, with the appurtenances.

In Suffolk, the manor of Chardeloste, with the appurtenances in Cowling.

His issue by his first lady (by the second he had not any) were two daughters,

1. Christian, the wife of William Somerset, earl of Worcester.

2. Mary, the wife of Henry, lord Scroop, of Bolton.

And two sons,

1. Sir Roger North, his successor.

2. Sir Thomas North, who married first Elizabeth Colvill, secondly, the widow of — Bridge-man. By the latter only, he had issue a son, Edward North, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Wren, of Hadnam, in the county of Cambridge; and a daughter, Elizabeth, the wife of Thomas Hatteville, of Brinkley, in the county of Cambridge.

The eldest son, Sir ROGER NORTH, succeeding him in his honours, had summons to parliament in 8 Elizabeth, and took his place there accordingly. He had been elected in 2 and 3 Phillip and Mary, one of the knights of the shire for the county of Cambridge; and having, on queen Elizabeth's accession to the throne, received the honour of knighthood, was again elected one of the knights for that county in her first parliament; as also in her second parliament, which met at Westminster in the fifth year of her reign. In 9 Elizabeth, he accompanied the earl of Suffex, with the order of the Garter, to Maximilian, the emperor, then at Vienna. And in 15 Elizabeth, was one of the peers who then sat on the trial of Thomas, duke of Norfolk. In 21 Elizabeth, the queen being on her progress, honoured him with a visit at his seat in Cambridgeshire, where she was entertained (as Holinshed relates) not in the least behind any of the best, for a frank house, a noble heart, and a well-ordered entertainment. In 28 Elizabeth, having accompanied the earl of Leicester, general of the forces sent to the assistance of the States, he was, for his valour, made a knight banneret, and gained great reputation in the wars in the Netherlands. In that engagement before Zutphen, A. D. 1586, where Sir Philip Sidney received his death wound, he behaved with the greatest bravery: as appears by the earl of Leicester's letter to Sir Thomas Heneage, relating the hazardous enterprizes of this lord North, "who, though he had before been bruised on the knee with a musket shot, yet leaving his bed, hastened to this skirmish, one boot on, and the other off, and went to the matter very lustily," saith the earl.

His intimacy with that great peer, is evident from his memorial on his examination to prove the marriage of the earl with the lady Lettice, countess of Essex; and by his will, he had a legacy of a balon and ewer of forty pound value. His deposition being very memorable, we shall insert it for the satisfaction of the curious.

"On the 13th of March, A. D. 1580, 23 Eliz. Roger North, baron of Kirtling, of the age of forty years, saith, That he has byne very conversant with the erle of Leicester, by the space of theif ten or twelve yeares last passed. And that by reason of such familiaritie, the said erle of Leicester did sondry times, by manie good and godlie speeches, both acknowledge unto this deponent, and also humbly thank the Lord God for his infinite mercy and goodness, which he had bestowed and powered upon him in great measure of his blessing, still devising and studying how he might walk in those ways that might be most pleasing to his merciful God. And with all told this deponent, that there was nothing in this lief which he more desyred then to be joynd in marriage with some godlie gentlewoman, with whom he might lead his lief to the glory of God, the comfort of his soule, and to the faithfull service of her majestie, for whose sake he had hitherto forborn marriage, which long held him doubtfull. Theis, and such like speeches, passed from the said erle to this examinant; who, for his part, as he saith, did ever like this godlie disposition, and ever comforted his lordship therein, and harmed him thereunto. Whereupon, as he saith, the said erle did divers times impart to this deponent, the hartie love and affection which he bare unto the countess of Essex, whom he knew to be a most godlie and virtuous gentlewoman; adding with all, that he greatly desyred and longed after some yssue of his owne boddy, yf so itt pleased God to contynue and hold up his house and name. And after manie conferences passing betweene them, to this purpose, the said erle of Leicester brake with this deponent, as he saith (on a tyme) and tould him plainlie, that he was resolved to marry and take to wief the countesse of Essex, which in a short tyme he performed. For he sayeth, that on a Saterdaie, the 20th of September, an. Dni. 1578, (as far as he now remembreth) the queen's majestie then lying at Stovers-house in the forrest, the erle of Leicester went to his house at Wainsted, to bedd, and tooke this deponent with him. In which night there was also at Wainsted, the erles of Warwick, and Pembroke, Sir Francis Knolles, and the countess of Essex. At which tyme and place the said erle of Leicester told this deponent after supper, that he intended to be married the next morning, by the leave of God, and therefore prayed this deponent to ryse somewhat betimes for that purpose. Whereupon the daie following beinge Sundaie, this examinant rose early, and came to the said Erle, whom he found walkinge in a little gallery lery looking towards the garden. And after ordinary salutation, the Erle of Leicester said to this deponent, that he should presently solemnize, y^e the Lords and Sir Francis Knolles were reddey. And thereupon departed from this examinant to fetch them together; and gave this deponent his double key, praying to go downe, and to bring up thither, by the privy way, Mr. Tindall, a chaplain of his lordship's, which this deponent (as he sayeth) did accordingly, inasmuch as this deponent and Mr. Tindall, were in the said gallery first; and ymmediately after came the Erles of Leicester, Warwick, and Pembroke, Mr. Treasurer Knolles, and then the Countess of Essex. In which time and place, and in the presence of the persons aforesaid, Mr. Tindall did marry the aforesaid Erle of Leicester and Countess of Essex together, by the booke of Common Prayer, after the due order of the same. And Mr. Treasurer Knolles, father of the Countess, did give her. And further this deponent sayeth, he well remembreth, that as he looked aside, he saw Mr. Richard Knolles, brother to the Countess, stand in the door which came out of the Erle's chamber, with his body half in the gallery and half out, who, together with the persons beforementioned, both saw and heard the solemnization of the said marriage. And other the deponent knows not."

This lord North was ambassador extraordinary from queen Elizabeth to Charles IX. king of France, and was sworn of the privy-council to the queen; also constituted treasurer of the household, 39th of Elizabeth, on the death of Sir Francis Knolles, knight of the Garter. His last will bears date on the 20th of October, in the 40th of Elizabeth, wherein he bequeathed his body to sepulture in the church of Kirtling; where he was buried on the 22d of December following, by Garter king at arms, and a monument erected to his memory, with this inscription:

*Durum pat
Rogerus dominus North de Kirtlinge
Thesaurarius Hospitii Regii et e Sacris
Consilii sub Regina Elizabetha uxorem
Duxit Winifridam filiam Ricardi domini Rich. de Lees in Com. Essex, Summi Anglie Cancellarii; ex qua filios genuit Johannem, et Henricum, Milites, et filiam unicam Mariam qua decessit innupta.
Diem obiit extremum Anno Etatis LXX^{mo} et Anno Domini MDC^{mo}.*

He died in the seventieth year of his age, on the 3d of December, 1600; and Camden (in his History of queen Elizabeth) gives this character of him, "That he was a person of great briskness and vivacity, with an head and heart fit for service."

Sir Henry North, his youngest son, taking early to arms, was, in the 20th of Elizabeth, in that expedition to Noremberg, under Sir Humphry Gilbert; and in the 28th of Elizabeth, serving with his father in the Low Country wars, he had the honour of knighthood conferred on him by the earl of Leicester. He was seated at Mildenhall, in Suffolk; and having married Mary, daughter and coheir to Richard Knevit, esquire, (son and heir of Christopher Knevit, esquire, younger son of Sir William Knevit, knight) had two sons, Sir Roger North, and Henry North, of Laxfield, in Suffolk, esquire, in right of his wife Sarah, daughter and heir of John Jennory, of Laxfield, esquire, by whom he had two sons, Henry and Edward. Sir Roger, the eldest son, was seated at Finborough, in Suffolk, in right of Elizabeth his wife, daughter and coheir of Sir John Gilbert, of Finborough, knight, by whom he had issue Sir Henry North, of Mildenhall, in Suffolk, who was created a baronet, the 14th of June, A. D. 1660, and Dudley North, second son.

Sir JOHN NORTH, eldest son of Roger, lord North, in the 21st of Elizabeth, with other brave young men, transported themselves (as Camden has observed) into the Netherlands, to learn the rudiments of military discipline. He was elected, in the 27th of Elizabeth, one of the knights of the shire for the county of Cambridge, as also in the two succeeding parliaments in the 28th and 31st years of that queen; and, having afterwards received the honour of knighthood, died in the life-time of his father, in the wars of the Netherlands, on the 5th of June, A. D. 1597. He married Dorothy, daughter and coheir of Sir Valentine Dale, doctor of the civil law, and master of the requests, by whom he had issue four sons,

1. Dudley North, who succeeded to the title of lord North.

2. John North, who was made a knight of the Bath.

3. Roger North, who was a sea-commander of note, and engaged in making new discoveries, for the honour of his country.

4. Gilbert North.

Also two daughters, 1. Elizabeth, married to William, son and heir to Sir Jer. Horsey.

2. Mary, wedded to Sir Francis Coningsby, of South Mymmes, in the county of Hertford, knight.

DUDLEY NORTH, (lord North as successor to his grandfather) married Frances, daughter and coheir of Sir John Broucket, of Broucket-hall, in the county of Hereford, by whom he had issue four sons,

1. Dudley North, who succeeded him.

2. Charles North, who died in his life-time.

3. Robert North.

4. John North.

Also two daughters,

1. Dorothy, married first, to Richard, lord Dacres of the South, at St. Margaret's, Westminster, January 20, A. D. 1624; secondly, to Charles, lord of the Vint, Hampshire.

2. Elizabeth, who died unmarried.

The said Dudley, lord North, was nominated, A. D. 1645, by both houses of parliament, with the earls of Northumberland, Essex, Warwick, and others, to manage the affairs of the admiralty. He lived to be very old, departing this life on the 16th of January, A. D. 1666, being then eighty-five years of age, and was buried at Carthage.

His son and heir,

DUDLEY NORTH, lord North, had a learned education in the university of Cambridge. He was made knight of the Bath, A. D. 1616, at the creation of Charles, prince of Wales, and was elected selected one of the knights of the shire for the county of Cambridge, in the two last parliaments of Charles I. He wrote several essays (printed A. D. 1682) and some notes concerning the life of Edward, lord North, addressed to his eldest son. His essays are, Light in the way to paradise, with other occasionals, Of Truth, Of Goodness, Of Eternity, Of Original Sin; which shews he was stedfast in his religion, according to the established church in our nation, and led an exemplary life. He had issue, by Anne his wife, daughter and coheir to Sir Charles Montagu, knight, (a younger brother to Henry, earl of Manchester) fourteen children, whereof six sons and four daughters lived to maturity, viz.

1. Charles North, his son and heir.
2. Sir Francis North, knight, lord Guilford, ancestor to the present lord North and Guilford.
3. Sir Dudley North, who died the 31st of December, A. D. 1691, having married Anne, daughter of Sir Robert Cann, of the city of Bristol, baronet, and widow of Sir Robert Gunning, of Cold-Ashton, near the said city, by whom he left issue two sons, Dudley North, of Glemham, in the county of Suffolk, esquire, who married Catharine, daughter of Elihu Yale, esquire, (by whom he had a son, Dudley North, and two daughters, Anne and Mary); and Roger North.
4. John North, the fourth son, doctor of divinity, was an excellent Grecian; and published, A. D. 1673, a Review of Plato's select Dialogues, de Rebus Divinis, in Greek and Latin. He was clerk of the closet to king Charles II. prebendary of Westminster, and died master of Trinity-college, in Cambridge, A. D. 1683, unmarried.

5. Montagu North, who married Mary, daughter of Sir Robert Geers, of Stoke, near Windsor, by whom he had issue two sons and five daughters.

6. Roger North, attorney-general to the consort of king James II. He was seated at Rougham, in Norfolk, and married Mary, daughter of Robert Gayer, of Stoke Poges, in Berkshire, esquire. His descendants are entered in the table.

The four daughters of the said Dudley, lord North, were,

1. Mary, married to Sir William Spring, of Pakenham, in the county of Suffolk, baronet.
2. Anne, married to Robert Foley, of Stourbridge, in Worcestershire, esquire.
3. Elizabeth, married to Sir Robert Wiseman, knight, doctor of the civil law, and afterwards to William, earl of Yarmouth.
4. Christian, married to Sir George Wynieve, of Brettenham, in the county of Suffolk, knight.

Dudley, lord North, their father, died on the 24th of June, A. D. 1677, and was buried at Carthage; where a monument is erected, with this inscription to his memory:

*Hic humatus est Dudleius North Miles de Balneo Baro North de
Kirtling, qui duxit uxorem Annam
Filiam et Coheredem anti Caroli*

*Montague Equitis Aurati, et ex ea Suscepit quatuordecem Liberos, et Superstites reliquit novem, scilicet
Sex filios, et tres filias. Obiit*

*Vicesimo quarto Junii 1677. Hec
Marmor superimposuit Vidua Marens Uxor.*

Anne, his lady, surviving him, died A. D. 1680, aged sixty-seven, and was buried by him.

Their eldest son,

CHARLES NORTH, lord North, having married Catharine, daughter to William, lord Grey, of Wark, widow of Sir Edward Moseley, of the Hough, in the county palatine of Lancashire, baronet, was, in the life-time of his father, by a special writ of summons, called to parliament, in the 25th of Charles II. by the title of Charles, lord Grey of Rolleston, in the county of Stafford; and departing this life in the fifty-sixth year of his age, A. D. 1690, was buried at Carthage, where is this memorial:

*Hic humatus est Dom Carolus North
Baro North & Grey de Kirtling, &
Rolleston, qui duxit Katherineam filiam Dom. Gulielmi Grey,
Baronis Grey de Wark, et ex ea suscepit
Septem Liberos et Superstites
Reliquit quatuor scilicet duos filios, & duas filias. Hec Marmor Vidua superimposuit.
obiit Anno { Saluti 1690.
Aetatis sue 56.*

His two sons were,

1. William North, lord North and Grey, born the 12th of December, A. D. 1673.
2. Charles North, who died in Flanders, during the siege of Lille, unmarried.

His daughters were,

1. Cicely, } died infants.
2. Frances, }

WILLIAM NORTH, lord North and Grey, took his place in the house of peers, the 16th of January, A. D. 1698. In the reign of queen Anne he was lord-lieutenant of the county of Cambridge, governor of Portsmouth, lieutenant-general of her majesty's forces, and one of her privy-council. He served under the duke of Marlborough, thro' the whole course of the war, and, at the battle of Hochster, had his right hand shot off. His lordship married Maria-Margaretta, daughter of Mons. Ellmeet, receiver-general to the States of Holland, and the other provinces, but had no issue by her; and, departing this life at Madrid, the 31st of October, A. D. 1734, the title of lord Grey, of Rolleston, became extinct; and the title of lord North devolved on Francis, lord Guilford, son and heir of Francis, lord Guilford, son and heir of Francis, created lord Guilford, second son of Dudley, lord North of Carthage; which last,

(First Lord) FRANCIS NORTH, applying himself to the study of the laws in the Middle-Temple, he became so eminent for his great learning and knowledge therein, that king Charles II. conferred the honour of knighthood on him, the 23d of May, A. D. 1671; and, on the same day, he was sworn into the office of solicitor-general to his majesty. In A. D. 1673, he was constituted attorney-general, succeeding Sir Heneage Finch, on his being made lord-keeper. In A. D. 1674, at the beginning of Hillary term, his majesty, in consideration of his faithful services, appointed him to succeed Sir John Vaughan, late lord chief justice of the court of Common Pleas: "Whereupon he appeared in the High Court of Chancery; and being sworn serjeant, and performing all formalities belonging to that degree, the lord keeper of the great seal came into the court of Common-Pleas, and declared the king's pleasure to him, in an eloquent speech. Upon which Sir Francis North, standing in the middle of the bar of the said court, made his acknowledgments of the king's great favour, and returned his humble thanks to his majesty; and was immediately conducted from thence, between the two ancientest serjeants, into the said court, where the lord keeper delivered unto him his patent of the said office: and after he had taken the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and the oath of chief justice of that court, the lord keeper put on his square cap; and he took his seat of chief justice, and afterwards entertained the lord keeper, and divers of the nobility, and all the judges and serjeants, at dinner, at Serjeants-inn in Chancery-lane."

ning

In the year A. D. 1679, when his majesty dissolved his privy-council, declaring he would lay aside the use he had hitherto made of a single ministry, and his resolution to chuse a new privy-council, "Whose known abilities, interest, and esteem in the nation should render them without all suspicion of either mistaking, or betraying the true interest of the kingdom," the lord chief-justice North was in that right honourable list.

On the death of the earl of Nottingham, his majesty, on December 20, A. D. 1682, committed the custody of the great seal to him, with the title of lord keeper of the great seal of England; and, two days after, his lordship was sworn at the council-board, and took his place as lord keeper. Likewise his majesty, as a mark of the gracious esteem he had for the great and faithful services, which the right honourable Sir Francis North, lord keeper of the great seal of England, had rendered the crown, created him a baron of this kingdom, by the name and stile of lord Guilford, baron of Guilford, in the county of Sury, by letters patent bearing date the 27th of September, A. D. 1683, 35 Charles II.

On the accession of king James to the throne, his lordship was continued lord keeper of the great seal; and, on his coronation, was one of the commissioners to determine the claims of such, who, in regard to divers tenures, exhibited their petitions to perform several services on the coronation-day, by ancient customs and usages of the realm: in which year his lordship departed this life, viz. on Saturday, September 5, at his seat at Wroxton, near Banbury, in Oxfordshire, and was buried in a vault under part of the church there, among the ancestors of his lady, Frances, second daughter and coheir of Thomas Pope, earl of Down; which lady died A. D. 1678, and was also buried there.

His lordship had issue, by her, three sons.

1. Francis North, his successor.
2. Charles North, who served in several parliaments for Banbury, and died unmarried.
3. Pope North, who died an infant.

Also two daughters.

1. Anne, who died unmarried.

2. Frances, who died an infant.

His eldest son,

(Second Lord.) FRANCIS NORTH, born on the 14th of December, A. D. 1673, had his education in Trinity-college, in Oxford, and, being about to leave the university, was created master of arts, the 11th of December, A. D. 1690. On the 30th of November, A. D. 1694, his lordship took his place in the house of peers: and the 25th of February, 1694-5, married Elizabeth, third daughter of Fulk Grevil, lord Brook, who died in child-bed in November, A. D. 1699, leaving no issue surviving her.

His lordship had for his second lady, Alice, second daughter and coheir of Sir John Brownlow, of Belton, in the county of Lincoln, baronet, by whom he had issue three sons.

1. Francis North, now earl of Guilford.
2. Brownlow North, } who died infants.
3. Peregrine North, }

As also a daughter, Alice, who died unmarried.

In the first year of queen Anne, his lordship was constituted lord-lieutenant of the county of Essex, and town of Colchester, and custos rotulorum thereof; and on the 7th of July, A. D. 1712, one of the lords commissioners for trade, and the plantations. Also, in July, 1714, was constituted first lord commissioner for trade and the plantations; and was one of her majesty's most honourable privy council; and departing this life on the 17th of October, A. D. 1729, was buried at Wroxton.

His eldest and only surviving son,

(Present Earl.) FRANCIS NORTH, now earl of Guilford, born the 13th of April, A. D. 1704, was chosen a member for the borough of Banbury, in the county of Oxford, in the first parliament called by our late sovereign; and, after succeeding his father, was, in October, A. D. 1730, appointed one of the gentlemen of the bed-chamber to his royal highness the prince of Wales.

On the 31st of October, A. D. 1734, he succeeded to the title of lord North, by the death of William, lord North and Grey, whose heir he was: and his royal highness the prince of Wales was pleased to appoint him tutor to his son, prince George, (our now gracious sovereign) 1750; and his majesty was pleased to created him earl of Guilford, by letters patent, bearing date April 8, 1752.

He married on the 16th of June, A. D. 1728, Lucy, daughter of George, earl of Halifax, by Ricarda Posthuma, daughter and sole heir of Richard Saltonstall, of Chippin Warden, in Northamptonshire, esquire, and by her ladyship, who departed this life on the 7th of May, A. D. 1734, and was buried at Wroxton, had issue a daughter, Lucy, who died an infant, and was interred at Wroxton; also a son, Frederic North, lord North.

His lordship married, secondly, in January, A. D. 1735-6, Elizabeth, only daughter of Sir Arthur Keye, of Woodsome, in Yorkshire, baronet, and widow of George, lord viscount Lewesham, eldest son to William Legge, earl of Dartmouth. By this lady, who died on the 21st of April, A. D. 1745, he had issue two sons and three daughters; the latter were,

1. Louisa, born March 13, 1737-8, married to John Peyto Verney, baron Willoughby de Broke.
2. Frances, born February 14, A. D. 1738-9, died an infant, and was buried at Wroxton.

3. Charlotte, born December 28, A. D. 1742, died an infant, March 2, A. D. 1748, and was interred at Audley Chaple.

The sons were,

1. Augustus-Francis North, born February 1, A. D. 1739-40, who died young, August 24, A. D. 1745, and was buried at Wroxton.

2. Brownlow North, born July 17, A. D. 1741. He married, thirdly, on the 13th of June, A. D. 1751, Catherine, daughter and coheir of Sir Robert Furnese, of Waldershare, in Kent, baronet, and widow of Lewis, earl of Rockingham; but from this marriage there is no issue. His lordship is high steward of Banbury.

His only son by the first marriage, FREDERIC NORTH, commonly called lord North, was born on the 13th of April, A. D. 1732. In A. D. 1754, he was returned member for Banbury, and, on the 2d of June, A. D. 1759, he was appointed one of the lords commissioners of the treasure, and rechosen for Banbury. In A. D. 1761, he was at the general election again chosen for Banbury; and, A. D. 1766, was appointed joint paymaster of his majesty's land forces.

In May, A. D. 1756, he married Anne, daughter and coheir of George Spike, of White Lackington, in the county of Somerset, esquire, by whom he has issue,

1. George-Augustus North, born September 11, A. D. 1757.

2. Catherine-Anne, born February 16, 1760.

3. Francis North, born December 25, A. D. 1761.

4. Anne, born January 8, A. D. 1764.

(TITLES.) Francis North, earl of Guilford; lord North and Guilford.

(CREATIONS.) Baron North of Kirtling, in Cambridgeshire, by writ of summons to parliament, February 17, A. D. 1553, (1 Mary) baron of Guilford in the county of Surry, September 27, A. D. 1683, (35 Charles II.) and earl of Guilford, March 8, A. D. 1752, (24 George II.)

(ARMS.) Sapphire, a lion passant, topaz, between three fleurs de lis, pearl.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a dragon's head erased, diamond, ducally gorged and chained, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two dragons, diamond, gorged with a ducal coronet, topaz, sometimes two English mastiffs proper. The former as lord North, the latter as lord Guilford.

(MOTTO.) "Animo & fide."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Kirtlage, near Newmarket, in the county of Cambridge, and at Wroxton abbey, near Banbury, in the county of Oxford.

CORNWALLIS, Earl CORNWALLIS.

THIS noble family derive their descent from Thomas Cornwalleys*, a younger brother, born in Ireland. Which

THOMAS CORNWALLEYS was sheriff of London, in the second year of the reign of king Richard II. 1378, and having married Joan, daughter of William Hansard, and relict of Henry Farmer, died on the 4th of January, A. D. 1384, and was buried in the church of St. Martin's-Vintry, London.

He was succeeded by,

JOHN CORNWALLIS, his son and heir, who added to his patrimony the lordships of Broome, and Okeley, with other lands in the county of Suffolk, by marriage with Philippa, daughter, and one of the heirs, of Robert Buxton, who died possessed of the said manors, &c. on the 17th of December, A. D. 1408, whose wife was daughter and heir of Braham, who married the daughter and heir of Sir Robert a Tye.

He was elected one of the knights of the shire for the county of Suffolk, in two parliaments, in the reign of king Richard II. and died in August, 1436, as his last will and testament shews, which bears date the 10th of August, A. D. 1436, in the 14th year of king Henry, after the conquest, and the probate thereof the 23d of the same month and year.

He had issue two sons,

1. Thomas Cornwallis.

2. John Cornwallis.

And a daughter, Catherine.

THOMAS CORNWALLIS, esquire, his eldest son and heir, took to wife Philippa, daughter and heir of Edward Tyrrel, of Downham, in the county of Essex, and died the year after his father, on the Monday after the feast of the blessed Virgin Mary, in the 15th of Henry VI. leaving Thomas

* That several of the name were in England before his time, our records plainly demonstrate. Philip Cornwalleys was living in the reign of king Henry III. and departed this life in the year 1291, 20 Edward I. and Robert Cornwalleys deceased in 24 Edw. III. and was probably father to this Thomas Cornwalleys.

his son and heir, twenty-one years of age, and upwards; which

THOMAS CORNWALLIS, esquire, and John Howard, esquire, were returned knights for the county of Suffolk, to the parliament held in the 28th of Henry VI. He left issue four sons,

1. John Cornwallis.
2. Edward Cornwallis.
3. Robert Cornwallis.
4. William Cornwallis.

And a daughter,

Catherine, married to Francis Froxmer, esq.

JOHN CORNWALLIS, the eldest son, succeeded to the lordships of Broome, &c. but died without issue in the 22d year of king Henry VII. A. D. 1506, as his last will and testament shews, and the probate, which bears date the 29th of November the same year.

His brother,

EDWARD CORNWALLIS, succeeded to the estate, and died without issue four years after him, as appears by a grave-stone at the upper end of the chancel of the church of Broome, (where he was buried) which had this inscription ingraved on brass:

*Orate p Aia Edwardi Cornwallis Arm qui obijt IIII die Septembris Anno dni MDX.
Cujus Aio propitiatur Deus.*

To whom succeeded,

ROBERT CORNWALLIS, his brother and heir, who married a daughter of the family of Mountney, and dying likewise without issue, was succeeded by his younger brother, WILLIAM CORNWALLIS, who, though his brethren were living, was among those gentlemen of the county of Suffolk, who were certified in the 17th of Henry VII. to have an estate sufficient to support the degree of a knight of the Bath, several being to take that order on the creation of Henry prince of Wales. And, in the fifth year of king Henry VIII. he was among the principal persons of the county of Suffolk, nominated by act of parliament, as most discreet persons, justices of the peace, for assessing a subsidy of one hundred and sixty-three thousand pounds, by a poll-tax, &c. for defraying the expence of taking Teroven and Tournay. He took to wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Stamford, esquire, and departed this life in November, A. D. 1519, the 11th of Henry VIII. as his last will, dated November 8, and the probate thereof, dated November 29, A. D. 1519, shews.

He was buried at Ockley, as is evident from a grave-stone in the east end of the chancel of the church, whereon is engraved the following inscription; but the time of his death is not truly set down:

Orate pro animabus Willielmi Cornwalles et Elisabethe uxoris sue qui quidem Willielmus obiit Anno Domini MDxx Quorum animabus propitiatur Deus. Amen.

The said Elizabeth, his wife, lived a widow upwards of seventeen years, and writing herself of Thrandeston, made her will the 30th of May, A. D. 1537.

Their issue were five sons,

1. Sir John Cornwallis.
2. Thomas Cornwallis, in holy orders. He was archdeacon of Norwich.
3. Edward Cornwallis, groom-porter to queen Elizabeth.
4. William Cornwallis.
5. Francis Cornwallis, of Peckham, in the parish of Camberwell, Surry, who succeeded his brother Edward as groom-porter.

And six daughters,

1. Edith, married to William West, of Grinstead, in Suffex.
2. Prudence, married to ——— Roydon.
3. Catherine, a nun.
4. Offra, married to Sir Anthony Archer, kt.
5. Elizabeth, married to ——— Shingleton.
6. Dorothy, married to John Hyde of Kent.

SIR JOHN CORNWALLIS (eldest son and heir of William) was in that expedition in the 13th year of king Henry VIII. with the earl of Surry, lord high admiral, who, after scouring the seas, landed at Morlaix, in Bretagne, and behaving himself with great bravery in storming the town, he had then the honour of knighthood conferred on him by the said earl.

About the forty-sixth year of his age, he was by king Henry VIII. called to be steward of the household to prince Henry his son. In which office he served six years, and departed this life at Ashruge, in the county of Buckingham, the 23d of April, A. D. 1544. His last will bears date the 10th of April, A. D. 1544, the 35th of Henry VIII. and the probate thereof the 9th of July following.

It further appears, that this Sir John Cornwallis was a gentleman of great parts and integrity, an indulgent and careful father, as well as a kind master to his servants, and a master of œconomy.

A noble tomb is erected to his memory in the chancel of the church of Broome, the figures of him and his lady lying thereon, under an arch; he in compleat armour, with a white staff in his hand, and a spotted greyhound, dun and white, couched at his feet; and at her feet, a hound, spotted red and white, with four escutcheons on either side, and three on the west end, with this inscription round the tomb:

Johannes Cornwalleis miles Willelmi Cornwalleis Armigeri filius, in Domo Principis Edwardi Oeconomus, et uxor ejusdem Maria Edwardi Sulliard de Essex Filia. Qui quidem Johannes XXIII Aprilis, Anno Dni. M.D.xliiii. obiit Astrugie in Comitatu Buckingham, cum ibidem Princeps Edwardus versaretur.

He married Mary, daughter of Edward Sulliard, of Essex, esquire, and had issue four sons and three daughters.

1. Sir Thomas Cornwallis.
2. Henry Cornwallis, who was ancestor to those of the name at Buxton, in the county of Norfolk.
3. Richard Cornwallis, who, according to the appointment of his father, married Margaret Lowth, daughter and heir of Lionel Lowth, of Santry, in the county of Lancaster, esquire, and was father of Sir Thomas Cornwallis, groom-porter to queen Elizabeth and king James, who died on the 18th of November, A. D. 1618, leaving issue

by

by Elizabeth his wife, second daughter of John Molineux, of Thorp, in the county of Nottingham, esquire, three sons and one daughter.

4. William Cornwallis.

The three daughters were,

1. Anne, the wife of Thomas Kent.

2. Mary, married first, to William Hales, secondly, to Roger Warren.

3. Elizabeth, married to John Bleyerhaffet.

Sir THOMAS CORNWALLIS, eldest son of Sir John, received the honour of knighthood at Westminster, on the first of December, in the second year of king Edward the sixth; and in that commotion in Norfolk, under Ket, the tanner, A. D. 1549, (4 Edw. VI.) bringing forces to the assistance of the marquis of Northampton, at that time sent to suppress those rebels, behaved himself with great bravery in entering the city of Norwich, together with the lord Sheffield, who was there slain: and Sir Thomas, being overpowered, was taken prisoner, and detained till the king's forces relieved him. He was sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, in the last year of the reign of that king; and coming to the aid of queen Mary, with the forces of those counties, who at the time of the decease of king Edward, was at Framlingham castle in Suffolk, it was the principal means of advancing that princess to the throne.

He was also very instrumental in suppressing Wyatt's insurrection; and, with the earl of Suffex, and Sir Edward Hastings, was commissioned for the trial of Sir Thomas Wyatt. Whereupon he was sworn of her privy-council, and constituted treasurer of Calais; from whence he was recalled, not full two months before the taking of the said town by the French. He served in parliament in the first year of her reign, for Gatton, in Surry; and in the fourth and fifth of Philip and Mary, was elected one of the knights for the county of Suffolk. On 25 December, A. D. 1557, he was made comptroller of the household, on the decease of Sir Robert Rochester, knight of the Garter, being in great favour with the queen, who placed a special confidence in him, and relied on his councils. He was sent to Sir Thomas Wyatt, at Dartford, in Kent, to know the cause of his taking arms, and on that occasion was also sent to the princess Elizabeth, at Ashbridge, to acquaint her with the queen's pleasure, that she should immediately repair to London. And when it was debated in council to send that princess out of England, with design to exclude her from the succession, Sir Thomas Cornwallis, by his arguments, dissuaded the queen from it, alledging, that the people of England would take it very ill, nay, would not at all endure, that the next heir to the crown should be conveyed out of the land. Nevertheless, on queen Elizabeth's accession to the crown, being not of her religion, he was left out of the privy council, and removed from his place of comptroller of the household, which induced him to retire into the country, where he rebuilt his mansion-house of Brome-hall; and departing this life on the 26th of December, A. D. 1604, (2 Jac. I.) in the eighty-sixth year of his age, had sepulture with his ancestors in the church at Brome. A fine marble tomb is erected to his memory, against the north wall of the chancel, whereon are the statues of him and his lady carved in stone; he in armour, and at his feet a white buck couched, with a wreath about his neck of green acorns proper, wounded in his left shoulder: and at her feet is a falcon issuant, seiant, out of a crown, or. This inscription being on the tomb:

Here lies Sir Thomas Cornwallis, son of Sir John, who was of queen Mary princely counsell, and Treasurer of Cales, and after Controller of her Majesties household, in especiall grace and trust of his mistress at her untimely death.

He took to wife, Anne, daughter of Sir John Jerningham, of Somerlaytown, in the county of Suffolk, knight, and of Bridget, his wife, daughter of Sir Robert Drury, of Halsted, by whom he had issue two sons,

1. William Cornwallis.

2. Charles Cornwallis.

As also three daughters,

1. Elizabeth, married to Sir Thomas Kitson, of Hengrave, in the county of Suffolk, knight.

2. Anne, wife of William Halse, of Devonshire, esquire.

3. Alice, wedded to Richard Southwell, Esq;

His second son, Charles Cornwallis, was highly esteemed for his eminent abilities. He was knighted by king James the first, on his arrival from Scotland, at the Charter-house, 11 May, A. D. 1603, who sent him ambassador into Spain, where he resided for some years with great reputation; and it is memorable of him, that Francis, lord Cottington, was brought up in his service, who, from being one of his clerks, became so well qualified, that, after being employed in several weighty affairs, he was advanced to the dignity of a baron of this realm. In the year 1610, when the household of Henry, prince of Wales, was established, Sir Charles Cornwallis was constituted treasurer to his royal highness; and, departing this life, had sepulture in the parish church of St. Giles's in the fields, London. By Elizabeth, his first wife, daughter of Thomas Farnham, of Fincham, in the county of Norfolk, he had issue two sons, William and Thomas; the former was a most ingenious gentleman, as appears by essays he wrote on several subjects, wherein he has lively displayed, with great wit and judgment, the chief characters of life; which were published after his death. In the year 1632, he was knighted; and by Catherine, his wife, daughter of Sir Philip Parker, of Arwarton, in the county of Suffolk, left issue Charles, his son and heir. The before-mentioned Sir Charles Cornwallis, by his second wife Anne, daughter of Thomas Barrow, and widow of Ralph Selden, esquire, had issue Sir Francis Cornwallis, who took to wife Elizabeth, sole daughter and heir of Sir Henry Jones, of Abermarles, in the county of Carmarthen, baronet, by whom he was father of Thomas Cornwallis, esquire, a most accomplished gentleman, who married Emma, daughter of Sir Job Charlton, of Ludford, in Herefordshire, knight, and baronet, and dying the 16th of July, A. D. 1703, left one son and five daughters surviving, and was buried by his grandfather, and father, in the church of St. Giles's London; and a monument was erected to his memory on the south side of the chancel, with an inscription, which gives him a fine character. One of his daughters, Frances, was second wife to Sir Charles Lloyd, of Milfield, in the county of Cardigan, digan, knight, and baronet, father to Sir Charles, and Sir Lucius-Christianus Lloyd, baronets: which Emma surviving him, was married secondly, to Dr. John Robinson, bishop of London.

Sir WILLIAM CORNWALLIS, elder brother of the said Sir Charles, embarking with Robert Devereux, earl of Essex, in his expedition against the rebels in Ireland, A. D. 1599, was, for his services in that kingdom, knighted at Dublin, on the 5th of August the same year. He had to his first wife, Lucy, eldest daughter and coheir to John Nevil, lord Latimer, and of Lucy, his wife, daughter of Henry, earl of Worcester, by whom he had issue,

1. William Cornwallis, who died young, A. D. 1565, and was buried at Hengrave, as a grave-stone in that church shews.

2. Thomas Cornwallis.

And four daughters,

1. Frances, married to Sir Edmund Withipole, knight.

2. Elizabeth, wedded to Thomas Sands, Esq;

3. Catherine, married to Richard Farmer, esquire.

4. Dorothy, married to Archibald, earl of Argyll.

By his second wife, Jane, daughter of Hercules Mewtas, esquire, who survived him, and was afterwards the wife of Sir Nathaniel Bacon, of Culford in Suffolk, knight of the Bath, he had issue Frederic Cornwallis, who, for his eminent services, was created lord Cornwallis; but his father, Sir William, was succeeded in the greatest part of his estate by Thomas, his son and heir, by Lucy, daughter of the lord Latimer, which

THOMAS CORNWALLIS was elected one of the knights for the county of Suffolk, in the first parliament called by king Charles the first; and departing this life unmarried, the year after, was succeeded by his brother Frederic. The said (First Lord.) FREDERIC CORNWALLIS, was in his youth introduced by his uncle, Sir Charles Cornwallis, into the service of prince Henry, eldest son of king James the first; and was also in the service of king Charles the first, when prince of Wales, waiting on him in his journey to Spain. After succeeding his brother, he was created a baronet, by letters-patent bearing date May 4, A. D. 1627, 3 Car. I. and received the honour of knighthood at Whitehall, on the second of December, A. D. 1630. He was elected to parliament for the borough of Eye, in the fifteenth year of king Charles the first; as also in that parliament which met at Westminster, A. D. 1640, when, discerning that the violent measures of the predominant party tended to the ruin of his country, he opposed their proceedings with some warmth, and thereupon was inserted in the list of those who were maligned, under the title of Staffordians. He retired with his majesty, and sat among those members assembled at Oxford, in January, A. D. 1643; about which time, his first lady departing this life, was buried at Christ-church in that city.

Being of too warm a temper to sit still in those times of confusion, he was concerned in most of the principal actions in the civil wars, and distinguished for his gallant behaviour on several occasions, particularly in the fight at Cropredy bridge, in the county of Oxford, June 30, A. D. 1644; where he rescued the lord Wilmot, then taken prisoner by the rebels. And, when all places had surrendered to the parliament, and his estate was sequestered, he followed king Charles the second in his exile; was in his triumphant entry through the city of London, May 29, A. D. 1660, and the next day was declared treasurer of his majesty's household, and sworn of his privy-council. Also, on Saturday in the afternoon, the 20th of April, A. D. 1661, three days before his majesty's coronation, he was created, with other noble persons, in the banqueting-room at Whitehall, a baron of the realm, by the title of lord Cornwallis, of Eye, in the county of Suffolk, "having (as the preamble to the patent sets forth) from his youth with great fidelity, served king Charles the first, in court and camp, for which he suffered the loss of his estate, imprisonment, and exile; and, in testimony of the high esteem his majesty had of his merits, he advanced him to the said degree and dignity."

But soon after he departed this life, dying suddenly of an apoplectic fit, the last day of January, A. D. 1661-2, generally lamented, being "a man of so chearful a spirit, that no sorrow came next his heart; and of so resolved a mind, that no fear came into his thoughts; so perfect a master of courtly and becoming raillery, that he could do more with one word in jest, than others could do with whole harangues in earnest; a well-spoken man, competently seen in modern languages, and of a comely and goodly personage." This noble lord lies buried with his ancestors in the chancel of the church of Broome: and, on a monument erected to his memory, is the following inscription:

*Exuvie Prænobilis Viri Frederici Dni
Cornwallis Baronis de Eye, Hospitii Regii
Thesaurarii, et Regiæ Majestatis a Secretioribus
Consiliis: Qui Eximâ Uxore Dom. Elizabetha
Ashburnham (Oxonii in Æde Christi tumulata)
Quatuor suscepit Liberos, Carolum et Fredericum, Henriettam-Mariam, et Georgium
Defunctos. Ex 2^{da} Dom. Eliz. Crofts Post
Multos in Infantia abreptos unicum Janam
Superstitum. Hic Pro inconcussa in Regem Fide proscriptionem et exilium Passus a per-duellibus Tandem Caelestem Invenit Patriam
Et in Gremio restauratæ Ecclesiæ placide
Obdormivit Ultimo Die Januarii
Anno Salu. MDCLXI*

By the said Elizabeth, his first lady, daughter of Sir John Ashburnham, of Ashburnham, in the county of Suffex, knight, by Elizabeth Beaumont his wife, baroness Cramond, in Scotland, and sister to the countess of Bucks, mother of George Villiers, duke of Buckingham, he had issue three sons,

1. Charles, his successor.

2. Frederic, who married Anne, daughter of — Barber, and left three daughters; Jane, Ann, and Catherine.

3. George.

And a daughter, Henrietta-Maria, who died unmarried.

By his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry Crofts, of Saxham, in the county of Suffolk, folk, knight, he left an only child, Jane, baptized October 1, A. D. 1641, and married to William, son and heir of Sir John Duncomb, of Battlefen, in the county of Bedford, knight.

(Second Lord.) Sir CHARLES CORNWALLIS was elected one of the members for the borough of Eye; to that parliament which restored king Charles the second; at whose coronation he was made one of the knights of the Bath. He succeeded to the peerage upon the demise of his father; and, departing this life on the 13th of April, A. D. 1673, was buried by Margaret his wife, at Culford, in the county of Suffolk, the 17th following. She was daughter of Thomas Playsted, esquire, and died five years before him. In the chancel of Culford church, in Suffolk, is the following inscription:

Deposita Leatiffimæ Heroinæ D. MARGARETÆ CORNWALLIS Castiss, Conjugis CAROLI CORNWALLIS Baronis de Eye, quæ bonis natalibus orta, claris sponfalibus decorata, numerosa progenie circumsepta Ipsa sibi Monumentum fuit optimum. FREDERICUM NATHANIELEM JACOBUM ANNAM ELIZABETHAM (Juxta sepulta) Gratas Deo animas, Deo præmisti. CAROLUM FREDERICUM GULIELMUM GEORGIUM HENRIETTAM MARIAM reliquit superstites. Abi Viator & disce quod tanta Virtus potuit nec potuit mori. Obijt 6to die Martij Anno 1668. Monumentum hoc in memoriam dilectissimæ Conjugis CAROLUS CORNWALLIS mærens superstes P. C.

Their issue were,

1. Frederic Cornwallis, baptized the 13th of July, A. D. 1655, died an infant, and was buried the 17th of July, A. D. 1655.

2. Nathaniel Cornwallis, born the 26th of February, A. D. 1655-6, was buried October 1, A. D. 1656.

3. Charles Cornwallis, baptized December 28, A. D. 1656, succeeded his father in his honours and estate.

4. Frederic Cornwallis, born the 21st of October, A. D. 1658, took to a military life, and was captain of an independent company in Jersey, and died unmarried, at the latter end of the reign of king Charles II.

5. William Cornwallis, baptized March 2, A. D. 1661-2, died unmarried.

6. Thomas Cornwallis, born July 31, A. D. 1663, and baptized the third of April following, was, in his youth, an officer in the guards, and succeeded his brother Frederic, in an independent company in Jersey, which was afterwards made a company of grenadiers, added to the Holland regiment, commanded by John, earl of Mulgrave. In the reigns of queen Anne and king George I. he was in the commission for the management of the several lotteries established by acts of parliament. He married two wives; first, Jane, widow of colonel Hugh Vernon, of Lammoram, in Cornwall; and, she dying in the 55th year of her age, on the 6th of August, A. D. 1721, he secondly, took to wife (18th of April, A. D. 1723) Anne, daughter of Sir Hugh Owen, of Orierton, in Pembrokeshire, baronet, widow of John Barlow, of Lawrenny, in the said county, esquire, and died in December, A. D. 1731.

7. James Cornwallis, baptized November 5, A. D. 1664, was buried the 11th of December following.

8. George Cornwallis, baptized November 5, A. D. 1666, died in his travels with the duke of Northumberland, at Turin.

And three daughters,

1. Anne, died an infant, and was buried the 10th of July, A. D. 1655.

2. Elizabeth, was buried the 15th of April, A. D. 1664.

3. Henrietta-Maria, baptized the 20th of October, A. D. 1657, died unmarried.

(Third Lord.) CHARLES CORNWALLIS, eldest surviving son of the last lord, took his seat in the house of peers February 15, A. D. 1676, was married, on the 27th of December, A. D. 1673, to Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir Stephen Fox, knight, father to the present lord Ilchester; and secondly, he wedded in 1688, Anne, dutchess of Monmouth and Buccleugh, widow and relict of James, duke of Monmouth; by which lady, who survived him, and died on the 6th of February, A. D. 1731-2, he had issue one son, George Scot Cornwallis, who died young, and was buried in Westminster-abbey the 27th of May, A. D. 1693.

Also two daughters,

1. Anne, born April 27, A. D. 1690, buried in Westminster-abbey, the 25th of July, A. D. 1690.

2. Isabella, who died unmarried.

His lordship was distinguished for one of the most accomplished gentlemen of the age, and was in the especial favour of king William, who swore him of his privy-council, March 1, A. D. 1691-2, and at the same time declared him first lord commissioner of the admiralty, in the room of the earl of Pembroke, who was made lord privy-seal. He was also, on the 28th of March, A. D. 1689, constituted lord lieutenant, and, on the 8th of June following, custos rotulorum of the county of Suffolk; also in 1697, high steward of the corporation of Ipswich: and departing this life the 29th of April, A. D. 1698, in the forty-third year of his age, was buried with his ancestors at Broome, the 5th of May following. He had, by Elizabeth, his first lady, four sons, Charles, William, James, and John, who all died unmarried, except his eldest son Charles, which (Fourth Lord.) CHARLES CORNWALLIS, made several campaigns in Flanders under king William, till the peace at Ryswick, A. D. 1697. He was elected to parliament for the borough of Eye, and on his father's decease, took his seat in the house of peers, the 11th of May, A. D. 1698. Also on the 9th of June following, he succeeded his father as lord lieutenant of the county of Suffolk; and, on the succession of queen Anne, was continued lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the said county, for only a year, Lionel, earl of Dysert, succeeding him, June 16, A. D. 1703.

His lordship was married, on the first of June, A. D. 1699, to Charlotte Butler, daughter, and at length sole heir to Richard, earl of Arran, baron Weston, in England, second son of James, duke of Ormond, by whom he had issue,

1. Charles Cornwallis, born the 29th of March, A. D. 1700, late earl Cornwallis.

2. James Cornwallis, born the 16th of September, 1701, who was member for the borough of Eye, in Suffolk, in 1722, and commander of the

Griffin

Griffin fire-ship. He died on the 28th of May, A. D. 1727.

3. Stephen Cornwallis, born the 23d of December, A. D. 1703, who was chosen member for Eye, in Suffolk, in the parliament summoned to meet November 28, A. D. 1727; also in the succeeding parliament, which sat first on business January 23, A. D. 1735. In February, 1732, he was constituted colonel of a regiment of foot; and brigadier-general of his majesty's forces the 17th of July, A. D. 1739; also major-general February 26, A. D. 1742; and died the year after in May, being then member of parliament for Eye.

4. John Cornwallis, born December 23, A. D. 1705, was elected member for Eye, in Suffolk, with his brother Stephen Cornwallis, esquire, in 1727, also in the two succeeding parliaments; and was one of the equeries to his late royal highness Frederic prince of Wales. By his wife, Sarah, daughter of the reverend Hugh Dale, he had issue one son, John, who died young; and three daughters, of which the eldest, Sarah, married the reverend Walter Earle; the other two, Charlotte and Mary, died young.

5. Richard Cornwallis, born the 17th of September, A. D. 1708, was gentleman usher and daily waiter to her late majesty; and in December, A. D. 1737, was made equery to his royal highness the duke of Cumberland. He died unmarried at Rotterdam, from whence he was going to Lisbon, for the recovery of his health, in February, A. D. 1740-41.

6. Edward, (twin with Frederic) was born February 22, A. D. 1713. He was major of Bligh's regiment of foot, and served the campaigns in Flanders A. D. 1744, and 1745; when at the battle of Fontenoy, his lieutenant-colonel being killed, he succeeded him in the commission. On the decease of his brother Stephen Cornwallis, a writ being ordered December 1, A. D. 1743, for a new election, he was chosen in his place for Eye; and, during that parliament, having been made one of the grooms of his majesty's bed-chamber, and his election thereby vacated, he was again chosen in January, A. D. 1746-7. In the succeeding parliament, summoned to meet the 13th of August, A. D. 1747, he was also chosen for the said borough of Eye; and being colonel of a regiment of foot, during the sitting of that parliament, and constituted governor of Placentia, in Newfoundland, and captain-general, and governor in chief, in and over his majesty's province of Nova-Scotia, or Acadia, in America, a writ was ordered, April 28, A. D. 1749, for a new election. Whereupon going over to that country, he resided there with great reputation and esteem, for his admirable qualities and abilities, till the latter end of the year 1752; when, on the death of Sir Peter Warren, knight of the Bath, and member for Westminster, a writ being ordered, January 12, A. D. 1753, for a new election, he was unanimously chosen four days after, one of the representatives for that city; in the parliament, which met on May 31, A. D. 1754, was again elected for Westminster. He married, March 17, A. D. 1753, Mary, daughter of Charles, viscount Townshend; but departed this life without issue March 18, A. D. 1762.

7. Frederic, (twin with Edward) was fellow of Christ-college, in Cambridge; and being one of his majesty's chaplains, and canon of Windsor, was consecrated bishop of Litchfield and Coventry, February 18, A. D. 1749-50. He married Caroline, daughter of William Townshend, Esq;

8. William, born March 12, A. D. 1715. } both died unmarried.

9. Henry.

Also three daughters,

1. Charlotte.

2. Elizabeth, born March 24, A. D. 1709.

3. Mary, born June 23, A. D. 1711, who died unmarried A. D. 1756.

His lordship, on the 6th of February, A. D. 1715, was constituted joint postmaster-general with James Craggs, esquire, and waiting on his majesty at Cambridge, had the degree of doctor of laws conferred on him, the 6th of October, A. D. 1717. He continued in his place of postmaster-general, till he succeeded the right honourable Sir Robert Walpole, April 8, A. D. 1721, as paymaster general of his late majesty's forces, and of Chelsea college; and was sworn of the privy-council, November 11, A. D. 1721. But soon after departing this life, on the 19th of January, A. D. 1721-2, in the forty-seventh year of his age, was buried with his ancestors at Culford. And his lady died August 8, A. D. 1725.

His eldest son,

(First Earl.) CHARLES CORNWALLIS, was appointed, August 19, A. D. 1721, one of the grooms of the bed-chamber to the late king, in the life-time of his father; and, on his decease, was constituted lord chief-justice and justice in eyre of all the king's forests, &c. south of the Trent. On the accession of our late sovereign, he was again constituted lord chief justice in eyre; in which post he continued till the year 1740, when on the 12th of May, his majesty appointed him constable of the Tower of London, as also lord lieutenant of the Tower hamlets, being at the same time sworn of his majesty's most honourable privy-council. And his majesty was pleased, on the 30th of June, A. D. 1753, to create him an earl and viscount of Great-Britain, by the stile and title of viscount Broome, in the county of Suffolk, and earl Cornwallis.

His lordship in 1722, married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Charles, viscount Townshend, by his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas, lord Pelham, and sister to his grace the duke of Newcastle, by whom he had issue four sons and three daughters.

1. Elizabeth, married in 1753, to Bowen Southwell, esquire, nephew to the first lord Southwell.

2. Charlotte, married in 1756, to the reverend Spencer Madan, chaplain in ordinary to the king, vicar of Boffal, in Yorkshire, and of Haxay, in Lincolnshire.

3. Mary.

The sons were,

1. Charles Cornwallis, his successor.

2. Henry Cornwallis, born September 10, A. D. 1741, who died young.

3. James Cornwallis, born February 25, A. D. 1742-3.

4. William

4. William Cornwallis, a captain in the navy, born February 20, A. D. 1743-4.

His lordship departing this life in June, A. D. 1762, was buried at Culford, and the honours of the family devolved upon his eldest son, (Second and present Earl.) CHARLES CORNWALLIS, baptized January 25, A. D. 1738-9. His lordship is colonel of the thirty-third regiment of foot.

(TITLES.) Charles Cornwallis, earl Cornwallis, viscount Broome, lord Cornwallis, of Eye, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet May 4, A. D. 1627 (3 Charles I.) baron Cornwallis, of Eye, in Suffolk, by letters patent April 20, A. D. 1661, (13 Charles II.) viscount Broome, in the county of Suffolk, and earl Cornwallis, June 30, A. D. 1753; (27 Geo. II.)

(ARMS.) Diamond gutty de eau, on a fess pearl, three Cornish choughs.

(CREST.) On a wreath a mount emerald, and thereon a stag, lodged pearl, attired topaz, having about his neck a garland of laurel proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two stags, pearl attired, and gorged as the crest.

(MOTTO.) "Virtus vincit invidiam."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Broome, and at Culford-hall; both in Suffolk.

YORK E, Earl of HARDWICKE.

THE regard which our late sovereign paid to real merit, was never exerted with more honour to the crown, and satisfaction to the subject, than in conferring the dignity of an earl, &c. upon,

(First Earl.) PHILIP YORKE, whose deficiency of a long train of noble and illustrious ancestors, served but to enable his eminent services to the public, both as a statesman and a lawyer, to challenge, as their own proper reward, the honours which they received.

His lordship was educated in the study of the law at the Middle-Temple, and very early acquired great reputation in the knowledge and practice thereof. He served in three parliaments whilst a commoner, first for the borough of Lewis, in Suffex, in April, A. D. 1719, and in the succeeding parliaments for Seaford. On the 23d of March, A. D. 1720, he was appointed solicitor-general to his majesty, king George I. and on the 13th of June, A. D. 1720, received the honour of knighthood. On the 31st of January, A. D. 1723, he was constituted attorney-general, in which office he was continued by his late majesty, till the 31st of October, A. D. 1733, on which day he took upon him the state and degree of a serjeant at law: and by writ patent, under the great seal, bearing teste the same day, his majesty was pleased to constitute him lord chief-justice of the court of king's-bench, and to create him a baron of Great-Britain, as before-mentioned, by letters patent, dated at Westminster, the 23d day of November following, in the seventh year of his reign, and in that year was chosen a governor of the Charter-house.

On February 21, A. D. 1736-7, his majesty in council delivered the great seal to his lordship; whereupon the oath of lord high chancellor of Great Britain was, by his majesty's command, administered to him, and his lordship took his place at the board accordingly. On the 12th of May, A. D. 1740, he was nominated one of the lords justices for the administration of the government during his majesty's absence: also April 21, A. D. 1743, and in A. D. 1745. In A. D. 1746, he was appointed lord high-steward of England, for the trials of the earls of Kilmarnock, Cromartie, and lord Balmerino. In A. D. 1748, he was again one of the lords-justices: and 31st of July, A. D. 1749, unanimously chosen high-steward of the university of Cambridge, on the resignation of the duke of Newcastle, who was elected chancellor; and the year after was again one of the lords justices. Also March 33, A. D. 1752, his lordship was appointed one of the lords justices for the administration of the government, whilst the king visited his German dominions; and his majesty taking into consideration his great merits and abilities, was pleased to advance him to the titles of viscount Royston, and earl of Hardwicke, by letters patent, bearing date April 2, A. D. 1754; in November, A. D. 1756, he resigned the great seal, and on March 6, A. D. 1764, departed this life. His remains were deposited at Wimple, in the county of Cambridge.

His lordship married Margaret, one of the daughters of Charles Cox, of the city of Worcester, esquire, and of Mary, his wife, eldest sister of that learned lawyer, able statesman, and true patriot, patriot, John, lord Sommers, lord high chancellor of England, in the reign of king William III. of glorious memory; by whom he had issue five sons, and two daughters.

1. Philip Yorke, lord viscount Royston.

2. Charles Yorke, of Lincoln's-inn; who, with his brother, had the office of clerk of the crown in the court of Chancery conferred on them, June 27, 20 George II. He was chosen in the two last, and sits in the present parliament, for Ryegate, in Surry.

He was appointed solicitor general in 1756, and in 1761 attorney general, which he resigned in 1763, soon after which he obtained a patent of precedence at the bar. In A. D. 1765, he was again appointed attorney general, but soon after resigned. He is recorder of Dover. On the 19th of May, A. D. 1755, he married Catherine, only daughter of William Freeman, of Hamels, in the county of Hertford, esquire, and by her, who died July 10, A. D. 1759, and was buried at Wimple, he had one son, Philip Yorke, born May 29, A. D. 1727, and two daughters, Margaret and Catherine, who died infants. He married, secondly, Agnetta Johnson, of Berkamsted, in Hertfordshire, by whom he has also a son and a daughter, Charles-Philip Yorke, born March 14, A. D. 1764, and Caroline, born August 29, A. D. 1765.

3. Joseph Yorke, who has eminently distinguished himself. He was captain of a company in the first regiment of foot guards, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and aid de camp to his royal highness the duke of Cumberland, at the battle of Fontenoy, A. D. 1745. In A. D. 1749, when the earl of Albemarle went ambassador extraordinary to the French court, he went over secretary to the embassy: and being aid de camp to his majesty, he was, in September, A. D. 1751, appointed minister plenipotentiary to the states-general, and, A. D. 1761, ambassador extraordinary, and plenipotentiary, and in that character is yet resident at the Hague. He was chosen a member in the two last parliaments for East-Grinstead, in Suffex, and sits in the present for Dover. He ranks as lieutenant-general, and is colonel of the fifth regiment of dragoons.

4. John Yorke, who, with his brother Charles, is clerk of the crown; and in November, A. D. 1753, was elected member of parliament for Higham-Ferrers, in Northamptonshire, in the room of John Hill, esquire, and was at the general election ensuing, A. D. 1754, rechosen, and serves in the present parliament for the same place. He is clerk of the crown in Chancery, and patentee for making out commissions of bankruptcy. He married Elizabeth, only daughter of Reginald Lugon, of Madresfield, in the county of Worcester, esquire, and had issue one daughter, Jemima, born June 5, A. D. 1763.

5. James Yorke, ordained at Cambridge in April, A. D. 1754, and soon after appointed to the rectory of Great Horley, in Essex, and a stall in the cathedral church of Bristol, and has since been made dean of Lincoln. He married Mary, daughter of Isaac Maddox, late bishop of Worcester, and has issue three sons and a daughter, Charles Yorke, born May 12, 1764; Joseph Yorke, born 1765; James Yorke, born July 25, 1766; and Margaret, born June 11, 1763.

His lordship's two daughters were,

1. Elizabeth, married to George, lord Anson, which lady died on the 1st of June, A. D. 1760, and was buried at Shugborough, in Staffordshire.

2. Margaret, married to Sir Gilbert Heathcote, baronet.

The eldest son,

(Second and present Earl.) PHILIP YORKE, succeeded his father. On the 14th of December, A. D. 1738, was appointed one of the tellers of the Exchequer; and, on the 22d of May, A. D. 1740, was married to Jemima Campbell, only daughter of John, earl of Breadalbin, by Amabel Grey, eldest daughter and coheir of Henry de Grey, late duke of Kent, by whom he has two daughters, Amabel, born February 8, A. D. 1751, and Mary Jemima, born February 26, A. D. 1756; and her ladyship, by descent from his grace the said duke of Kent, is marchioness Grey. His lordship was returned a member for Ryegate, in the parliament summoned to meet June 25, A. D. 1741; as also in the succeeding parliament, which sat first on business November 12, A. D. 1747; but being then chose for Cambridgeshire, he made his election for that county; and his brother, the honourable Charles Yorke, was elected in his place. Having been present at Cambridge at the instalment of his grace the duke of Newcastle, chancellor of the university, he immediately after, July 30, A. D. 1749, was admitted to the degree of doctor of law. His lordship was again returned one of the members for the county of Cambridge, to the last parliament which met May 31, A. D. 1754. After a sharp contest with the earl of Sandwich, his lordship was elected chancellor of the university of Cambridge, in the room of his father.

(TITLES.) Philip Yorke, earl of Hardwicke, viscount Royston, baron of Hardwicke.

(CREATIONS.) Baron of Hardwicke, in the county of Gloucester, November 23, A. D. 1733, (7 George II.) viscount Royston, in the county of Cambridge, and earl of Hardwicke, April 2, A. D. 1754, (27 George II.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, a saltire azure, with a bezant in the center.

(CREST.) On a wreath of the colours, a lion's head erased proper, collared gules, charged.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a lion guardant, topaz, collared ruby. On the sinister a stag, proper, attired, unguled, and collared, topaz; each charged with a bezant.

(MOTTO.) "Nec cupias, nec metuas."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Hardwicke, in the county of Gloucester; and at Wimple, in the county of Cambridge.

V A N E, Earl of D A R L I N G T O N.

IN our account of the family of the earl of Westmorland, the reader will find, that John Fane, of Tunbridge, esquire, who first took the name of Vane, and died in the 13th of Henry VII. had several sons, from one of which, John Fane, the earl of Darlington, derives his descent. This

JOHN FANE, by his father's will, had the lands and tenements called Hollynden; and other lands assigned to him by deed of fee-simple. Also by the gift of Henry Fane, of Hadloe, his elder brother, who died without issue, he had his lands lying in Great Peckham, in Kent; and after the decease of Alice, the wife of the said Henry Fane, all the lands that she held in jointure. And by the entail on him of the manor and mansion of Hadloe, with the lands thereunto belonging, was possessed thereof in the 4th of Edward VI. when Sir Ralph Vane was beheaded, leaving no issue. The time of his decease we do not find; but by Joan his wife, daughter and coheir of Edward Hault, esquire, he had two sons, Henry and Richard, both mentioned in the will of their uncle Henry Fane, esquire, in the 25th of Henry VIII. also another son, Thomas, of Winchelsea, recited in the will of Henry, his brother, which

HENRY FANE, the eldest son, was wrote of Hadloe, esquire. After the decease of his father, he was unwarily drawn into that insurrection under Sir Thomas Wyatt, to prevent the marriage of queen Mary with the king of Spain. On his defeat he was committed prisoner to the Tower, the 7th of February; but his youth being considered, he was among those that had their pardon, and was released out of the Tower the 24th of March following. He was educated in the reformed religion, the whole family being early professors of it; and his kinsman, Thomas Fane, esquire, (after knighted) father of Francis, first earl of Westmorland, was also in Wyatt's rebellion, and a warrant sent to the sheriff of Kent for his execution, with three others: but the queen, at her manor of St. James's, the 18th of March, A. D. 1554, in the first year of her reign, sent orders to Stephen (Gardiner) bishop of Winchester, chancellor of England, to cause writs of supersedeas, to the sheriff of Kent, not to proceed to his execution, having compassion on his youth. On the accession of queen Elizabeth to the throne, the said Henry was returned for the cinque port of Winchelsea, in Kent, to her first parliament, which began to sit at Westminster, January 23, A. D. 1558-9, and held till May 8, A. D. 1559; when it was dissolved: Afterwards the queen did not call a new parliament till the fifth year of her reign, which sat at Westminster, from January 10, A. D. 1562-3, till April 10 following, when it was dissolved. In that parliament he was again returned for Winchelsea, when his abilities were so conspicuous, that he was one of the leading members of the house of commons, as their journals shew.

He had ever been a steady assertor of the reformed religion, and his last will and testament shews his piety, learning, and refined qualities: which containing some remarkable particulars, I chose to insert part of it in his own words.

"The one and twentieth day of January, in the twentieth year of the reign of our sovereign queen Elizabeth, I Henry Fane, of Hadlow, in the county of Kent, esquire, calling to my remembrance, and acknowledging the manifold benefits and graces wherewith it hath pleased God, of his infinite mercy, most abundantly to bless and enrich me, most unworthy and sinful creature: and further knowing and seeing by daily experience, that nothing is more certain than death, and the return of all flesh into dust from whence it came: and yet is there nothing more uncertain than the time or place, when and how it is the pleasure of the Almighty to call; and therefore a thing both expedient and most necessary for all men to provide themselves, and be ever in readiness; first towards God, by hearty and unfeigned repentance, and true faith in him; and then to the world, by due satisfaction and reconciliation, whereinsoever our conscience appealeth as guilty; and also forgiving our brothers, as we desire our heavenly father to forgive us; and lastly, to the intent that we may leave and establish peace and love amongst all men, and especially our children and posterity; it becometh all men by writing to dispose, devise, and publish their intent, meaning and determination, concerning the order of their lands, goods, and other things whatsoever, the use and disposition whereof it hath pleased our God to grant us, during our abode in this variable world. Wherefore I the said Henry Fane, being in good and perfect memory, thanked be to God, and often revolving these and other just and good causes and considerations, have thought it convenient at this present time, to make, declare, and finish, this my last will and testament, in manner and form following, viz.

In the name of God, Amen. I Henry Fane do confess fels and protest myself a most grievous and penitent sinner, trusting to be saved by the death and passion of my redeemer Jesus Christ, of whom only I crave, and faithfully hope to receive, all forgiveness through his mercy and grace; and therefore yield and commit myself, both body and soul, into his omnipotent hands, both now and ever; Amen. Also my will is, that my body shall be buried in such order, time, and place, as shall seem best to my executor and overseers, or any of them, to whom, in like sort, I grant authority to give to the poor people of Hadlowe, such money as they shall think meete. Also I give and bequeath to my dear friend, my lady Ellin Somerset, a ring with a turky stone therein, now in the custody of my cousin Mary Ashburnham, desiring my lady to keep and wear it for my sake. Also I will to my counsin Thomas Fane, of Buston, her husband, my damask gown, desiring him to accept and wear it for my sake. Also I will to William Mauley, my servant, three pounds yearly, out of my lands in Hadlowe, for so many years as he shall serve my son Henry."

After which, he bequeaths to Henry Fane, his nephew, son of his brother Richard Fane, an annuity out of his lands, &c. in Hadlowe, during his life. Then bequeaths to his son Henry Fane, when he accomplishes the age of twenty-two years, and to his heirs for ever, all his manors, lands, tenements, &c. and if he deceased without heirs of his body, he then entaileth them on his nephew Thomas Fane, son of his brother Thomas Fane, of Winchelsea, and to the heirs male of his body; in default, to his brother Richard Fane, and the heirs of his body. After which he thus expresses himself.

"Also my will, desire, and request, is, that it will please the right honourable, and my especial good lord, and ever assured friend, my lord Cobham, lord warden of the Cinque Ports, to accept my son Henry Fane, into his rule, order, and government, until my said son shall accomplish the age of twenty-two years: and I will and charge my said son, to continue and shew himself always obedient and willing to be ruled, ordered, and directed by my said lord, whom, I protest, I have during all my life, honoured and loved above all men; and I trust my son will follow his father's steps, and do the like. Also my will and mind is, that as well my lease that I have of Sir John Rivers, knight, of part of the parsonage of Hadlowe, as also all other my leases, writings, and evidences, plate, household furniture, whatsoever, shall entirely remain to be in the custody of my cousin Thomas Fane, of Buston, whom I make my overseer, until my said son shall attain the age of two and twenty years: at which time my will is, that he shall redeliver them, with a just and true account (all his reasonable charges allowed and deducted) to my said son Henry, or his assigns. Also I give to my brother Richard Fane, all the money he oweth me. Finally, I ordain my son Henry my sole and only executor, &c."

The probate bears date the 4th of February, A. D. 1582, when Henry Fane, his son, administered.

The inquisition taken at Deptford, after his decease, shews that he died two years after he made his will, viz. on the 11th of June, 22d of Elizabeth, and that Henry, his son and heir, was then twenty years of age and more, and married to Mary, only daughter and heir of Thomas Fane, of Buston, esquire, the overseer of his father's will. His mother, Elizabeth, daughter of — Godsalve, esquire, died before his father, leaving him, the said Henry, surviving; which HENRY FANE, of Hadlowe, esquire, was likewise a judicious and accomplished gentleman. His wife Mary, before-mentioned, died without leaving issue by him; so that in the 27th of Elizabeth, he took to his second wife, Margaret, daughter of Roger Twisden, of East Peckham, in Kent, esq. In the memorable year of the Spanish invasion, A. D. 1588, he repaired to the camp at Tilbury, with the aid of his friends and dependants, the county of Kent having supplied a hundred and fifty horse, and five thousand foot, which was more than any other county, except Middlesex. Having been thereby seasoned in a military life, he had a command in those forces sent to the assistance of Henry the French king, particularly A. D. 1595, when, before he embarked, he made his will, dated the 4th of September the same year. And that he was in France the year after, is evident from the codicil to his will, which bears date at Roan, the 13th of October, A. D. 1596; and that he died there the day after, the inquisition shews, taken on his decease, as customary in those times. By his said will, and other circumstances, it appears, that he followed his father's example, both in his pious disposition, integrity, and honourable principles.

By the inquisition taken at Greenwich, 13th of November, 38th of Elizabeth, after his decease, the jury found that he died at Roan, in France, on the 14th of October last; and that Henry was his son and heir, (by Margaret his wife, daughter of Roger Twisden, of East-Peckham, esquire, whom he married the 27th of Elizabeth) and of the age of seven years, the 18th of February last, and Ralph Fane, his second son; and that he died seized, besides his manor and mansion of Hadlowe, &c. of the manors of Shipbourne, alias Shibborne, with the appurtenances, parcel of the priory of Dartford, in Shibborne and Wrotham; of Shibborne, alias Puddenham, parcel of the priory of Tunbridge, with the rectory of the chapel of Shibborne, parcel of the priory of St. John's of Jerusalem in England: of the manors of Goodins, alias Fromonds; Crowbery, alias Croweberry; and of Caninston, alias Cawnstons; all in Kent, and descended to the said Henry, his son and heir; which

HENRY FANE assumed the ancient name of his ancestors, writing himself Henry Vane, and his posterity have continued so to do ever since. He had the honour of knighthood conferred on him in the seventeenth year of his age, by king James the first, at Whitehall, the 28th of March, A. D. 1611; after which he improved himself by travel, and a knowledge of the foreign languages. In 12 James I. he was returned one of the members for the city of Carlisle, in that parliament which began at Westminster, April 5, A. D. 1614, and continued till June, when it was dissolved. He was also elected for the same city, to the succeeding parliament, which met at Westminster January 30, A. D. 1620, 18 Jac. I. and held till March 27, when it was adjourned to April 17, and held to June 4, and then adjourned to November 14, and dissolved February 8, A. D. 1621. In these parliaments his abilities were so conspicuous, as also his affection to the royal family, that king James made him cofferer to his son Charles, prince of Wales, on the establishment of his household; and was continued in the said office by Charles I. on his accession to the throne, who sent him to notify to the states of Holland, the death of his royal father; from whence he returned in June, A. D. 1625.

He was, before his return into England, viz. May 30, A. D. 1625, 1 Car. I. in commission, bearing the title of cofferer of the household, with Thomas, earl of Arundel, John, earl of Clare, Edward, earl of Dorset, Edward, lord Conway, one of the principal secretaries of state, and others, to examine into all new erected buildings within the city and suburbs of London, and to prevent any new buildings, as they shall think proper. And Charles I. when prince of Wales, being in want of money, he borrowed, in the twenty-second year of his father's reign, twenty thousand pounds, whereof Sir Henry Vane was bound for four thousand pounds, part of it to George Huxley, esquire. Also on another loan of twenty thousand pounds, he was, with Sir Henry Hobart, lord chief justice, and chancellor to the prince, and others, bound for the payment thereof. Likewise in a third loan, Sir Henry, and others, were bound for twenty-three thousand pounds. Whereupon Charles I. July 20, in the first year of his reign, promises to see the same discharged; and for the further security of the persons engaged therein, makes over to them divers honours, manors, &c. for ninety-nine years, giving the said Sir Henry Vane, and them, power to receive the rents and issues of the premises; also granting to them three thousand pounds per annum, out of the receipt of the courts of wards and liveries; and if that be not sufficient, he will order the lord high treasurer to pay what shall be wanting thereof.

In the parliament called in the said first year of king Charles the first, which began to sit June 21, A. D. 1625, and held till July 11, when it was adjourned to Oxford, August 1, where sitting till the 12th following, and then dissolved, Sir Henry Vane was chosen both for the borough of Lestwithiel, in Cornwall, and for the city of Carlisle; and served in every parliament after, to the time of his decease, being elected for Thetford, in Norfolk, Wilton in Wiltshire, and for the county of Kent.

On the 12th of August, in the said first year of king Charles, bearing the title of cofferer of the household, he was commissioned, with the earls of Berkshire and Monmouth, and Sir Francis Cottington, for governing, demising, and disposing of the king's customary lands within the dutchy of Cornwall, and all other manors, &c. he had before his accession to the crown, passed over for the payment of such debts they stood engaged for; but some doubt arising, whether they could agree for leases of the demesne lands, parcel of the said dutchy, the king, by a new commission, bearing date the 20th of February following, impowers them to dispose of all honours, castles, manors, &c. parcel of the said dutchy, or annexed thereto, and of all the revenues, &c. arising therefrom, except the coinage and customs, &c. of Tyn, (within the counties of Cornwall and Devon) for the payment of the said debts. He was likewise the same year in commission with James Ley, earl of Marlborough, lord treasurer, Henry, earl of Manchester, lord president of the council, William, earl of Pembroke, lord steward, Philip, earl of Montgomery, lord chamberlain, Sir John Cook, principal secretary of state, and Sir Richard Weston, chancellor of the exchequer, to take a survey of the wardrobe, in all the king's castles, houses, &c.

On the 24th of July, A. D. 1630, 6 Car. I. bearing the title of comptroller of the king's household, and of his privy-council, he was in commission, with others of the council, to put in execution the laws relating to the buildings in Westminster and London, according to the king's proclamation. Also on the second of October following, was in commission, with Henry, earl of Manchester, lord privy-seal, Edward, earl of Dorset, Sir Thomas Edmonds, treasurer of the household, and the two secretaries of state, to examine the records, &c. in custody of Sir Robert Cotton, knight, and baronet.

Likewise, on the 5th of January, the same year, he was in commission with George Abbot, archbishop of Canterbury, and others, for relieving of the poor; and were impowered to enquire into the execution of the statutes relating thereto, and the employment of lands, goods, and monies given for charitable uses, the training up of youth in trades, and repressing drunkenness, idleness, &c.

In 7 Car. I. April 10, A. D. 1631, he was, with the archbishop of Canterbury, and others, commissioned to give orders, and take into their care the reparations of the cathedral church of St. Paul, London. And the 6th of May following, in commission with several of the peers, to hear and examine all questions and controversies, &c. that shall arise about the jurisdiction of any of the courts ecclesiastical or civil, or any of the courts of justice, or betwixt the judges and officers of the courts of judicature, in any matter or cause concerning jurisdiction, and to determine the same.

On the 20th of September the same year, the king, in consideration of the prudence, faith, and industry, he reposes in his well-beloved Sir Henry Vane, knight, of his privy-council, and comptroller of his household, commissions him to renew the treaty of friendship and confederacy with Christian IV. king of Denmark. Also by another commission, bearing date the same day and year, he was impowered to treat and conclude on a firm peace and confederacy with Gustavus Adolphus, king of Sweden, and the German princes in alliance with him. The marquis of Hamilton that year went over to the king of Sweden's assistance, with six thousand men, and Sir Henry Vane was ordered to confer with him. He met the marquis at Wurtzburgh in October; and was admitted to an audience of the king of Sweden, at Frankfort, January 29, and earnestly pressing him to undertake the restitution of the king of Bohemia, elector palatine, to his estates and dignities, the king answered, "That he could not, without having war with France and Bavaria; nor would undertake such war, unless the king of England would enter into an alliance with him against the Spaniards."

niards." However, it was concerted, that on the king of Bohemia's arrival in the Swedish camp, where he was speedily expected, the chancellor of Sweden, and Sir Henry, the English ambassador, should enter into treaty on that ardent affair; which, on his arrival, came to no effect.

Sir Henry Vane, intent on the subject of his embassy, followed the king of Sweden in his marches through Germany, and left no means un essayed to prevail on him to restore the king of Bohemia to his dominions in the Palatinate; but that monarch, flushed with victory, insisted on terms that could not be yielded to with honour. He had his last audience of that successful prince about the middle of July, A. D. 1632, when all that he could obtain from him was, "That he should hold his country as a donative of the king of Sweden, and make no martial levies, or any league or article with any other prince without his consent. That during the war he should furnish him with what forces he could raise and pay, and put two of his chiefest towns in his hands, for performing of the covenants." These terms, Sir Henry Vane thought so dishonourable, that expostulating with the king of Sweden, on the hardships of them, they both parted in heat, and the treaty broke off. But his conduct therein, was satisfactory to his own sovereign, who so far approved of his ambassador's carriage, that he sent letters to the king of Sweden, charging him with obstructing the league between them, and recalled Sir Henry Vane, and ordered the marquis of Hamilton to return home with his forces.

Sir Henry left the Swedish camp the latter end of October, leaving instructions with his secretary, Mr. Curtius, who staid as his majesty's agent with the king of Sweden; but the battle fought at Lutzen, November 6, A. D. 1632, wherein the king of Sweden was slain, together with the death of the king of Bohemia; who departed this life on the 29th of the said month, put an end to all negotiations on that head, which may be said to cease on Sir Henry Vane's arrival in England in that crisis.

Immediately after his return, November 20, A. D. 1632, he was commissioned with Robert, earl of Lindsey, Edward, earl of Dorset, and the two secretaries of state, (retaining his place of comptroller of the household) to exercise and perform all and every acts, matters, &c. which to the office of lord high admiral of England, Ireland, Wales, &c. appertaineth or belongeth, as well concerning the navy and shipping, as the rights and jurisdiction of the office of lord high admiral of England, &c. Also the 20th of February following, in commission with the above persons, lords of the admiralty, to reprieve and stay from execution, such as may be convicted of felony, who for strength of body, or other abilities, they may think fit to be employed in foreign discoveries, or other services beyond the seas.

The year 1633 began with king Charles's preparation for a progress into Scotland, where he had been long expected to solemnize his coronation. He set out from London May 13, with the earls of Northumberland, Arundel, Pembroke, Southampton, marquis of Hamilton, bishop of London, Sir Henry Vane, and many other persons of quality.

On the 17th of December following, he was in commission with Richard, earl of Portland, lord treasurer, and others, for the better governing of the great wardrobe, &c. Also in another commission of the same date, with William, archbishop of Canterbury, and others of the privy-council, to put in execution an act of the first of Elizabeth, intituled An act restoring to the crown the ancient jurisdiction over the state ecclesiastical and spiritual, and abolishing all foreign power, repugnant to the same. And on the 17th of February ensuing, was in a special commission with Henry, earl of Manchester, lord privy-seal, Edward, earl of Dorset, and the secretaries of state, to enquire into the exactions and abuses committed in the several courts of justice, and other inferior courts within the realm.

On the 19th of November, A. D. 1634, 10 Car. I. he was with the other lords of the admiralty (viz. Edward, earl of Dorset, the secretaries of state, &c.) appointed commissioners of appeal, in cases of prizes, taken by virtue of letters of marque, and to determine the same. In 11 Car. I. May 9, he was in commission with Philip, earl of Pembroke, lord chamberlain, Sir Thomas Jermin, vice-chamberlain, Sir Thomas Edmonds, treasurer of the household, and Sir John Coke, secretary of state; and were empowered to call before them the officers of the standing wardrobes, in any of the king's honours, castles, or manor-houses in England and Wales, and to take an account of the wardrobe stuff in his or their keeping. Also on the 23d of August, the same year, was commissioned with the archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas, lord Coventry, lord keeper, Henry, earl of Manchester, lord privy-seal, Edward, earl of Dorset, lord chamberlain to the queen, and Francis, earl of Bedford, to compound with all the king's subjects, who held their estates by defective grants. And the 16th of November following, was in commission with Robert, earl of Lindsey, Edward, earl of Dorset, and others before recited, lords of the admiralty with him, to lend as many ships, fitly prepared and victualled, as the lords of the council should direct, in aid and ease of such counties as could not furnish the same as by the king's writs were required. In the same year he obtained a grant of free warren, and of master forester and chief warden of all forests and chases within the dominion of Castle Barnard, commonly called Barnard's-Castle, in the bishoprick of Durham; to hold to the said Sir Henry Vane, and the heirs males of his body.

In 12 Car. I. the 10th of April, A. D. 1636, he was in commission with Thomas, lord Coventry, lord keeper, Richard, archbishop of York, William, bishop of London, and Henry, earl of Manchester, lord privy-seal, to hear and determine, according to their discretions, all quarrels between the subjects of his majesty's colonies in America, and their governors, or delaying of justice, &c. that may be brought before them in England, &c. Also nine days after, was in another commission with William, bishop of London, lord treasurer, Henry, earl of Manchester, lord privy-seal, Thomas, earl of Arundel, and the two secretaries of state, concerning the buildings of London and Westminster. And complaint being made by sundry of the king's subjects, of being robbed and pillaged by sea, by ships belonging to subjects of foreign princes and states, he and the rest of the commissioners of the admiralty, rality, (before recited) they, or any three of them, were impowered to give warrants to the judges of the high court of admiralty, to issue letters of marque and reprisal to such of his majesty's subjects as have been pillaged, &c. signed by the king the 11th of October, in the twelfth year of his reign. Likewise, on the 24th of December ensuing, he was in an especial commission with others, the aforesaid commissioners of the admiralty, to lend such ships to those counties, which of themselves, cannot find ships for the king's service, as required by his majesty's writs, and to set them forth in full equipage of men and provisions. And Sir William Russel, treasurer of the navy, was impowered to receive of the several sheriffs and officers of the said counties, all such monies as shall be paid in for the said ships and service. And by another commission bearing date the same day, they were impowered to give warrants to the master of the ordnance, to sell and deliver to George Collins, and Samuel Cordwell, such quantities of salt petre and gunpowder, pursuant to the contract made with them. Also on the 27th of February following, were commissioned to grant letters of marque and reprisal against the French king's subjects.

Continuing in the commission of the admiralty, as also comptroller of the king's household, and of his privy-council, he was again with them commissioned, December 28, A. D. 1637, 13 Car. I. to furnish and lend ships to such counties as cannot find the same for the king's use.

On the 26th of June following, he was in commission with the archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas, lord Coventry, lord keeper, and others, for the repairing and re-edifying the Tower of London; as also for annexing thereto fitting privileges, benefits, and duties, the charge whereof to be borne out of the revenue and rights anciently belonging thereto. And were impowered, as well by examination and deposition of witnesses on their oaths, as by other good and lawful means, to enquire and find out what prerogatives, privileges, jurisdictions, bounds, liberties, precincts, hamlets, commands, benefits, rights, fees, services, rents, &c. have heretofore appertained to the said royal castle, commonly called the Tower of London, or that may hereafter be annexed or held as appertaining thereto, and be settled and established, &c. And by what means monies may be raised sufficient to re-edify and repair the said Tower of London; as also what further works, in their discretions, they shall find requisite for the king's service; and for the better storing and safe keeping munitions, provisions of war, and other necessities therein, &c. with other large powers.

He was made treasurer of the household in September following, A. D. 1639, on the death of Sir Thomas Edmonds, who had been advanced to that place in January, A. D. 1617-18. And on the 5th of February following, he was constituted principal secretary of state for life; also was permitted to hold the place of treasurer of the household with it. He succeeded secretary Coke, (who was so aged as to be unfit for business) after much opposition from the earl of Strafford. Algernon, earl of Northumberland, in a letter to Robert, earl of Leicester, ambassador in France, advertises him, "that the king sent the lord treasurer to secretary Coke, to let him know, that by reason of his age, he found him not able to discharge, as he ought to do, the business incident to the place he held, and if he would willingly resign, his majesty would take it well at his hands, and be ready to shew him favour; which he immediately submitted to. Thus far it proceeded without the knowledge of the archbishop, Hamilton, the lieutenant of Ireland, or any other minister of this court; nor had the lord treasurer any guess for whom the place was intended. The next day Coke made his complaints to the lieutenant of Ireland, and then it began to break out, that Mr. Treasurer Vane was the man designed to be secretary. Much labouring there hath been to cross him in it, but the king is so far engaged, that I doubt he will not be wrought off. If possible that can be done, I have better hopes than ever, that it will be obtained for Leicester; for I assure you of lord deputy's using the uttermost of his power to effect it." In another letter, dated February 6, A. D. 1639, his lordship acquaints the earl of Leicester, "On Saturday last, the seals were delivered to Mr. Treasurer Vane, and the day following, he was sworn secretary: the queen's solicitation hath much furthered that business; but certainly no money hath been employed, either to H. Germain, or to any body else on this occasion. The affairs of France, Germany, Holland, and all those parts in the Baltick sea, are put into Mr. Treasurer's hands; and if I be not deceived, you will find him ready to serve you. Mr. Treasurer would not accept of the secretary's place until he was assured of holding the white staff also."

The earl of Clarendon has observed, "that the earl of Strafford, with great earnestness, opposed Sir Henry Vane being made secretary of state, and prevailed for above a month's delay; and about the same time being to be made earl of Strafford, would have a new creation of a barony, and took the title of baron Raby, a house belonging to Sir Henry Vane, and an honour, he made an account, should belong to himself; which was an act (saith the noble author) of the most unnecessary provocation that I have known, and I believe was the chief occasion of the loss of his head." It is also further observed, by the same noble author, that on his being made secretary of state, the bulk and burthen of state affairs, whereby the envy attended them likewise, lay principally on the shoulders of the archbishop of Canterbury, the earl of Strafford, and the lord Cottington; some others being added to them by their places, as the earl of Northumberland, Sir Henry Vane, and Sir Francis Windibank, &c. who made the committee of state, reproachfully called The Junto, and met on all occasions, when the secretaries received any extraordinary intelligence, or were to make any extraordinary dispatch; whereas the body of the council observed set days for their meeting, and came not else together, except specially summoned.

Soon after he was made secretary of state, viz. the 14th of February, A. D. 1639, he was in commission with Algernon, earl of Northumberland, lord high admiral and president of the council of war, William, bishop of London, lord treasurer, James, marquis of Hamilton, master of the horse, Sir Francis Windibank, secretary of state, and George Goring, governor of Portsmouth, for a council of war; and were authorised to meet together, gether, as often as may best conduce to the king's service; and to consider of securing his kingdoms and dominions, and all other matters concerning war and warlike provisions: and to take cognizance of all misdemeanors, abuses, and offences touching martial affairs, &c. also for the ordering and managing the train-bands within the realm of England, and dominions thereunto belonging; and furnishing of forts and fortifications within the realm, &c. for the safety of the kingdom.

On the 27th of July, A. D. 1640, bearing the titles of treasurer of the household and secretary of state, he was commissioned with William, bishop of London, lord treasurer, Philip, earl of Pembroke, lord-chamberlain, George Goring, vice-chamberlain, and Sir Francis Windibank, secretary of state, to call before them such officers, or others, as have the custody of any of the king's jewels, and to require their bringing before them the said jewels, to be viewed; together with all books, notes, or inventories, wherewith they may be charged with any of the said jewels, &c. and to order perfect and full inventories to be made thereof, &c.

Afterwards he waited on the king in his last expedition against the Scots: and was at York when a cessation of arms was agreed on. Of the king's council were three of the commissioners that concluded it, the earls of Pembroke, Salisbury, and Holland, who (as related by the earl of Clarendon) "were all inspired by the Scots, and liked well all that they pretended to desire. Besides those, the king had no body to consult with, but the lord keeper Finch, the duke of Richmond, the marquis of Hamilton, the earl of Strafford, and Sir Henry Vane, principal secretary of state. And the king agreed thereto, as he thought the parliament of England would be more jealous of his honour, and more sensible of the indignities he suffered from the Scots, than his commissioners appeared to be." When the king left York, he was accompanied by all the lords, and Sir Henry Vane; but the earl of Strafford was left in the North to take care of the army, on which lord Clarendon has made some observations of the errors then committed, without any mention of Sir Henry Vane being concerned in them.

Soon after the king's arrival at London the parliament met, viz. the third of November, A. D. 1640. Our historians have so largely discoursed of the grievances complained of in that parliament, that it is needless to mention any of the proceedings here. Sir Henry Vane continued so far in the king's favour, that when William, lord bishop of London, humbly besought the king to resign the office of lord high treasurer, his majesty, the 18th of May, A. D. 1641, constituted Sir Henry Vane, treasurer of the household and principal secretary of state, with the lord keeper Littleton, Henry, earl of Manchester, lord privy seal, and two others, commissioners for executing the several offices of treasurer of the exchequer, and chancellor of the exchequer. And on the 9th of August following, on his majesty's taking a journey into Scotland, he constituted his privy-council regents of the kingdom, during his absence, (whereof Sir Henry was one) and to take care for the safety of his dearest consort the queen, his dearest son prince Charles, and the rest of his royal children, and to defend them from all insurrections, &c.

Yet not long after, on Sir Henry Vane's appearing in the prosecution of the earl of Strafford, the king was so offended, that he removed him from his place of treasurer of his household, and also from being secretary of state, though in the patent granting that office to him, he was to hold it during life. And thereupon the parliament, when they raised their army, and published their declaration, avowed, "it was only for the defence of the king's person, and the religion, liberties, and laws of the kingdom, and for those, who for their sakes, and for those ends, had observed their orders: that by the instigation of evil counsellors, the king had raised an army of papists, by which he intended to awe, and destroy the parliament, &c. and the putting out the earl of Northumberland, Sir Henry Vane, and others, &c. from their several places and employments, were sufficient and ample evidences thereof."

It does not appear that he was concerned in any measures against the king, but continued in London, without acting in the rebellion. And on the first of December, A. D. 1645, the parliament debating on propositions of peace with the king, voted, that it be recommended to his majesty, to create Sir Henry Vane, senior, a baron of the kingdom. He lamented the unhappy state of the nation in those times of confusion, and was not in any commission or employment under the parliament. In July, A. D. 1645, his castle of Raby was surprized by the king's forces from Bolton castle; but were again close blocked up by forces raised by Sir George Vane, his son. Before the cruel murder of the king, he retired to his seat at Raby castle, neither he nor his sons being concerned therein, but opposed it all that lay in their power. The earl of Clarendon is more severe in his character of Sir Henry Vane, than can evidently be made out. The actions that we have recited of him, by unquestionable authorities, shew, he was in commissions with the greatest men of the nation, and at the head of all affairs, a sure sign of his eminent abilities; and the earl says, in his judgment, He liked the government, both in church and state. As to what his lordship observes, of his growing at last into the hatred and contempt of those who had made most use of him, and dying in universal reproach; it may more justly be represented, that he saw the vile use they made of their power, and contemning them, chose retirement. He lived to the latter end of the year 1654, when he departed this life, at his seat at Raby castle, in the sixty-ninth year of his age.

He had to wife, Frances, daughter of Thomas Darcy of the county of Essex, esquire, by whom he had issue four sons and five daughters,

1. Thomas Vane,
2. John Vane,
3. Sir Henry Vane.

} who died infants.

4. Sir George Vane, youngest son, knighted at Whitehall, the 22d of November, A. D. 1640, seated at Long-Melton, in the county palatine of Durham, aged forty-six, the 7th of September, A. D. 1666, when the visitation of that county was taken. He married Elizabeth, daughter and sole heir of Sir Lionel Maddison, of Rogerley, in Durham, by whom he had issue four sons, and eight eight daughters. His eldest son, Lionel Vane, was aged nineteen, September 7, A. D. 1666.

The five daughters were,

1. Margaret, married to Sir Thomas Pelham, of Halland, in the county of Suffex, baronet, ancestor to his grace the duke of Newcastle.

2. Frances, was wedded to Sir Robert Honeywood, of Pet, in the county of Kent, knight.

3. Anne, was wife of Sir Thomas Liddal, of Ravensworth, in the bishoprick of Durham, baronet.

4. Elizabeth, married to Sir Francis Vincent, of Stoke-Daberon, in the county of Surry, baronet, and,

5. Catharine.

Sir HENRY VANE, the eldest surviving son and heir, had the honour of knighthood conferred on him at Whitehall, on the 23d of June, A. D. 1640. He had (as observed by the earl of Clarendon) great natural parts; and of a quick conception, and very ready, sharp, and weighty expression. "And that within a very short time after he returned from his studies in Magdalen college, in Oxford, where, though he was under the care of a very worthy tutor, he lived not with great exactness, he spent some little time in France, and more in Geneva; and after his return into England, contracted a full prejudice, and bitterness against the church, both against the form of the government, and against the liturgy. In this giddiness, which then much displeased his father, who still appeared highly conformable, and exceeding sharp against those who were not, he transported himself into New-England. He was no sooner landed there, but his parts made him quickly taken notice of, and very probably his quality, being the eldest son of a privy-counsellor, might give him some advantage; insomuch that, when the next season came for the election of their magistrates, he was chosen their governor; in which place he had not the fortune to please them long, and he unsatisfied with them, and they with him; he thereupon returned to England. When, being reformed from his extravagancies, he, with his father's approbation and direction, married a lady of a good family; and, by his father's credit with the earl of Northumberland, who was high-admiral of England, was, jointly with Sir William Ruffel, in the office of treasurer of the navy (a place of great trust and profit) which he equally shared with the other (and, surviving him, had it solely) and seemed well satisfied and composed to the government."

"But when his father (as lord Clarendon further observes) received the disobligation from the lord Strafford, by his being created baron of Raby, the house and land of Vane (which title he had promised himself, but it was unluckily cast upon the earl, purely out of contempt to Vane) they sucked in all the thoughts of revenge imaginable; and, from thence, the son betook himself to the friendship of Mr. Pym, and all other discontented or seditious persons, and contributed all that intelligence that designed the ruin of the earl, and which grafted him in the entire confidence of those who promoted the same; so, that nothing was concealed from him, though it is believed, that he communicated his own thoughts to very few."

The part he acted in the civil wars, is recited at large in our historians, and therefore we shall only mention, that when he was treasurer of the navy (which place he held till the first wars between the English and Dutch) he shewed a rare example of honour and integrity. The fees of his office were, at that time, four pence in the pound, which, by reason of the war, honestly amounted to little less than 30,000 l. per annum; Sir Henry Vane looked on it as too much for a private subject, and very generously gave up his patent (which he had for life from king Charles I.) to the then parliament, desiring but two thousand pounds per annum, for an agent he had bred up to the business, and the remainder to go to the public. This was done, and the method of a fixed salary has continued ever since in that office. He was such a strenuous opposer of all tyrannical government, that he incurred the hatred of Cromwell, who, A. D. 1653, when he turned out the speaker, and the members, stamping with his foot, bidding them give place to honest men, he, in wrath, taking Sir Henry Vane, junior, by the cloak, said, thou art a juggling fellow; and abusing others, commanded his guards to turn them out of the house.

On the restoration of king Charles II. he was looked on as a dangerous person; and being brought on his trial for high-treason, was found guilty, and receiving sentence of death, 11th of June, A. D. 1662, was executed the 14th of the same month.

Bishop Burnet, in his History of his own Times, gives an account, that, "As the sparing of Martin, Goodwin, and Milton, who had not only justified, but magnified the putting the king to death, in their writings, was much censured; so, on the other hand, the putting Sir Henry Vane to death was as much blamed: for, the declaration from Breda being full for an indemnity to all, except the regicides, he was comprehended in that; since, tho' he was for changing the government, and deposing the king, yet he did not approve of the putting him to death, nor of the force put on the parliament, but did for some time, while these things were acted, withdraw from the scene. This was so represented by his friends, that an address was made, by both houses of parliament, on his behalf; to which the king gave a favourable answer, tho' in general words; so he reckoned that he was safe, that being equivalent to an act of parliament, tho' it wanted the necessary forms. Yet the great share he had in the attainder of the earl of Strafford, and in the whole turn of affairs, to the total change of government; but, above all, the great opinion that was had of his parts and capacity to embroil matters again, made the court think it was necessary to put him out of the way. He was beheaded on Tower-hill, where a new and very indecent practice was begun. It was observed, that the dying speeches of the regicides had left impressions on the hearers, that were not at all to the advantage of the government; so, strains of a peculiar nature being expected from him, to prevent that, drummers were placed under the scaffold, who, as soon as he began to speak to the publick, upon a sign given, struck up with their drums. This put him in no disorder: he desired they might be stopped, for he understood what was meant by it. Then he went through his devotions; and, as he was taking leave of those about him, he happening to say somewhat with relation to the times,

times, the drums struck up a second time: so he gave over, and died with so much composedness, that it was generally thought the government had lost more than it had gained by his death."

He had to wife Frances, daughter of Sir Christopher Wray, of Ashby, in Lincolnshire, baronet, and by her had issue six daughters.

1. Dorothy, married to John Crisp, of Oxfordshire, esquire.

2. Bennina, married to ——— Forth.

3. Frances, married to ——— Kegwich.

4. Margaret, to Sir James Tilley, of Wales.

5. Ann, } died unmarried.

6. Catherine, }

Also four sons,

1. Henry Vane, died without issue.

2. William Vane.

3. Richard Vane, died without issue.

4. Christopher Vane.

The youngest son,

(First Lord.) Sir CHRISTOPHER VANE, was knighted by king Charles II. and in the reign of king James, on the 25th of July, A. D. 1688, was sworn of the privy-council. On the 8th of July, 1699, he was by king William III. created a baron of the realm, by the title and title of baron Barnard, of Barnard-castle, in the bishopric of Durham.

His lordship married Elizabeth, eldest daughter to Gilbert Holles, earl of Clare, and sister and coheir to John, duke of Newcastle, by whom he had issue two sons and three daughters, that died young, viz. Henry, Christopher, Elizabeth, Albina, and Mary; and two sons, Gilbert, his successor, and William, also a daughter named Grace, that survived their father, who, dying on the 28th of October, A. D. 1723, in the seventieth year of his age, at his seat at Fairlawne, in Kent, was buried in the church of Shipbourn, in that county, his lady surviving him. The Rev. Mr. Thomas Curteis, who preached his funeral sermon, and claimed the honour of having a very long friendship with his lordship, has given the following character of him, in his sermon preached at Wrotham, in Kent, November 27, A. D. 1723. In the conclusion thereof, he thus expresses himself.

"It may be expected I should say something of the noble person, whose obsequies we now commemorate: and tho' discourses of this nature are not designed for the commendation of the dead, but for the instruction of the living, I think myself obliged to touch a little upon the former; yet so, as not to exceed the bounds of truth and decency: for such an extreme would be the more criminal, as it relates to one, who in his life-time appeared very far from affecting popularity.

"His lordship's judgment of persons and things, was clear, solid, and penetrating; and his discourse open, familiar, and improving, to those who had the honour and pleasure of his most intimate conversation. He seldom cared to enter much into politics, tho' very few understood them better. Books were his chief diversion; and he had a ready command of what was valuable or instructive in them. As his temper was generally even, free from the ruffles of passion, and excellent in itself; so nothing but a chosen retirement, chiefly occasioned by a very long ill state of health, could have hindered his personal abilities, both natural and acquired, from shining in a more diffusive light. He had a very just and honourable zeal for our excellent established church and its interests; yet, not without a charitable latitude towards those who conscientiously differed from it: nor was he a less zealous advocate for our happy civil constitution and liberties. He always declared himself an hearty lover of the public peace, and of such measures as he thought most directly tending to perpetuate so invaluable a blessing: and, as he perfectly understood, so he practised those virtues which conduce to the quiet and happiness of social life. He was a very great oeconomist, and a most exact manager of his private affairs: yet, on some special occasions, he shewed instances of a very generous liberality, to a degree uncommon, and in a way as much concealed from the world as possible. Neither was his lordship less solicitous for the public good: for, when, thro' some disagreeable events, or the caprices of the people, the national credit has been endangered by a sudden run upon the bank, he has immediately thrown in large sums to support it; as he had both a better way of judging than many others, in respect of danger, and a due regard to the common safety. One thing I ought also particularly to mention, which, like a city on an hill, cannot be hid: I mean that pious work of rebuilding the decayed church of Shipbourn, in a very regular, beautiful, and sumptuous manner; a work, which will, as a precious ointment, embalm his memory to after-ages. But what I shall chiefly observe is, that in his last sickness, so long as he retained the use of his reason, he bore the painful decays of nature with great meekness and patience: and, by his frequent desiring the suitable appointed prayers, both from his own domestic chaplain and myself, together with his devout joining in them, he had recourse to the true means of support in that hour of trial, which need the strongest consolation from above; and thereby appeared to leave the world in a truly pious disposition: so that we may charitably hope he has made the blessed and most advantageous exchange which I have been describing."

Gilbert Vane, his eldest son, succeeded his lordship in honour and estate.

William Vane, the youngest son, was of a generous, candid, and engaging temper, joined with an inviolable attachment to our constitution and civil liberties; and zealously affected to our present happy establishment. He served for the county of Durham, in the parliament that sat first on business November 18, A. D. 1708; and afterwards for Steyning in Suffex. And king George I. was pleased, by privy seal, dated at St. James's, June 12, A. D. 1720, and by patent, dated at Dublin, the 13th of October following, to create him a viscount and baron of the kingdom of Ireland, by the title of viscount Vane, and baron of Duncannon, in the county of Tyrone. His lordship died suddenly of an apoplexy, at his seat at Fairlawne, in Kent, Monday May 20, A. D. 1734; having the Friday preceding been declared knight of the shire for the county of Kent; and was interred June 5, A. D. 1734, in Shipbourn church, near Fairlawne, with great funeral solemnity. He married Lucy, daughter and coheir of William Jolliffe, of Carewell, in the county of Stafford.

ford, esquire, and by her, who died the 27th of March, A. D. 1742, and was interred at Shipbourn, April 5, had three sons: 1. Christopher, educated in King's college, Cambridge, and died the 19th of July, A. D. 1721, in the seventeenth year of his age. 2. John, who died at Naples, where he went for the recovery of his health, the 5th of February, A. D. 1723; also in the seventeenth year of his age, and on April 17, A. D. 1724, was buried at Shipbourn. The reverend Mr. Thomas Curteis, in his sermon at his funeral, recites, "That he never observed in one so young, a more perfect model of the accomplished gentleman and the christian." His only surviving son and heir, William, lord viscount Vane, was born in 1714; and the 4th of October, A. D. 1734, set out on his travels; when, returning the next year, his lordship the 19th of May, A. D. 1735, married Anne, daughter of Francis Hawes, esquire, one of the South-Sea directors in 1720, and widow of lord William Hamilton.

The eldest son,

(Second Lord.) GILBERT VANE, lord Barnard, baptized in London the 17th of April, A. D. 1678, married Mary, daughter to Morgan Randle, of Chilworth, in the county of Surry, Esq; by whom he had issue six sons, and three daughters.

1. Henry Vane, who succeeded him in the honours and estate.

2. Morgan Vane, in 1729, arrived at St. James's, from Mr. Stanhope, (afterwards earl of Harrington) ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the court of Spain, with the treaty concluded and signed by that court. On the ninth of November, N. S. in 1732, he was made comptroller of the stamp-office; in which year, on the 23d of January, he was married to Margaretta, daughter of Robert Knight, esquire, late cashier of the South-Sea Company; and she died at Bath, in May, A. D. 1739; and left a son Morgan Vane. He secondly married Mary, daughter of — Fowler, esquire.

3. Thomas Vane, seated at Staindrop-Hall, in the county palatine of Durham, died unmarried, in 1758.

4. Gilbert Vane, in February 1732, was made an ensign in the first regiment of foot-guards, and after lieutenant in the same; and in the rebellion in 1745, was lieutenant-colonel to the earl of Berkley's new-raised regiment of foot.

5. Randle Vane, died in the twenty-first year of his age.

6. Charles Vane, now living, unmarried in the county of Norfolk.

His three daughters were,

1. Anne, who died at Bath, unmarried, March 11, A. D. 1735-6.

2. Elizabeth, wedded to Sir William Humble, of Thorpe-Underwood, in Northamptonshire, baronet.

3. Jane, married to Thomas Staunton, of Stock-Grove, in the county of Bucks, esquire.

Lady Barnard, their mother, died on the 4th of August, A. D. 1728, in the forty-seventh year of her age: and his lordship deceasing the 27th of April, A. D. 1753, aged seventy-five, was succeeded by Henry, his eldest son, before mentioned, which (First Earl.) HENRY VANE, whilst he was a commoner, was first elected, on a vacancy, May 27, A. D. 1726, a member for Launceston, in that parliament summoned to meet May 10, A. D. 1722; and for St. Maws, to that of November 28, A. D. 1727, and June 13, A. D. 1734. To the parliament summoned to meet June 25, A. D. 1741, he was chose for Rippon; and accepting of the place of vice-treasurer, receiver-general, and paymaster-general of all his majesty's revenues in Ireland, a new writ was ordered, July 14, A. D. 1742, and he was re-elected. And was chosen a knight of the shire for the county of Durham, in the parliament of August 13, A. D. 1747; and being made one of the lords commissioners of the treasury, a new writ was ordered, April 21, A. D. 1749, and he was again elected for that county. In 1753, he succeeded his father in his honour and estate. And his majesty was pleased to create him a viscount and earl of this kingdom, by the stile and title of viscount Barnard, and earl of Darlington, by letters-patents, April 3, A. D. 1754, and was constituted lord-lieutenant of the county of Durham; also vice-admiral of the said county.

His lordship married in 1725, Grace Fitz-Roy, second daughter to Charles, duke of Cleveland, by whom he had issue three sons, and three daughters.

The latter were,

1. Anne, married in March, A. D. 1746, to Charles Hope Weir, of Craige-Hall, in Scotland, esquire.

2. Mary, married in October, A. D. 1753, to Robert Carr, of Locken, in Durham.

3. Henrietta, born December 26, A. D. 1738, died unmarried in 1758.

The sons were,

1. Henry Vane, his successor.

2. Frederic Vane, born June 26, A. D. 1732, member in the present parliament for the county of Durham.

3. Raby Vane, born January 2, A. D. 1736. He is a captain in the navy, and member in the present parliament for Carlisle.

His lordship departed this life on the sixth of March, A. D. 1758, and was succeeded by his eldest son, (Second and present Earl.) HENRY VANE, who was, in his father's life-time, captain of a company, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the first regiment of foot-guards. He was elected member of parliament for Downton, in Wiltshire, on a vacancy in November, A. D. 1746. In July A. D. 1749, being present at Cambridge, at the instalment of his grace the duke of Newcastle, chancellor of that university, he had the honour of a master of arts degree conferred on him.

In 1753, he was made steward and bailiff of the three Chilton hundreds of Stoke, Desborough, and Bonenham, in Buckinghamshire, which vacated his seat in parliament; but he was immediately chosen knight of the shire for the county of Durham, in the room of his father, who had just then succeeded to the peerage. At the general election next ensuing, in 1754, he was re-chosen for the same county, and continued to represent the same till his father's death, whom he not only succeeded succeeded in the earldom, &c. but also as lord-lieutenant and vice-admiral of the county of Durham.

[Faint, illegible text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

His lordship, who is now master of the jewel-office, governor of the city and castle of Carlisle, alderman of Durham, and colonel of the Durham militia, married on the tenth of March, A. D. 1757, Margaret, sister to Sir James Lowther, baronet, by whom he has had two daughters,

1. Grace, born December 3, A. D. 1757, who died fourteen days old.

2. Elizabeth, born April 28, A. D. 1759, who died in July, A. D. 1765.

(TITLES.) Henry Vane, earl of Darlington, viscount and baron Barnard, of Barnard-castle, in the bishopric of Durham.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Barnard, of Barnard-castle, July 8, A. D. 1699 (10 Will. III.) viscount

Barnard, and earl of Darlington, April 3, A. D. 1754 (27 Geo. II.)

(ARMS.) Sapphire, three dexter gauntlets, with their backs forwards, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath a dexter hand couped above the wrist, erect in a gauntlet, topaz, brandishing a sword proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side a griffon pearl. On the sinister an antelope topaz: each gorged with a plain collar sapphire, the dexter charged with three gauntlets as in the coat, the other with three martlets, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Nec temere nec timide."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Raby-castle in the county of Durham.

BELASYSE, Earl FAUCONBERG.

THIS ancient and noble family, of Norman extraction, claims a regular and uninterrupted descent from BELASIUS, a man entrusted with great power by William the Conqueror, whom he attended into England, and whose cause he so successfully furthered as general of the forces sent to suppress the adherents of Edgar Etheling, who kept possession of the Isle of Ely, that they were soon reduced. In memory of which victorious attempt, the place where the Norman camp was pitched on the south end of Alderheath, was named Belafius' hill, and thence corruptly called now Belfars hills. The son of this great man was,

ROWLAND BELASYSE, who probably attended his father in the English expedition; for we find that he gained a settlement in this country by marrying Elgiva, the daughter and heir of Ralph de Belasyse, of Belasyse, in the county of Durham. Upon succeeding to this inheritance, he wrote himself Rouland Belasyse, of Belasyse, and his descendants have ever since adhered to the same name, though spelt variously as Bellasyses, Belasys, Belasis, &c. He was possessed also of Beuly, in the aforesaid county, and departing this life in the reign of Henry I. was succeeded by his only son,

RALPH BELASYSE, whose son,

WILLIAM DE BELASIS, (as he wrote himself) was father of

Sir ROULAND BELASYSE, * who was knighted at the battle of Lewes, in Suffex, in the forty-eighth of Henry III. when the king was taken prisoner. By marrying Mary, the daughter and heir of Henry Spring, lord of Howton le Spring, in the bishopric of Durham, he succeeded to that lordship, and other considerable possessions, as Bater, Burdon, &c. as appears by his charter in the twenty-fourth of Henry III. and it is remarkable, that to this charter is appendant a seal, of a cheveron between three flowers de lis, (the same arms the family now bear) impaling an escutcheon between six martlets, the arms of Spring. His son,

Sir ROGER BELASYSE, married Joan, daughter of Sir Robert Harbottle, knight, and had two sons, Robert and John, and a daughter, Elizabeth, married to Thomas Madison, of Unthank-hall, in Wardale. The younger son married Mary, the daughter of Roger Bertram; and the elder,

Sir ROBERT BELASYSE, succeeded the father, and, marrying Anne, daughter of Sir Robert Goldburne, had issue three daughters, Mary, Ursula, and Frances; the eldest married to John Lambton, and the youngest to William Wickliffe: also a son and successor,

* A figure of a knight in armour, in a praying posture, with a sword by his side, reposing his head on a cushion, and at his feet a lion, is yet remaining in the church of Houghton, and said to have been intended for this Sir Rouland.

Sir JOHN BELASYSE, who married Oswald, daughter of Sir William Talbois, knight, and had issue a daughter, Diana, married to Gerard Salevin, and three sons, John, Peter, and Thomas; of which the youngest married Mary Wywell, and the eldest,

JOHN BELASYSE, continued the line by marrying Alice, daughter of John de la Hay, who bore to him a daughter, Mary, the wife of William Featherstone, and two sons: the youngest, John Belasyse, married Maud, the daughter of John Doolard, of Auckland, and the eldest,

WILLIAM BELASYSE, married Maud, daughter and coheir of William Bellingham, of Bellingham, esquire, by whom he had a daughter, Joan, the wife of John Buffy, and a son,

Sir JOHN BELASYSE, * who lived in the reign of Edward III. and was lord of Hencknowle, in the county of Durham. By Alice his wife, daughter to Sir Robert Hansard, of Walworth, he had three daughters, Elizabeth, married to Sir John Waddome, knight, Julian, the wife of Sir John Cramline, knight, and Alice, wife of Thomas Brigham. Also a son,

JOHN BELASYSE, who marrying Joan, daughter of Robert Lampton, of Lampton, esquire, had issue two sons, Robert and John: the eldest,

Sir ROBERT BELASYSE, was knighted and had issue by Margaret, the wife of Robert Dalton, two sons, William and Robert.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM BELASYSE, was twice married, first, to Cecily, daughter and heir of William Hotton, of Butterwyke, secondly, to Jane, daughter of Thomas Tipping; by the former of whom he had issue three daughters,

1. Elizabeth, the wife of William Clervaux, of Crofts, in the county of York.

2. Margaret, the wife of ——— Minshall.

3. Anne, married to Anthony Smith, of Kalton, esquire.

Also two sons,

1. Richard Belasyse.

2. Anthony Belasyse, L. L. D. master in chancery, A. D. 1545, when he was one of the four specially appointed by the king, to hear causes and pass decrees in the court of Chancery, in the absence of Sir Thomas Wriothesley, lord chancellor. And in the reign of Edward VI. being wrote Anthony Belasis, esquire; he was one of the king's council in the North. On the dissolution of the monasteries, he obtained from that king a grant of Newborough abbey, in the county of York, which he afterwards gave to Sir William Belasyse, his nephew, son of Richard, his elder brother, which

RICHARD BELASYSE was constituted constable of the castle of Durham, during life, to officiate by himself or sufficient deputies. He was also of the council of the North, on the first establishment. He married Margaret, daughter and heir of Richard Errington, of Cockley, in Northumberland, esquire, and died on the 26th of March, in 31 Henry VIII. seized of the manors of Henknoll, Bradwood, Barington, and Scole-Aclac, in the bishopric of Durham, and Heigheington, and Pelton; and of lands in Bishop Auckland, Wardale, and Swandburne, in the same county; leaving William, his son and heir, then aged sixteen, whose wardship his brother Anthony obtained; which,

Sir WILLIAM BELASYSE lived in the reign of queen Elizabeth, and was sheriff of Yorkshire in the sixteenth year of that reign. He wrote himself of Newborough, A. D. 1584, when his grandson Thomas was seven years of age; and before that time had the honour of knighthood conferred on him. He lived to eighty-one years of age, and died the 13th of April, A. D. 1604. He had been justice of peace sixty years, and a knight fifty, and saw his son and grandchild knighted before his death.

He married Magaret, daughter of Sir Nicholas Fairfax, of Malton, and Gilling, in the county of York, knight, by whom he had issue,

1. Henry Belasyse, who succeeded him in his estate.

2. Bryan Belasyse †, born at Newborough, the 19th of July, A. D. 1559, 1st of queen Elizabeth. He was of Morton, in the bishopric of Durham, and the father of Sir William Belasyse, of Morton, who died in the forty-eighth year of his age, on the 3d of December, A. D. 1611, and was buried in the church of Houghton le Spring, in the county of Durham.

3. Nicholas Belasyse, christened the 3d of October, A. D. 1551, 5th of Edward VI.

4. Charles Belasyse.

5. Richard Belasyse.

And four daughters, who died young, or without issue, and Catherine, christened the 8th of September, A. D. 1553, married to Thomas Metham, of Metham, esquire.

Sir HENRY BELASYSE, his son and heir, was christened in the parish of Cockewold, the 14th of June, A. D. 1555, 3d of Philip and Mary. He was knighted by king James I. at York, the 17th of April, A. D. 1603, in his journey to London; and was created a baronet the 29th of June, A. D. 1611, at the first institution of that dignity. He lived in great hospitality, and was the first named in the commission of the peace for the North-Riding of the county of York, in the 1st of Charles I. He had to wife Ursula, daughter of Sir Thomas Fairfax, of Denton, in the county of York, by whom he had issue, Thomas Belasyse, his son and heir.

And two daughters.

1. Dorothy, wife of Sir Conyers Darcy, of Hornby, knight, and by her ancestor to the now earl of Holderness.

2. Mary, married to Sir William Lister, of Thornton, in the county of York, knight.

This Sir Henry Belasyse had a monument erected in his life-time, in the cathedral of York, with the effigies of him and his lady, his son, and two daughters, with the following inscription:

HENRICUS BELASSIS, Miles et Baronettus filius
Gulielmi Belassis, Militis, ex Margareta

* Belasyse Cross, in the bishopric of Durham, was erected by this knight.

† From this gentleman the family of Belasyse, seated at Morton, derive their descent.

Filia primogenita Nicholai Fairfax de Gilling
Militis; mortalitatis memor hunc tumulum
Sibi et Ursulae conjugii charissimæ filiae primogenitæ Thomæ Fairfax de Denton Milit. posuit;
Sub quo simul requiescunt et gloriosum Christi
Adventum expectant.

Mors certa est, incerta dies, nec certa sequentum;
Cura sibi tumulum qui parat, ille sapit.
Frequens mortis et novissimi judicii recordatio
A peccato revocat.

That the time of his death is not mentioned, may be from the confusion of the nation that then happened.

His only son and heir,

(First Viscount.) Sir THOMAS BELASYSE, born
A. D. 1577, was, in consideration of his great merits, advanced to the dignity of a baron of this realm, by letters-patent bearing date the 25th of May, 3d of Charles I. A. D. 1627, by the title of lord Fauconberg, of Yarum. And faithfully adhering to that king in the times of his unhappy troubles, was, in consideration thereof, created viscount Fauconberg, of Henknowle, in the county palatine of Durham, by letters-patent, bearing date at Oxford, 31 January, 18 of Charles I.
A. D. 1642. His lordship having a friendship with William Cavendish, marquis of Newcastle, he followed the fortunes of that nobleman in the siege of York, which held out three months against three powerful armies, as lord Clarendon has observed; and on the loss of the day at the battle of Marston Moor, the marquis, under that anxiety of mind, having embarked at Scarborough, for Hamburgh, the lord Fauconberg took his share with him in his foreign adventures. He landed with the marquis at Hamburgh the 8th of July,
A. D. 1644; but we can give no farther account of him than that he was obliged to compound for his estate, with the sequestrators, at five thousand and twelve pound eighteen shillings, and died in 1652, and was buried in the parish church of Cockwold, in the county of York.

He married Barbara, daughter to Sir Henry Cholmondley, of Roxby, in the county of York, knight, and baronet, by whom he had issue two sons.

1. Henry Belasyse.

2. John Belasyse.

And five daughters,

1. Margaret, married to Sir Edward Osborn, of Kiveton, ancestor to the present duke of Leeds.

2. Mary, married to John, lord Darcy, of Aston, ancestor to the present earl of Holderness.

3. Barbara, married to Sir Henry Slingsby, of Scriven, in the county of York, baronet, who was put to death under Cromwell's usurpation, and died, as he said on the scaffold, for being an honest man.

4. Ursula, to Sir Walter Vauasor, of Haslewood, knight and baronet, ancestor to the present baronet.

5. Frances, to Thomas Ingram, esquire, eldest son to Sir Arthur Ingram, of Temple-Newson;
all in Yorkshire.

John Belasyse, his second son, was, in consideration of his conduct and courage in many gallant actions in the time of the rebellion, created lord Belasyse, of Worlaby, in the county of Lincoln, by letters-patent, bearing date at Oxford, January 27, 20 Car. I. A. D. 1644; but this honour is now extinct. His descendants are entered however in the table.

A very lofty and costly monument, of curious workmanship, was affixed to the east wall of the church, in the church-yard of St. Giles's in the fields, Middlesex, on part of which, being of white marble, was the following inscription, in black letters, under the arms of Belasyse, impal-ing the arms of Powlet.

This monument was erected in the year of our Lord 1736, by the pious direction of the honourable Dame Barbara Webb, wife of Sir John Webb, of Cranford Magna, in the county of Dorset, baronet, and the honourable Catherine Talbot, wife of the honourable John Talbot, of Longford, in the county of Salop, esquire, surviving daughters and coheirs of the right honourable John, lord Belasyse, second son of Thomas, lord viscount Fauconberg, in memory of their most dear father, his wives and children.

Who, for his loyalty, prudence, and courage, was promoted to several commands of great trust by their majesties king Charles I. and II. viz. having raised six regiments of horse and foot in the late civil wars, he commanded a tertius in his majesties armies at the battle of Edge-hill, Newbury, and Knaresby; at the sieges of Reading and Bristol; and afterwards, being made governor of York, and commander in chief of all his majesties forces in Yorkshire, he fought the battle of Selby, with the lord Fairfax. And being lieutenant-general of the counties of Lincoln, Nottingham, Derby, and Rutland, and governor of Newark, he valiantly defended that garrison against the English and Scotch armies, till his majesty came in person to the Scotch quarters, and commanded the surrender of it. At which time he also had the honour of being general of the king's horse-guards; in all which services, during the wars, and other achievements, he deported himself with eminent courage and conduct, and received many wounds, sustained three imprisonments in the tower of London; and after the happy restoration of Charles II. he was made lord lieutenant of the east-riding of the county of York, governor of Hull, general of his majesties forces in Africa, governor of Tangier, captain of his majesty's guard of gentlemen pensioners, and first lord commissioner of the treasury to king
James II. He died the 10th of September, A. D.
1689, whose remains are deposited in this vault.

He married, to his first wife, Jane, daughter and sole heiress of Sir Robert Boteler, of Woodhall, in the county of Hertford, knight, by whom he had Sir Henry Belasyse, knight of the most honourable order of the Bath, interred in this vault, Mary, viscountess Dunbar, and Frances, both deceased.

He married, to his second wife, Anne, daughter and coheir to Sir Robert Crane, of Chilton, in the county of Suffolk, baronet, who also lies interred here.

He married, to his third wife, the right honourable the lady Anne Powlet, second daughter of the most noble John, marquis of Winchester, sister to Charles, late duke of Bolton, and is here interred.

The right honourable John, lord Belasye, had issue by his third marriage, with the lady Anne Powlet, three sons and nine daughters, whereof the three sons, and five of the daughters, died in their infancy; Honora, lady dowager Bergavenny, widow and relict of George, lord Bergavenny, one of the coheirs of the said John, lord Belasye, who died without issue the 6th of January, A. D. 1706, and is interred in this vault.

The honourable Dame Barbara Webb, and the honourable Catherine Talbot, the two surviving daughters and coheirs, now living, who caused this monument to be erected.

Also the honourable Isabella, the youngest daughter, who married Thomas Stoner, of Stoner, in the county of Oxford, esquire, one of the coheirs of the said late lord Belasye, and died without issue the 4th of June, A. D. 1704.

The earl of Clarendon says of this lord Belasye, That when he was made governor of York, he was a person of great interest in the country, and of exemplary industry and courage; and that the king made him governor of Newark, being allied to most of the gentlemen of the adjacent counties, and having a good estate there, he thought him more acceptable than Sir Richard Willis, whom he displaced.

We now return to,

HENRY BELASYE, eldest son and heir of Thomas viscount Fauconberg, who was, with the lord Fairfax, the two knights who served for Yorkshire, in the parliament which met A. D. 1641; and in August, A. D. 1642, signed with that lord the articles for a neutrality in the said spacious county; which he was induced to do, as lord Clarendon has observed, for that after the king had left York, and his brother colonel John Belasye, and his regiment, with other forces, had been sent to his majesty, no further supply could be raised. He gives this relation of it:

"Harry Bellasis, with the lord Fairfax, the two knights who served in parliament for Yorkshire, signed articles for a neutrality for that county, being nearly allied together, and of great kindness, till their several opinions and affections had divided them in this quarrel; the lord Fairfax adhering to the parliament, and the other with great courage and sobriety to the king." He further relates, that the principal persons of both parties subscribed the articles; but the parliament expressed their detestation of it, and reproved the lord Fairfax and his party, for being cozened and overreached by the other.

In A. D. 1645, the militia being one of the difficult points that could not be settled in the treaty of Uxbridge, the king sent propositions, that he was willing to commit the great trust of the militia of the kingdom, for such time, and with such powers, as are expressed in the papers, delivered by his commissioners at Uxbridge. And nominating several persons for that trust, among them was this Henry Bellasis, his majesty supposing there can be no objection against them.

This Henry died in his father's life-time. He had to wife Grace, daughter and heir to Sir Thomas Barton, of Smithells, in the county of Lancaster, lineally descended from Ralph Barton, of Holm, near Newark, in the county of Nottingham, and of Joan his wife, only daughter and heir of Sir Ralph Ratcliff, of Smithells, living in the reign of king Henry V. On a monument in Coxwold church, in Yorkshire, is the following inscription:

M. S.

H. S. E.

Honoratissimus Henricus Belasye Armiger

Thomæ Vice-Comitis Fauconberg Filius

Quem Ingenii Eximie Dotes

Intaminata Fides

Intactaq; Virtus, et Probitas illustris

Patriæ Charum, Suisq; Ornamentum

Merito Efflexerunt.

Conjugem duxit unigenitam Dni. Thomæ Barton Equitis

De Smithells in Agro Lancas. Filiam

Ex quibus Numerosa effluxit progenies

Maria, Thomas facultatum et virtutum Paternarum Hæres,

BARBARA, HENRICUS, Rolandus Eques Balnei

Qui uxorem habuit unicam Humphredi Davenport

De Sutton in Com. Cestr. Armigeri Filiam

Gulielmus, Gracia Vice-Comiti de Castleton,

Francisca Domino Henrico Jones Equiti

Arabella Dr. Gulielmo Erankland Nupta,

Margarita, Johannes, Carolus, Barbara,

Quam duxit Dns. Marmaducus Dalton Eques

Et Gulielmus, qui numerum bis septenarium complevit.

Obijt zomo Die Maii, A. D. 1647mo.

By the said Grace, his wife, he left issue four sons and four daughter.

His sons were,

1. Thomas Belasye, who succeeded his grandfather.

2. Henry Belasye, who died unmarried.

3. Sir Rouland Belasye, knight of the Bath; ancestor to the present earl Fauconberg.

4. John Belasye, who died in his youth.

His daughters were,

1. Grace, married to George lord viscount Castleton, in Ireland, and seated in Lincolnshire.

2. Frances, married to Sir Henry Jones, of Aston, in the county of Oxford, knight, by whom he had Frances, his only daughter and heir, married to Richard earl of Scarborough.

3. Arabella, married to Sir William Frankland, of Thirkelby in Yorkshire, baronet.

4. Barbara, married to Walter Strickland, a younger son to Sir Robert Strickland, of Sizer, in the county of Westmoreland, knight, and after his death, to Sir Marmaduke Dalton, of Huxwell, in Yorkshire, knight.

THOMAS BELASYE, viscount Fauconberg, (as successor to his grandfather) married first Mildred, daughter to Nicholas, viscount Castleton, and she dying without issue by him, he married, secondly, Mary, daughter of Oliver Cromwell, the usurper, at Hampton-court, November 18, A. D. 1657. The earl of Clarendon gives this account of him:

"After Cromwell was declared protector, and in great power, he married his daughter to the lord Fauconberg, the owner of a very great estate in Yorkshire, and descended of a family eminently loyal. There were many reasons to believe that this young gentleman, being then about three or four and twenty years of age, of great vigour and ambition, had many good purposes, that he thought that alliance might qualify and enable him to perform. His marriage was celebrated at Whitehall [Wood has given the time at Hampton Court] with all imaginable pomp and lustre. And it was observed, that though it was performed in publick, according to the rites and ceremonies then in use, they were presently afterwards in private married by ministers ordained by bishops, and according to the form in the book of Common Prayer, and this with the privity of Cromwell."

it

In A. D. 1657, he was made one of the council of state; and in June, A. D. 1658, when Dunkirk was taken from the Spaniards, the French king sent the duke of Crequi, together with monsieur Mancini, nephew to cardinal Mazarine, prime minister, to congratulate Cromwell on it; who, in return of the compliment, sent his son-in-law, the lord Fauconberg, to Calais, to congratulate the French monarch for their joint prosperity.

This was the only employment the lord Fauconberg had under the usurper; for, as the noble author before-mentioned relates. "His domestic delights were lessened every day; he plainly discovered that his son Fauconberg's heart was set upon an interest destructive to his, and grew to hate him perfectly." And Whitlock relates, that Richard, the protector's son, was betrayed by his near relations, and those of his council. In 1659, he was by the council of state sent to the Tower.

That he was in the secret of the restoration of king Charles II. is evident from general Monk's conferring on him the regiment which was Sir Arthur Haslerig's, on the 23th of April, the same day the parliament met that restored the king.

Bishop Burnet writes, that Cromwell's daughter, married to the lord Fauconberg, "was a wife and worthy woman, more likely to have maintained the post [of protector] than either of her brothers; according to a saying that went of her, "That those who wore breeches deserved petticoats better; but if those in petticoats had been in breeches, they would have held faster." It may be presumed, that she was influenced by this lord, her husband, and (from what has been said) concurred with him in the restoration.

King Charles II. was so well satisfied with his lordship's conduct, that he constituted him lord-lieutenant of the bishopric of Durham, July 27, A. D. 1660; and the same year he was also made lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the north riding of Yorkshire, which he held till A. D. 1687, when not complying with the designs of king James II. he was put out of the commission.

He was also by king Charles II. sent ambassador to the state of Venice, and the princes of Italy; and made captain of the band of gentlemen pensioners, on the surrender of that employment by his uncle John, lord Belasyse, of Worlaby, A. D. 1672. He was likewise one of those sworn of the privy-council on the 21st of April, A. D. 1679, when his majesty declared he was resolved to lay aside the use he had hitherto made of a single ministry, and to constitute such a privy council as may not only be fit for the consultation and digestion of all business, but may be best informed in the true constitutions of the state, and thereby the most able to counsel him in all the affairs and interests of this crown and nation.

On the accession of king William and queen Mary, his lordship was sworn of their privy-council; and on March 28, A. D. 1689, constituted lord lieutenant of the north riding of Yorkshire, having, as before-mentioned, been put out of the commission by king James II. and, in consideration of his great merits, was advanced to the honour of earl Fauconberg, on the 9th of April, in the first year of their reign. He departed this life, without issue, December 31, A. D. 1700, and was buried at Cockswold, in the county of York, where a monument is erected to his memory, with the following inscription:

M. S.
H. S. E.
Thomas Belasyse, Comes Fauconberg, Baro de Yorum
Vir Primarius, Priscæ Nobilitatis Exemplar,
Animi magnitudine, fortitudine, Prudentiâ,
Et rerum agendarum Peritiâ singulari
Ad publica obeunda munera
Vere formatus.
Regiæ Pensionarium Cohortis Præfectus
Sub Carolo II^{do}. sub quo, & Gulielmo III^{to}.
Com. Ebor. qua ad Aquilonem vergit Protex,
Quorum utriq; à sanctioribus Consiliis
Utriq; fides pariter, & charus,
Nec inter Anglos solum apud exteras verò Gentes inclauit
Sub Carolo II^{do} apud Rempubliam Venetam.
Sabaudia item, Hetruriaeq; Ducis,
Splendida Legatione functus,
Regiæ Dignitat, Regniq; Commodis
Provide Consuluit
Graviter satisfecit.
Gemino Felix Conjugio;
Mildredæ primam Vice Comitissæ de Castleton Filiæ.
Policæ Mariæ*, Cromwelliorum filipe; Patris Olivari Progenitis,
Illa, brevis ævi, multo Marito superstit, detestit
Hæc Marito multo superstit,
Quam indissolubilis Amor, non fida Pietas
Studiumq; Conjugi morem gerendi
Charam Matris, Puerisq; Exemplum
Jure reddiderunt.
Ptochotrophio propriis sumptibus extructo,
Hujusce Parochiæ Pastori
Annum in perpetuum stipendium legavit.
Et cum benè Latere frustra aliàs quesierat,
Septuaginta & duos emensus Annos,
Quietam hæcenus denegatam
Maturo in Cælum secessu tandem consecutus est
Dec. 31^{mo}. A. S. H. 1700^{mo}.

We must now treat of,

Sir ROULAND BELASYSE, who died in the lifetime of his brother the said earl of Fauconberg.

Which Sir Rouland was made one of the knights of the Bath at the coronation of king Charles II. and departing this life at his seat at Sutton, in Cheshire, in the year 1699, was buried at Macclesfield. He married Anne, eldest daughter and sole heir of James, or Humphry Davenport, of Sutton, in the county Palatine of Chester, esquire, by whom he had issue four sons and two daughters, Frances and Mary.

1. Thomas Belasyse, of whom hereafter.
 2. Henry Belasyse, who died unmarried.
 3. John Belasyse, who deceased without issue.
 4. Rouland Belasyse, married to Frances, daughter of Christopher Roper, lord Teynham, and sister to Henry lord Teynham, by whom he had issue two sons, Henry and Anthony, and four daughters, Bridget, Frances, Barbara, and Anne.
- (Third Viscount.) THOMAS BELASYSE, the eldest son of Sir Rouland Belasyse, became viscount Fauconberg, A. D. 1700, by the death of his uncle the earl of Fauconberg, with whom the earldom expired. He married Bridget, daughter of Sir John Gage, of Fille, in Suffex, baronet, and coheir to her mother, who was daughter of Thomas Middlemore, of Egebaston, in the county of Warwick, esquire, by whom he had issue four sons, and three daughters. And dying at Brussels, November 26, A. D. 1718, was buried at Cockswold, in Yorkshire, his lady surviving, who deceased November 18, A. D. 1732.

* The said Mary died March 14, A. D. 1712.

The sons were,

1. Thomas, now earl Fauconberg.
2. Henry Belasyse, who died an infant.
3. Roulard Belasyse.
4. John Belasyse, who died an infant.

The daughters were,

1. Mary, married on the ninth of April, A. D. 1721, to John Pitt, esquire, third son of Thomas Pitt, esquire, governor of fort St. George, in the East Indies, and brother to the earl of Londonderry, in Ireland.

2. Anne, died unmarried.

3. Penelope, died unmarried.

(Present Earl.) THOMAS BELASYSE, the eldest son, born April 27, A. D. 1699, succeeded his father as viscount Fauconberg, A. D. 1718, and was created earl Fauconberg, of Newborough, by letters patent, bearing date June 15, A. D. 1756.

His lordship was of the bed-chamber to the late king; and on the fifth of August, A. D. 1726, married Catherine, daughter and heir of John Betham, of Rowington, in the county of Warwick, esquire, and co-heir to William Fowler, of St. Thomas, in the county of Stafford, esquire, by whom he had issue three sons;

1. Thomas Belasyse, who died an infant.
2. Thomas Belasyse, born the 29th of June, A. D. 1740, who deceased in the twelfth year of his age.
3. Henry Belasyse, born April 13, A. D. 1743.

Also four daughters now living;

1. Catherine.
2. Barbara, married to the honourable George Barnwell, esquire, only brother to Henry Benedict, lord viscount Kingland, of Ireland.
3. Mary, born December, 16, A. D. 1736.
4. Anne, married to Francis Talbot, esquire, brother to the earl of Shrewsbury.

(TITLES.) Thomas Belasyse, earl, viscount, and baron Fauconberg, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet June 29, A. D. 1611, (9 James I.) baron Fauconberg, of Yarum, in the county of York, May 25, A. D. 1627, (3 Charles I.) viscount Fauconberg, of Henknowle, in the county of York, January 31, A. D. 1642, (18 Charles I.) and earl Fauconberg, of Newborough, in Yorkshire, June 15, A. D. 1756, (29 George I.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth a chevron, ruby, between three fleurs de lis, sapphire; second and third pearl, a pale ingrailed between two pallers plain, diamond.

(CREST.) On a wreath a lion couchant guardant, sapphire.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side a buck, holding in his mouth a branch of oak fruited all proper. On the sinister an unicorn, sapphire, armed, crested, and unguled, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Bonne & belle assez."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Newborough-hall, in the county of York.

FOX, Earl of ILCHESTER.

THE name of this noble family is frequently to be met with in the records preserved in four several counties, viz. Dorsetshire, Wiltshire, Somersetshire, and Hampshire, from whence we may collect, that there were many families, or rather branches of one and the same family, that bore the name of Fox, settled very early in the west of England. However, as we cannot with precision determine from which of those the earl of Ilchester is descended, we deem ourselves under no necessity to give an historical account of them: the curious reader will find beneath*, sufficient mention made of them.

ROBERT FOX, the great grandfather to his lordship the earl of Ilchester, was seated at Farley, in Wiltshire, and having married Agnes, daughter of Stephen Whitlock, of East Dean, in the county of Southampton, had issue,

WILLIAM

* Thomas Fox was one of the sheriffs of London in the 8th of Edward I. A. D. 1280. After him was William Fox, who, with Simon de Stanes, were sent, in 8th of Edward III. to treat with Lewis earl of Flanders, and his subjects, and to settle with the said earl, all manner of differences and demands, done by them or the king's subjects. And for his expenses for forty days, the barons of the exchequer were, by the king's order, dated at Rockingham, April 1, A. D. 1333, to pay him twenty pounds. In 9th of Edward III. A. D. 1334, he was again sent with William de la Pole, John de Caulton, and William de Preston, of which the said William Fox to be always one, or by himself, to settle with the said earl of Flanders,

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, U.S.A.

1960

1961

1962

1963

1964

1965

1966

1967

1968

1969

1970

1971

1972

1973

1974

1975

1976

1977

1978

1979

1980

1981

1982

1983

1984

1985

1986

1987

1988

1989

1990

1991

1992

1993

1994

1995

1996

1997

1998

1999

2000

WILLIAM Fox, seated also at Farley. He had to wife Elizabeth, daughter to Thomas Pavey, of Plattford, in Wiltshire, by whom he had issue a daughter, Margaret, baptized at Pitton, July 3, A. D. 1616; Walter Fox, baptized at Pitton, July 30, A. D. 1618, who died without issue; William Fox, baptized May 14, A. D. 1620, who also died unmarried; as did Richard, another son, baptized May 26, A. D. 1627. So that the said William Fox, deceasing in October, A. D. 1652, left issue only two sons, John, and Stephen Fox, ancestor to the present lord Ilchester.

John Fox, esquire, the eldest son, took up arms for king Charles the First; and when king Charles the Second came into England from Scotland, he immediately repaired to him; and escaping from the battle of Worcester, fought in September, A. D. 1651, he returned to Farley, to his father's: but soon after retired into France, where he lived till the restoration of king Charles, and then was made clerk of the acatry to his household. He was seated at Averbury, in Wiltshire, and by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Henry Smart, of Plymouth, in Devonshire, had issue John Fox, his only son, 32 years old, June 14, A. D. 1672, (who left issue an only son, Stephen Fox, esquire, who died unmarried about 1699) and four daughters; Mary, wife of Edward Thorneborow, son and heir of Sir Edward Thorneborow; Elizabeth, married to Thomas Dunkley, closet-keeper to king Charles the Second; Margaret, wedded to Sackville Whittle, one of his majesty's surgeons; and Jane, the wife of Richard Ridge, of Portsmouth, who had issue by her, Thomas Ridge, esquire.

Sir STEPHEN Fox, the youngest son, was born at Farley, in Wiltshire, the 27th of March, A. D. 1627, and having a liberal education, his proficiency in learning, and solid judgment, was conspicuous in his youth. John Fox, his elder brother, escaping from the battle of Worcester, (as before-mentioned) his brother, Stephen Fox, went with him from Farley to Paris, being then in the 24th year of his age. On his arrival there, he was (as lord Clarendon relates) entertained by Henry, lord Percy, then lord chamberlain of the king's household: and about the latter end of the year 1652, "on the remove of his majesty from Paris, the charge of governing the expences of his family, and of payment of the wages of the servants, and issuing of all monies, as well in journies, as when the court resided any where, was committed (as the noble author recites) to Mr. Stephen Fox, who was well qualified with languages, and all other parts of clerkship, honesty, and discretion, as was necessary for such a trust; and indeed, his great industry, modesty, and prudence, did very much contribute to the bringing the family, which for so many years had been under no government, into very good order; by which his majesty, in the pinching straits of his condition, enjoyed very much ease, from the time he left Paris."

It is certain Mr. Fox discharged his trust with great fidelity, which appeared so visibly to the king, that he was actually sworn cofferer of his household; but, on the restoration, never obtained that ders, and his subjects, as also the burgomasters, consuls, scabins, and good men of the towns of Bruges, Ghent, and Ipres, all manner of differences and demands between them and the king, or his subjects. And the king, in a letter to the earl of Flanders, March 8, 10th of Edward III. recommends this William Fox to him, who was then the sole ambassador employed to him.

In 5th of Richard II. A. D. 1381, Richard Fox served in parliament, as one of the members for Lestwithiel, in Cornwall.

In 11th of Henry IV. John Fox, esquire, with Sir Robert Ogle, and Sir Thomas Grey, knights, were empowered by the king to meet the duke of Albany, at Haudenstank, on the 17th of June, A. D. 1409, to agree on a cessation of arms with the Scots, till All Saints day next following.

In 5th of Henry V. Richard Fox was returned one of the knights for the county of Salop, to the parliament held that year.

In 13th of Edward IV. A. D. 1473, John Fox, esquire, with Henry, earl of Northumberland, John, bishop of Litchfield and Coventry, and Sir Ralph Graystock, knight, were commissioners, to treat with those deputed by the king of Scotland, on the 20th of September next, at Aunewick, or some other proper place; and there to consult about settling differences transacted contrary to the truce.

But of the greatest note was Richard Fox, the worthy founder of Corpus Christi college, in the university of Oxford, a prelate of great learning, and of distinguished abilities; we shall therefore give some account of him from records, wherein are several particulars, not mentioned by our historians. He had his education in Magdalen college, in Oxford, and his first preferment was prebendary of Bishopston, in the church of Salisbury; afterwards, February, A. D. 1485, 3d of Richard III. he was collated to the prebendary of South Grantham, in the same church, on the resignation of Dr. Christopher Brainbridge. But before the end of that year, detesting the tyranny of king Richard, he went into France, and offered his service to Henry earl of Richmond, who received him into his secret familiarity, being a man of great wit, and no less learning.

When the earl of Richmond landed in Wales, he came over with him: and after the victory of Bosworth, whereby that earl attained the crown, by the name of king Henry the Seventh, he was immediately nominated to the bishoprick of Exeter, and called to his privy council, with John Morton, bishop of Ely; who, as the lord Bacon observes, were vigilant men and secret, and such as kept watch with him almost upon all men else. They had been both versed in his affairs, before he came to the crown, and were partakers of his adverse fortune.

The king also constituted him lord privy seal; and he had, by the king's command, twenty shillings a day allowed to him, to commence from February 29, as keeper of the privy seal. It is observed by our historians, that this high employment was conferred on him by that wise king, from a knowledge of his abilities, having before his accession to the crown offered him his service, and attended on him in France.

In 3d of Henry VII. this bishop of Exeter, and Sir Richard Edgecomb, were sent ambassadors to James king of Scotland, for continuing a peace between the two kingdoms; and, being honourably received, concluded a truce for seven years, and at the expiration thereof for seven years more; which was very acceptable to king Henry.

On October 8, A. D. 1490, 5th of Henry VIII. the king confiding in the industry, loyalty, foresight, and care of Richard Fox, bishop of Exeter, and Thomas, earl of Ormond, commissions them to treat with those deputed by the king of France, about a truce, or cessation of arms. And, on February 17th following, they were empowered to treat with Charles, king of France, about an alliance and confederacy between the said king, and Maximilian king of the Romans, and Anne, dutchess of Britany; as also about a truce, cessation of arms, and free trade, between the kings of England and France. Likewise, by a commission, on the 26th of February after, they were to treat on certain contracts between Anne, dutchess of Britanny, and Charles, king of France; and about the payment of certain sums of money, owing by her to king Henry, for forces sent into Britanny, for the recovery of her country. On his return, he was godfather to the king's second son, Henry, afterwards king of England, by the name of Henry the Eighth. On the 8th of February, A. D. 1491, 7th of Henry VII. he that office, (Mr. William Ashburnham producing a reversionary grant from king Charles the First.) And in consideration of his good and faithful services, Sir Edward Walker, then garter principal king of arms, by his majesty's command, granted to him and his heirs, an honourable augmentation to his arms, out of the royal ensigns and devices, viz. in a canton azure, a fleur de lis, or; as by a special instrument, under his hand and seal, appeareth, dated at Brussels, November 23, A. D. 1658.

When his majesty took up his residence for some time at Cologne, her royal highness, his sister, princess of Orange, making a visit to him, was so surprizingly affected with Mr. Fox's conduct, in the management of the whole course of her entertainment, that she shewed him very particular marks of her esteem, and presented him with a diamond ring of value. She also recommended him to her royal brother, as the most grateful messenger he could send to her on any emergent occasion; and his majesty knew so well his prudence and conduct, that he employed him in several important dispatches to the princess, as also to persons of the greatest note in Holland; and his negotiations had that weight and success, as to procure frequent supplies of money, to the value of 10000 l. per annum, constantly paid, till his majesty's return into England.

During the king's exile, he likewise kept a correspondence with the royalists in England, and had such intelligence, that he received the news of Oliver Cromwell's death six hours before it reached Brussels, and imparted it to the king, whilst he was playing at tennis with the arch-duke Leopold, Don John, and other Spanish grandees. The king thenceforward employed Mr. Fox on messages from the Netherlands to England, as one the royal party confided in.

That he married his first lady Elizabeth, only surviving child of Mr. William Whittle, of Lancashire, before he went abroad, is certain; for Stephen, his eldest son, was born and buried in France.

When the king came to Breda, on the invitation of the States General, being desired to make a publick entry into their provinces, Mr. Fox, jointly with Sir Edward Walker, garter king of arms, were sent to the Hague, to adjust the ceremonies of his majesty's reception there.

After the king's happy return to his dominions, his faithful services were immediately rewarded, being made first clerk of the green cloth, on the settlement of the king's household, the duke of Ormond, lord high steward, having a great esteem for him, and desirous of leaving the management thereof to one he knew so well experienced in it. And it was universally acknowledged, that his conduct was with the same integrity and regularity at home, as it had been abroad. Also the same year, A. D. 1660, on that wild insurrection of Venner, and the fifth-monarchy men, the king being advised not to be without guards, two regiments were raised, and Mr. Fox was appointed paymaster of them. And afterwards other forces being raised, on the war with the Dutch, he was constituted paymaster-general of all his majesty's forces in England. By which title, as also first clerk was translated to the see of Bath and Wells; being that year, with Giles, lord Daubenny, in an embassy to Charles, the French king, for the conclusion of a peace between the two kingdoms, which they effectually obtained; but not before the next year, 8 Hen. VII. It appears that the bishop attended the king in his expedition into France; who, being with his army near Boulogne, on the sea, October 30, A. D. 1492, he commissioned this Richard, bishop of Bath and Wells, lord privy-seal, and Giles, lord Daubeny, knight of the Garter, to treat with those deputed by the king of France; and that articles of peace were signed at Montile, near Turon, November 6, A. D. 1492, the duke of Bedford, uncle to the king, being conservator thereof.

In 9 Hen. VII. he was translated to the bishopric of Durham; and, bearing that title, as also lord privy-seal, was, on the 22d of May that year, commissioned, with Thomas, lord Dacre, to treat with those deputed by the king of Scots, about a peace, truce, &c. between the two kings, for life, or on such other terms as they should agree on; as also about a free trade.

In 10 Hen. VII. May 22, A. D. 1495, the king reciting, That considering the minority and tender years of Henry, duke of York, his second son, whom he had appointed warden and general of the marches between England and Scotland, he therefore constituted Richard, bishop of Durham, Sir William Tyler, knight, governor of Berwick, John Heyton, of Ford, and two others, wardens of the said marches, viz. the east, west, and middle marches. And by another commission the same year, dated the 23d of June, he was appointed, with Thomas, earl of Surry, Ralph, lord Nevil, and Thomas, lord Dacre, to treat with the king of Scots, about his intermarrying with the princess Margaret, daughter of Henry VII. But this marriage did not take effect till the 18th of Henry VII. as we shall hereafter shew.

In 11 Hen. VII. he was the first in commission to treat with those deputed by the arch-duke of Austria, about a peace and alliance, &c. and, on the conclusion thereof, was, with several other peers of the realm, guarantees on the part of the crown of England.

In 12. Hen. VII. he was also first in the commission (bearing the title of lord privy-seal) with Thomas, earl of Surry, to treat with James, king of Scotland, about a marriage between him and Margaret, the king of England's daughter.

In 13 Hen. VII. the Scots taking advantage of the Cornish men's rising in arms under James, lord Audley, they invaded the frontiers of England, wasting the country with fire and sword, and laid siege to the castle of Norham, on the river Tweed, belonging to the bishop of Durham. It is observed, that Richard Fox was promoted to the bishopric of Durham, "for his singular virtues, and great gravity," and had well furnished his castle both with men and ammunition, imagining that the Scottish king (as soon as he knew there was civil discord in England) would with all his power harrahs the borders adjoining to his land. And from time to time advertised the king (then at London) of the Scot's motions; so that the earl of Surry, who was then in Yorkshire, raising forces for the defence of the marches; and, receiving an express from the bishop of this invasion, he immediately marched against them. The Scots had divers days assaulted the castle of Norham, and had much damaged it, but were always repulsed; and hearing that the earl of Surry was within two days journey of them, they raised the siege, and retired into Scotland.

How the earl pursued them into Scotland, we leave to our historians: but shall observe, that this invasion drew on a truce between England and Scotland; the truce drew on a peace; the peace a marriage; and the marriage the union of the two kingdoms; all which were managed by this Richard Fox, bishop of Durham. The lord Bacon, in his Life of King Henry the Seventh, gives a long account of the bishop's negotiations, and of his dexterity and abilities in reconciling the differences between the two crowns; and that the king remitted all to the bishop's discretion.

It appears on record (though not by our historians) that by indenture, dated at Aytown, September 30, A. D. 1497, 13 Hen. VII. it was agreed and concluded by Richard, bishop of Durham, lord privy-seal, William Warham, LL. D. master of the rolls, and John Cartington, esquire, ambassadors of England, and those of Scotland, by the interposition of Peter Ayala, prothonitor of the holy see, and ambassador of the king and queen of Spain, that a truce should be kept between the kings of England and Scotland, from sun rising, the last day of September, for seven years to come; and the conservators, clerk of the green cloth, we find him among the benefactors to the building of the college of arms, after the fire of London.

The just profits of those two offices enabled him to provide for his family, and exercise those acts of generosity and charity, which in the course of his whole life he gave such extensive and uncommon instances of. His disposition to all that had any claim to his assistance, and that diffusive charity which was visible in him to the last of his life, begun with the increase of his fortune, at an age when most are inclined to pleasures, and at the time when the court was in the greatest gaiety. His first regard was to the place of his birth, for at Farley he built the church at his own charge; and A. D. 1678, built and founded there an hospital, for six old men, and six old women; a neat building, with a chapel in it, and handsome lodgings for a chaplain, who resides there, and hath the title of warden of the hospital. This he endowed with one hundred and eighty-eight pounds per annum; and there is likewise a charity-school, wherein are taught six boys and six girls, all at his sole charge. He also built an hospital at Brome, in Suffolk; and another at Ashby, in Northamptonshire.

In the north part of Wiltshire, he built a chancel intirely new, where he was not all concerned in the tythes, but the rector being unable, it moved him to build it. He likewise built the church of Culford, in Suffolk; and pewed the body of the cathedral church of Sarum, in a manner suitable to the neatness of that church, to which he was many other ways a great benefactor.

These are lasting monuments of his piety and generosity; but his whole life was full of good works of all kinds, to the glory of God, the honour of the kingdom, the benefit of the public, and the relief of the poor of all sorts. He was the first projector of the noble design of Chelsea-hospital, and contributed to the expence of it above thirteen thousand pounds. His motive to it was known from his own words, he said, He could not bear to see the common soldiers, who had spent their strength in our service, to beg at our doors. He therefore did what he could, to remove such a scandal from the kingdom. He first purchased some grounds near the old college at Chelsea, which had been escheated to the crown in the reign of king James I. and which that monarch designed for the residence and maintenance of protestant divines, to be employed in defence of the reformation against all opposers: and on these grounds the present college is erected. In memory of which publick benefaction, his name is transmitted to posterity, in a fine prospect and description of Chelsea college, by Mr. Inglish, then comptroller of the works thereof, inscribed to the right honourable Sir Stephen Fox, the earl of Ranelagh, and Sir Christopher Wren, with their several coats of arms.

We shall now proceed to treat of the public employments and honours conferred on him. King Charles II. to distinguish so valuable a servant, knighted him, July 1, A. D. 1665. And as he had been in the intimacy and confidence of the famous George Monk, duke of Albemarle, he paid a respect to his memory, at the pompous and publick tors, on the behalf of England, were first the said Richard, bishop of Durham, William, bishop of Carlisle, Richard, lord Nevil, John Baron, of Graystock, Sir Christopher Moreby, knight, and John Cartington, esquire.

In 14th of Henry VII. on a truce being concluded for the lives of the kings of England and Scotland, and a year after either of their deceases, by indenture made at Striveling, July 12, 1499, the bishop of Durham was the first of the five conservators, for the performance thereof, on the part of England.

In 15th of Henry VII. he was elected chancellor of the university of Cambridge; and on the death of Thomas Langton, bishop of Winchester, the same year, he succeeded him in that opulent bishoprick: and, bearing the title of lord privy-seal, had the temporalities thereof restored to him, October 17, 16th of Henry VII. A. D. 1500.

Also in 17th of Henry VII. bearing the title of lord privy-seal, he was commissioned with Henry, archbishop of Canterbury, and Thomas, earl of Surry, treasurer of England, to treat with James, king of Scotland, or his deputies, about a marriage between him and Margaret, the king's eldest daughter. And a league of friendship being made, by their mediation, with the plenipotentiaries of the king of Scotland, dated at the king's palace of Richmond, January 24, A. D. 1501, the king at Westminster, October 31, A. D. 1502, 18th of Henry VII. confirms the same; and also confirmed the articles of marriage between the king of Scots and Margaret, eldest daughter of the king of England, bearing date January 24, A. D. 1502, 18th Henry VII. concluded by the said Richard, bishop of Winchester. From which marriage, and glorious issue, our most gracious sovereign, king George, enjoys the crown of Great Britain.

In 20th of Henry VII. when Henry, prince of Wales, (after king Henry VIII.) being then near arrived to maturity of age, and being just at years of consent, protested against ratifying and confirming his contract of marriage with the lady Catharine, daughter of the king of Spain; the said protestation was read by the prince, and signed by him, before this Richard, lord bishop of Winchester, who then sat judge in the cause, in the royal palace of Richmond. Which protestation was produced on king Henry VIIIth's divorce, A. D. 1529, 21st of Henry VIII. as also the bishop's deposition of what he knew of it; which was taken by Dr. Woolman, the 5th and 6th of April, A. D. 1527, the year before his death, when the bishop was blind of both his eyes, as is set forth therein; and is at large inserted in lord Bacon's Life of Henry VII.

In 21st of Henry VII. A. D. 1505, the king confiding in the loyalty, industry, foresight, and care, of William, archbishop of Canterbury, Richard Fox, bishop of Winchester, and two others, commissioned them to treat with Philip, king of Castile; about reconciling the differences (relating to trade) arisen between the merchants of the respective nations.

In 23d of Henry VII. being also stiled bishop of Winchester, and lord privy seal, he was commissioned, with Thomas, earl of Surry, lord treasurer, Thomas Dockwra, prior of St. John's at Jerusalem, Nicholas West, LL.D. and Sir Gilbert Talbot, knight, deputy of Calais, to treat with Maximilian, king of the Romans, about a marriage between lady Mary, the king of England's third daughter, and the prince of Spain. And by another commission, of the same date, they were to treat with the king of the Romans, on the behalf of the prince of Spain, about an alliance and treaty of friendship. He was afterwards present with the king in the palace at Richmond, December 7, A. D. 1508, 24th of Henry VII. when John de Berghis, chamberlain of the emperor Maximilian, and knight of the Golden Fleece, as proxy to Charles, prince of Spain, married the said lady Mary.

That king, on his death-bed, also appointed him one of his executors; and he was in great favour with his successor, king Henry VIII.

On his accession to the crown, he was both secretary and lord privy-seal, also one of the able counsellors, selected (out of those his father most trusted) by the countess of Richmond, his grandmother, (a virtuous, prudent lady) for managing the weighty affairs of the kingdom; and the lord Herbert observes, "That when the king followed their advice, fewer errors were committed, than when all things were swayed by his own arbitrement."

The same author tells us, "That the bishop was an old and intimate counsellor to king Henry the Seventh, and knew all the mysteries of state; and that he, and the earl of Surry, lord treasurer, bore the greatest sway in the council." In another place he says of him, that this bishop was the chief raiser and founder of cardinal Wolsey; and that being made principal secretary, public funeral of his grace, the 30th of April, A. D. 1670, being the first assistant in bearing the royal standard. Also when the effigy was taken out of the open chariot at the west door of Westminster-abbey, and carried under a canopy to be placed in a mausoleum there, Sir Stephen was the first of the six knights, supporters of that canopy.

In 1679 he was constituted one of the lords commissioners of the treasury; in which place he was thought so very serviceable, that he was kept in it (through divers changes) longer than could ever be said of any man but himself; being continued, without intermission, in all commissions, except that when the earl of Rochester was lord treasurer in 1685, till he chose to retire from public business.

In the same year, A. D. 1679, the king appointed him first commissioner in the office of master of the horse, in conjunction with Sir Richard Mason, Sir Nicholas Armorer, Thomas Windham, and Roger Pope, esquires.

In 1681, the prince of Orange, after his marriage, coming over to visit the English court, came post from Margate to Whitehall, July 23: and the king being then at Windsor, the prince made his first visit to Sir Stephen Fox, and did him the honour of dining with him the same day, and in the evening waited on his majesty at Windsor.

On his being in the treasury, and supplying the place of master of the horse, his son, Charles Fox, esquire, and Nicholas Johnson, esquire, were on December 26, A. D. 1679, constituted joint paymasters of the forces; but he dying in 1682, Sir Stephen, by his interest, got it solely conferred on his son, Charles Fox, esquire, though he was then but in the 23d year of his age. And on February 18, 1684, Sir Stephen was made sole commissioner for master of the horse.

On the accession of King James to the throne, that prince is said to court him to change his religion; but he could not be persuaded to depart from those principles he was brought up in. However, the king continued him first clerk of the green cloth, and on the dismissal of the earl of Rochester from being lord-treasurer, constituted him one of the commissioners of his treasury, with John, lord Bellasis, Sidney, lord Godolphin, Henry, lord Dover, and Sir John Ernley, chancellor of the exchequer.

But when king James, endeavoured to subvert and extirpate the protestant religion, and the laws and liberties of the kingdom, whereby it was justly apprehended there could be no safety in his government, Sir Stephen then came heartily into the revolution, and concurred in that vote of the convention, whereof he was a member, declaring, That popery was inconsistent with the English constitution; and therefore all papists should be for ever excluded from the succession to the crown of England. To which the house of peers agreed.

On the 19th of March, A. D. 1689, he was again constituted one of the lords commissioners of the treasury: and was continued in the several changes of that commission, till he retired from public business, A. D. 1701.

In 1692, when king James was come to La-Hogue, secretary, and privy-seal, he became not only an able but potent minister of state: and proceeding to give an account of the introduction of Wolsey, says, "That the bishop having difference with the lord treasurer, Thomas, earl of Surry, a nobleman of great courage and experience in affairs, he stood not secure. They had often been reconciled by the king, who not only best knew, but often suffered most from their opposition. Yet as the wiping out of blots sometimes make them greater, so satisfaction for injuries seldom expiate them totally, but that some impression remains. Therefore they stood still at a distance; in which condition, yet they wanted not their advantages on either side. The bishop had abundant matter to suggest; the huge treasure, which Henry VII. left, being exhausted, that it was now almost consumed: whilst the lord treasurer, in disposing of this king's young bounty, so ordered business, as in facilitating dispatches, he got him many friends and followers. The lord treasurer, on the other side, said, that, nothing being done without the king's special order, it was through envy only the bishop thus opposed him. In these terms then they stood still, without almost concurring in any thing, but in excluding all others from gaining on the king's disposition; which yet they did not so much by mutual consent, as by diminishing, in their turns, every body else, that was extraordinary in his good opinion. At last the bishop, thinking how to better his party, brought in Thomas Wolsey; to which purpose also Sir Thomas Lovell, knight, and master of the wards, assisted him."

However, it is evident from our records, that he was at the head of the king's affairs in that reign. In 1 Hen. VIII. he was specially commissioned, with Thomas, bishop of Durham, and Thomas, earl of Surry, lord treasurer, in behalf of the king, and his confederates and allies, (viz. pope Julius the second, Maximilian, emperor of the Romans, the kings of Arragon, Hungary, Denmark, Scotland, Bohemia, and Portugal, Charles, prince of Castile, the dukes of Cleves and Juliers, their heirs and successors, the bishop of Trier, and the commonalty and society of the Hanse Almains) to treat with the ambassadors of Lewis, the French king, and his confederates, concerning the peace, &c. which was signed at London, March 23, A. D. 1509. And among the guarantees, on the part of England, was the said Richard Fox, bishop of Winchester, privy-seal.

In 9 Hen. VIII. being one of the executors of king Henry the Seventh, the king grants to them the scite of the manor of the Savoy, or a certain place or piece of ground, called the Savoy, late part of the duchy of Lancaster, lying in the parishes of St. Clement's Danes, and St. Mary le Strand, in Middlesex, the ground and mansion of the bishop of Worcester to the east, and the ground of the bishop of Carlisle to the west, the river Thames, south, and the highway leading from Strand-cross to Charing-cross, north. To hold to them, their heirs and assigns, for ever, in order to erect and found an hospital on the said place; to consist of one master and four chaplains, secular, dedicated to the honour of Jesus Christ, St. Mary, the Virgin, and St. John Baptist, to pray for the good state of the said king Henry the Eighth, and Catharine his wife, while living, and for their souls after their departure; and more especially for the souls of the late king Henry the Seventh, Elizabeth his consort, and prince Arthur. Subject to such statutes, as shall be made by the said executors and founders.

That the said hospital so erected, be called the hospital of Henry VII. late king of England, of the Savoy. And that the master and chaplains be sited, The master and chaplains of the said hospital, &c. That they be a body corporate, have power by law to purchase lands, &c. notwithstanding the statute of Mortmain.

In A. D. 1513, when the king embarked for France, the bishop of Winchester sent a chosen band of men to the army, which for the most part composed the rear-guard, and was commanded by Sir William Compton, knight, then in great favour with the king. The bishop also waited on the king in that expedition, and with the marquis of Dorset, were the two on the part of their sovereign, who concluded a treaty with Maximilian the emperor, not to relinquish the war without mutual consent; to which the pope, prince Charles of Spain, the arch-duke, the duke of Milan, the Swiss, and the Florentines, were to be invited: which league was signed by them at Lisle, October 17, after the taking of Tournay.

The year after, prince Charles of Spain having broken two articles of the treaty with the princess Mary, the king's sister; one Hogue, with a considerable army to invade England, he sent over a very formal declaration, promising pardon to all that should return to their duty; but by name excepted Sir Stephen Fox, with several noble peers, &c. This invasion was prevented by admiral Russel's beating the French fleet.

Sir Stephen was elected to the first parliament called by king Charles II. for the city of Salisbury, near to which he was born; and, except some voluntary omissions, he was a member of parliament to the day of his death. In the 31st of king Charles II. the city of Westminster chose him one of their representatives; as also in the seventh year of king William III. To give an account of his honourable conduct in parliament would be tedious: yet it is not to be doubted, but his sentiments were consonant to what he ever professed to have at heart, the true interest of his country. He was a strenuous assertor of the integrity of the earl of Clarendon, and voted against his impeachment, tho' he was in a manner commanded by the king to act a contrary part; which is more particularly specified in the histories of England, wrote by Dr. Echard, and Mr. Rapin. It was the singular happiness of Sir Stephen Fox, to have the universal good-will and esteem of all parties, of which a very full testimony was shewn a little before his death. His son, Mr. Fox, deceasing, who had been representative for the city of Salisbury in several parliaments, among the circumstances of his affliction he thought himself deprived of the satisfaction he long had, in serving in his own person, or his son's, for that city; being born near to it, and ever retaining a particular kindness thereto.

This prevailed on him to resume his seat in parliament, at a time when our divisions were at a great height; and he was unanimously chosen to sit in the last parliament called by queen Anne, and in the first parliament called by king George I. being then in the eighty-seventh year of his age. And he was often seen to attend the house, as if not his life only, but his youth had been extended to that length. He had the comfort and happiness, to the conclusion of his life, not to be afflicted with any of the infirmities of old age, which could make him the least burthensome either to himself, his friends, or his servants. "It must be owned, wisdom doth not bestow the same happiness to every one that findeth her, but distributes them their portion in a very different measure, with more reason than we are able to discern. Her bounty to him was as if she emptied both her hands, and held back nothing from him. He had the blessing of her right-hand in the length of his days; and he had those of her left-hand, in his riches and honour; few having been known, by their own industry, to have got the like, with so clear a character, and to carry a good name, like his, to the grave. He wanted nothing that could contribute to so singular a happiness. He had many virtues that were a guard to his character; as the general civility and courtesy he used to all men; which was the effect not of his good breeding only, but of his good-will to all men: and much of that was to be seen in his countenance; it shone in that degree, in which men naturally speak truth. There was a great deal of sincerity appearing in all his professions of kindness to his friends, which was mightily confirmed by the readiness that was ever found one whereof was, that, when he came to fourteen years of age should send a proxy into England, to contract the princess, per verba de presenti; the other, that, at a day appointed, he should come to Calais to espouse her: and our ambassadors finding nothing but delay and irresolution for the rest; the king would no longer omit to give order, that his sister should not be so slighted: whereupon, in the king's manor house of Wansted, July 30, A. D. 1514, 6th of Henry VIII. in the presence of this bishop of Winchester, Thomas, duke of Norfolk, Charles, duke of Suffolk, Charles, earl of Worcester, Thomas, bishop of Durham, and Sir Ralph Verney, knight, her chief chamberlain, the princess openly and publicly declared:

"That at her own accord, and by no person's instigation, she sent for the before-mentioned persons.

"That although articles of marriage were agreed between herself, and Charles, prince of Castile: nevertheless she understood, that certain articles made on the part of the said prince were not observed; and among others, that he, within forty days after he arrived at the age of fourteen years, should send his proxy to espouse her; which he had neglected; the relations and counsellors, attending near his person, by false insinuations, having diverted him from the said match.

"Wherefore she declared, she never bent her affections towards him, and, especially considering his tender years, was willing to go back from the said contract.

"And having gained this opportunity, without any deceit, impulse, or fear, renounces the same: and in word and mind, declares herself at liberty; and requests the before mentioned nobles to signify it to her brother, the king of England."

Whereupon, August 2, 1514, 6th of Henry VIII. the king reciting, that a peace and alliance having been concluded, by the intercession of Pope Leo X. between himself and Lewis, king of France; who, for the more effectual keeping of the same, had desired Mary his sister in marriage: therefore the king, confiding in the industry, loyalty, and probity of Thomas, duke of Norfolk, treasurer and marshal of England, Richard, bishop of Winchester, and Thomas, bishop of Lincoln, commissions them to treat with the French king, about the said marriage.

And at Greenwich, August 13th following, Lewis d'Orleans, duke of Longueville, as proxy for Lewis, king of France, married her in the presence of William, archbishop of Canterbury, this Richard, bishop of Winchester, lord privy seal, and others.

But the said Lewis XII. being aged and infirm, died January 1, A. D. 1515, after about eighty days possession of his queen, rather than enjoying of her, leaving Francis de Valois his heir. And thereupon the bishop of Winchester, April 4, A. D. 1515, was commissioned to treat with the said Francis, the French king, about an alliance and free trade; and more especially about the treaty concluded the seventh of August last at London, with the ambassadors of Lewis, king of France, deceased; and to alter and add thereto, as shall seem best.

This was the last publick employment the good bishop was in; for soon after, he, with William Warham, archbishop of Canterbury, and Thomas, duke of Norfolk, being offended at the insolence of cardinal Wolsey, craved leave to retire. And bishop Fox desired this only of the king, "That he would not suffer the servant to be greater than his master." The king answered, "That it should be his care, that those who were his subjects, should obey and not command." However, before the end of the next year, A. D. 1516, Maximilian the emperor, representing to our king the danger and the power of France, by the acquisition of the Milanese, and desiring the king's assistance in behalf of Sforza, duke Milan, against Francis; of which there was some hope secretly given by Wolsey; the king, in so great a cause, would not come to any resolution, till he had advised with the most ancient and wisest of his counsellors, as my author observes. Therefore recalling Warham, this bishop Fox, the duke of Norfolk, and Lovell, he demanded their opinions in full council. Wolsey, speaking first, advised the assisting of Maximilian, and was seconded by Thomas, bishop of Durham. The other council made a full answer to them; but it is necessary only to take notice, that the king inclined to Wolsey's opinion. He afterwards retired to his bishoprick of Winchester, and performed many acts of piety and charity. He was a great favourer and encourager of learning found in him to answer those professions by real services, to any who could have the least pretence to ask a favour of him: and always gave such satisfaction, that he justly deserved the character, which hath been allowed to few men in power in the world before, that no man ever came from him dissatisfied.

"Among his many virtues, which in so peculiar a manner endeared him to all men, and will endear his memory to all posterity, was his charity, which was unconfined; it was seen to be as general as the wants of the poor, and will be seen for ever in his settled charities, in the several counties where he had any concern; and of which some account is before given: and it is no less remarkable, that he had the heart to do them all in his life-time. He shewed a special regard, and more generous kindness, to all that could claim the benefit of relation to him: to them he was so liberal, in many and various instances, that we very rarely meet with the like.

"As a husband, a parent, and a master; they who saw the religious and prudent government in his family, his own exemplary piety, strict temperance in the great abundance of his fortune, and of his hospitality; the sweetness and cheerfulness of his temper, which he ever had, like his health, with little or no interruption; they all knew his value, and were highly sensible of their happiness in him, and their loss of him. And he was no less happy in his family. His first lady was in herself no small addition to the felicity of his life, having many excellent virtues, particularly the like bountiful disposition to join with his. He was likewise as happy in his second lady, who survived him, and was a great blessing to him, as well for her agreeable temper, prudence, and conduct, as that he had by her heirs, whereby his name and virtues may be continued to after-ages."

He made his last will and testament, when he was aged eighty-eight years, in full health and memory, as is therein mentioned. And his sanity of mind appears, by the prudent disposition he made of his fortune. He was thoughtful of all his relations, and friends; and the day before he made his will, he settled the most part of his estate on trustees, for the benefit of his sons, during their minorities; which he confirmed by his said will and testament, dated the 25th of May, 2d of George I. 1716; but signed, sealed, and delivered, on the sixth of August following: which is likewise a proof of his mature deliberation in the making of it.

He first recites, That by indentures of lease and release, bearing date the 22d and 23d of January, A. D. 1688, he had charged his manor and lands in Maddington, in Wiltshire, with an annual rent of forty pounds, payable to the vicar or minister of the church of Maddington: also with an annual rent of one hundred and eighty-eight pounds, for the endowment of an hospital built at Farley. And by deed, bearing date the day before his will, he charges his said manor of Maddington, with twenty pounds more, to be paid to the vicar of Maddington.

His next care was, in leaving a handsome support to Dame Christian Fox, his wife, with all his furniture, plate, pictures, &c. at his lodgings in Whitehall:

ing, and, for the furthering thereof, founded and built Corpus Christi college, in the university of Oxford; and also a free grammar school at Grantham, in the county of Lincoln, and another at Taunton in the county of Somerset. He waxed blind in his latter days (as before was observed) and dying in his palace at Winchester, February 2, A. D. 1528, (20 Henry VIII.) was honourably buried in his own cathedral, on the south side of the high altar, now called Fox's chapel. It was this bishop who covered the choir of Winchester, the presbytery, and the isles adjoining, with a fair vault of stone, in which his arms are cut in several places. He also new glazed the windows of all that part of the church, and gave it that beauty, in which it appears at this time. There is also a very high screen, or partition of stone, full of antique carving, and niches, where statues stood, likewise the work of this bishop; who also caused to be made that fine partition wall (on each side of the altar there) which composes the two sides of the presbytery, that separate it from the north and south isles. On the top are placed three shrines, or chests, finely carved, painted, and gilded, with a crown upon each, in which are deposited the bones of several of the West-Saxon kings, bishops, and some later princes, which had been buried in divers parts of the church, and were carefully collected and preserved, with honourable mention of their names on each shrine, in letters of gold, by this Richard Fox, bishop of Winchester.

Richard Fox, of Bereford St. Michael, (Dorsetshire) makes his will, the last of May, A. D. 1502, the probate whereof bears date 7 July, A. D. 1502, 10 Hen. VII. He orders his body to be buried in the parish-church of Bereford aforesaid, to which he was a benefactor, bequeathing several ornaments thereto, and six torches. Also to the light of St. Cross, in the said church, six shillings and eight-pence. To the light of St. Catharine there, six shillings and eight-pence. To the light of St. Erasme, three shillings and four pence. To the light of our Lady, six shillings and eight-pence. And for the buying a patifer for the said church, twenty shillings.

He further bequeaths to the guild of Dodynton, twenty shillings. To the buying a bell for the church of Dodynton, twelve pound. To the light of our Lady of Pity, in the same church, six shillings and eight-pence. He was also a benefactor to the churches of Westcot-Bauton, North-Bauton, Bloxham, and Newenton.

He bequeaths to Agnes his wife, his house at Bloxham, during her life; and all his goods and chattels to be divided into three parts, whereof Agnes his wife, to have one, and Michael and Catharine, his children by her, to have the other two. He bequeaths to Richard his son, his place at Dodynton, and all furniture &c. belonging thereto, with several pieces of plate, and all his lands in Dodynton, Bauton, Elbury, and other places, to him and the heirs of his body. The said Richard to find a priest for five years, to pray for his soul, and to allow four pound for an oblite, to be kept once a year at Dodynton, for ten years; forty shillings to priests and clerks, and the other forty shillings to poor people. The residue of his goods and chattels to be put into a stock, for the benefit of his children, Alexander and Alice, by Richard, his son and heir, and John Buxford.

Of the county of Somerset, in the same age, was John Fox, senior, as he writes himself in his last will and testament, bearing date April 13, A. D. 1503, 19 Hen. VII. (and the probate thereof 5 July following) made in the inner cloister of the church of the blessed Virgin Mary, of Witham in Selwood, of the order of Carthusians; and bequeaths thereto forty shillings, and to the principal house of Carthusians in France, six shillings and eight-pence. He was also a benefactor to the cathedral church of Wells, and to the churches of Farey and Estharxstre. He bequeathed to Christian, wife of his son, Robert Fox, his scarlet gown, and to William Palmer, his gown of russet. The residue of his estate, goods, and chattels, he leaves to his sons, Thomas, and Robert Fox, whom he constitutes his executors, to dispose for his soul, as they shall see expedient.

John Fox makes his will March 8, A. D. 1504, (the probate whereof is dated May 2 following) and orders his body to be buried in the parish-church of Hiwish, to which he was a benefactor; as also to his mother-church of Wells. He bequeathed his fortune between Agnes, his wife, Richard Fox, and John, his sons; Susan, Joan, and Alice, his daughters; and constitutes Agnes his wife sole executor.

Robert Fox, writing himself of Stepulaston, made his will the third of January, A. D. 1503, (the probate whereof is dated 8 March

Whitehall: constituting her sole executrix of his will, and also guardian of his sons and daughter, during their respective minorities. Greatly (as, his own words are) confiding in her care and prudent management, of which I have had ample experience. He further recites: "And I intreat and desire my good friend, Francis Gwynne, esquire, my grandson, William Gore, esquire, my faithful friend, John Ward, and my faithful servant, Richard Miller, to see my will performed, and be assisting to my wife, in the execution thereof, and performance of the trust which I with great satisfaction repose in her. And in case of her death, I constitute and appoint my said trustees, Francis Gwynne, William Gore, John Ward, and Richard Miller, and the survivors of them, to be guardians of my said children, and their estates, during their respective minorities. And for the greater ease of my executrix and trustees, I have caused an account, or state of my debts and credits, to be drawn up in writing, and have examined and signed the same."

The prudent settlement of his estate, and the several legacies he left to his relations, and all who had served him in any special manner, are too long to be recited here; but we must not forbear observing, that his unbounded charity ceased only with his life. He bequeathed by his will, to the poor of St. Martin's in the fields, twenty pounds, being his usual yearly allowance. To the poor of the chapel in Westminster, twenty pound, to be distributed by George, lord bishop of Bristol, or the minister for the time being, officiating in the chapel. To the poor of Chiswick, in Middlesex, forty pound. To the poor of the city of Salisbury, thirty pound, and to the poor of the close there, ten pound. To the poor of Cricklade in Wiltshire, twenty pound. To the poor of Farley, and Pitton, in the said county, twenty pound. To the poor of Grimsted, Plaitford, and Whaddon, in the said county, ten pound. And eight pound to the poor at Farley, to be distributed at the discretion of his executrix.

On the conclusion of his will, he makes this recital: "And I desire Mr. Thomas Gibson, who hath been assistant, and very useful to me, in my concerns in his way, may likewise be so to my executrix and trustees. And as a testimony of my satisfaction in his past services, I give him fifty pound." And lastly, revoking all trusts and limitations, &c. by former wills, he declares this is his last, &c.

Having built a house at Chiswick in Middlesex, he chiefly resided there till his death, which happened without any approaching warning of sickness, in the 89th year of his age, on Sunday the 28th of October, A. D. 1716; and on the 7th of November following, he was buried in the church of Farley in Wiltshire, a new structure he had built from the ground, and the vicarage of which he had endowed.

His first lady (as is already said) was Elizabeth, who had in 1694, a confirmation from Sir Thomas St. George, garter king of arms, of the coat of arms, that was found to belong to the family of Whittle, viz. gules, a cheveron ermine, fimbriated, between three talbots heads erased, or. And she is therein said to be the only surviving child of Mr. William Whittle, of Lancashire. She died in 1696, and was buried at Farley, the 20th of August, that year. Sir Stephen had issue by her,

1. Stephen Fox, born and buried in France.
2. Charles Fox, born A. D. 1659. He served in parliament for Eye, in Suffolk, and for Calne, in Wiltshire, and for the city of Salisbury. Before he was twenty-one years of age, he was constituted with Nicholas Johnson, esquire, joint paymaster-general of the forces, viz. December 26, A. D. 1679, and on April 16, A. D. 1682, sole paymaster, being then but twenty-three years of age: yet his abilities were so conspicuous, that he was esteemed able to discharge the business requisite thereunto; and it soon appeared that he behaved therein with the same candour, integrity, and honour, as his father had done. He held the place of paymaster-general of the forces in the reigns of king Charles, king James, and queen Anne. And in the reign of king William he was vice-treasurer, and receiver-general, and paymaster of the revenues in Ireland: and was likewise treasurer to Catharine, queen dowager of England. In 1679, he married Elizabeth-Carr-Trollop, only daughter and heir of Sir William Trollop, of Casewick, in the county of Lincoln, baronet, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Robert Carr, of Sleeford, in the same county, baronet, chancellor of the exchequer, and of the privy-council to king Charles the Second. She was buried at Farley, March 23, A. D. 1703, leaving no issue by him; and he continued a widower till his death, in the 54th year of his age, A. D. 1713, and was buried by her at Farley. By his last will and testament, he left legacies to all his nephews and nieces, sons and daughters of his sisters, the countess of Northampton, and the lady Cornwallis; as also to his brothers, Stephen Fox, and Henry Fox, and his sister, Charlotte Fox. And constituted his father, Sir Stephen Fox, his executor.

3. Stephen Fox, who was buried in the cloisters of Westminster-abbey, October 28, 1675.

4. William Fox, who died the 17th, and was buried April 23, A. D. 1680, aged 20.

8 March following) and ordered his body to be buried in the church of Stepulaston, and bequeathed to the repairs thereof, three pound five shillings and eight-pence, and six shillings and eight-pence to his mother church of Sarum; and to the reparation of the highways, twenty shillings; and to his curate twenty shillings. He bequeathed to Eleanor his wife, forty pounds, and all her goods and chattels to be restored to her. He leaves a legacy to his brother, Nicholas Fox, and constitutes his brother, William Fox, sole executor, and bequeaths to him the residue of his goods, chattels, &c.

Agnes Fox, of East-Dean in Hampshire, widow, makes her will May 14, A. D. 1593, whereof the probate bears date

April 28, A. D. 1596. She orders her body to be buried in the church-yard of Lockerlie in Hampshire; and was a benefactor to the Trinity church of Winchester, East-Dene church, and Lockerlie. She bequeaths to George Fox, her son, all her horse, with harness, carts, and ploughs, and all her copse wood, with eight acres of land. To Alexander Fox, her son, the half of her great wood; and to Stephen Fox, her son, the other half of her great wood. The residue of her goods, chattels, and estate, she bequeaths to Stephen Fox, and Thomas Fox, her sons, and constitutes them her executors; and the probate shews that they administered.

5. Edward

5. Edward Fox, died the 19th of October, A. D. 1660, aged seven, and was buried in Westminster-abbey.

6. James Fox, born A. D. 1665, who died the 19th of November, A. D. 1677, aged twelve, and,

7. John Fox, who died the 17th of November, A. D. 1667, aged one, and was buried in Westminster-abbey.

Also four daughters,

1. Elizabeth, married in king Henry the Seventh's chapel, in the collegiate church of St. Peter, Westminster, December 27, A. D. 1673, to John, lord Cornwallis, and died at Tunbridge-wells, in 1682.

2. Margaret, who was buried unmarried, in Westminster-abbey, April 8, A. D. 1687.

3. Jane, was married in 1685, to George Earl of Northampton, and died in 1721.

4. Charlotte, married to Edward Digby, third son to William, lord Digby.

Sir Stephen Fox, in 1703, married secondly, Christian, daughter of the reverend Mr. Charles Hope, of Nafely, in Lincolnshire, who survived him, and, departing this life on February 21, A. D. 1718, was buried at Farley five days after. He had issue by her two sons,

1. Stephen Fox, now lord Ilchester.

2. Henry Fox, now lord Holland. See the account of his lordship in his proper place as a baron. The eldest surviving son, (Present Earl.) STEPHEN FOX, on the decease of Edward Nicholas, esquire, was elected for the borough of Shaftsbury, in the county of Dorset, in April, A. D. 1726, and served in two other parliaments for the same town; till his majesty, in consideration of his great merits, was pleased to create him a peer of this realm, by the title of lord Ilchester, in Somersetshire, and baron Strangeways, of Woodford-Strangeways, in Dorsetshire, by letters-patent, bearing date the first of May, A. D. 1741, 14 Geo. II. Who was also further pleased, by letters patent, dated the third of January, A. D. 1746-7, 20 Geo. II. to grant unto his lordship the dignity of a baron of Great-Britain, by the name, stile, and title of lord Ilchester and Stavordale, baron of Redlynch, in the county of Somerset, to him and the heirs male of his body, lawfully begotten; and, in default of such issue, to his brother the right honourable Henry Fox, esquire, and the heirs male of his body, lawfully begotten.

His lordship, June 23. A. D. 1747, was constituted one of the two comptrollers of the accounts of his majesty's army. His majesty was pleased to confer upon his lordship the honours of an earldom, with remainder as above, by the stile and title of earl of Ilchester, the letters patent bearing date June 17, A. D. 1756. And his lordship assumed the name of Strangeways pursuant to a clause in Mrs. Strangeways Horner's deed of settlement of her estate. He married in March 1736, Elizabeth Horner, only daughter of Thomas Strangeways Horner, of Mells, in the county of Somerset, esquire, by Susannah, his wife, the only surviving sister and heir of Thomas Strangeways, of Melbury-Sampford, in the county of Dorset, esquire, by whom he had issue, three sons.

1. Henry Thomas Fox, born July 29, A. D. 1747.

2. Stephen Digby Strangeways Fox, born December 3, A. D. 1751.

3. Charles Redlynch Fox, born April 27, A. D. 1761.

Also six daughters.

1. Susannah Sarah Louisa, born February 1, 1742-3, married March 7, 1764, to William Obrien, esquire.

2. Charlotte Elizabeth, born March 11, 1743-4, who died March 16, A. D. 1755.

3. Juliana Judith, born July 10, 1745, who died April 24, A. D. 1749.

4. Lucy, born December 15, 1748.

5. Christian Henrietta Carolina, born January 3, 1749-50.

6. Frances Muriel, born August 1755.

(TITLES.) Stephen Fox Strangeways, earl of Ilchester, lord Ilchester and Stavordale, baron Strangeways and Redlynch.

(CREATIONS.) Lord Ilchester, in the county of Somerset, and baron Strangeways, of Woodford-Strangeways, in the county of Dorset, May 1, A. D. 1741, (14 Geo. II.) lord Ilchester and Stavordale, in the county of Somerset, and baron Redlynch, in the same county, with remainder to his brother Henry Fox, January 3, 1746-7, (20 Geo. II.) and earl of Ilchester, June 1756, with remainder as aforesaid.

(ARMS.) Ermine on a chevron sapphire, three foxes heads erased, topaz, in a canton of the second a fleur de lis of the third.

(CREST.) A chapeau sapphire, turned up ermine, thereon a fox, sejant topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) On a dexter side a fox ermine fretted, topaz, collared dovetail sapphire, thereon three fleurs de lis of the second. On the sinister a fox proper, collared in like manner.

(MOTTO.) "Faire fans dire."

(CHIEF SEAT.) Redlynch, in the county of Somerset.

FOX
Earl of ILCHESTER

1843

W E S T, Earl D E L A W A R R.

THIS ancient and noble family, among many other no less honourable descents, claims for lineal ancestors, Henry III. king of England, Jordan de la Warre, of Ware-wike, in the county of Gloucester, and Rateshall, in Wiltshire, who lived in the time of Henry II. and Sir Thomas West, of Rudgecombe, in Wiltshire, who flourished in the reign of Edward I. with which last gentleman we shall begin our account.

Sir THOMAS WEST aforesaid, knight, had a son of his own name, who was also a knight, which son,

Sir THOMAS WEST, having married Eleanor, daughter and heir of Sir John de Cantalupe, of Hempston-Cantalupe, in the county of Devon. knight, by Margaret, his wife, daughter of John, lord Mohun, of Dunster, in the county of Somerset, had, in 17 Edward II. entailed on him, and his said wife, and on the heirs of their two bodies, the manor of Sniterfield, in the county of Warwick. The manor of Okehampton and Compton Valence, in Dorsetshire, together with Willersley, in Gloucestershire, and Hempston-Cantalupe, in Devonshire. The same year he obtained from the king a charter for a market, every week, there upon Tuesday: as also for a fair, yearly, upon the eve and day of St. Kenelme, and six days after; likewise for free warren, to them, and the heirs of their two bodies, in their demesne lands there. In which 17th year of Edward II. he served in the parliament then held at Westminster, as one of the knights for the county of Warwick.

In 19 Edward II. he received the honour of knighthood by bathing, &c. his robes, and all accoutrements for that solemnity, being then allowed out of the king's great wardrobe: and the same year going into France with the king, had his protection (dated August 20, that year) till Christmas following.

In 1 Edward III. he obtained leave from the king to make a castle of his manor-house at Rudgecombe, in Wiltshire; and on May 26, A. D. 1329, 3 Edward III. he embarked at Dover with the king, when he went to do homage to the French monarch for the dutchy of Guienne, earldom of Ponthieu, &c. which was performed verbally in the cathedral of Amiens; and not after the manner of his predecessors, by putting off the crown, and laying aside both sword and spurs, to do it kneeling.

In 4 Edward III. he was made governor of Christ-church castle, in the county of Southampton. And the year after, king Edward having summoned David, king of Scotland, to do his homage, as also to render to him the town of Berwick, and his refusal thereof, occasioning a war with Scotland, this Sir Thomas West was present at the siege of Berwick, and memorable battle of Halidown; and thereupon a truce ensued, which being near expired, in 1335, the king, about Midsummer, at the head of his army, on July 12, entered Scotland in an hostile manner, in which expedition this Sir Thomas de West was also with him; he was likewise with the king, in 12 Edward III. who, July 16, took shipping at the port of Orwell, in the county of Suffolk, having in company 500 sail of ships, and many barons; and on the expedition into Flanders, being in the retinue of William, earl of Salisbury, he had thereupon a protection, dated July 10, that year, to hold in force till Christmas following. He was also there in 13 Edward III. and the same year, in consideration of those his services, had a grant in fee, for return of all writs and summons of the exchequer, within his manor of Swaclyff, and Sutton, in Wiltshire.

In 16 Edward III. the countess of Montfort sending from Britany, to the king for succours, and Laurence de Hastings, earl of Pembroke, being dispatched, he accompanied him in that expedition into France, wherein he behaved so well, and merited so much in other his great employments, that the same year, the king thought him worthy of a seat in parliament, among the barons of this realm. And deceasing in 17 Edward III. left issue, by Eleanor, his wife, aforesaid,

Thomas Fox, his son and heir, who then became possessed of the manors of Hempston-Cantalupe, and Great Totton, in the county of Devon, as is evident from the inquisition taken after the death of his said father, which,

Sir THOMAS WEST, in 19 Edward III. was in the French wars, in the retinue of Richard, earl of Arundel; in which year, divers strong towns and castles were taken. The year after, he was with the king in the wars of France, and in the famous battle of Cressy, where the English gained a glorious victory, and, afterwards, besieged the town of Calais, setting down before it on the 7th of September, A. D. 1346, and it was taken August 4, A. D. 1347. In 29 Edward III. he was in the wars of Scotland, when the Scots took Berwick. In 33 Edward III. he went with the lord chamberlain, Thomas de Cherleton, into Gascony, and was in the service there, the 44th year of that king's reign. In 1 Richard II. he was on board that fleet sent to scour the seas, (of the French and Scots) commanded by the lord high admiral John John de Arundel; and in 3 Richard II. in the wars of France, with Thomas de Wodstoke, earl of Buckingham. In 8 Richard II. he was retained to serve in the wars against the Scotch, for forty days, the king being in person there; and in 9 Richard II. for one quarter of that year, in fortifying of Calais. In 10 Richard II. he was again retained to serve against the French. And died September 3, the same year, seized of the manor of Compton-Valence, in Dorsetshire, of the third part of the manor of Trente, in the county of Somerset, of the manors of Sniterfelde in the county of Warwick; Welneford, (now Wetford) Weston, and Willersfeye, in the county of Gloucester; Hempston-Cantalupe, in the county of Devon; Okchangre, Newton-Valence, and Terstwode, in the county of Southampton; Wyke, and Haseldene, in the county of Lancaster; East Hacche, Napprede, Roughcombe, Swalclyve, Elton, near Berewyck, Upton, Bradmore, Sutton-Mandevile, and Straiford Tony, and Newton Tony, in the county of Wilts: leaving, by Alice, his wife, sister and heir to Sir Edmund Fitz-Perse, daughter of Reginald Fitz-Herbert, alias Fitz-Perse, baron of Wolverly, in Worcestershire, (and of Joan, his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Edmund Hallett, knight,) Thomas West, his son and heir, twenty-one years of age, in the said 10 Richard II.

Alice, his wife, surviving him, made her will at Hynton-Martel, in the county of Dorset, on Thursday, July 15, 19 Richard II. A. D. 1395, wherein she orders her body to be buried in the priory of the canons of Christ-church, in the county of Southampton, with her ancestors; and gave to Thomas, her son, a bed of tapiters-work, as also a pair of matyn-books, a pair of beads, and a ring wherewith she was espoused to God, which were the lord her father's. To Joan, her son's wife, a bed paled black and white, a mass-book, and all her books of Latin, English, and French, also the vestments of her chapel, and what belongs to the altar, with all other apparel thereunto belonging, as silver basons, with escutcheons of her ancestors arms, &c. To Sir Nicholas Clyfton, knight, and Eleanor, his wife, her daughter, and Thomas Clyfton, her son, one hundred and twenty pounds. To her sister, Dame Lucy Fitz-Herbert, prioress of Shaftesbury, forty pounds. To her sister Thomaline Blount, a nun at Romesey, in the county of Southampton, forty marks. And bequeathed eighteen pounds ten shillings, for four thousand four hundred masses, to be sung and said for the soul of Sir Thomas West, her lord and husband, her own soul, and all christian souls, in the most haste that might be, within fourteen nights next after her decease. Also forty pounds to the canons of Christ-church, to read and sing mass for her lord's soul, and her own, whilst the world should last. She further bequeaths to the nuns of St. Olaves, in London, and to the priests of the said house, one hundred shillings for to pray for the soul of her lord and husband, Sir Thomas West, her own soul, and for the estate of Thomas, her son, Joan, his wife, and their children. To the religious women dwelling without Aldgate, London; and to those of the houses of Shaftesbury, Romeseye, Wilton; the friars within Newgate, London; the friars preachers within Ludgate, London; the friars in Fleetstreet; the friars Au-gustines within Bishopsgate; the friars preachers of Winchester, the friars mendicant of Winchester; the friars of Southampton; the friars preachers of Salisbury; the friars mendicant of Salisbury; the friars preachers of Bristol; to each of them one hundred shillings. The rest of her goods, &c. she bequeaths to Thomas her son, requiring, where-ever she dies, that her body should be carried to the priory of Christ-church, and there buried at the first mass, with a taper of six pounds of wax standing and burning at her head, and another at her feet; and constitutes Thomas her son sole executor. Given and written in Chertlon, without Newgate, in the parish of St. Sepulchre's, London, the day and year aforesaid. And deceased the same year, as by inquisition, appears.

We now return to her son,

Sir THOMAS WEST, who, succeeding his father, was in the wars of France, in 11th of Richard II. and in 19th of Richard II. on the death of his mother, Alice, as aforesaid, doing his homage, had livery of the lands which she held in dower. In 22d of Richard II. being at that time a knight, and to go with Edmund, duke of Albemarle, into Ireland, for the defence of that realm, he had the king's protection, dated the 20th of April that year. He was summoned to parliament, among the barons of the realm, in 2d and 5th of Henry IV. and by his will, dated 8th of April, A. D. 1405 (6th Henry IV.) ordered his body to be laid in the new chapel, in the minster of Christ-church, Twyneham monastery, bequeathing to the work of that church one hundred pounds; and another hundred to the treasury there, conditionally, that the canons of that priory, once in a year, keep solemnly the obit of Thomas his father, Alice his mother, and Joan his wife. He also bequeathed eighteen pounds, eighteen shillings, and fourpence, for four thousand five hundred masses for his soul, to be said within half a year after his decease. Likewise to his daughter, Joan, one thousand pounds. He died on Easter-day the same year; seized of the manors of Burton-Peverell, Okehangre, Winkton, Newton-Valence, Terstwode, and Hale, in the county of Southampton, Hempston Cantelupe, in the county of Devon; Blackington, in the county of Suffex, and Wolverton, Bere, and Newton-Peverell, in the county of Dorset.

By another inquisition, taken in 14th of Henry IV. it was found that he also died seized of the manors of Bloxham, in Lincolnshire, Burstal and Herdeby, in the county of Leicestershire; and Sniterfield, in the county of Warwick.

By Joan his said wife, sister and heir to Thomas De la Warr, lord and baron De la Warr, and daughter of Roger, lord De la Warr, by Eleanor his second wife, daughter of John, lord Moubray, son of John by Joan his wife, third daughter of Henry, earl of Lancaster, grandson to king Henry III. and lineally descended from Roger De la Warr, summoned to parliament, as a baron, June 8, 1294, 22d of Edward I. he had issue two sons:

1. Thomas West.
2. Reginald West.

And a daughter,

Joan, married first. — de le Bere, and, secondly, William Tatibsy.

Sir THOMAS WEST, his son and heir, was fourteen years old at his father's death; and in 7th of Henry IV. having married Ida, one of the daughters and coheirs of Almaric de St. Amand, and making proof of her age, had livery of the lands of her inheritance. In 8th of Henry IV. he was one of those peers in parliament who set their hands and seals, for settling the succession of the crown on Henry, prince of Wales, and the heirs of his body, with remainder to his brothers, Thomas, John, and Humphry, and the heirs male of their bodies, by which the female heirs were excluded. In 3d of Henry V. he was in the wars of France, with that victorious king; and, whilst he was abroad, made his will, on the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula, A. D. 1415, dated at Stone-bridge, beyond the seas; wherein he ordered, that no more than forty pounds should be laid out in meat, drink, and tapers, upon the day of his funeral; and twenty-four pounds given to two priests, to celebrate divine service for his soul, for two years after his decease, as also for the souls of his progenitors, and all the faithful deceased. The same year, May 14, being then a knight, he was appointed, with Thomas, earl of Salisbury, and Sir Thomas de Camoys, knight, to array and muster all persons fit to bear arms, both hoblers and archers, in the counties of Southampton, Wiltshire, and Dorsetshire, to serve the king against the French and Genoese. Not long after which, viz. 30th of September following, he departed this life beyond sea, being then in France with the king; and died seized of the manors of Bloxham, in Kesteven, in the county of Lincoln; Hempston-Cantelupe, in the county of Devon; Snyterfield, in the county of Warwick; Burstall, and Herdeby, in the county of Leicester; Compton-Valence, Hynton-Martell, Bere, Newton, near Sturmyster-Marshall, and Mapoudre, in Dorsetshire; Norton-Midsomer, in Somersetshire; Berton-Peverell, Okehangre, Newton-Valence, Tirstwode, and Winketon, in the county of Southampton; Stratford-Tony, and Newton-Tony, in Wiltshire; also of the manors of Iwehurst, Sutton-Peverell, Offington, Blethington, and Rype, and honour of Aquila, in the county of Suffex; leaving Reginald, his brother and heir, at that time twenty-one years old: which

Sir REGINALD WEST, doing his homage soon after, had livery of his lands; and before the end of that year, (4th of Henry V.) was in the French wars, and made governor of St. Cloue, in Constantine, in Normandy, on the surrender thereof to the duke of Gloucester. Also, in 7th of Henry V. he was made captain of the castle of la Mote, in Normandy; and in 9th of Henry V. was again in the French wars. In 5th of Henry VI. on the death of Thomas, lord De la Warr, he had livery of the lands of his mother's inheritance, she being sister and heir to the said lord. And the same year having petitioned that he might have place and precedence among the barons in parliament, as lord De la Warr, he had summons to parliament as lord De la Warr, July 5, 5th of Henry VI. and July 13, 6th of Henry VI. In 8th of Henry VI. he was again retained to serve in France for one year, with thirty men at arms and seventy archers; and went thither accordingly. In 19th of Henry VI. being beyond the seas, he intended a pilgrimage to the Holy Land; where it is probable he went: for we find no further mention of him till 25th of Henry VI. when he again procured a grant, dated December 10, to go to Rome, and thence to the Holy Land, to pay his vows, (with allowance of twenty-four servants in his retinue, and thirty horses) carrying with him no other gold or silver, in bullion or money, than what should be necessary to defray his expences, excepting a silver cup or two gilt; and he had the king's letters, directed to Theodore, archbishop of Cologne, and to all governors and commanders within his dominions, requesting, that he might have free passage through their territories, without payment of any tribute, opening of his letters, or search of what he carried. This probably was his second journey thither. And, having been summoned to parliament, as lord De la Warr, from 5th of Henry VI. to 28th of that king's reign, inclusive, he died August 27, 29th of Henry VI. seized of the manors of Burstall, and Herdeby, in the county of Leicester; Bristelington, Shipton-Malet, and North-Perot, in Somersetshire; Wolweton, Mapoudre, Hynton-Martell, Mayne-Martell, and Compton-Valence, in Dorsetshire; Bourne-hall, and Hartesbourne, in Herefordshire; Offington, Sutton, Iwehurst near Henfield, Porteslade, Aldryngton, Blethington, Flecdhyng, Rype, Exceter, Fokinton, and Sapurton, Okehangre, Barton-Peverell, Newton-Valence, Tirstwode, and Winketon, in the county of Suffex; Alington, Newton-Tony, Swatcliffe, East-Hacche, Eston, Brodmere-Lucies, Charleton, and Fountell, in Wiltshire; Wyke-Warr, in the county of Gloucester; Hempston-Cantelupe, in Devonshire; Fakenham-Aspes, in the county of Suffolk; Swynesheved, Syxhill, and Bloxham, in Lincolnshire; with the patronage of the abbey and parish church of Swynesheved aforesaid, and free chapel of Barthop, and advowson of the church of Bloxham, in the county of Lincoln. Leaving issue by Eleanor his wife, daughter of Henry Percy, earl of Northumberland, by Eleanor his wife, daughter of Richard, lord Poynings, two sons, viz.

1. Richard West, his heir, nineteen years of age at his decease.
2. John West, who having married Agnes, daughter and heir of William Iveson, of Waith, in the county of York, resided there, and left issue Richard West, his son and heir, of Stainborough, also of Waith, in the county of York, ancestor of Francis West, of Waith, esquire, living A. D. 1584.

The said Reginald had also four daughters,

1. Margaret, married to Thomas, lord of Echingham, in Suffex.
2. Anne, married to Thomas Berkley, of Beverston, in the county of Gloucester.
3. Mary, married to Roger Leuknore, of the county of Suffex; and,
4. Catherine, married to Roger, lord Hungerford.

RICHARD WEST, lord De la Warr, being a stout assertor of the interest of the house of Lancaster, in the wars of that time against the house of York; and having with others entered the tower of London, and endured a siege, had, in consideration of his singular services, in 38th of Henry VI. a grant of forty pounds a year, during life, payable out of the issues of the manor of Old Wotton, in Wiltshire, part of the possessions of Richard, duke of York, then attainted.

But,

But, when the scene changed, he chose not to live under the power of those to whom he had been an open adversary; which induced him, in 3d of Edward IV. to obtain leave to go abroad, and accordingly it was granted him to go beyond the seas, with twelve servants, and as many horses, not exceeding the value of forty shillings each, and there to continue; however, he did not long remain abroad, for he had summons to parliament from 38th Henry VI. to 12th of Edward IV. inclusive, and died March 10, 16th of Edward IV. possessed of the manors of Hempston-Cantalupe, in Devonshire; Mapoudre, Wolverton, Cherleton, Compton-Valence, Hynton-Martell, Mayne-Martell, and Newton-Peverell, in Dorsetshire; Burnhall, and Herteshourne, in the county of Hertford; Newton-Valence, Wynketon, Barton-Peverell, Okenhanger, and Tirstwode, in the county of Southampton; Midsomer-Norton, Brustlyngton, Shipton-Malet, Efton-Lucies, Swalclyffe, Eft-Hacche, Alyngton, Bredmere, Wyke, with the park of Rounde, Sutton-Mandeville, Stratford-Tony, Hafildon, and Upton, in Wiltshire. Leaving issue, by Catherine his wife, daughter of Robert, lord Hungerford, by Margaret Botreaux his wife, five sons, viz.

1. Thomas West, who succeeded him in his honours.
2. John West.
3. Reginald West.
4. Edward West.
5. Richard West, a Franciscan friar at Greenwich.

Also two daughters,

1. Margaret, wife of Sir Nicholas Strelley, of Strelley, in the county of Nottingham, who died at London, April 30, A. D. 1491, and was buried in the church of St. Andrew's Wardrobe, near Baynard's-castle.
2. Margery, a nun at Sion, in Middlesex.

Sir THOMAS WEST, in the life-time of his father, though not more than eighteen years old, was in that expedition into France in 14th of Edward IV. on which account he received ninety-five pounds, eleven shillings, for a quarter's wages, for four men at arms, and thirty archers, which were of his retinue. He obtained a special livery of his lands, September 1, A. D. 1475, though at that time he was not of full age; and was in such favour with king Henry VII. whom he assisted in attaining the crown, that in the first year of his reign, he gave him a grant, in special tail, of the castle, barony, honour, lordship, town and borough of Brembre, in Suffex; and of the manors of Kings-Bernes, West Grinstead, Knapp, and Washington, of the towns and boroughs of Shoreham and Horsham, of the forest of St. Leonard, with the parks of Beaubush and Knap, of the hundreds of Braford, Stenynge, Grenestede, Berbeche, and Wordham, with the half of the hundred of Esteworthe, and half of the hundred of Fishergate; late belonging to John Howard, duke of Norfolk, slain at Bosworth-field, and the which came to the crown by his attainder.

In 5th of Henry VII. he was made knight of the Bath, at the creation of Arthur, prince of Wales; and in 7th of Henry VII. was one of the chief commanders in that army then sent into Flanders, in aid of the emperor Maximilian against the French. Also in 12th of Henry VII. had a chief command in those forces raised at that time for suppressing the Cornishmen. And, for his great services, was elected a knight of the garter in 2d of Henry VIII. with the king of Portugal, and installed at Windsor, May 11, that year, and placed in the eleventh stall on the prince's side. In 5th of Henry VIII. attending king Henry in his expedition to Therouene and Tournay, he was at the battle fought August 16, that year, between the king, (accompanied by Maximilian the emperor) and the French, who called it, La Journee des Esperons, from the use they made of their spurs, in riding away; and for his valour therein he was made a knight banneret. In 6th of Henry VIII. he attended on the princess Mary, third daughter of Henry VII. and sister to the king, at her marriage with Lewis, king of France, the twelfth of that name, which was solemnized at Abbeville; having in his retinue thirty horsemen, well accoutred, and one pound six shillings and eight pence per day, was allowed him by the king, towards defraying his expences. In 12th of Henry VIII. he attended the king and queen to Canterbury, Calais, and Guisnes, to the long intended interview with the French king. On June 8, 13th of Henry VIII. he was present with the earls of Essex, Wiltshire, Kent, and other knights companions of the order of the Garter, at the degradation of Edward, duke of Buckingham, from being a companion of that most noble order. In 14th of Henry VIII. on the second coming of the emperor Charles V. into England, he, with the marquis of Dorset, in the name of the king of England, received him at Gravelin, on May 25, and, with all honour, brought his imperial majesty to Calais, and from thence to Dover, where the king met him, to consult about the affairs of Christendom in general, and to treat of a match betwixt himself and the princess Mary, the king's daughter.

This Thomas, lord de la Warr, styling himself knight of the garter, made his will October 8, 17th Henry VIII. A. D. 1524, whereby he orders his body to be buried in the tomb of free-stone, within the chancel of the parish church of Broadwater, according to his honour; and bequeathed to the mother church of Chichester, twenty shillings; and to the church of Broadwater his mantle of blue velvet, of the garter, and his gown of crimson velvet, belonging thereto, for to make two altar-cloths; also to the church of Boxgrave, his gown of tawney velvet. He bequeaths to Thomas West, his son and heir, all his hangings and beddings within his great chamber of Offington, and the chapel-chamber there, as also the chapel, as it was then adorned, with altar-cloths of white sattin, embroidered with the garter, and a bed of tinsel sattin and crimson damask, embroidered with his arms, and the garter, likewise his crimson velvet gown furred with black. He makes Eleanor, his wife, sole executrix; and overseers, Sir Richard Brook, knight, Sir Thomas West, his son, and Sir Roger Copley, knight, and died possessed of great estates in the counties of Suffex, Southampton, Wiltshire, Dorsetshire, Somersetshire, Gloucestershire, Devonshire, Hertfordshire, Warwickshire, Leicestershire, and counties of Lincoln, and Lancaster, which he settled, for the most part, on Sir Thomas West, his son and heir apparent, and his heirs-male; and, in default, default, to Owen West, his son, and his heirs-male; remainder to George and Leonard West, his sons, and their heirs-male. The manors of Bradmere, Charleton, Fountell, and Swacliffe, with the appurtenances, in Wiltshire, were settled on Thomas his son, and Elizabeth his wife; as also Compton-Valens and Maperton, in the county of Dorsetshire, and the manors of Testwood and Wynketon, in the county of Southampton, were settled on Elizabeth, late wife of William, his son, deceased. And on Owen West, he settled his manors of Hinton-Martell, in the county of Dorset, and Folkington, in the county of Sussex, and in default of heirs-male, on Thomas his son and heir. On Leonard West, he settled his manors of Sutton-Maundeville and Hafilden, in Wiltshire, and Bradele, in the county of Dorset, and to the heirs-male of his body, and in default on Thomas West, knight, his son and heir. He bequeaths to his daughters, Mary, Catherine, and Barbara, to and for their marriages, five hundred marks each. It also appears by his will, that dame Elizabeth, his first wife, was buried in the church of the White-friars, in London, on St. Peter's day, and that twenty-three years were since expired, from the date of the will, he having caused her obit to be commemorated, in the said church, for thirty years, as also for Richard West, late lord la Warr, his father, and Catherine his wife, his mother; and appointed ten marks, to be paid yearly, for thirty years, as a salary for a priest, daily to say mass, in the church of Broadwater, and to pray for the souls of him, the said lord la Warr, Elizabeth, his late wife, Eleanor, his present wife, Richard West and Catherine, his father and mother, and all christian souls. He also mentions his daughter Dorothy Owen, and his daughter Anne St. Amonde. He likewise was bountiful to his servants, and a person of great honour and judgment, as his will shews; the probate whereof bears date February 12, A. D. 1525, which shews he died soon after.

He married two wives: we shall first trace the issue he had by his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Hugh, and sister and heir of Sir John Mortimer, of Mortimer's Hall, in the county of Southampton, which were two sons,

1. Thomas West, who succeeded to his estates and honour.

2. William West, who died issueless.

Also four daughters,

1. Dorothy, married to Sir Edward Owen, knight.

2. Elizabeth, married to Charles Somerset, earl of Worcester.

3. Anne, married to Thomas, lord Clinton, from whence the present earl of Lincoln is descended.

4. Eleanor, married to Sir Edward Guildford, of Hempsted-place, and Halden, in Kent, knight, warden of the cinque ports, and had issue, by her, Joan, wife of John Dudley, duke of Northumberland.

THOMAS WEST, lord de la Warr, son and heir to Thomas, last lord de la Warr, was, in 5th of Henry VIII. with his father, at the sieges of Therouenne and Tournay, and the battle that ensued, when for his valour he was knighted, on the 14th of October, at Lisse. After succeeding to the honour, he with other peers, in parliament, in 22d of Henry VIII. subscribed the declaration to pope Clement VII. intimating, that his supremacy here would not be regarded, if he did not comply with queen Catherine's divorce.

In 31st of Henry VIII. on the dissolution of the greater monasteries, he obtained a grant of the site and circuit of Wherwell-abbey, in the county of Southampton, with the lordships of Wherwell, Weston, Middleton, Totington, Bolington, Good alias Goodworth, Clateford, and Little Anne, thereto belonging, to hold to himself, and Elizabeth his wife, and his heirs, in exchange for the manors of Halfnaked and Wallerton, in Sussex, with their appurtenances, in Mendham, Byrdham, Westchychenor, Hunstall, Iverhall, Woodcote, Westerton, Strethampton, Boxgrove, Compton, Offham, and Yapton, in the said county; which manors the king, through the incitation of Cromwell and others, who were chiefs in the contrivance for the dissolution of the religious houses, got from him, to obviate the future restitution of those lands, to the uses they originally were intended.

He was knight banneret, and being elected knight of the Garter, December 1, A. D. 1547, 3d Edward VI. was installed the thirteenth of that month at Windsor. In the first year of queen Mary, in consideration of his service against the duke of Northumberland, he had a grant of two hundred pounds per annum, for life. And having married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Sir John Bonville, knight, left no issue by her, departing this life, September 25, A. D. 1554, at Offington, and was buried near his father at Broadwater, in Sussex, October 12, with standards, banners of arms, &c. and many mourners, as recited in the account of his funeral; and that he was the best housekeeper in Sussex.

By inquisition taken at Cookefield, in Sussex, June 6, 1st and 2d of Philip and Mary, after his decease, the jury found that he died September 25, A. D. 1554, 1st and 2d of Philip and Mary; and that Joan Dudley, dutchess of Northumberland, was his cousin and coheir, and at that time fifty years of age, being the daughter and heir of Eleanor, his eldest sister, the wife of Sir Edward Guildford, knight. Also that the three daughters of his second sister, Dorothy, the wife of Sir Edward Owen, knight, were coheirs, viz. Elizabeth, wife of Nicholas Deering, whose son Thomas was twenty-four years of age, A. D. 1554; Mary, wife of John Warnet, aged thirty-eight years on September 1, A. D. 1554; and Anne, aged thirty-six years, A. D. 1554, then the wife of James Gage. Also, that he died seized of the manor of Meyne Martell, and the advowson of the church, in Dorsetshire; the manors of Hempston and Cantelowe in Devonshire; the manor of Wickwarre, and advowson of the church, in Gloucestershire; the manors of Shepton-Mallet, and advowson of the church, and Bristlington, in Somersetshire; the manor of Manchester, and advowson of the church, in Lancashire; the manors of Portelade, Somptinge, Somptinge-Weld, Ewherst, with the park of Ewherst, Blackington, and advowson of the church, Knape, and park of Knape, Offington, with the park there, and Rype; and lands and tenements in the parishes of Shepeley, and Grinsted, in the county of Sussex; the manor of Swineshed, in Lincolnshire; the manor of Newton-Valence; the scite, circuit, and precinct of the monastery of Wherwell, alias Wharwell, with

P p p

with the manors and demefnes of Wherwell; the manors of Westover, Middleton, Tokyngton, Bolingdon, Goodworth, Clatford, Little-Anne, and the prebendary of Good, alias Goodworth; and the manor of Chawton, with advowson of the church, in the county of Southampton; the manor of Stratford-Tony, in Wiltshire; and the scite, circuit, and precinct of the White-Fryers, near Fleet-street, London. All the said messuages and lands, &c. were, by act of parliament, November 4, 3d of Edward VI. settled upon the said Thomas, lord de la Warr in tail, remainder to his brother, Sir Owen, in tail; remainder to the use of his own will or deed, during the life of William West, remainder to the said William, and the heirs male of his body.

After his decease, the lord Morle, his friend, made the following epitaph on him:

Virtue, honesty, liberality, and grace,
And true religion, this fely grave doth holde:
I do wishe, that all our great men woulde
In good follow this noble baron's trace,
That from his wise hart did always chafe,
Envy and malice; and sought of young and olde
Love and favour, that passeth stone and golde;
Unto a worthy man a rich purchase.
These waies he used, and obtained thereby
Good fame of all men, as well farre of as nye;
And now is joyful in that celestial sphere,
Where, with saintes, he sings uncessantly,
Holy, honor, praise, and glory,
Give to God, that gave him such might,
To live so nobly, and come to that delight.

The same author recites: "His badge, a cram-pet, or, was given to his ancestors, for taking the French king in the field, 30th of Edward III."

We have before mentioned, that Thomas, father of the last lord, had two wives; and are now to treat of the issue he had by his second wife, Eleanor, daughter of Sir Roger Copley, of Garton, in Surrey, knight, which were three sons, viz. Sir Owen West, Sir George West, and Leonard West; of which sons, Sir Owen West, the eldest, married Mary, daughter of Sir George Guildford, knight: and by his will, July 17, A. D. 1551, 5th of Edward VI. being then sick, orders his body to be buried where he departs this life. To dame Mary West, his wife, he bequeaths the lordship of Hynton-Martyll, during her life, and after to his two daughters, Mary and Anne. He constitutes dame Mary, his wife, his sole executrix; and the lord his brother, and his brother Guildford, supervisors; and bequeaths to each a gelding. The probate is dated October 30, A. D. 1551, whereby it appears, he did not recover. His daughter, Mary, was married first to Sir Adrian Poynings, knight, and, secondly, to Sir Richard Rogers, knight.

Leonard West, third and youngest son by the said second marriage, had, by the last will and testament of his father, Sir Thomas West, knight, lord de la Warr, knight of the Garter, bearing date October 8, 17th of Henry VIII. A. D. 1524, the manors of Sutton-Maundeville, and Hasilden, in Wiltshire; and the manor of Brodele in Dorsetshire; which were settled on him, and his heirs male; in default, on Sir Thomas West, knight, his son and heir. And his father dying possessed of a very great estate, in the counties of Sussex, Southampton, and in Wiltshire, Dorsetshire, Somersetshire, Gloucestershire, Warwickshire, Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, and Lancashire, which he settled on Sir Thomas West, knight, his son and heir, and his heirs male; and, in default thereof entailed his said estate on Owen West, his son, remainder to George West, and the said Leonard West.

On the decease of his father he was in his youth; but was living in the reign of queen Mary; and in the second parliament held in her reign, (which was summoned to meet at Oxford, April 2, A. D. 1554, but adjourned to Westminster, where it sat from April 5, to May 5, and was then dissolved) he was one of the members for the borough of Shoreham, in Sussex. He married Barbara, daughter of Sir William Gascoigne, knight, by whom he had issue four sons; Thomas, and Anthony, who died infants; William, and John, of whom we shall further treat: also four daughters, Mary, St. Amand, Margaret, and Anne; whereof Mary was the wife of Ralph Vavasor, of Haslewood, in the county of York, esquire, and Margaret, of Thomas Brown, of Westwood, in the county of Lincoln, esquire. We now return to

JOHN WEST, esquire, the only surviving son of the said Leonard West. He resided at Banbury, in Oxfordshire, and had to wife Mary, daughter of Throgmorton, by whom he had two sons; John, who died in his infancy; and Aholiab West, who married Elizabeth Preston, grand-daughter of Thomas Preston, doctor of the civil law, and master of Trinity college, in the university of Cambridge; who, on queen Elizabeth's being entertained at Oxford, in the beginning of September, A. D. 1564, was incorporated, on the sixth of the same month, master of arts of that university: the said Aholiab died at Favesley, in Northamptonshire, in 1628, leaving issue by the said Elizabeth, his wife, Richard West, esquire, who married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of James Hill, of Hillmorton, in Warwickshire, esquire, and by her had four sons, James, John, Richard, and Aholiab; who all died without issue, except Richard, the third son, of Priors-marston, in Warwickshire. Which Richard West, married Mary Russel, of the Russels of Strensham, in Worcestershire; and by her had issue James West, of Alscot, in Warwickshire, esquire, who was chosen a member for St. Albans, in the parliament summoned to meet June 15, A. D. 1741, and was elected for the same place in the succeeding parliaments. He was appointed secretary of the treasury; and chosen fellow of the royal society, and one of the vice-presidents of the antiquarian society. He married in 1738, Sarah, daughter of Sir Thomas Steavens, of Eltham, in Kent; by whom he had one son, James, and two daughters, Sarah, and Henrietta.

Sir GEORGE WEST, second son, married Elizabeth, eldest of the two daughters and coheirs of Sir Anthony Moreton, of Lechlade, in Gloucestershire; son of Thomas Moreton, of the same place, nephew to the famous John Moreton, of the privy-council to Henry VII. archbishop of Canterbury, chancellor of England, and chancellor of the university of Oxford; and had issue by her a daughter, Margaret, wife of Thomas Arundel, esquire, with two sons.

1. William

1. William West, of whom we shall further treat.

2. Thomas West, of Seltwood, in the county of Southampton, knight, who died August 11, A. D. 1622, leaving Mary, his sole daughter and heir, the wife of Sir John Leigh, of Cewdray, in the county of Southampton.

The said Sir George West was buried in the church of Warburton, in Sussex, according to the order in his will, dated September 7, A. D. 1538; the probate whereof bears date the 27th following, which shews he died in the same month and year. Of

(First Lord.) WILLIAM WEST, his eldest son, it is recorded, in the rolls of parliament, 2 Edward VI. that Thomas, lord de la Warr, his uncle, having no issue, bred him up in his own house; but not content to stay for his said uncle's natural death, he prepared poison to dispatch him; which, being discovered, so highly incensed him, that in 2 Edward VI. on complaint thereof in parliament, he was disabled to succeed his said uncle in honours or estate; but had an allowance of three hundred and fifty pounds per annum. Which William, in the fourth of Philip and Mary, served in the English army at the siege of St. Quintin, in Picardy; and being knighted at Hampton-court, February 5, A. D. 1568, he, at the same time, obtained a new creation to the title of lord de la Warr; and, by act of parliament passed March 12 following, had full restitution in blood. In 1572, 15 Elizabeth, he was one of the peers on the trial of Thomas Howard, duke of Norfolk, January 16, in Westminster-hall. And scarce ten days after his execution, William, lord de la Warr, Sir Ralph Sadler, with Sir Thomas Wilson, were sent to the queen of Scots, who was overcome with grief and mourning, to expostulate with her, by way of accusation, That she had usurped the title and arms of the crown of England, and had not renounced the same, as was agreed upon in the treaty of Edinburgh: that for the full possessing herself thereof, she had treated of a marriage with the duke of Norfolk, without acquainting the queen therewith, &c. In 32 Elizabeth, he was one of the peers on the trial of Philip Howard, earl of Arundel; and had place between lord Buckhurst, and lord Norris. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Anthony Strange, of Chesterton, in the county of Gloucester, esquire, by whom he had issue, Thomas West, his son and heir.

Also three daughters.

1. Jane, first married to Thomas Waynman (son to Sir Richard Waynman, knight) secondly, to James Cressy, thirdly, to Sir Thomas Tasburgh, knight, and fourthly, to Ralph Sheldon, of Beoley, in the county of Wigorn, esquire.

2. Elizabeth, wedded to Richard Blount, (brother to Sir Michael Blount, knight,) of Dodsham, in Sussex, esquire.

3. Mary, third daughter, died unmarried.

By inquisition taken after his decease, at Winchester, April 6, in 38 Elizabeth, it appears that he died at Wherwell, December 20, in 38 Elizabeth, and that Sir Thomas West, knight, was his son and heir, and aged forty years, which,

(Second Lord) Sir THOMAS WEST was knighted

in 30th of Elizabeth, and, by the title of Thomas, lord de la Warr, in 38th of Elizabeth, was appointed one of the commissioners for putting in execution an act passed in the first year of her reign, intituled, "An acte restoringe to the crowne the auncient jurisdiction over the state, ecclesiasticall and spirituall; and abolishing all foreign power repugnant to the same." Also, in 39th of Elizabeth, the commission being renewed, he was again in it: and, in the same 39th year, exhibiting his petition to the queen, in the parliament then held, to be restored to the place and precedency of his ancestors, he was thereupon placed between the lord Willoughby, of Eresby, and the lord Berkeley. In 1601, 44th of Elizabeth, he was one of the peers on the trials of the earls of Essex and Southampton, February 19, in Westminster-hall; and when they were pronounced guilty, the earl of Essex, before he left the lords, asked pardon of the lord de la Warr, and the lord Morley, for bringing their sons into danger, who were unacquainted with the whole matter. He died on the March 24, in 44th of Elizabeth: and by Anne, his wife, daughter of Sir Francis Knolles, knight of the Garter, and treasurer of the household to queen Elizabeth, had issue four sons and seven daughters.

The former were,

1. Sir Thomas West, his successor.

2. Walsingham West, who died without issue.

3. Nathaniel West, who, by his wife Dorothy Greville, was father of Nathaniel West, seated at Borwich, in Lancashire. Which son married, first, Jane, daughter of — Adams, of London, esquire; and, secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of George Preston, of Holkar, in Lancashire; by the first of which he had issue two daughters, Rebecca and Cecilia.

4. Robert West, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry Cook, knight.

The daughters were,

1. Lettice, married to Henry Ludlow, of Tedley, Hants, esquire.

2. Penelope, married to Herbert Pelham, the elder, of Michalems, in Sussex.

3. Catherine, died unmarried.

4. Helena, married to William Savage, of Winchester, esquire.

5. Elizabeth, married to Herbert Pelham, the younger.

6. Elizabeth, married to Sir Richard Saltingstone.

7. Ann, married to John Pellett, esquire, son and heir of Sir Benjamin Pellett, of Bolne, in Sussex, knight.

The eldest son,

(Third Lord) THOMAS WEST, in the life-time of his father, was knighted in 42d of Elizabeth, and, on the death of the queen, was one of the twenty-five lords, privy-counsellors, who sent a letter, dated at the palace of Whitehall, March 8, A. D. 1603, to the lord Eure, and the rest of the commissioners, for the treaty of Breame; notifying to them the accession of king James to the throne, and ordering them to make the best conditions they could, in such points as they had in charge, with the imperial commissioners. In the first year of king James I. he was in commission with John, archbishop of Canterbury, Charles, earl earl of Nottingham, lord high admiral, Sir John Herbert, knight, principal secretary of state, and others, to enquire and call before them all such persons as shall advisedly maintain or affirm, any doctrine repugnant to any of the articles of religion, which concern the confession of the true christian faith, and the doctrine of the sacraments, as agreed on by the archbishops and bishops of both provinces, and the whole clergy, in convocation, in 1562.

In the seventh year of king James I. A. D. 1609, he was constituted captain-general of all the colonies, then planted, or to be planted, in Virginia; and went thither, the same year, with three ships, and one hundred and fifty men, most artificers. After his arrival, he ordered all things in the best manner; and, with his forces, marched up into divers parts of the country, with full purpose to make further discoveries, build new towns and forts, and bring the savages to obedience. He also built two new towns, giving them the names of Henry, and Charles, in honour of the two sons of king James; which are now the two chief towns in Virginia. He likewise sent captain Argal to discover the north parts of the West Indies. His great industry and extraordinary pains in providing for the settlement of that country, caused him an extreme sickness, which prevented many of his designs, and forced him to depart, in hopes of a cure; but at sea his sickness increased, which constrained him to bear up for the Azores islands, where he recovered some part of his strength; and, sailing from thence to England, again relapsed, and died in his voyage. The inquisition, taken after his decease, at Andover, in the county of Southampton, April 3, 17th of James I. recites, that, in 44th of Elizabeth, he married Cecilie, daughter of Sir Thomas Shirley, of Whisson, in Suffex, knight, and that he died, June 7, A. D. 1618, (Mr. Edmondson says, A. D. 1628) leaving Henry West, lord de la Warr, his son and heir, aged fourteen years, eight months, and four days, on the death of his father: also six daughters, Jane, Elizabeth, Anne, Cecilie, Lucy, and Catherine; whereof Anne was married to Christopher Swale, doctor in divinity, preceptor to Henry, prince of Wales, eldest son to king James I. and rector of Hurst-Pierpoint, in Suffex, above forty years, whence in 1645 he was ejected for his loyalty. Cecilie was the wife of Sir Thomas Binlows, knight, of Essex, and was married, secondly, to Sir John Byron, knight of the Bath, created lord Byron by king Charles I. And Lucy was wedded to Sir Robert Byron, brother of the said lord Byron.

(Fourth Lord.) HENRY WEST, was summoned to parliament as lord de la Warr, November 14, 19th of James I. He took to wife Isabella, eldest of the two daughters and coheirs of Sir Thomas Edmunds, knight, treasurer of the household to king Charles I. and several times ambassador in foreign courts. She was born at Brussels in November, A. D. 1607, and married in March, A. D. 1624-5; and by her his lordship had issue, Charles West, his successor.

Also two daughters,

1. Elizabeth, married to Francis Binlows, esq.

2. Mary, married to the reverend Mr. Orme.

By inquisition taken after his decease, June 15, 4th of Charles I. the jury found that he died on June 1, 4th of Charles I. seized of the hundred of

Wherwell, with the manors and lordships thereunto belonging; the manors of Middleton, Tarkinton, alias Tufton, Bollington, Goodworth, Clatforde, Little-Anne, and rectory of Goodworth, all in the county of Southampton: and that Charles, lord de la Warr, was his son and heir, and then aged two years and four months; of which,

(Fifth Lord.) CHARLES WEST, lord de la Warr, we find that he, with the earl of Warwick, were named by the lords, May 28, A. D. 1647, commissioners to go to the army, and assist in the disbanding of the foot regiments; but the general and the officers refused to submit thereto. On the rising of Sir George Booth, in order to the restoration of king Charles II. his lordship, with the earl of Oxford, and the lord Falkland, were apprehended, August 13, A. D. 1659, on suspicion of being assisting to him, and were sent to prison, as Whitlock recites, p. 683. He married Anne, daughter and heir of John Wild, of Droitwich, in Worcestershire, esquire, and serjeant at law; and by her, who died December 24, A. D. 1677, had issue,

1. Charles West, who married ———, daughter of ——— Hudleston, esquire; and, secondly, Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Sir Robert Pye, of Bradenham, in the county of Buckingham, baronet, but died without issue, June 22, A. D. 1684.

2. Horatio West, who also died in the life time of his father, at Barbadoes.

3. John West, successor to the honours.

Also three daughters,

1. Cecilie, married to Dr. William Beau, bishop of Llandaff.

2. Anna, } died unmarried.

3. Sophia, }

This Charles, lord de la Warr, departed this life, in the sixty-fifth year of his age, on Thursday December 22, A. D. 1687, (Mr. Edmondson says 1688,) and was succeeded by his only surviving son, (Sixth Lord.) JOHN WEST, who was in the reign of king William made first gentleman of the bedchamber, and groom of the stole to his royal highness prince George of Denmark. And, A. D. 1702, on a visit queen Anne paid to the university of Oxford, he was created doctor of laws. On September 25, A. D. 1708, he was sent by his royal highness to Portsmouth, to compliment the queen of Portugal, on her arrival in Great-Britain. He was also one of the commissioners for the management of his revenue, and greatly in his favour to the time of his death; and attended at his royal highness's funeral, as groom of the stole, alone. After which, on the decease of the lord Fitz-Harding, in 1712, he succeeded him as treasurer of the chamber to queen Anne. On the accession of George I. to the throne, his lordship on November 7, A. D. 1714, was constituted one of the tellers of the exchequer; and afterwards treasurer of the excise. And, departing this life on the twenty-sixth of May, A. D. 1723, was buried in St. Margaret's church, Westminster; leaving issue, by Margaret, his wife, daughter and heir of John Freeman, of the city of London, merchant, John, the late earl: and a daughter, Elizabeth, who, in August 1724, was married to Thomas Digges, of Chilham-castle, in the county

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and development. It begins with the first settlers who came to the continent in search of a new life. They found a land of vast resources and opportunities, but also one of many challenges. The early years were marked by conflict and struggle, as the settlers fought to establish their communities and defend their rights. Over time, the United States grew from a small collection of colonies into a powerful nation. It expanded its territory, developed its economy, and established a system of government that has inspired the world. The history of the United States is a testament to the power of the human spirit and the ability of a people to overcome adversity and build a better future.

The history of the United States continues to unfold. It is a story of progress and achievement, but also one of ongoing challenges and struggles. The United States has made significant contributions to the world, from the development of democracy to the advancement of science and technology. It has also faced many difficulties, from economic crises to social injustices. The future of the United States is uncertain, but it is also full of potential. The people of the United States have the power to shape their own destiny and create a better world for themselves and for future generations.

of Kent, esquire. The said Margaret, his lady, surviving him, died January 31, A. D. 1737-8, and was buried, on the sixth of February, in St. Margaret's church, Westminster. Which,

(First Earl.) JOHN WEST, born April 4, A. D. 1693, was, on his return from his travels, A. D. 1712, made, by queen Anne, standard-bearer to the band of gentlemen pensioners, and sworn in a clerk extraordinary of her majesty's privy-council: soon after the accession of his majesty king George I. he resigned the post of standard-bearer, and was made guidon to the first troop of life-guards, then commanded by John, duke of Montagu. He was appointed a lord of the bedchamber to the king, A. D. 1725; and the same year, May 24, was chosen a knight of the most honourable order of the Bath, on the revival of that honour, and installed in king Henry VIIIth's chapel, June 25. In 1731, his lordship was made treasurer of the household to his late majesty, and sworn of his privy-council. In 1736, he was sent to Saxe-Gotha, to conclude a treaty of marriage between her royal highness the princess Augusta, and his late royal highness Frederic prince of Wales, and attended her into England. In 1737, he was appointed governor and captain-general of New-York; but resigned the same in September following, on his being made captain and colonel of the first troop of life-guards. On February 26, A. D. 1741-2, he was promoted to the rank of brigadier-general, and in 1743, attended his late majesty in his campaign in Germany, and was with him at the battle of Dettingen. On the 5th of April, A. D. 1745, he was promoted to the rank of major-general, and on the tenth of October, A. D. 1747, to the rank of lieutenant-general. In 1747 he was made governor of Tilbury fort; and in 1752 appointed governor of the island of Guernsey. On the 18th of March, A. D. 1761, his lordship, by letters-patent, was raised to higher honours, being created viscount Cantalupe, and earl De la Warr.

His lordship married first in 1721, Charlotte, daughter of Donagh Macarty, earl of Clincarty, in Ireland, by Mary, second daughter to Robert Spencer, earl of Sunderland, by Anne, second daughter to George, earl of Bristol, and by this lady, who died in February, A. D. 1735, had issue two sons and two daughters, as hereafter will be observed.

He married, secondly, in June, A. D. 1744, Anne, daughter of Edward Thornicroft, and widow of George, lord Abergavenny; but by this lady, who died in July, A. D. 1748, had no issue.

The two sons by the first marriage were,

1. John West, called viscount Cantalupe.
2. George Augustus West, born August 9, 1734, who ranks as a colonel in the army, and is aid de camp to his majesty.

The three daughters were,

1. Charlotte, born September 2, A. D. 1725.

2. Henrietta Cecilia, born January 25, 1727, married to colonel James Johnstone.

3. Diana, born December 2, A. D. 1730, married November 9, A. D. 1736, to John Clavering, of Northumberland.

His lordship departed this life, March 16, 1766, and was succeeded in his honours and estate by his eldest son, (Second and present Earl.) JOHN WEST, born May 9, A. D. 1729. In 1763, he was appointed vice-chamberlain to the queen, which post he resigned upon the death of his father.

Taking to a military life, his lordship passed through the subordinate degrees, and at length, on the eighth of March, A. D. 1761, attained the rank of a major-general, and is now colonel of the first troop of horse guards.

On the eighth of August, A. D. 1756, he married Miss Mary Whynyard, by whom he has issue six sons.

1. William-Augustus West, called viscount Cantalupe, born April 24, A. D. 1757.

2. John-Richard West, born July 28, A. D. 1758.

3. Thomas-Holles West, born September 27, A. D. 1760.

4. George West, born December 31, A. D. 1762.

5. Augustus West, born January 5, 1764, who died an infant.

6. Septimus-Harry West, born November 11, A. D. 1765.

Also two daughters,

1. Frances, born September 24, A. D. 1759.

2. Charlotte, born December 13, A. D. 1761.

(TITLES.) John West, earl and baron De la Warr, and viscount Cantalupe.

(CREATIONS.) Baron De la Warr, originally by summons to parliament, June 8, A. D. 1294 (22d of Edward I.) by patent, February 5, A. D. 1570. Viscount Cantalupe and earl De la Warre, March 18, 1761, (1st of George III.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly: first and fourth pearl, a fess dancette diamond for West. Second and third ruby, a lion rampant between eight cross-crosslets, fitché pearl for De la Warr.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, topaz, a griffon's head, sapphire, ears and beak of the first.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side a wolf, cowed, pearl, his plain collar, topaz. On the sinister, a cockatrice of the second, his wings displayed, sapphire.

(MOTTO.) "Jour de ma vie."

(CHIEF SEAT.) Boldro-Lodge, Wherwell, Hants.

TALBOT, Earl TALBOT.

SIR GILBERT TALBOT, third son to John, second earl of Shrewsbury, as may be seen page 454, was, by his second wife, father of

Sir JOHN TALBOT, seated at Albrighton, ancestor to the present earl of Shrewsbury, by his first wife, and by his second, father of JOHN TALBOT, of Salwarp, in Worcestershire, who died December 9, A. D. 1572, and had issue by his wife Oliva, daughter and heir of Sir William Sherington, of Sherington, in Lancashire, three sons.

1. Sherington Talbot, of Salwarp, and Lacock.

2. John Talbot, of Badgworth, in Gloucestershire, who married Mary, daughter and heir of Thomas Trimnel, of Okeley, in Worcestershire, and by her, was father of John Talbot, of Okeley, who married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Gower, of Droitwich, in the said county.

3. Thomas Talbot, of Wormill, in the county of Salop, who married Magdalen, daughter of Sir Marmaduke Wyvill, of Constable-Burton, in Yorkshire, knight, and baronet, and had issue Robert Talbot, of Wormill, who had to wife Anne, daughter of William Sheldon, of Broadway, in the county of Wigorn; by whom he was father of three sons, Thomas Talbot, of Wormill, Gilbert, and George.

SHERINGTON TALBOT, before-mentioned, of Salwarp, and Lacock, died about the year, 1640, and by his first wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Leighton, of Feckingham, in the county of Wigorn, knight, governor of Guernsey, had issue six sons, whereof no issue male is remaining. Sir Gilbert Talbot, knight, one of the younger sons, was master of the jewel-office in the reign of king Charles the Second, but had no issue. And Sherington Talbot, the eldest, left only Sir John Talbot, of Lacock, who, by his wife Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir John Keyt, of Ebrington, in Gloucestershire, baronet, left no surviving issue male, but had three daughters; of whom Anne, the eldest, was married to Sir John Ivery, and had issue Ivery Talbot, of Lacock, in Wiltshire, esquire, who represented that county in parliament; and other children. Barbara, the second, was married to Henry, lord viscount Longvile, father by her, of Talbot, late earl of Suffex. And Gilberta was the youngest.

Having deduced the lineage of the said Sherington Talbot, by his first wife, we shall now treat of his descendants by his second wife Mary, daughter of John Wochborn, of Wichenford, in the county of Worcester, by whom he had issue four sons.

1. George Talbot, of Rudge, in the county of Salop; whose only daughter and heir, Catharine, was married to Sir Clement Clarke, of Lawnde-abbey, in the county of Leicester, baronet.

2. Edward Talbot, slain in the civil wars, on behalf of king Charles the First.

3. William Talbot, grandfather of the late lord Talbot.

4. Francis Talbot, fourth son, who died unmarried.

WILLIAM TALBOT, the third son, resided at Stourton-castle, in Staffordshire, and married Mary, daughter of Thomas Doughty, of Whittington, in the county of Wigorn, esquire, by whom he had issue William Talbot, bishop of Durham, and two daughters; Catharine, who had to her first husband Walter Littleton, of Litchfield, in the county of Stafford, esquire, and to her second, Lancelot Blackburn, archbishop of York, lord almoner to his majesty, and of his privy-council. Frances, the other daughter, was married to Samuel Jewkes, of Wolverley, in the county of Wigorn, esquire.

His only son,

WILLIAM TALBOT, was born at Stourton-castle, and having his education in Oriel college, in Oxford, took his degree of master of arts, June 23, A. D. (1680) 32 Car. II. He was nominated by king William to the deanery of Worcester, April 23, A. D. 1691, and on the 24th of September, A. D. 1699, was consecrated bishop of Oxon, with leave to hold his deanery in commendam; in which see he continued till the year 1715, when he was made bishop of Salisbury. He was also, on September 23, A. D. 1722, translated from thence to the bishopric of Durham, of which county he was lord-lieutenant, and custos rotularum. His lordship departed this life on the 10th of October, A. D. 1730, and by Catharine, his wife, daughter of — King, esquire, one of the aldermen of the city of London, had issue eight sons, and several daughters; of which, those who lived to maturity were,

1. Charles Talbot, created lord Talbot, baron of Hensol.

2. Edward Talbot, who died in 1720, archdeacon of Berkshire, having married Mary, daughter to the reverend Mr. Martin, by whom he left issue an only daughter, Catharine.

3. Sherington Talbot, captain of an independent company of foot, afterwards lieutenant-colonel of a regiment of foot, and on February 17, A. D. 1747, was appointed colonel of a regiment of foot, then abroad. He married —, daughter of of — Midget, who died September 6, A. D. 1749, and had issue two sons, William, and Charles.

4. Henry Talbot, one of the commissioners of the revenue arising by the duty on salt, who married first — daughter of — Lloyd, by whom he has issue a daughter named Elizabeth; and marrying secondly, Catharine, daughter of Sir Hugh Clopton, of Stratford upon Avon, in Warwickshire, knight, hath by her, who died May 17, A. D. 1734, no issue.

The daughters were,

1. Henrietta-Maria, married to Dr. Charles Trimnel, lord bishop of Winchester.

2. Catharine, married to Exton Sayer, L. L. D. chancellor of Durham, surveyor of his majesty's land revenues, and died member of parliament for Totneis in 1731; his lady survived him, and died in August, A. D. 1734. The said

(First Lord.) CHARLES TALBOT, was appointed solicitor-general to the prince of Wales (our late most gracious sovereign) May 31, A. D. 1717; and was chosen for Tregony, in Cornwall, in 1719, and in the two succeeding parliaments, elected one of the representatives of the city of Durham. On the 22d of April, A. D. 1726, he was made solicitor-general, in the room of Sir Clement Wearg, deceased; and on the 20th of November, A. D. 1733, his majesty in council delivered to him the great seal, and he was thereupon sworn of his majesty's most honourable privy-council, and likewise lord high chancellor of Great Britain. And his majesty was further pleased to create him a baron of Great Britain, by the name, style, and title of lord Talbot, baron of Hensol, in the county of Glamorgan, by letters patent, bearing date the 5th of December, (1733) 7 Geo. II. The year after, in August, A. D. 1734, he was chosen a governor of the Charter-house.

His lordship married Cecil, daughter and heir of Charles Matthews, of Castle-Menich, in the county of Glamorgan, esquire, great grand daughter and heir of David Jenkins, of Hensol, in the same county, esquire, one of the justices of South Wales, distinguished for his learning in his profession, and for his steady adherence to the cause of king Charles the First: she died in the year 1720, and by her he had issue five sons.

1. Charles-Richard Talbot, who died in 1733, aged 24 years.

2. William Talbot, now lord Talbot.

3. John Talbot, member for the town of Brecon in three parliaments, recorder of the said town, and second justice of Chester: in 1754, he was elected member of parliament for Ilchester: he married, in May 1737, first, Henrietta-Maria, second daughter of Sir Matthew Decker, of Richmond, baronet, who dying in September 1747, he married secondly, in August 1748, Miss Chetwynd, eldest daughter of William, viscount Chetwynd, in Ireland, by whom he had a son and heir, born June 19, A. D. 1752; and other children: in 1755, he was made a commissioner of trade, and died September 22, A. D. 1756.

4. Edward Talbot, who died an infant: and

5. George Talbot, a clergyman, who is clerk of the custodies of the lunatics in the high court of chancery for life. He married January 17, A. D. 1761, Anne, second daughter of Jacob Bouverie; viscount Folkestone.

His lordship departed this life, in the fifty-second year of his age, on Monday the 14th of February, A. D. 1736-7, at his house in Lincolns-Inn-Fields, and was buried at Barrington, in Gloucestershire. In his judicial capacity he shewed his great learning and knowledge of the laws, with an unbiassed integrity; and none, in his station, was ever more esteemed whilst living, or died more universally lamented. He behaved with the greatest honour in every act of life, being master of all those virtues that make a great and good man conspicuous.

His eldest surviving son,

(Present Earl.) WILLIAM TALBOT, was seated at Hensol, in Glamorganshire, in his father's lifetime, and was representative for that county in the parliament which first met on business, January 23, A. D. 1734-5. In February 1733-4, he married Mary, daughter and sole heir of Adam Cardonell, esquire, who was secretary to his grace John, duke of Marlborough, and who attended him in all his victorious campaigns; by whom he had one son, William, born November 5, A. D. 1739, who died young; and a daughter, Cecil, born in July 1735, married to — Rice, esquire.

His lordship was created earl Talbot, by letters patent bearing date March 10, A. D. 1761, (1 Geo. III.) and March 25, 1761, was appointed lord steward of his majesty's household.

(TITLES.) William Talbot, earl Talbot, and baron Talbot, of Hensol.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Talbot, of Hensol, in the county of Glamorgan, December 5, A. D. (1733) 7 Geo. II. And earl Talbot, March 10, A. D. 1761 (1 George III.)

(ARMS.) Ruby, a lion rampant, within a border engrailed, topaz, a crescent for difference.

(CREST.) On a chapeau, ruby, turned up ermine, a lion, topaz, his tail extended.

(SUPPORTERS.) On either side a talbot, pearl, collared, fleury counter fleury, ruby.

(MOTTO.) "Humani nihil alienum."

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Castle-Menich, and Hensol, in the county of Glamorgan; and Barrington, in the county of Gloucester.

HENLEY, Earl of NORTHINGTON.

GEORGE HENLEY, seated at Taunton, in Somersetshire, about the year 1570, was father to

ROBERT HENLEY, who was seated at Leigh, in the aforesaid county, for which, in the year 1612, he served the office of high sheriff. He married a lady of Exeter, named Anne Trubadie, and by her had issue two sons, Henry, and Andrew; the former married Susannah, daughter of Robert Bage, and had three sons, Robert, Henry, and John, and the latter, ANDREW HENLEY, became seated at Taunton. He married Dorothy, the daughter of Christopher Sandford, and had issue two sons and three daughters.

1. Joan, the wife of Brigg Fountain, esquire.
2. Margery, the wife of Richard Chickie, Esq;
3. Elizabeth.

The sons were,

1. Robert Henley, his successor.
2. George Henley, who traded as a merchant in the year 1634, and marrying Mary, daughter and coheir of William Price, had issue two sons, George and John, and two daughters, Elizabeth and Dorothy.

The eldest son,

SIR ROBERT HENLEY, knight, was twice married, by his first lady of the name of Rivet, he had one child; by his second, Ann, daughter of John Eldred, of Saxham, in the county of Suffolk, he had three sons and two daughters, Elizabeth and Hannah.

The sons were,

1. Andrew Henley, of whom hereafter.
2. John Henley.
3. Sir Robert Henley, ancestor to the earl of Northington.

SIR ANDREW HENLEY, was created a baronet on the 30th of June, A. D. 1660, and having married Mary, daughter of Sir John Gayer, knight, had issue two daughters, Catharine and Mary, the former of which became the wife of Carlton Whitlock, esquire, brother to Sir William Whitlock, knight, and two sons.

1. Robert Henley,
2. Andrew Henley,

The eldest son,

SIR ROBERT HENLEY, succeeded his father, but dying without issue, the honours of the family devolved upon his younger brother,

SIR ANDREW HENLEY, who by his wife of the name of Ball, daughter to a gentleman seated at Yately, in the county of Southampton, was father of,

SIR ROBERT HENLEY, who married a lady of the name of Bowles, but for want of issue at his decease, the title became extinct.

We now return to

SIR ROBERT HENLEY, knight, third son to Sir Robert Henley, knight, by his second wife, and youngest brother to the first baronet of this family. He married Barbara, daughter of Sir Edward Hungerford, and had issue a daughter, Williamfa, who married Sir Theodore Janßen, baronet, and a son and heir, ANTHONY HENLEY, who by Mary, daughter and coheir of Peregrine Bertie, second son of Montague Bertie, earl of Lindsey, was father of two sons.

1. Anthony Henley, who married Elizabeth, daughter of James, earl of Berkeley, but died without issue. His lady departed this life in 1745.
2. Robert Henley.

The youngest son,

(Present Earl.) ROBERT HENLEY, after having passed through Westminster school, was entered a member of the university of Oxford. He afterwards betook himself to the study of the law, and was called to the bar.

In 1751, he was chosen recorder of the city of Bath. On the 6th of November, A. D. 1756, he received the honour of knighthood, and was then constituted attorney-general. And the year following, on the 30th of June, he was appointed lord keeper of the great seal, and admitted of the privy-council.

By letters patent dated March 27, A. D. 1760, he was raised to the honour of a peerage, by the stile and title of baron Henley, of the Grange, in the county of Southampton; and in the following month, was constituted lord high steward for the trial of Laurence, earl Ferrers. On the 16th of January, A. D. 1761, he was appointed lord chancellor of Great Britain.

By letters patent dated May 19, A. D. 1764, his lordship was created an earl, by the stile and title of earl of Northington; and on August 21, next ensuing, was constituted lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Southampton, and of the town of Southampton and county thereof. In the following year, on the 16th of April, he was appointed lord high steward for the trial of William, lord Byron.

His lordship resigning the seals of this high and important office, was in 1766, appointed president of the council.

He

He married Jane, daughter and coheir of Sir John Huband, of Isley, in Warwickshire, and by her ladyship has had issue three sons.

1. Robert Henley, who died young.
 2. Robert Henley, commonly called lord Henley, who is one of the tellers of the exchequer.
 3. Henry Henley, who died young.
- Also five daughters.
1. Bridget, married to Robert Lane, esquire.
 2. Jane.
 3. Mary.
 4. Catharine,
 5. Elizabeth.

(TITLES.) Robert Henley, earl of Northington, and baron Henley, of the Grange.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Henley, of the Grange, in the county of Southampton, March 27, A. D.

1760, (34 Geo. II.) and earl of Northington, in the same county, May 19, A. D. 1764, (4 Geo. III.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth sapphire, a lion rampant, pearl, crowned with a ducal coronet, topaz, within a bordure, pearl charged with eight torteauxes. Second and third, three battering rams, the arms for Nertie.

(CREST.) A demi lion ducally crowned, and semeeed with torteauxes.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side a lion rampant ducally crowned; on the sinister, a stag, his horns, topaz, both semeeed with torteauxes.

(MOTTO) "Sola & unica virtus."

(CHIEF SEAT.) The Grange, (near Winchester) in the county of Southampton.

BOUVERIE, Earl of RADNOR.

THIS noble family is a younger branch of that of the same name, settled at the Chateau des Bouveries, near Lisse, in Flanders; the antiquity of which is not inferior to many in that country. The first we find in England was,

LAURENCE DE BOUVERIE, de la Bouverie, or des Bouveries, a younger son of le sieur des Bouveries. This gentleman came into England, A. D. 1567, and is said to have left his own country on account of his religion. This probably was the case; for settling at Canterbury, he there renounced the errors of the Romish church. The name of his first wife was Barbara; but whether she was an English woman, or came with him from Flanders, is uncertain. She dying on the twenty-first of October, A. D. 1594, he married, secondly, Catherine Pipelaft, but by her had no issue: by the former lady, he was father of five sons and three daughters; the latter were,

1. Lea, who married Peter la Fortery, of London.
2. Elizabeth, married Elias Mauroijs, A. D. 1594.
3. Jane, married Thomas de la Tompe, of London, A. D. 1604.

The sons were,

1. Edward Des Bouveries.
2. John Des Bouveries, whose only daughter and heir, Susannah, married Simon Cudart.
3. Jacob Des Bouveries, settled at Hilleghorn, in Holland; who married Catherine, the daughter of — Lethirullier, but had no issue.

4. Valentine Des Bouveries, } died unmarried.
5. Samuel Des Bouveries, }

The eldest son,

EDWARD DES BOUVERIES, died A. D. 1625. By his wife Mary, daughter of Jasper de Fornestraux, who departed this life on the twenty-seventh of September, 1631, he had issue three daughters:

1. Mary, the wife of Abraham de l'Eau, of London, merchant.
2. Elizabeth, married James Gough, of London, esquire.
3. Jane, married Nicholas Adye, of Downcourt, near Doddington, in Kent.

Also a son and heir,

Sir EDWARD DES BOUVERIES, born A. D. 1621. He received the honour of knighthood from king James II. and being deeply concerned in the Turkey trade, amassed a considerable fortune. He died at his seat at Cheshunt, in Hertfordshire, on the 2d of April A. D. 1694, having had a numerous issue by his wife Ann, daughter to Jacob de Fortery, of London, merchant.

The daughters were,

1. Jane, who married John de l'Eau, esquire, and died without issue.
2. Ann, married Sir Philip Boteler, of Teston, in Kent, baronet.

3. Mary, } died unmarried.
4. Elizabeth, }

The sons were,

1. William Des Bouveries.
2. Edward Des Bouveries, who died young at Caen, in France, on the tenth of December, A. D. 1673.
3. Jacob Des Bouveries, seated at Folkestone, in Kent, who died unmarried.

R r r

4. Peter

4. Peter Des Bouveries, born December 17, A. D. 1660, who died the twenty-fourth of January, A. D. 1682, unmarried.

5. Daniel Des Bouveries, born February 27, A. D. 1667, and died April 29, A. D. 1669.

6. John Des Bouveries, born August 3, A. D. 1669, who died August 16, A. D. 1699, unmarried.

7. Sir Christopher Des Bouveries, knight, born May 3, A. D. 1671, seated at Chart Sutton, in Kent. He died A. D. 1733. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Ralph Freeman, of Beechworth, in Surry, he had issue two sons, Freeman Bouverie, who died A. D. 1734, unmarried, and John Bouverie, who became successor to his brother, at Beechworth, &c. but died unmarried in his travels in Asia, A. D. 1750; also two daughters, Ann and Elizabeth, the former of which became the wife of John Harvey, of Beechworth, and died on April 1, A. D. 1757.

We return to the eldest of these seven sons,

Sir WILLIAM DES BOUVERIES, who was also an eminent Turkey merchant, and largely added to the fortune he inherited from his father. He was born on September 26, A. D. 1656. On February 19, A. D. 1713, he was created a baronet, and departing this life on May 19, A. D. 1717, was interred at St. Catherine Cree church, London.

He married first Mary, daughter of James Edwards, of London, esquire, and by her had issue a son, Edward, who died young.

He married secondly Ann, daughter and heir of David Urry, of London, esquire, and by this lady, who died June 5, A. D. 1739, and was buried with her husband, he had issue, besides several children who died young, four sons and two daughters: the latter were,

1. Jane, the wife of John Allen Puffey, of Puffey, in Berkshire, esquire. She died without issue, A. D. 1742, and was buried at Puffey.

2. Ann, died unmarried, A. D. 1761, and was buried at St. Catherine Cree church.

The sons were,

1. Edward Des Bouverie, successor to his father.

2. William Des Bouverie, who died November 29, A. D. 1707, unmarried.

3. Jacob Bouverie, father to the earl of Radnor.

4. Christopher Bouverie, who died August 29, A. D. 1719, unmarried.

The eldest son,

Sir EDWARD DES BOUVERIE, succeeded as baronet, A. D. 1717, and represented the town of Shaftsbury in several parliaments. He married Mary, daughter and coheir of John Smith, esq. She died A. D. 1721, and was buried at Britford, and surviving her, at length departed this life, A. D. 1736, and was interred at Britford, near Salisbury: for want of issue, the honours, &c. devolved upon his younger brother, (First Lord.) Sir JACOB BOUVERIE, who, by act of parliament, changed his name from Des Bouverie to Bouverie. He served in parliament for the city of Salisbury, of which he also was recorder.

On June 29, A. D. 1747, he was by letters patent raised to the upper house of parliament, and dignified with the titles of baron of Longford, in the county of Wilts, and viscount Folkestone, in Kent.

He married first Mary, daughter and heir of Bartholomew Clarke, of Hardingstone, in Northamptonshire, esquire, by Mary, sister and sole heir to Hitch Younge, esquire, of Roehampton, in Surry; which lady died on the sixteenth of November, A. D. 1739, and was buried at Britford: and he married, secondly, in April, A. D. 1741, Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Marham, lord Romney. By the latter lady he had issue two sons, Jacob and Philip; the former born June 4, A. D. 1742, and dying February 4, A. D. 1745, was buried at Britford; and the latter was born October 8, A. D. 1746.

His lordship's issue by his first lady were five sons and six daughters.

1. Mary, born April 29, A. D. 1726, but died the year following, and was buried at Wingham, in Kent.

2. Ann, born October 7, 1729, married to George Talbot, fifth son of William, lord Talbot, lord high chancellor of Great-Britain.

3. Mary, born October 2, A. D. 1730, married March 16, A. D. 1759, to Anthony Ashley Cooper, earl of Shaftesbury.

4. Harriet, born October 2, 1731, who died on December 13, following, and was buried at St. Catherine Cree church.

5. Charlotte.

6. Harriet.

The sons were,

1. William Bouverie, successor to his father.

2. Jacob Bouverie, born April 3, A. D. 1727, who died March 15, A. D. 1731, and was buried at St. Catherine Cree church.

3. Bartholomew Bouverie, born April 16, A. D. 1728, who died March 6, A. D. 1741, and had sepulture at Britford.

4. Edward Bouverie, born September 5, A. D. 1738, seated at Hardingstone and Delapre, in the county of Northampton. He married on June 30, A. D. 1764, Harriet, daughter of Sir Everard Fawkener, knight.

The eldest son,

(Present Earl.) William Bouverie, born February 26, A. D. 1725, represented the city of Salisbury in the last parliament; and, A. D. 1761, succeeded his father as viscount Folkestone, &c. in which same year he was elected recorder of New Sarum. By letters patent, bearing date September 25, A. D. 1765, he was created earl of Radnor, and baron Pleydel Bouverie of Colehill, in Berkshire, with remainder of the earldom, in failure of male issue, to the issue male of his father Jacob, viscount Folkestone.

He married first in January, A. D. 1747-8, Harriet, daughter and heir of Sir Mark Stewart Pleydell, of Colehill, in the county of Berks, baronet, by Mary, sole daughter and heir of Robert Stewart, of Ascog, in the isle of Bute, esquire; and by this lady, who died on the twenty-ninth of May, A. D. 1750, and was buried at Britford, he had issue one son,

Jacob Bouverie, born March 4, A. D. 17

He married secondly in September, A. D. 1751, Rebecca, daughter of John Alleyne, esquire, of the Four Hills, in Barbadoes, and by her ladyship, who died on May 4, 1764, and was buried at Britford, had issue, besides several children still-born, four sons and two daughters,

1. Mary-

1. Mary-Harriet, 2 twins, born June 20, 1755.
2. Harriet-Mary, } They died infants and were buried at Crawmerth, in Oxfordshire.

The sons were,

1. William-Henry Bouverie, born October 30, A. D. 1752.
2. Bartholomew Bouverie, born October 29, A. D. 1753.
3. Younge Bouverie, born April 16, A. D. 1759, died an infant, and was buried at St. James's, Westminster.
4. Edward Bouverie, born September 20, A. D. 1760.

His lordship married, thirdly, on the twenty-second of July, A. D. 1765, Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Hales, baronet, and widow of Anthony, lord Feverham, baron of Downton; and by her has a daughter Mary-Elizabeth, born May 25, A. D. 1766.

(TITLES.) William Bouverie, earl of Radnor, viscount Folkestone, baron of Longford, and baron Pleydell Bouverie, of Colehill, in the county of Berks, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, February 19, A. D. 1713-14, baron of Longford, in Wilts, and viscount Folkestone, in the county of Kent, June 29, A. D. 1747, (21st of George II.) earl of Radnor, and baron Pleydell Bouverie, of Colehill, Berks, September 25, A. D. 1765, (6th of George III.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly: first and fourth party per fess, topaz and pearl, an eagle displayed with two heads, diamond; second and third, ruby, a bend vair.

(CREST.) On a wreath a demi-eagle displayed, diamond beaked, and ducally gorged, topaz, on his breast a cross-crozier, pearl.

(MOTTO.) "Patria cara carior libertas."

(CHIEF-SEAT.) Longford in Wiltshire.

S P E N C E R, Earl S P E N C E R.

IN our account of his grace the duke of Marlborough's family, the reader will find a genealogical and historical account of the Spencers, ancestors to this noble lord in the male line. It remains that we give an account of the Churchills, the female line, especially as we shall thereby have an opportunity of doing honour to his lordship's great grandfather John, whom all nations concur in calling the great duke of Marlborough.

GITTO de LEON, of the noble family of Leon, in France, was living in Normandy, 1055, and had issue two sons.

1. Richard de Leon, lord of Montalban, ancestor to the present family of Leon, in France.

2. Wandril, lord of Courcil, from whom the family of Churchill is descended. This WANDRIL, lord of Courcil, married Isabella de Tuya, and by her had two sons.

1. Roger de Courcil.
2. Rouland de Courcil, ancestor to the Courcils of Poictou, from whence branched those of Normandy and Anjou.

The eldest son,

ROGER de COURCIL, accompanied William the Conqueror into England, and had in reward of his services, divers lands in the counties of Somerset, Dorset, and Devon, as appears from Doom-day Book, among which was the lordship of Churchill, in the county of Somerset, the place of his abode, and from which probably he took his surname, being written in old records Curichil, Cheuchil, Cherchile, &c. He married Gertrude, daughter to Sir Guy de Torbag, and had a son and heir,

JOHN de CHERCHILE, whose wife was Joan de Kilrington, and who bore to him,

SIR BARTHOLOMEW de CHERCHILE, who held the castle of Bristol for king Stephen. He married Agnes, daughter of Ralph Fitz Ralph, lord of Tiverton, and by her had,

PAGAN de CHERCHILE, whose son,

ROGER de CHERCHILE, had free warren in his lands in Cherchile, in the reign of Edward I. he was succeeded by his son, ELIAS de CHURCHELLE, whose wife was Dorothy, a daughter of the ancient family of Columbiere: by her he had three sons.

1. John Churchill, who married Joan, daughter and coheir to Roger Dawney, of Norton, and left only two daughters, his coheirs, Margaret, the wife of Andrew Hilberdon, of the county of Devon, and Agnes, married to Thomas Gifford, of Theuborough, in Cornwall, whereby the lordship of Churchill and other lands devolved upon them.

2. Giles Churchill, had the lordship of Yamp-ton and Lincham, in Devonshire, which estates by a female heir, descended to the family of Croker, ker, of the same county; so that William, the third son of Elias, was the chief heir male.

3. William Churchill. Which WILLIAM CHURCHILL, was seated at Rockbear, in Devonshire, and left issue GILES CHURCHILL, father of CHARLES CHURCHILL, who for his firm adherence to the house of York, was in great favour with king Edward IV. who advanced him to the marriage of Margaret, only daughter of Sir William Widvile, by whom he had

THOMAS CHURCHILL, esquire, whose wife was Grace, daughter and coheir to Thomas Tyle, of Tyle-house, in the county of Cornwall, and by her he had

WILLIAM CHURCHILL, who married Mary, eldest daughter to Richard Creuse, of Wicroft-castle, in the county of Devon, esquire, and by her had three sons.

1. Roger Churchill, of Catherston.
2. William Churchill, of Corton.
3. John Churchill, was seated at Murston, all in the county of Dorset.

The said

ROGER CHURCHILL, marrying Jane, relict of Nicholas Megg, and daughter to William Peverell, of Bradford, by her had

MATTHEW CHURCHILL, of Bradford, whose wife was Alice, daughter to James Gould, of Dorchester, and by her he had

JASPER CHURCHILL, of Bradford, who marrying Elizabeth, daughter to John Chaplet, of Herington, in the county of Dorset, had two sons,

1. John Churchill, his heir, and
2. Jasper Churchill, father of Sir John Churchill, an eminent council in the reign of king Charles II. who marrying Susan, daughter to Edmund Prideaux, esquire, by her left only four daughters, who were his coheirs.

JOHN CHURCHILL, eldest son and heir of Jasper, by Elizabeth Chaplet, was of the society of the Middle-Temple, where by his proficiency in the study of the laws, he made an addition to his estate, and was seated at Mintern, in the county of Dorset. He married Sarah, daughter and coheir of Sir Henry Winston, of Standiston, in the county of Gloucester, by Dionise, his wife, daughter and coheir of Sir Thomas Bond, knight, and by her was father of

Sir WINSTON CHURCHILL, born at Wotton Glanville, in the county of Dorset.

This gentleman had a liberal education at St. John's college, Oxford, and being in his notions a staunch royalist, he suffered greatly for his attachment to the royal family, between the years 1641, and 1660. In personal valour he was not an unworthy ancestor of his son, the great duke of Marlborough; and gave such proofs of his courage in one of the battles (in which he was wounded) fought in the time of the civil wars, under Charles I. that that prince gave him, as an augmentation to his arms, the cross of England in a canton. He seems early to have devoted himself to the study of the English history. He was author of a book in folio, entitled, Divi Britannici, which contains an account of our English monarchs, traced up from Charles II. even to fabulous antiquity. Though the author of this book seems not to have much studied the critical parts of history, or to have dipped deep into its evidences, yet he appears to have had great political talents. His manner of writing was then entirely new; but some of our greatest modern authors have since struck into the same walk of history. His reflections, when he is well founded as to the facts, are solid, and his expression often elegant and beautiful. His attachment to monarchy sometimes, indeed, warps him; but, upon the main, his performance, which may rather be called, Political reflections upon the history of England, than a history of England, is a very valuable one, and has been an excellent common place-book to succeeding writers; though they are but too often so ungrateful as not to mention their benefactor, and by this means, the book is almost unknown.

But Mr. Churchill was not destined to be renowned for authorship, but for being the father of John, duke of Marlborough, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Drake, of Ashe, in the parish of Musbury, in Devonshire. His eldest son was Winston, who died young; his second, was John, the English hero, born at Ashe, the 24th of July, A. D. 1650; the third, was George, born February the 20th, A. D. 1653; the fourth, was Charles, born A. D. 1656; the fifth, Montjoy, who died young; as did Jasper, the sixth; the seventh, Theobald, who was bred at Queen's college, Oxford; he took orders, and died unmarried. The daughters were, Arabella, born at Ashe, A. D. 1648. She was maid of honour to the dutchess of York, and afterwards favourite mistress to king James II. by whom she had two sons, James Fitz-James, duke of Berwick, and Henry Fitz-James, commonly called the grand prior; and two daughters, Henrietta, born A. D. 1670, and, in 1683, married to Sir Henry Waldegrave, created A. D. 1686, lord Waldegrave, of Chelton, whose son James, lord Waldegrave, born A. D. 1684, was created an earl, 1729. The other daughter was a nun. Arabella's three sisters, Dorothy, Mary, and Barbara, died in their infancy. Arabella was married afterwards to colonel Charles Godfrey, and by him had two daughters; Charlotta, wife of Hugh Boscawen, lord viscount Falmouth; and Elizabeth, wife of Edward Dunch, esquire. We shall now return to give a short account of the father and the sons. Mr. Churchill, the father, after the restoration, was chosen member for Weymouth, and had the honour of knighthood, after being admitted a fellow of the royal society, which was then in its infancy. His majesty, to give a more substantial proof of his regard for Sir Winston, appointed him to be a commissioner of the claims in Ireland, a place of profit, and afterwards, by the recommendation, it is said, of the duke of York, one of the clerks comptrollers of the green-cloth.

His third son, George, was bred to the sea-service. In the year 1689, he commanded a squadron, and, by his courage, he distinguished himself in the glorious victory obtained by the English over the French by sea, at La Hogue, in 1692, being then captain of the St. Andrew, a second rate. In 1699, he was made one of the commissioners of the admiralty, and he sat at that board till 1702, when the commission was dissolved, and the earl of Pembroke appointed lord high admiral. After that, he was made admiral of the blue, and one of the council to prince George; who, though he knew little or nothing of sea affairs,

was

was made lord high admiral of England. He was next preferred to be admiral of the white, and commanded in chief, while Sir George Rook was indisposed.

He was twenty years gentleman of the bed-chamber to prince George of Denmark, and served member of parliament for St. Albans, in every parliament from 1685, to the time of his death, excepting the last, when he served for Plymouth. When prince George died, finding his health decaying, he retired from business, and died unmarried, May 8, A. D. 1710. He was buried in the south isle of Westminster-abbey.

Charles, the fourth son of Sir Winston Churchill, rose in the land service. He was at the age of thirteen, made page of honour to Christian, king of Denmark; and, at sixteen, gentleman of the bed-chamber to his brother, prince George. After that, he entered into the army, and met with very quick preferments, being esteemed one of the best general officers of infantry in Europe. He was governor of Kinsale, in Ireland, and was made general of foot, and governor of the Tower, by queen Anne. He was greatly instrumental in gaining the battle of Blenheim, under his brother; and, after that, he was made governor of Brussels, colonel of the Coldstream regiment of guards, and governor of Guernsey. He married in 1702, the daughter and heiress of James Goulde, esquire, of Dorchester, and died December 29, 1714, in the fifty-eighth year of his age. We now return to John, the second son of Sir Winston Churchill.

JOHN, Duke of MARLBOROUGH.

He was very young when he was introduced to court, and served the duke of York as page of honour. Being remarkably handsome, of a fine address, and discovering an inclination for the army, the duke procured for him, from his brother, an ensign's commission in the guards, a body of troops then newly instituted. After that, he went to Tangier, then belonging to the English. Upon his return, he served under the duke of Monmouth, who gave him a captain's commission in his own regiment, in the six thousand English troops that were sent to assist the French king. Losing no opportunity of signalizing himself, the marshals de Turenne, and de Lorge, while he served in Alsatia, prognosticated his future greatness; and his conduct was so remarkably intrepid at the siege of Maestricht, the next year, that the French king himself, who was an eye-witness to it, thanked him for his services, at the head of his army, and assured him, that he would recommend him to his good brother, the king of Great Britain. This was a flattering circumstance for Mr. Churchill, who knew well how to improve every incident that could tend to his own promotion. His fame preceded his return to England, and the influence which his sister had upon the duke of York, joined with his own personal merits, raised him to the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the army, gentleman of the bed-chamber, and master of the robes to the duke of York. Notwithstanding what happened afterwards, it is certain, that to the day of his death, he had a very warm remembrance of that prince's favour, to which he owed his rise, and that he used to express himself with regard to his family, even after the king's death, in terms that one could not have expected to come from the hero of the whigs. The differences between the house of commons and the king, on the duke of York's account, are well known, and that his majesty was twice obliged to send his royal highness, as it were, into exile, to satisfy his people; once was to Scotland, when the Gloucester frigate, which carried him, was lost. It is said upon that occasion, that two Irish lords in the duke's retinue, after he was in the long-boat, guarded the sides of the ship till the duke called into the boat all that it could contain, excepting two. He desired the two noblemen to fill up those places; but they being too generous to save their own lives, after hindering others to save theirs, the duke ordered the boat to put off; but seeing colonel Churchill upon the deck, he returned and took him into the boat. Whatever may be in this circumstance, it is certain, the colonel attended his royal highness both in Scotland, and in Flanders, during his banishment; and upon the duke's return from the first-mentioned country, he was, on December 21, A. D. 1682, created baron Churchill of Aymouth, in the kingdom of Scotland. He had the year before married Mrs. Sarah Jennings, the favourite of queen Anne; and in her sphere, as extraordinary a woman, as her husband was in his. This lady was daughter and coheir (with her sister, the countess of Tyrconnel) of Richard Jennings, of Sandridge, in Hertfordshire, esquire, by his wife, Frances, daughter and heiress of Sir Gifford Thornhurst, of Agnes-court, in Kent, baronet, was born on the twenty-ninth of May, A. D. 1660, the day of king Charles's restoration. She was, at the time of her marriage, the favourite of the princess of Denmark, whose affection she entirely possessed, and who then had no near prospect of succeeding to the crown. It was her genius, and the ascendant which, from childhood to the four last years of the life of that princess, she continued to have over her mind, that raised and crowned her husband's glorious fortune. At the same time that Churchill was created a lord, he was made captain of the third troop of guards; and upon the accession of king James to the crown, he was made lieutenant-general, and one of the gentlemen of the bed-chamber, and sent ambassador to France, to notify that prince's accession to the throne. On the 14th of May, A. D. 1685, he was created a peer of England, by the title of baron Churchill, of Sandridge, in Hertfordshire.

It appears by the best histories of that time, that lord Churchill merited his rapid promotions by a sincere and faithful attachment to his master's service. Upon the ill-concerted invasion of the duke of Monmouth, and the insurrection that followed in his favour, the lord Churchill, as lieutenant-general, commanded the first body of troops sent against the rebels; and by his valour and conduct, he contributed greatly to their defeat at Sedgmore. After this, king James thought himself so secure in the possession of sovereign power, that he observed no farther terms with his protestant subjects; and it was visible, that without a deliverer, the nation must return to popery, and consequently become a province to the see of Rome, or be deluged with civil blood. The frantic conduct of king James, who outwent even ker, of the same county; so that William, the third son of Elias, was the chief heir male.

3. William Churchill. Which

WILLIAM CHURCHILL, was seated at Rock-bear, in Devonshire, and left issue

GILES CHURCHILL, father of

CHARLES CHURCHILL, who for his firm adherence to the house of York, was in great favour with king Edward IV. who advanced him to the marriage of Margaret, only daughter of Sir William Widvile, by whom he had

THOMAS CHURCHILL, esquire, whose wife was Grace, daughter and coheir to Thomas Tyle, of Tyle-house, in the county of Cornwall, and by her he had

WILLIAM CHURCHILL, who married Mary, eldest daughter to Richard Creuse, of Wicroft-castle, in the county of Devon, esquire, and by her had three sons.

1. Roger Churchill, of Catherston.
2. William Churchill, of Corton.
3. John Churchill, was seated at Murston, all in the county of Dorset.

The said

ROGER CHURCHILL, marrying Jane, relict of Nicholas Megg, and daughter to William Peverell, of Bradford, by her had

MATTHEW CHURCHILL, of Bradford, whose wife was Alice, daughter to James Gould, of Dorchester, and by her he had

JASPER CHURCHILL, of Bradford, who marrying Elizabeth, daughter to John Chaplet, of Herringston, in the county of Dorset, had two sons,

1. John Churchill, his heir, and
2. Jasper Churchill, father of Sir John Churchill, an eminent council in the reign of king Charles II. who marrying Susan, daughter to Edmund Prideaux, esquire, by her left only four daughters, who were his coheirs.

JOHN CHURCHILL, eldest son and heir of Jasper, by Elizabeth Chaplet, was of the society of the Middle-Temple, where by his proficiency in the study of the laws, he made an addition to his estate, and was seated at Mintern, in the county of Dorset. He married Sarah, daughter and coheir of Sir Henry Winston, of Standiston, in the county of Gloucester, by Dionise, his wife, daughter and coheir of Sir Thomas Bond, knight, and by her was father of

Sir WINSTON CHURCHILL, born at Wotton Glanville, in the county of Dorset.

This gentleman had a liberal education at St. John's college, Oxford, and being in his notions a staunch royalist, he suffered greatly for his attachment to the royal family, between the years 1641, and 1660. In personal valour he was not an unworthy ancestor of his son, the great duke of Marlborough; and gave such proofs of his courage in one of the battles (in which he was wounded) fought in the time of the civil wars, under Charles I. that that prince gave him, as an augmentation to his arms, the cross of England in a canton. He seems early to have devoted himself to the study of the English history. He was author of a book in folio, entitled, Divi Britannici, which contains an account of our English monarchs, traced up from Charles II. even to fabulous antiquity. Though the author of this book seems not to have much studied the critical parts of history, or to have dipped deep into its evidences, yet he appears to have had great political talents. His manner of writing was then entirely new; but some of our greatest modern authors have since struck into the same walk of history. His reflections, when he is well founded as to the facts, are solid, and his expression often elegant and beautiful. His attachment to monarchy sometimes, indeed, warps him; but, upon the main, his performance, which may rather be called, Political reflections upon the history of England, than a history of England, is a very valuable one, and has been an excellent common place-book to succeeding writers; though they are but too often so ungrateful as not to mention their benefactor, and by this means, the book is almost unknown.

But Mr. Churchill was not destined to be renowned for authorship, but for being the father of John, duke of Marlborough, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Drake, of Ashe, in the parish of Musbury, in Devonshire. His eldest son was Winston, who died young; his second, was John, the English hero, born at Ashe, the 24th of July, A. D. 1650; the third, was George, born February the 20th, A. D. 1653; the fourth, was Charles, born A. D. 1656; the fifth, Montjoy, who died young; as did Jasper, the sixth; the seventh, Theobald, who was bred at Queen's college, Oxford; he took orders, and died unmarried. The daughters were, Arabella, born at Ashe, A. D. 1648. She was maid of honour to the dutchess of York, and afterwards favourite mistress to king James II. by whom she had two sons, James Fitz-James, duke of Berwick, and Henry Fitz-James, commonly called the grand prior; and two daughters, Henrietta, born A. D. 1670, and, in 1683, married to Sir Henry Waldegrave, created A. D. 1686, lord Waldegrave, of Chelton, whose son James, lord Waldegrave, born A. D. 1684, was created an earl, 1729. The other daughter was a nun. Arabella's three sisters, Dorothy, Mary, and Barbara, died in their infancy. Arabella was married afterwards to colonel Charles Godfrey, and by him had two daughters; Charlotta, wife of Hugh Boscawen, lord viscount Falmouth; and Elizabeth, wife of Edward Dunch, esquire. We shall now return to give a short account of the father and the sons. Mr. Churchill, the father, after the restoration, was chosen member for Weymouth, and had the honour of knighthood, after being admitted a fellow of the royal society, which was then in its infancy. His majesty, to give a more substantial proof of his regard for Sir Winston, appointed him to be a commissioner of the claims in Ireland, a place of profit, and afterwards, by the recommendation, it is said, of the duke of York, one of the clerks comptrollers of the green-cloth.

His third son, George, was bred to the sea-service. In the year 1689, he commanded a squadron, and, by his courage, he distinguished himself in the glorious victory obtained by the English over the French by sea, at La Hogue, in 1692, being then captain of the St. Andrew, a second rate. In 1699, he was made one of the commissioners of the admiralty, and he sat at that board till 1702, when the commission was dissolved, and the earl of Pembroke appointed lord high admiral. After that, he was made admiral of the blue, and one of the council to prince George; who, though he knew little or nothing of sea affairs,

was

was made lord high admiral of England. He was next preferred to be admiral of the white, and commanded in chief, while Sir George Rook was indisposed.

He was twenty years gentleman of the bed-chamber to prince George of Denmark, and served member of parliament for St. Albans, in every parliament from 1685, to the time of his death, excepting the last, when he served for Plymouth. When prince George died, finding his health decaying, he retired from business, and died unmarried, May 8, A. D. 1710. He was buried in the south isle of Westminster-abbey.

Charles, the fourth son of Sir Winston Churchill, rose in the land service. He was at the age of thirteen, made page of honour to Christian, king of Denmark; and, at sixteen, gentleman of the bed-chamber to his brother, prince George. After that, he entered into the army, and met with very quick preferments, being esteemed one of the best general officers of infantry in Europe. He was governor of Kinsale, in Ireland, and was made general of foot, and governor of the Tower, by queen Anne. He was greatly instrumental in gaining the battle of Blenheim, under his brother; and, after that, he was made governor of Brussels, colonel of the Coldstream regiment of guards, and governor of Guernsey. He married in 1702, the daughter and heiress of James Goulde, esquire, of Dorchester, and died December 29, 1714, in the fifty-eighth year of his age. We now return to John, the second son of Sir Winston Churchill.

JOHN, Duke of MARLBOROUGH.

He was very young when he was introduced to court, and served the duke of York as page of honour. Being remarkably handsome, of a fine address, and discovering an inclination for the army, the duke procured for him, from his brother, an ensign's commission in the guards, a body of troops then newly instituted. After that, he went to Tangier, then belonging to the English. Upon his return, he served under the duke of Monmouth, who gave him a captain's commission in his own regiment, in the six thousand English troops that were sent to assist the French king. Losing no opportunity of signalizing himself, the marshals de Turenne, and de Lorge, while he served in Alsatia, prognosticated his future greatness; and his conduct was so remarkably intrepid at the siege of Maestricht, the next year, that the French king himself, who was an eye-witness to it, thanked him for his services, at the head of his army, and assured him, that he would recommend him to his good brother, the king of Great Britain. This was a flattering circumstance for Mr. Churchill, who knew well how to improve every incident that could tend to his own promotion. His fame preceded his return to England, and the influence which his sister had upon the duke of York, joined with his own personal merits, raised him to the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the army, gentleman of the bed-chamber, and master of the robes to the duke of York. Notwithstanding what happened afterwards, it is certain, that to the day of his death, he had a very warm remembrance of that prince's favour, to which he owed his rise, and that he used to express himself with regard to his family, even after the king's death, in terms that one could not have expected to come from the hero of the whigs. The differences between the house of commons and the king, on the duke of York's account, are well known, and that his majesty was twice obliged to send his royal highness, as it were, into exile, to satisfy his people; once was to Scotland, when the Gloucester frigate, which carried him, was lost. It is said upon that occasion, that two Irish lords in the duke's retinue, after he was in the long-boat, guarded the sides of the ship till the duke called in to the boat all that it could contain, excepting two. He desired the two noblemen to fill up those places; but they being too generous to save their own lives, after hindering others to save theirs, the duke ordered the boat to put off; but seeing colonel Churchill upon the deck, he returned and took him into the boat. Whatever may be in this circumstance, it is certain, the colonel attended his royal highness both in Scotland, and in Flanders, during his banishment; and upon the duke's return from the first-mentioned country, he was, on December 21, A. D. 1682, created baron Churchill of Aymouth, in the kingdom of Scotland. He had the year before married Mrs. Sarah Jennings, the favourite of queen Anne; and in her sphere, as extraordinary a woman, as her husband was in his. This lady was daughter and coheir (with her sister, the countess of Tyrconnel) of Richard Jennings, of Sandridge, in Hertfordshire, esquire, by his wife, Frances, daughter and heiress of Sir Gifford Thornhurst, of Agnes-court, in Kent, baronet, was born on the twenty-ninth of May, A. D. 1660, the day of king Charles's restoration. She was, at the time of her marriage, the favourite of the princess of Denmark, whose affection she entirely possessed, and who then had no near prospect of succeeding to the crown. It was her genius, and the ascendant which, from childhood to the four last years of the life of that princess, she continued to have over her mind, that raised and crowned her husband's glorious fortune. At the same time that Churchill was created a lord, he was made captain of the third troop of guards; and upon the accession of king James to the crown, he was made lieutenant-general, and one of the gentlemen of the bed-chamber, and sent ambassador to France, to notify that prince's accession to the throne. On the 14th of May, A. D. 1685, he was created a peer of England, by the title of baron Churchill, of Sandridge, in Hertfordshire.

It appears by the best histories of that time, that lord Churchill merited his rapid promotions by a sincere and faithful attachment to his master's service. Upon the ill-concerted invasion of the duke of Monmouth, and the insurrection that followed in his favour, the lord Churchill, as lieutenant-general, commanded the first body of troops sent against the rebels; and by his valour and conduct, he contributed greatly to their defeat at Sedgmore. After this, king James thought himself so secure in the possession of sovereign power, that he observed no farther terms with his protestant subjects; and it was visible, that without a deliverer, the nation must return to popery, and consequently become a province to the see of Rome, or be deluged with civil blood. The frantic conduct of king James, who outwent even the court of Rome in his zeal to bring the nation back to popery, confirmed this conviction every day more and more. The lord Churchill, therefore, upon the whole, resolved, in concert with others, to postpone his personal services to his public obligations, and to prefer the service of his country to that of his prince. It is probable, that he had a private correspondence with the prince of Orange, before, or soon after, he landed, and it is well known that he left king James to join him; but that he wrote a letter to his old master, justifying his conduct upon principle and conscience. When the crown was given to the prince of Orange, he not only confirmed to the lord Churchill his rank in the army, and his post in the bed-chamber, but on the 9th of April, A. D. 1689, he created him earl of Marlborough. We shall leave to our general histories the narrative of his conduct, when he commanded the English forces that served that year in Flanders, under prince Waldeck, and which was every way unexceptionable. Next year, he was sent to Ireland, to repair some unfortunate operations that had been made there, and he reduced the towns of Cork and Kinsale with incredible expedition. By the reduction of those two places, no supplies could be sent from France to Ireland. The whole was performed in thirty-seven days, and the earl returning to England, waited the 28th of October upon his majesty, who was heard to say, speaking of the earl of Marlborough, "that he knew no man so fit for a general, who had seen so few campaigns." Next year, A. D. 1691, the earl of Marlborough was sent by his majesty to Flanders, to prepare every thing against his arrival there in person, and served under him during the campaign there; but though he was one of those particularly excepted from pardon, in all the manifestoes sent over by king James, yet, in the year 1692, upon a surmise of an insurrection in England, he was apprehended by a warrant from the privy-council, and, with the earl of Huntingdon, sent prisoner to the Tower of London. The reason of this reverse of fortune and mysterious commitment, has never been fully understood. It was most probably owing to the discovery of some correspondence between the countess of Marlborough and her relations, who were thought to be in the Jacobite interest, and which was apprehended to be countenanced by his lordship. His disgrace had been for some time resolved upon. He had the honesty to expostulate with king William himself, upon his partiality to his foreign favourites, upon which, his majesty turned his back upon him without speaking a word. Both those causes might operate to his disgrace, and the rather as it was known at this time, that the princess of Denmark had, at the instigation of the countess of Marlborough, given leave to her friends to move in parliament for a settlement, independent of the king. The earl and his countess, and indeed the princess of Denmark, upon her account, were in disgrace with queen Mary, at the time of her death; but though, after that, king William did not immediately employ the earl of Marlborough, he was so well acquainted with his merit, and at last so well convinced of his innocence, that, in the year 1698, when the duke of Gloucester's household was settling, the king named his lordship for that young prince's governor; and when he delivered him into his hands, he made the earl this memorable compliment, "My lord, teach him to be what you are, and my nephew cannot want accomplishments." After this, during the king's absence in Holland, he was three several times appointed one of the lords justices of the kingdom; and, in June, A. D. 1701, he was declared commander in chief of the English forces in Holland, and ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary for the negotiations at the Hague. Upon the accession of queen Anne, he was continued in all those high posts, and it was now easily foreseen that he must arrive at the pitch of greatness he afterwards attained to. Five days after her majesty's accession, she made him a knight of the Garter; the next day, she declared him captain-general of all her forces at home and abroad; and he was, in a few days after sent to Holland, as her ambassador and plenipotentiary, to give the states the fullest assurances, that she was resolved to fulfil all the measures and engagements into which the late king had entered with them. The earl performed his commission with such solidity, in a speech of great weight and energy, that it operated upon their high mightinesses far beyond all the powers of eloquence; and when it was printed, it gave vast spirits to all the princes and states engaged in the confederacy. The subsequent events of that glorious war are engraved upon the monumental pillar at Blenheim, and these summed up in so masterly a manner, that, though already printed, this work would be imperfect, if that famous inscription was not introduced in this place. It is as follows:

"The castle of Blenheim was founded by queen Anne, in the fourth year of her reign; in the year of the christian æra, A. D. 1705: a monument designed to perpetuate the memory of the signal victory obtained over the French and Bavarians, near the village of Blenheim, on the banks of the Danube, by John, duke of Marlborough, the hero, not only of his nation, but his age, whose glory was equal in the council and in the field; who, by wisdom, justice, candour, and address, reconciled various, and even opposite interests, acquired an influence, which no rank, no authority, can give, nor any force but that of superior virtue. Became the fixed important center, which united in one common cause, the principal states of Europe, who, by military knowledge, and irresistible valour, in a long series of uninterrupted triumphs, broke the power of France, when raised to the highest, when exerted the most, rescued the empire from desolation, asserted, and confirmed the liberties of Europe.

"Philip, a grandson of the house of France, united to the interests, directed by the policy, supported by the arms of that crown, was placed on the throne of Spain. King William III. beheld this formidable union of two great, and once rival, monarchies. At the end of a life spent in defending the liberties of Europe, he saw them in their greatest danger. He provided for their security in the most effectual manner. He took the duke of Marlborough into his service, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the states-general of the United Provinces.

"The duke contracted several alliances before the death of king William. He confirmed and improved these. He contracted others, after the accession accession of queen Anne, and re-united the confederacy, which had been dissolved at the end of a former war, in a stricter, and a firmer league.

" Captain general and commander in chief of the forces of Great-Britain, the duke led to the field the army of the allies. He took, with surprising rapidity, Venlo, Ruremonde, Steenswaert, and Liege. He extended and secured the frontiers of the Dutch. The enemies whom he found insulting at the gates of Nimeghen, were driven to seek for shelter behind their lines. He forced Bonne, Huy, Limbourg, in another campaign. He opened the communication of the Rhine, as well as the Maes; he added all the country between these rivers to his former conquest. The arms of France, favoured by the defection of the elector of Bavaria, had penetrated into the heart of the empire. This mighty body lay exposed to immediate ruin. In that memorable crisis, the duke of Marlborough led his troops with unexampled celerity, secrecy, and order, from the ocean to the Danube. He saw; he attacked, nor stopped, but to conquer the enemy. He forced the Bavarians, sustained by the French, in their strong intrenchments, at Schellenberg. He passed the Danube. A second royal army, composed of the best troops of France, was sent to reinforce the first; that of the confederates was divided; with one part of it the siege of Ingolstadt was carried on; with the other, the duke gave battle to the united strength of France and Bavaria. On the second day of August, A. D. 1704, he gained a more glorious victory than the histories of any age can boast. The heaps of slain were dreadful proofs of his valour. A marshal of France, whole legions of French, his prisoners, proclaimed his mercy. Bavaria was subdued; Ratisbon, Augsbourg, Ulm, Memmingen, all the usurpations of the enemy, were recovered. The liberty of the diet, the peace of the empire, were restored. From the Danube, the duke turned his victorious arms towards the Rhine, and the Moselle, Landau, Treves, and Trarbach, were taken. In the course of one campaign, the very nature of the war was changed. The invaders of other states were reduced to defend their own. The frontier of France was exposed in its weakest part to the efforts of the allies.

" That he might improve this advantage, that he might push the sum of things to a speedy decision, the duke of Marlborough led his troops, early in the following year, once more to the Moselle. They, whom he had saved a few months before, neglected to second him now. They who might have been his companions in conquest, refused to join him. When he saw the generous designs he had formed, frustrated by private interest, by pique, by jealousy, he returned with speed to the Main. He returned, and fortune and victory returned with him. Leige was relieved; Huy retaken; the French, who had pressed this army of the states-general with superior numbers, retired behind intrenchments, which they deemed impregnable. The duke forced these intrenchments with inconsiderable loss, on the seventh day of July, A. D. 1705. He defeated a great part of the army which defended them. The rest escaped by a precipitate retreat. If advantages proportionable to this success were not immediately obtained, let the failure be ascribed to that misfortune, which attends most confederacies; a division of opinions, where one alone should judge, a division of powers, where one alone should command. The disappointment itself did honour to the duke. It became the wonder of mankind, how he could do so much under those restraints, which had hindered him from doing more.

" Powers more absolute were given him afterwards. The increase of his powers multiplied his victories. At the opening of the next campaign, when all his army was not yet assembled; when it was hardly known that he had taken the field, the noise of his triumphs was heard over Europe. On the twelfth of May, A. D. 1706, he attacked the French at Ramillies. In the space of two hours their whole army was put to flight. The vigour and conduct with which he improved this success, were equal to those, with which he gained it. Louvain, Brussels, Malines, Liere, Ghent, Oudenarde, Antwerp, Damme, Bruges, Courtray, surrendered; Ostend, Menin, Dendermond, Aeth, were taken; Brabant and Flanders were recovered; places which had resisted the greatest generals for months, for years; provinces, disputed for ages, were the conquests of a summer. Nor was the duke content to triumph alone; solicitous for the general interest, his care extended to the remotest scenes of war. He chose to lessen his own army, that he might enable the leaders of other armies to conquer. To this it must be ascribed that Turin was relieved; the duke of Savoy re-united; the French driven with confusion out of Italy.

" These victories gave the confederates an opportunity of carrying the war on every side, into the dominions of France; but she continued to enjoy a kind of peaceful neutrality in Germany. From Italy she was once alarmed, and had no more to fear. The entire reduction of this power, whose ambition had caused, whose strength supported the war, seemed reserved for him alone, who had so triumphantly begun the glorious work.

" The barrier of France, on the side of the Low-Countries, had been forming for more than half a century. What art, power, expence could do, had been done to render it impenetrable; yet here she was most exposed; for here the duke of Marlborough threatened to attack her.

" To cover what they had gained by surprise, or had been yielded to them by treachery, the French marched to the banks of the Schelde. At their head were the princes of the blood, and their most fortunate general, the duke of Vendôme. Thus commanded, thus posted, they hoped to check the victor in his course. Vain were their hopes; the duke of Marlborough passed the river in the night. He defeated their whole army. The approach of night concealed; the proximity of Ghent favoured their flight. They neglected nothing to repair their loss, to defend their frontier. New generals, new armies appeared in the Netherlands. All contributed to enhance the glory; none were able to retard the progress of the confederate armies.

" Lille, the bulwark of this barrier, was besieged. A numerous garrison, and a marshal of France defended the place. Prince Eugene of Savoy commanded; the duke of Marlborough covered covered and sustained the siege. The rivers were seized, and the communication with Holland interrupted. The duke opened new communications, with great labour, and much greater art. Through countries over-run by the enemy, the necessary convoys arrived in safety. One alone was attacked. The troops which attacked it were beat. The defence of Lille was animated by assurances of relief. The French assembled all their force. They marched towards the town. The duke of Marlborough offered them battle, without suspending the siege. They abandoned the enterprize. They came to save the town. They were spectators of its fall.

"From this conquest, the duke hastened to others. The posts taken by the enemy on the Schelde, were surprized. That river was passed a second time; and, notwithstanding the great preparations made to prevent it, without opposition.

"Brussels, besieged by the elector of Bavaria, was relieved. Ghent surrendered to the duke in the middle of a winter remarkably severe. An army, little inferior to his own, marched out of the place.

"As soon as the season of the year permitted him to open another campaign, the duke besieged, and took Tournay. He invested Mons. Near this city the French army, covered by thick woods, defended by triple intrenchments, waited to molest, nor presumed to offer battle. Even this was not attempted by them with impunity. On the last day of August, A. D. 1709, the duke attacked them in their camp. All was employed, nothing availed against the resolution of such a general, against the fury of such troops. The battle was bloody. The event decisive. The woods pierced. The fortifications trampled down. The enemy fled. The town was taken. Doway, Bethune, Aire, St. Venant, Bouchain, underwent the same fate, in two succeeding years. Their vigorous resistance could not save them. It seemed preserved to defend the capital of the monarchy.

"The prospect of this extreme distress, was neither distant nor dubious. The French acknowledged their conqueror, and sued for peace.

"These are the actions of the duke of Marlborough, performed in the compass of a few years; sufficient to adorn the annals of ages. The admiration of other nations will be conveyed to latest posterity, in the histories even of the enemies of Britain. The sense which the British nation had of his transcendent merit, was expressed in the most solemn, most effectual, most durable manner. The acts of parliament inscribed on this pillar shall stand, as long as the British name and language last, illustrious monuments of Marlborough's glory, and of Britain's gratitude."

We shall now resume the personal history of this great man. On the 13th of March, A. D. 1702-3, he was installed a knight of the most noble order of the Garter, by his proxy Sir Benjamin Bathurst, knight, having been, on the 14th of December preceding, created duke of Marlborough and marquis of Blandford; at which time was conferred upon him a grant for life, of five thousand pounds per annum out of the revenue of the post-office. After his victory at Blenheim, the commons addressed the queen to perpetuate his memory; whereupon her majesty granted him the interest of the crown in the honour and manor of Woodstock, and hundred of Wotton, to him and his heirs for ever; and accordingly a bill having passed both houses, her majesty gave her royal assent to it March 14, A. D. 1704-5, whereby the said honour and manor of Woodstock, and hundred of Wotton, were vested in his grace, and his heirs, rendering to the queen, her heirs and successors, on the 2d day of August, in every year for ever, at the castle of Windsor, one standard or colours, with three fleur de lices painted thereon, for all manner of rents, services, &c.

For this action, glorious in its success, and much more glorious in its consequences, his grace received congratulatory letters from most of the potentates in Europe, and in particular from the states-general, and from the emperor, who desired his grace to accept of the title and dignity of a prince of the empire, which, with the queen's leave, was conferred upon him, by the title of prince of Mindelheim, in the province of Swabia. His imperial majesty also caused a pillar to be set up at Hochstet, to perpetuate the memory of the victory, which concludes,

Exercitui Victori cum Immortali Gloria

Imperavit

Johannes Dux de Marlborough

A N G L U S.

On the 17th of December, A. D. 1706, the house of peers (in consideration of the many great actions performed by his grace, in her majesty's service, to the honour of his country, and for the good of the common cause of Europe) addressed her majesty, and obtained her leave for bringing in a bill for settling the honours and dignities of the said duke upon his posterity, and annexing the honour and manor of Woodstock, with the hundred of Wotton, and house of Blenheim, to go with the said honours. Whereupon her majesty was pleased to consent, that a bill should be brought in, "That after the determination of the estate, which the duke had then in his titles and honours, the same should be limited to his eldest daughter, and the heirs male of her body; and then to all his other daughters successively, according to their priority of birth, and the heirs male of their respective bodies, and that the honour and manor of Woodstock, and the house of Blenheim, after the duchess of Marlborough's death (upon whom they are settled in jointure) should go with the title." Which bill passing both lords and commons, it received the royal assent on December 21, A. D. 1706. And soon after, the five thousand pounds per annum, out of the revenue of the post-office, which her majesty had some time before granted to the said duke, for term of his life, upon creating him to that dignity, was, in further consideration of his services, entailed, by a subsequent act of parliament, passed the 28th of January following, on his posterity, to descend in like manner as the honour and manor of Woodstock, &c.

It is pretty certain, that when queen Anne mounted the throne, he was so far from distinguishing himself in the whig party, that he was looked upon to be a tory; and that the sufferings

he met with from king William, were to be placed to that account. The whigs, on the other hand, knew the aversion which king James and the Jacobites had for him, and what king William's sentiments were of his merits. They were sensible, at the same time, that he was formed to shine at the head of armies, which he could not do if he attached himself to the Tories. They therefore were so far from obstructing, that they promoted his preferment to the head of the army. He had leisure there, by his merit and successes, to secure himself in the continuance of command. When he found that the Tories were averse to carrying on the war, he and his friends declared for the whigs, and the glorious battles he obtained secured him in his interest with the public, as his wife did with the queen, so that the Tories durst not directly attack him, though they made use of every opportunity to lessen his credit. It happened, however, that in reality the queen's connexions with the whigs, were not agreeable to her natural inclination, and formed only upon the glories, which her arms had achieved. The dutchess of Marlborough, at the same time, perhaps did not make so moderate and so respectful a use of her credit with the queen, as she ought to have done, and was perpetually ballancing her majesty's inclinations for the Tories, by her affections for herself. It is certain, that her grace, notwithstanding her fortune at court, which was as high as any female subject ever arrived at, was very ill formed, either for a courtier or a favourite. She was sarcastic, plain, open, and overbearing, and destitute of that prudence which is expected in those who want to rise, even in the most virtuous courts. At last, her impetuosity of temper drove her from her hold in the affections of her mistress, and another female favourite (introduced by herself) supplanted her. The consequence was, that her majesty's venturing to give way to her native inclinations and imbibed principles, changed her whig ministry for a Tory one, and gave to the duke of Ormond the duke of Marlborough's command. The duke of Marlborough, however, though he had long foreseen his disgrace, behaved with admirable temper, and even acquiesced in the measures of the new ministry, in hopes, as he said, that they would push the war against France. By this time, finding that the queen's aversion to his dutchess was unsurmountable, he carried to her majesty a surrender of all her places, which were those of groom of the stole, the robes, and the privy-purse. In the year 1711, the duke, who had been turned out of all his employments, on a frivolous pretext of bribery, entered, with his friends in the house of peers, into so vigorous an opposition to the court measures, that the ministers were driven to the desperate expedient of creating twelve new peers in one day; but though those unprecedented creations ballanced the whig interest in the house of peers, the temper of the mercantile part of the nation went entirely against the court, and the moderate Tories themselves condemned the proceedings of their leaders; but the queen was determined at all events to have peace, and his enemies made so unmerciful a use of their power, that the duke was driven from all that moderation, which had used to distinguish him. The earl Powlet in particular, said, in a debate concerning the duke of Ormond, "That nobody could doubt of the duke of Ormond's courage and bravery; but that he was not like a certain general, who led troops to the slaughter; to cause a great number of officers to be knocked on the head in a battle, or against stone-walls, in order to fill his pockets, by disposing of their commissions." The duke of Marlborough did not, at the time, resent this gross affront; but, when the house broke up, the lord Mohun went to the earl Powlet, and told him, "that the duke of Marlborough desired to have an eclairsissement with his lordship, about some expressions he had used in that day's debate; and therefore desired him to go and take the air in the country." The earl Powlet, who was in no doubt about the lord Mohun's meaning, asked, "whether he had brought him a challenge?" and his lordship seeming to answer in the affirmative, the earl went home. His countess, however, by his unusual emotion, easily perceived that something extraordinary had happened to ruffle him. She instantly communicated her suspicions to the ministry, and the earl of Dartmouth, secretary of state, went to the duke of Marlborough, and desired him not to stir abroad, while two centinels were placed upon the earl Powlet's house. The queen herself then interposed; and the duke, at her request, promised that the affair should go no further. But, though his grace was thus deprived of his posts and power, he held the same place as he ever had done, in the esteem and affection of all true Englishmen. Some attempts in parliament were made to fasten upon him the charge of having spirited up the Dutch to continue the war; but they were in themselves ridiculous, and came to nothing. When the treaty of Utrecht was concluded, and when his grace saw, that either a civil war, or an intire submission to the court measures, must follow, he resolved to retire beyond seas. This resolution was much strengthened by the death of his great and worthy friend, the earl of Godolphin, and it was certainly wise in itself. He had many reasons to think, that, had he staid in England, his enemies would have fallen upon means of securing him, but, being abroad, and at liberty, he was free to employ the vast interest, which his reputation and merits had given him, not only in England, but all over Europe, in defence of the protestant succession, had any attempts been made to injure, or set it aside. Such, at this time, was the spight and meanness of his enemies, that two law suits were set on foot against his grace; the one for the two and a half per cent. which the foreign princes were content should be deducted for contingencies; the other was for arrears due to the builders of Blenheim-house, both of them shameful and unjust. He set out on the twenty fourth of November, from Dover; and, on the first of December he landed at Ostend, where he was received under a triple discharge of all the cannon upon the ramparts. He afterwards visited most of the Dutch garrisons, and repaired to Aix-la-Chapelle, to which place his dutchess followed him in the beginning of February, 1712-13. Wherever he came, he was received and entertained with a profusion of honours, and the court of England had the meanness to turn general Cadogan out of all his places, for treating his grace with a respect and civility due to his merit and character. Towards the close of queen Anne's life, the Tory ministry splitting amongst themselves, his grace's friends were of opinion that his presence might be of service in England. It is even said that the divisions between the earl of Oxford and lord Bolingbroke ran so high, that each strove to secure his grace in his interest; and that had the queen lived, he must have been a much greater man than ever. After being detained by contrary winds for a fortnight, at Ostend, he landed at Dover the very day the queen died, and he entered London in a kind of triumph.

When king George I. came over, his grace was received by him with particular distinctions. He was afterwards made captain-general of the land forces, colonel of the first regiment of foot-guards, and master of the ordnance. His grace, after this, had no opportunity of distinguishing himself in a military capacity, and outlived all his great abilities, being, before his death, reduced to almost a second infancy. He died June 16, A. D. 1722.

By his dutchess, he had one son, John, marquis of Blandford, born on the thirteenth of January, A. D. 1686, and died at Cambridge, on the 20th of February, A. D. 1705, and four daughters. First, Henrietta, wife to Francis, earl of Godolphin, and who, according to act of parliament, succeeded her father, as dutchess of Marlborough. Her grace dying on the 24th of October, A. D. 1733, without leaving any male issue, the honours descended to the son of her sister; second, Anne, wife of Charles Spencer, earl of Sunderland. She died April 15, A. D. 1716, and left issue Charles, earl of Sunderland, who, in her right, became duke of Marlborough; third, lady Elizabeth, married to his grace, Scroop Egerton, afterwards duke of Bridgewater; fourth, the lady Mary, married to his grace, John, duke of Montague.

Having finished our account of the family of John, the great duke of Marlborough, we come to

JOHN SPENCER, esquire, born May 15, A. D. 1708, third son of Charles, earl of Sunderland, by the abovenamed Anne, second daughter to his grace. He married Georgina Caroline, daughter of John Carteret, earl Granville, and by her, who surviving him, married secondly, William, earl Cowper, had issue an only son. He died June 10, A. D. 1746, and (Present Earl.) JOHN SPENCER, his son, born December 8, A. D. 1734, was then a minor. By letters-patent dated April 3, 1761, he was created viscount Spencer, and baron Spencer, of Althorpe, in the county of Northampton; and by other letters-patent bearing date November 1, A. D. 1765, was created earl Spencer, and viscount Althorpe.

His lordship married Georgiana, daughter of Stephen Poyntz, esquire, of Midgeham, in the county of Berks; and has issue three daughters and one son.

George John Spencer, born September 1, A. D. 1758.

The daughters were,

1. Georgiana, born June 7, A. D. 1757.
2. Henrietta Frances, born June 16, A. D. 1761.
3. Charlotte, born August 26, A. D. 1765.

(TITLES.) John Spencer, earl Spencer, viscount Althorpe, viscount and baron Spencer, of Althorpe.

(CREATIONS.) Viscount Spencer, and baron Spencer, of Althorpe, in the county of Northampton, April 3, A. D. 1761 (1 Geo. III.) and earl Spencer, and viscount Althorpe, November 1, A. D. 1765 (5 Geo. III.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, pearl and ruby, in the second and third a fret, topaz; over all on a bend, diamond, three eschallop shells of the first, a crescent for difference.

(CREST.)

(SUPPORTERS.)

(MOTTO.)

} The same as those belonging to his grace the duke of Marlborough. See page 290.

(CHIEF SEATS.) Althorpe in Northamptonshire, and at Wimbledon, and Battersea, in Surry.

EDWARD DEVARUX

THIS COPIED

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

EDWARD DEVEREUX.

VISCOUNT * HEREFORD,

AND

BARONET.

THIS noble family, of Norman extraction, obtained a settlement in England immediately after the conquest. Their surname was taken from Evreux, a town of note in Normandy.

It is uncertain, whether only one, or many of this name, came into England with the Conqueror; but certain it is, from ancient records, that in a short time they multiplied greatly. The first we find, from whom we can lineally deduce the present family, was,

STEPHEN D'EBROIS, for so the name was written in the fifteenth of king John, when he attended that king in his expedition against Poictou. He served also under Henry III. in his wars against the Welch, and on that account had scutage of his tenants, in the counties of Gloucester and Hereford, who held of him by military service. To him succeeded his son,

WILLIAM D'EBROIS, who being one of the barons marchers, served Henry III. in his wars against the Welch; but in that fatal battle of Lewes, in Suffex, he forsook him, and siding with the rebellious barons, was slain at the battle of Evesham, 49th of Henry III. and his lands being seized for this disloyal action, continued in the king's hands till 51st of Henry III. when,

WILLIAM DEVEREUX, his son and heir, making his composition at three years value, (according to the decree called Dictum de Kenilworth) had livery thereof.

To this last mentioned William succeeded,

Sir WILLIAM DEVEREUX, knight, who, by his wife Alice, had issue,

Sir WALTER DEVEREUX, who, by Margery, his lady, had issue,

Sir JOHN DEVEREUX, knight, who, by Margaret, daughter of John de Vere, earl of Oxford, was father of Sir JOHN DEVEREUX, knight, who, in the 40th of Edward III. engaged with others of the English and Gascoyners in the service of the prince, in Aquitaine, to go into Spain in assistance of Henry I. the bastard, newly legitimated by the pope, and to whom he had given that crown. He was afterwards made captain of Rochelle, and seneschal of Limosin: and, in 42d of Edward III. attended the Black Prince in Gascoign, and afterwards served in the wars in France; as he did king Richard II. in his fleet at sea, and also in his wars by land. After being made a knight banneret, he was installed knight of the Garter, in the ninth year of that king; in whose eleventh year he was made constable of Dover castle, and warden of the Cinque-ports; and joined in commission with Walter Skyrlaw, bishop of Durham, and others, to treat with the king of France touching peace, (being steward of the household at that time) so likewise to treat with the Flemings on certain important affairs.

And having been summoned to parliament amongst the barons of this realm, from 8th of Richard II. till the the sixteenth inclusive, died the year following; whereupon Margaret his widow, daughter of Sir John Barre, knight, had her dowry assigned her.

* The viscount was antiently sheriff of a county, and held his office under an earl, whose attendance was mostly required at court; and still bears the name of his substitution (in Latin Vice-Comes;) but in 1440, the 18th of Henry VI. it became a degree of honour, who conferred this title upon John lord Beaumont, by letters-patent, and gave him place above all barons; and to this honour belong a cap, coronet, and robe, as follows:

His mantle, which is called his parliament (or creation) robe, is the same as that of an earl, marquis, and duke, with this difference; a duke's robe has four guards and a lace quite round, a marquis's three and an half, an earl's three, and his but two and an half.

His cap is also the same as that of a duke, &c. but his coronet differs from all; that of a duke having only leaves; that of a marquis, leaves and pearls of equal height; that of an earl, the pearls much higher than the leaves; and this has only pearls set close together on the chaplet or rim: the surcoat and mantle, which they wear at the coronation of a king or queen, are of crimson velvet, lined with white taffeta, and doubled from the neck to below the elbow with ermine: but the robe of a viscount differs from that of a duke, marquis, and earl; the duke having four rows of spots, the marquis three and an half, the earl three, and the viscount but two and an half.

To him succeeded,

JOHN DEVEREUX, his son and heir, who was also a knight, but died three years after his father, before he had accomplished his full age, leaving Joan his sister, wife of Sir Walter Fitzwalter, his next heir.

Having thus done with the principal branch of this family, we come to

STEPHEN DEVEREUX, of Bodynham Devereux, in the county of Hereford, younger brother to Sir John Devereux, who married Margaret, daughter to the before-mentioned John earl of Oxford. Which Stephen, living in 3d of Edward III. was father of

SIR WILLIAM DEVEREUX, knight, of Bodynham and White-church, who, by Anne his wife, daughter of Sir John Barre, had issue,

SIR WALTER DEVEREUX, who, in the 50th of Edward III. was sheriff of Herefordshire, with Thomas de la Bere; as also the year after. And in 2d of Richard II. obtained licence for a market and fair at his manor of Bodynham. In 7th of Richard II. he married Agnes, daughter of Thomas Crophull, cousin and heir to Sir John Crophull, knight, and died in 4th of Henry IV. to whom succeeded his son and heir,

SIR WALTER DEVEREUX, who, by Maud his wife, daughter of Sir Thomas Bromwich, knight, had issue,

Walter Devereux, his son and heir.

And a daughter,

Anne, married to William Herbert, earl of Pembroke: which WALTER DEVEREUX was fifteen years old at the death of his father, in 14th of Henry VI. and by Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Sir John Merbury, knight, had issue Walter Devereux, his son and heir.

This last mentioned

WALTER DEVEREUX, was married to Anne, sole daughter and heir to William, lord Ferrers, of Chartley, who, in 28th of Henry VI. was eleven years of age and eight months: and, in 31st of Henry VI. by the king's special favour, had livery of her lands, without any farther proof of her age.

In 34th of Henry VI. he was sheriff of Gloucestershire, being then a knight; and in 1st of Edward IV. was summoned to parliament as a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Ferrers; also, in farther recompence of his manifold services, vast expences, and sundry perils in the wars against king Henry VI. wherein he had exposed himself, he obtained a grant the same year, of divers manors and lordships, &c. Likewise in 10th of Edward IV. in consideration of his faithful services, had a grant for life of the county of Caernarvon, and chief forester of Snowdon-hills, in North-Wales; and in the same year was installed knight of the Garter: but adhering afterwards to Richard III. was slain with him at Bosworth-field; leaving

John Devereux, his son and heir, then a knight,

And a daughter,

Elizabeth, married to Sir Richard Corbet, of Morton-Corbet, Salop, and secondly, to Sir Thomas Leighton, of Watlesborough, in the county of Salop: which

JOHN DEVEREUX was summoned to parliament from 3d of Henry VII. till the 12th; and by Cecily his wife, daughter to Henry Bourchier, earl of Essex, sister and heir to Henry her brother, left issue Walter Devereux, his son and heir: which,

(First Viscount.) WALTER DEVEREUX, in 2d of Henry VIII. was joint governor of Warwick castle, and served that king in his wars with France, in several expeditions; and in that sea fight with the French, near Conquet, in Brittany: whereupon for his gallant behaviour, he was elected on July 13, in 15th of Henry VIII. one of the knights companions of the Garter; and in 17th of Henry VIII. was constituted justice of South-Wales.

In 36th of Henry VIII. he was with the king at the taking of Boloign; and on the 2d of February, 4 Edward VI. was, in consideration of the laudable and acceptable services he had performed, as also in regard of his prudence, loyalty, and valour, advanced to the dignity of viscount Hereford, and to his heirs male for ever, with an annual rent of twenty marks, out of the profits of the county of Hereford. In the patent is a clause, that "he and his heirs male should enjoy the rank and degree of viscount Hereford, in all parliaments and councils within the realm of England, and other the king's territories and kingdoms," whereby (according to the opinion of Sir Richard St. George, garter king at arms) the viscounts Hereford are entitled to a seat, as well in the parliaments of Ireland, as England. He died on the 27th of September, in 5 and 6 Philip and Mary, as appears by inquisition taken at Brecknock the 20th of January, 3 Elizabeth, seized of the manors of Pipton, alias Pixton, Penkelly, Anglicana, and Lanthomas, in the parish of Hayft, in the county of Brecon; Walter, son of Sir Richard Devereux, being found to be his grandson and heir, and of the age of nineteen, the 6th of September, before the taking of the inquisition.

He had issue, by Mary his first wife, daughter of Thomas Grey, marquis of Dorset, three sons, viz.

1. Henry Devereux, who died unmarried.
2. Sir Richard Devereux, knight, who died in his life-time.
3. Sir William Devereux, knight, who married Jane, daughter of John Scudamore, of Home-Lacy, in the county of Hereford, esquire, and left issue two daughters, his coheirs, viz. Barbara Devereux, first married to Edward Cave, esquire, and afterwards was wife of Sir Edward Hastings, knight, a younger son to Francis, earl of Huntington, from whom is descended a numerous posterity; and Margaret Devereux, married to Sir Edward Littleton, of Pillaton in the county of Stafford, knight, great grand-father to Sir Edward Littleton, of the same place, baronet. By his second wife, Margaret, daughter to Robert Garnish, of Kinton in Suffolk, esquire, he had a son, Sir Edward. But him we leave at present, and return to

SIR RICHARD DEVEREUX, second son before-mentioned, who died in his father's life-time, on the 13th of October, in 1 Edward VI. possessed of the manor of Bodringham in Herefordshire; as appears by inquisition taken at Hereford, the 22d of July, the 4th of Edward VI. and that by Dorothy his wife, daughter of George, earl of Huntington, he had issue,

1. Walter Devereux, his son and heir, at the time of his decease eight years and ten months old.

And

And two daughters,

1. Elizabeth, married to Sir John Vernon, of Hodnet, knight.

2. Anne, the wife of Henry Clifford.

The eldest son,

(First Earl.) WALTER DEVEREUX, succeeding his grandfather as aforesaid in the title of viscount Hereford, was created earl of Essex, May 4, 4th of Elizabeth, likewise styled earl of Eu, viscount Hereford, lord Ferrers of Chartley, Bouchier, and Lovain, and knight of the Garter. He died at Dublin, in Ireland, September 22, A. D. 1576; and by Lettice his wife, daughter to Sir Francis Knolles, knight of the Garter, and sister to William, earl of Banbury, left issue two daughters,

1. Dorothy, married to Sir Thomas Perrot, knight; and, secondly, to Henry, earl of Northumberland.

2. Penelope, married to Robert Rich, earl of Warwick.

Also an only son,

(Second Earl.) Sir ROBERT DEVEREUX, knight of the Garter, earl of Essex, and of Eu, earl marshal of England, &c. the great favourite of queen Elizabeth, born at Nethwood, or Netherwood, in the county of Hereford, who was beheaded within the Tower of London, on February 25, A. D. 1600, 42d of Elizabeth, leaving issue, by Frances his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Francis Walsingham, secretary of state, and widow of the famous Sir Philip Sidney, one son and two daughters, viz. Robert, earl of Essex, Frances, and Dorothy, who were restored in blood (1st James I.)

Frances, the eldest daughter, was married to William Seymour, marquis and earl of Hertford, afterwards restored to the dukedom of Somerset.

Dorothy (the other sister) became the wife of Sir Henry Shirley, of Stanton-Harold, in the county of Leicester, baronet, (from whom descended the present earl Ferrers) after to William Stafford, esquire.

Which,

(Third Earl.) ROBERT DEVEREUX, earl of Essex, his son, was honoured with knighthood at Windsor, with his highness Charles, prince of Wales, after king Charles II. when he was to be installed knight of the Garter, May 20, 1638; and upon the first insurrection of the Scots, A. D. 1639, was, by king Charles, made lieutenant-general of his forces in that northern expedition; also afterwards lord-chamberlain of his household. But A. D. 1642, he accepted of a commission against that unhappy king, and became general of the parliament forces; but did not long continue in that command. He died A. D. 1646, having married two wives: first Frances, second daughter to Thomas Howard, earl of Suffolk; but that marriage being nullified, he took to his second wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Pawlet, of Edington, in the county of Wilts, knight, by whom he had issue Robert, a son, who died an infant.

And dying without issue, the earldoms of Essex and Eu became extinct, and the title of viscount Hereford descended and came to Sir Walter Devereux, of Castle-Bromwich, in the county of Warwick, baronet, son and heir to Sir Edward Devereux, of the same place, knight and baronet, who was interred in Erdington chancel.

We return to,

Sir EDWARD DEVEREUX, knight, son of Walter, the first viscount Hereford, by Margaret his second wife, daughter to Robert Garnish, as before observed; which Sir Edward was created a baronet, and was seated at Castle-Bromwich, in the county of Warwick. He married Catherine, daughter to Edward Arden, of Park-hall, in the county of Warwick, esquire, by whom he had two sons,

1. Sir Walter Devereux.

2. Sir George Devereux, who became seated at Sheldon-hall, in the county of Warwick.

(Fifth Viscount.) Sir WALTER DEVEREUX, who succeeded his father at Castle-Bromwich, claiming to be viscount Hereford, by virtue of the intail on the heirs male, had the same allowed and confirmed to him by parliament, A. D. 1646, and marrying Elizabeth, daughter to Thomas Knightley, of Borough-Hall, in the county of Stafford, esquire, had five sons, whereof Walter Devereux, the third son, died without issue male, and Edward and John died unmarried.

Of the other two sons, Essex Devereux, the eldest, married Anne, daughter of Sir William Courteen, of the city of London, knight, but died in his father's life-time without issue: whereupon, (Sixth Viscount.) LEICESTER DEVEREUX, second son, succeeded his father as viscount Hereford, and departed this life on December 1, 1676, leaving issue, by Elizabeth his first wife, daughter and heir to Sir William Withipole, knight, (who brought him the lordship of Christ-church, in Ipswich) one daughter, named Frances, married to William, viscount Tracy, of the kingdom of Ireland: and by Priscilla, his second wife, daughter of John Catchpole, of the county of Suffolk, esquire, left issue two sons and two daughters, viz.

(Seventh Viscount.) LEICESTER DEVEREUX, his son and heir, who succeeded him in his honour, but died in March, A. D. 1682-3, being then about nine years of age.

Whereupon,

(Eighth Viscount.) EDWARD DEVEREUX, second son, was viscount Hereford, after the death of his brother, and took his place in the house of peers October 20, A. D. 1696. He married, A. D. 1689, Elizabeth, daughter and coheir to Walter Narborne, of Calne, in the county of Wilts, esquire, but died without issue the 9th of August, A. D. 1700.

Elizabeth, his eldest sister, died unmarried; and Anne, the second, becoming at length sole heir to her brother, the said Edward, viscount Hereford, married first with Leicester Martin, esquire, in her right of Christ-church, in Ipswich; and secondly, to James Berkley, of Stoke, in Gloucestershire, esquire; who died December 11, 1736, leaving by her a son, Narborne Berkeley, esquire, now lord Botetourt, and a daughter married to the lord Charles Noel Somerset, duke of Beaufort.

The male issue of this branch being thus extinct by the death of the aforesaid Edward, viscount Hereford, without issue, the honour devolved on,

(Ninth Viscount.) PRICE DEVEREUX, of Vaynor, in the county of Montgomery, esquire, as

U u u son

son and heir to Price Devereux, of Vaynor, esq. (who died in his father's life-time) by Mary, his wife, daughter of — Stephens, of the city of Bristol: which last mentioned Price Devereux was eldest son of George Devereux, of Sheldon-hall, in the county of Warwick, esquire, and of Vaynor aforesaid, by Bridget his wife, daughter and sole heir to Arthur Price, of Vaynor, esquire; and the said George Devereux was son and heir to Sir George Devereux, knight, of Sheldon-hall before-mentioned, by Blanch his wife, daughter and heir to John Ridge, of Ridge, in the county of Salop, esquire.

Which said Price Devereux, viscount Hereford, took his place in the house of peers, February 19, A. D. 1700. His lordship married Mary, second daughter of Samuel Sandys, of Ombersley-court, in the county of Wigorn, esquire, and by her (who died on the 14th of January, A. D. 1728-9,) left issue one son and one daughter, viz.

1. Price Devereux, born June 9, A. D. 1694.
2. Mary, married to William Price, of Vaend, in the county of Flint, esquire.

His lordship died in October, A. D. 1740, at his seat at Vaynor, in Montgomeryshire, in the seventy-seventh year of his age; to whom succeeded his only son, (Tenth Viscount.) PRICE DEVEREUX, esquire, late lord viscount Hereford, who married January 3, A. D. 1720-21, Elizabeth, sole daughter and heir of Leicester Martin, esquire, before-mentioned; which lady leaving no issue, his lordship in July, 1740, married secondly —, daughter and heir of — Price, esquire, of Merionethshire; and dying in August, A. D. 1748, without issue, the honour descended to the issue male of Vaughan Devereux, esquire, younger brother of Price Devereux, esquire, father of Price, lord viscount Hereford, who succeeded to the honour on the death of Edward Devereux, viscount Hereford, August 9, A. D. 1700, and was father of Price, late lord viscount Hereford, who died A. D. 1748, as aforesaid.

We are therefore to deduce the descent of Vaughan Devereux, esquire, brother of Price as before-mentioned. He was second son of George Devereux, of Sheldon-hall, in the county of Warwick, and of Vaynor, in the county of Montgomery, esq. son and heir of Sir George Devereux, knight, second son of Sir Edward Devereux, baronet, only son of Walter, viscount Hereford, who died, A. D. 1558, by his second wife Margaret, daughter of Robert Garneys, of Kenton, in the county of Suffolk, esquire.

The said Vaughan Devereux, esquire, was seated at Nanteribba, in the county of Montgomery; and was buried at Berrew, A. D. 1700, leaving issue by his wife, daughter of — Fox, Arthur Devereux, of Nanteribba, esquire, who married two wives, first a daughter of Evan Glynn, of Glynn, esquire, by whom he had two sons, Arthur Devereux, buried at Forden, January 25, A. D. 1737, without issue, and Vaughan Devereux, who died an infant, A. D. 1712. The said Arthur Devereux, esquire, by his second wife Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Glynn, esquire, had issue Edward Devereux, the present lord viscount Hereford. Which,

(Eleventh Viscount.) EDWARD DEVEREUX, now lord viscount Hereford, took his seat in the house of peers, April 3, A. D. 1750. His lordship married Catherine, daughter of Richard Mytton, of Gartle, in the county of Montgomery, esquire; which lady died February 22, A. D. 1748: and their issue were,

1. Bridget Devereux, born May 9, A. D. 1739.
2. Arthur Devereux, born March 25, A. D. 1740, and died September 17, A. D. 1743.
3. Edward Devereux, born February 19, A. D. 1740-41.
4. Arthur Devereux, born February 10, A. D. 1741-2, and died September 17, A. D. 1743.
5. Catherine Devereux, born February 7, A. D. 1742-3.
6. George Devereux, born April 25, A. D. 1744.

(TITLES.) Edward Devereux, viscount Hereford, and baronet, premier viscount of England.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet November 25, A. D. 1612, (10th of James I.) viscount of the county of Hereford, by letters patent, February 2, A. D. 1549, (4th of Edward VI.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, a fess, ruby, in chief three torteauxes.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, topaz, a talbot's head, pearl, eared ruby.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, a talbot, pearl, eared ruby, with a ducal coronet of the second. On the sinister, a rein-deer of the last, attir'd, gorg'd with a ducal coronet, and chain'd, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Basis virtutum constantia."

(CHIEF-SEAT.) At Nanteribba, in the county of Montgomery.

B R O W N, Viscount M O N T A G U.

THE first of the family we meet with, was Sir ANTHONY BROWN, made knight of the Bath at the coronation of Richard II. who left issue Sir Robert Brown, knight, and Sir Stephen Brown, second son; who being lord-mayor of London, A. D. 1439, 17 Hen. VI. when there was a great scarcity of wheat, he sent ships into Prussia, ordering their laden with rye; and on their return, he distributed it among the poorer sort of people.

Sir ROBERT BROWN, his elder brother, was father to

Sir THOMAS BROWN, knight, who was treasurer of the household to king Henry VI. and in the 36th year of his reign, was in commission, with others, to meet at the city of Rochester, on the 29th of August, to summon persons, and inquire upon oath into a certain disturbance that happened at sea, between Richard, earl of Warwick, and his retinue, and certain persons of Luby, who were under a league of friendship with the king. And in right of his wife Eleanor, daughter and coheir of Sir Thomas Fitzalan, alias Arundel, knight, brother of John Fitzalan, earl of Arundel, had the castle of Beechworth in Surry. He had issue five sons.

1. Sir George Brown, of Beechworth-castle, knight, who in 1 Richard III. was among those that by proclamation were ordered to be apprehended for aiding and assisting that great rebel the late duke of Buckingham: from whom descended Sir Ambrose Brown, of Beechworth, in the county of Surry, baronet, created to that dignity July 7, A. D. 1627, 3 Car. I. who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir to William Adair, of Saffron-Walden, in the county of Essex, esquire, and left issue Sir Adam Brown, of Beechworth-castle, baronet, whose only son, Ambrose, dying in his life-time unmarried, A. D. 1690, this line terminated in the said Adam Brown.

2. William Brown, who died without issue.

3. Anthony Brown.

4. Thomas Brown.

5. Sir Robert Brown, who married Mary, daughter of Sir William Mallet, knight, and left issue Eleanor, his only daughter and heir; wedded first, to Thomas Fogo, esquire, and secondly, to William Kempe, of Olantye, in Kent, esquire.

Also a daughter, Catherine, wife of Humphry Sackville, of Buckhurst, in the county of Sussex, ancestor to the present duke of Dorset.

The said

ANTHONY BROWN, third son, in the first year of king Henry VII. was made standard-bearer throughout the whole realm of England, and elsewhere; and in 2 Hen. VII. being one of the esquires for his body, was constituted governor of Queenborough-castle in Kent; and the same year being in the battle of Newark, on Trent, June 16, when the earl of Lincoln and Lambert Simnell were defeated, he was knighted for his gallant behaviour. In 18 Hen. VII. being constable of the castle of Calais, he, and Sir Richard Nanfan, deputy-lieutenant of Calais, were commissioned, in consideration of their loyalty, industry, foresight, and care, to receive the sum of twenty-five thousand franks in gold, due November 1, A. D. 1502, being an annual payment from Lewis, the French king, according to an agreement concluded November 3, A. D. 1492. Also in 20 Hen. VII. being lieutenant of the castle of Calais, was again commissioned to receive the annual payment due that year.

His last will and testament is dated at Calais, September 25, A. D. 1505, and was proved November 19, A. D. 1506, wherein being wrote Sir Anthony Brown, knight, lieutenant of the castle of Calais, he orders his body to be buried in the Resurrection church in St. Nicholas chapel, by his wife; and bequeaths to every brotherhood within the said church ten shillings, and to the lord prior of Christ church, Canterbury, a standing cup of silver gilt; also two others to Sir Edward Poyning and Sir Hugh Conway, whom he constitutes overseers of his will, with Lucy, his wife executrix; whereby it appears that she was his second wife.

He had issue by the said Lucy, one of the daughters and coheirs to John Nevil, marquis of Montagu, and widow of Sir Thomas Fitzwilliams, of Aldwarke, in the county of York, knight,

Anthony Brown, his son and heir.

And two daughters.

1. Elizabeth, the wife of Henry Somerset, earl of Worcester, ancestor to the present duke of Beaufort; and

2. Lucy, married to Sir Thomas Clifford, knight, ancestor to the lords Clifford, and earls of Cumberland.

Which

Sir ANTHONY BROWN, was with the earl of Surrey, lord high-admiral, at Southampton, in 14 Hen. VIII. when he convoyed the emperor from that port to Biscay; and after landing at Morleis in Brittany, he was knighted for his valour in the assault, and winning of that town. In 16 Henry VIII. being one of the esquires of the king's household, he was one of the challengers in feats feats of arms against the feast of Christmas, at Greenwich, before the king; and the year after, was made lieutenant of the isle of Man, and those other islands belonging thereto, during the minority of Edward, earl of Derby. In 19 Hen. VIII. he, with Arthur Plantagenet, viscount Lisle, knight of the Garter, and others, were sent ambassadors to Francis, the French king, to invest him with the order of the Garter; as also to take his oath that he should not violate the league made with king Henry. In 24 Hen. VIII. he was again sent into France with the duke of Norfolk, the lord Rochford, brother to the queen, and Sir William Paulet, comptroller of the household, in embassy to the French king, and to accompany him to Nice; as also to commune with the pope there, concerning his stay in the king's divorce.

In 30 Hen. VIII. he obtained a grant of that eminent office of master of the horse, with the yearly fee of forty pound for that service; and on the 15th of August the same year, had a grant of the house and site of the late monastery of Battle, in the county of Sussex, to him, his heirs and assigns for ever. Also on the 12th of March, the year following, was made master of the horse for life; and on the 23d of April ensuing, he, and the lord Audley, lord chancellor, were elected knights of the Garter. His installation plate is the fifth in the twenty-first stall in St. George's chapel at Windsor, as follows, "Du Vaillant Chevalier, Anthony Brown, grand Esquier du Roy nre. Soveraigne-Sire, ferer et Compaignon du resplendissant Ordre du Garter, fust installé a Windesovre, le 8 jour de May en l'an du regne du Nostre Soveraigne Henry le 8 par le Grace de Dieu, Roy d'Angleterre et de France, Seignr. D'Irlande, Defenseur de la Foy, et en Terre supreme Chief de l'Eglise Anglicane, 32".

In 34 Hen. VIII. he accompanied the duke of Norfolk, then lieutenant-general of the English army, in that expedition made by him with above 20,000 men into Scotland. And in 36 Hen. VIII. was with Charles Brandon, duke of Suffolk, the king's lieutenant, in that voyage to Bologne, where they encamped on the east side of the town, the king himself shortly following. And the town being brought almost to the terms of yielding, and certain ambassadors from the French king arriving at Hardloe castle, to treat of a general accord, the duke of Suffolk, and this Sir Anthony Brown, were sent to confer with them.

In 37 Hen. VIII. the king, confiding in his loyalty, valour, industry, foresight and care, being master of the horse, and knight of the Garter, commissioned him, with Sir Thomas Wriothesley, lord chancellor, Henry, earl of Arundel, and William, lord St. John, chamberlain of the household, to levy, array, and try all men able to bear arms in the counties of Surry, Sussex, Southampton, Wilts, Oxon, and Berks, and to arm them according to their degrees, and to muster them in proper places; and to march all his liege subjects, so arrayed and tried, as well men at arms and archers, as other horse and foot, by themselves, or others by them deputed, to suppress his enemies, as often as occasion shall require. The same year (37 Hen. VIII.) he was made justice in eyre of all the forests beyond Trent; and in 38 Hen. VIII. was constituted standard-bearer to the king, (as his father had been to Henry VII.) And was in such favour with his sovereign, that he appointed him one of his executors, with trust likewise to be of the council to prince Edward his son, and left him a legacy in his will of three hundred pound.

This Sir Anthony died on the 6th of May, A. D. 1548, 2 Edward VI. at Byfleet-house in Surry, by him builded, being then master of the horse to that king; and was buried at Battle-abbey, in Sussex, where in the chancel he has a noble altar-tomb erected to his memory, whereon is a figure of a man in armour, lying on his back, habited with the mantle, collar, &c. of the noble order of the Garter; his head resting on a helmet, and at his feet an eagle (the crest of his family): by him lies his lady, in the habit of the times, reposing her head on a cushion, and at her feet a wolf with a collar about his neck. Underneath are several cherubs, and under them escutcheons of arms, curiously cut in marble, and painted, but now worn out. The inscription gives an account of her death, whom he survived eight years, which shews the tomb was erected by him in his life-time, the date of his decease being not mentioned. It is as follows:

"Here lieth the Right Honourable, Sir Anthony Browne Knyght of the Garter, Master of the King's Majestis Horsys, and one of the most honorable Prive Counceel of our most Dread Sovereyne Lorde and Valliant Kyng Henry the Eyght; and Dame Alis His Wyfe."

"Which Alis decesid the 31 Day of Marche Ao. Dni. 1540. And the sayd Sir Antony decesid the Day of — Ao. Dni. On whose Sowls and all Cristens IHV Have Mercy Amen."

He had issue, by Alice his wife, daughter of Sir John Gage, knight of the Garter, four sons, viz.

1. Anthony Brown, his son and heir.
2. Thomas Brown.
3. William Brown, esquire, who married Anne, daughter and coheir of Hugh Hastings, and attained by his marriage Elsing, in the county of Southampton, from whom the Browns of Elsing descend; and
4. Francis Brown.

And three daughters.

1. Mary, married to John Grey, second son to Thomas, marquis of Dorset.

2. Mabel, married to Gerard, earl of Kildare, in Ireland.

3. Lucy, married to Thomas Roper, of Eltham, in Kent, ancestor to the lord Teynham.

Which
(First Viscount.) ANTHONY BROWN, his eldest son, was one of the forty knights made at the coronation of king Edward VI. the duke of Suffolk, the earls of Hertford and Ormond, with other nobles being of the number: and was sheriff for Surry and Sussex in the last year of that king. And for the more honourable reception of the prince of Spain, then to be married to queen Mary, he was, on the 8th of April, A. D. 1554, appointed master of his horse. Also 1 and 2 Philip and Mary, the king and queen, "in consideration of the good and laudable service done by their beloved and faithful servant Sir Anthony Brown, and which he still continues to do, as also the nobility of birth, early care, loyalty, and honour, do create the said Sir Anthony Brown, knight, viscount Montagu, to have and to hold the same honour to him and the heirs male of his body; and further grant to him twenty marks yearly, payable out of the fines and profits of the county of Surry. Dated at Hampton-court the 2d of September." Which title he chose, by reason that the lady Lucy, his grand-mother, was one of the daughters and coheirs to John Nevil, marquis Montagu. After which honour being conferred on him, he was, by order of parliament, sent to the pope (together with Thomas Thurlby, bishop of Ely) for reducing of this realm to an union with the church of Rome, and to the obedience of that see.

do

In the 4th of queen Mary, he was lieutenant-general of the English forces at the siege of St. Quintins in Picardy, and afterwards being of her privy-council, and much in her favour, he was consulted in most affairs during her reign; and on the 22d of October, A. D. 1555, was installed a knight of the Garter.

On the accession of queen Elizabeth, he was left out of her privy council; and in the second year of her reign, on that grand dispute in parliament for abolishing the pope's supremacy, and restoring it to the crown of this realm, he was the only peer, who, with the earl of Shrewsbury, then voted against it, out of a sentiment of zeal and honour, as Camden has observed in his History of Queen Elizabeth; urging, "That it would be a very disgraceful reflection for England, which was so lately, and so well reconciled to the apostolic see, to make so sudden a revolt from it: and moreover, that the hazard would be as great as the scandal, should the pope thunder out his excommunication, and expose the nation, by that means, to the resentment of its neighbouring enemies, upon the score of this defection: that he, for his part, had, by authority of parliament, and in the name of the whole body of England, tendered obedience to the pope; the performance of which he could by no means dispense with."

In 3 Elizabeth, being highly esteemed for his great prudence and wisdom, though earnestly devoted to the Romish religion, he was thought a person the most acceptable to be employed ambassador into Spain, to satisfy the king of those realms, what just cause queen Elizabeth had to send an army into Scotland; and to represent, that the practices of the Guises might be of as dangerous consequences to his provinces in the Netherlands, as well as in Spain, as to England. But all that is farther memorable of him is, that he was one of the peers which sat on the trial of the queen of Scots, and that departing this life at Horsley, in the county of Surry, October 19, A. D. 1592, (34 Elizabeth) he was buried at Coudray.

Camden makes this mention of him in his annals: "Queen Elizabeth having experienced his loyalty, had a great esteem for him (though he was a stiff Romanist) and paid him a visit some time before his death: for she was sensible that his regard for that religion was owing to his cradle and education, and proceeded rather from principle than faction, as some people's faith did. He was succeeded by Anthony, his grandson, who very commendably followed the good example set him by his grandfather."

By the inquisition taken after his decease, at Midhurst in Suffex, the 19th of April, in 35 Elizabeth, the jury found, that he made his will the 19th of July, 34 Elizabeth, and died on the 19th of October following; and that Anthony Brown, viscount Montagu, was his grandson and heir, and of the age of nineteen years the 1st of February last, and was son and heir, of Anthony Brown, (who died in his father's life-time) son and heir to the aforesaid Anthony, viscount Montagu, deceased. They also found that he died seized of the manor of Battell, the manors of Barnehorne, Bread, Gateborough, Chiling, Mitchelham; the farm of Maxfield, with the appurtenances in Gosling, and Westfield, Gatesborough, Marshes, &c. in Rye and Winchelsea; the manors of Chiting-Poynings, and Chiting-Balney; the manors of Loddesworth, West-Horseley, Effingham, and Verdley, and lands and tenements called Tadham; the manors of Lurgershall, Fullam, Saddlescomb, Shulbread, Willinchmere, alias Linchmere, Verdley, alias Boxtan, Begham, Calceto, Westbrock, near Bourne, Levenhot, and North and South Key: the college of Hastings, and rectory and advowson of the same; the scite of the priory and demesne lands of the monastery of Welperley; the scite of the demesne lands of the priory of Eastborne; the manors of Wainborowe, Monkenhoke, Neatham, Dockenfield, Worthinge; the farms of Oxenford, Northolt, alias Monkton; the rectories of Eastborne and Farnhurst, and divers lands there; the manors of Poynings-Pearching, Preston-Poynings, and Piggedean: a capital house called River-Park-house; the manors of Cowdray, Midhurst, Cocking, Lynch, Rustington, Ripley, and Send, and Chapel-Farm, and Fendbarnes; Jury Farm, Newark priory, and the rectory of Send; all in the county of Suffex: the scite and mansion-house and priory of St. Mary Overies, with the tenements, wharf, and liberties of the same; the manors of Stralsford, Clifford, South Bradstone, Downe alias Downefarm, Blackwell-farm; the Warren-house, and lands near Guilford-park; the alms-houses in Fryer-lane in the parish of the blessed Mary, in Guilford; the manors of Pirbright, Stockwell, Pitford, Wichambreaux, Clayton, and Stedham, and Oxenford-farm; all in the county of Surry; and the manor of Levenshothe, in the county of Kent.

He married two wives, first, Jane, daughter of Robert Ratcliff, earl of Suffex, by whom he had issue, Anthony, his son and heir, and a daughter, Mary, married first to Henry Wriothesley, earl of Southampton; next to Sir Thomas Henneage, knight, and lastly to Sir William Harvey, knight, and baronet, created lord Ross, in Ireland, and afterwards baron of Kidbrook, in England.

To his second wife he married Magdalen, daughter to William, lord Dacres, of Gillesland, by whom he had issue four sons and three daughters.

1. Sir George Brown, of Wicham-Breus, in the county of Kent, knight, who, by Mary, his wife, daughter of Sir Robert Tirwhit, of Kettleby, in the county of Lincoln, knight, had issue George Brown, of Shefford, and of Wicham-Breus, who married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Richard Blount, of Mapledurham, in the county of Oxford, knight,

X x x

by

by whom he was father of George Brown, esquire, Richard, and Eleanor.

2. Thomas Brown, who died unmarried.

3. Henry Brown, who was seated at Kidding-ton, in the county of Oxford, and by Anne, his wife, daughter of Sir William Catesby, knight, had issue Sir Peter Brown, of Kiddington, knight, slain in the service of king Charles I. who left issue two sons, Henry and Francis; Henry, the eldest son, succeeded to the estate at Kiddington, and was created a baronet by king Charles II. by letters-patent, bearing date at Brussels, A. D. 1658, & Reg. Car. II. 10. with remainder, for want of issue male, to Francis his brother.

4. Francis Brown.

The three daughters were,

1. Elizabeth, married to Sir Robert Dormer, (afterwards lord Dormer)

2. Mabel, married to Sir Henry Capel; ancestor to the earl of Essex.

3. Jane, married to Sir Francis Lacon, of Wil-ley, in the county of Salop, knight.

ANTHONY BROWN, his son and heir, married Mary, daughter to Sir William Dormer, of Ethorp in the county of Bucks, knight, and had issue three sons and three daughters; Anthony, suc-cessor to his grandfather; John, who by his wife Anne, daughter of — Gifford, had issue Stan-islavus Brown, George Brown; and William, third son, died without issue. His three daugh-ters were, Dorothy, wife of Edmund Lee, of Stanton-Barry, in the county of Bucks, esquire, Jane, married to Sir Francis Englefield, knight, and baronet; and Catharine, wife of — Treganian. The said Anthony died before his father three months two weeks and six days, viz. on June 29, A. D. 1592, 34 Elizabeth, the said Mary his wife, surviving, who afterwards was married to Sir Edmund Uvedale, knight, and lastly, to Sir Thomas Gerard, of Bryn, in Lancashire, knight, and baronet.

His eldest son,

(Second Viscount.) ANTHONY BROWN, in Feb-ruary 1591, took to wife Jane, daughter to Tho-mas Sackville, earl of Dorset, lord high treasurer of England; and the year after succeeded both his father and grandfather in their estates and honour, being then in the twentieth year of his age. And departing this life October 23, A. D. 1629, (5 Car. I.) was buried in the county of Sussex, leaving issue Francis, his son and heir, and six daugh-ters.

1. Mary, first married to William, lord St. John, of Basing, (son and heir to William, marquis of Winchester) and afterwards to William, second son to Thomas, lord Arundel, of Wardour.

2. Catherine, married to William Tirwhitt, of Kettleby, in the county of Lincoln, esquire.

3. Anne, } both nuns beyond sea.

4. Lucy, }

5. Frances, wedded to John Blomer, of Ha-thorp, in the county of Gloucester, esquire.

6. Mary, married to Robert Petre, son and heir to William, lord Petre, afterwards lord Pe-tre.

The inquisition taken after his decease, in Southwark, February 1, 5 Car. I. sets forth, that he died possessed of the manors of Pytfold, West Horsley, and East Horsley, Rixley, and Send, and lands called Chapel-farm, Jury farm, Ride-farm, and Newark priory, with the appurtenances; the scite and demesnes of the priory of Newark, and a messuage called Lollesworth, &c. in West Horsley, all in Surry: of the manor of Cowdry, scite of the priory and demesne of Eastborne, and rectory of Farnehurst; lands called Todham, in Eastborne, and rectory of Eastborne; lands called Aldersham alias Ball's-farm in Woollavington; the manor of Mid-hurst, manor of St. John's, lands called Almar lands in Woollavington; the manors of Cocking, Bexton, alias Bepton, alias Bebbington; the ma-nors of Lynch, Culcete, and Pigdeane, alias Pres-ton-Poynings; the manors of Perching, and Pyn-ings; the manors of Saddlecombe, Ladesworth, and Lurgafalle; Sullam, and messuage and park called River, and demesne lands in the manor of Calceto; all in Sussex: the manors of Shalford, Bradley, and Shalford-Clifford, and a messuage and eighty acres of land in Neatham; all in the county of Southampton. And also, that Francis, viscount Montagu, was his son and heir, and then of the age of twenty years, A. D. 1629.

Which

(Third Viscount.) FRANCIS MONTAGU was a great sufferer in the time of the civil war, in the reign of king Charles I. his goods and papers, &c. being plundered and burnt at his houses. He had to wife Elizabeth, fourth and youngest daughter to Henry Somerset, marquis of Worcester, and had issue three sons by her.

1. Anthony Brown, baptized at Battle-abbey the 19th of August, A. D. 1629, who died un-married.

2. Francis Brown, his heir.

3. Henry Brown, successor to his brother.

As also Elizabeth, a daughter, married to Chris-topher Roper, the fifth lord Teynham. He de-parting this life on November 2, A. D. 1682, was succeeded by, (Fourth Viscount.) FRANCIS BROWN, his eldest surviving son, who was appointed lord lieutenant of Sussex, in 1687, by king James the Second. He took to wife Mary, daughter of William Her-bert, marquis of Powis, widow of Richard Mo-lineux, eldest son of Carryl, lord viscount Moli-neux; but dying without issue, Henry, his only brother and heir, succeeded him in his honour and estate.

(Fifth Viscount.) HENRY BROWN, married Bar-bara, daughter to James Walsingham, of Chester-ford, in Essex, esquire, son of Thomas Walsing-ham, of Scadbury, in Kent, esquire, by Anne Howard, daughter of Theophilus, the second earl of Suffolk, and dying on the 25th of June, A. D. 1717, left Anthony his heir, and six daughters.

1. Mary, who died unmarried.

2. Blizabeth, a nun, who died at Pontoise in Normandy.

3. Barbara, married to Ralph Salvin, esquire, who, with one daughter, survived him.

4. Catherine, married to George Collingwood, of Northumberland, esquire, who left her a wi-dow, with a daughter, the second wife of Sir Ro-bert Throckmorton, of Buckland, in the county of Bucks, baronet, whom she married January, A. D. 1737-8.

5. Anne, married to Anthony Kempe, of Slin-don, in Sussex, esquire, who left three daughters, one one of whom married Charles, lord Kinnaird, in Scotland, and died 1738, without issue.

6. Henrietta, married ——— Harcourt, esq.

(Sixth and present Viscount.) ANTHONY BROWN, A. D. 1720, took to wife Barbara, third daughter of Sir John Webb, of Hathorp, in the county of Gloucester, baronet, by whom he had two sons, whereof the eldest died at Roan, in Normandy, aged one year; and Anthony, his only surviving son and heir, born in Straton-street, Westminster, A. D. 1728, and unmarried. Also an only daughter, Mary, born in Bloomsbury-square, Middlesex, A. D. 1735, unmarried.

(TITLES.) Anthony Brown, lord viscount Montagu.

(CREATIONS.) Viscount Montagu (the name of a family) by letters-patent, September 7, A. D. 1554, 1st and 2d Philip and Mary.

(ARMS.) Diamond, three lions passant in bend, between two double cotises, pearl.

(CREST.) On a wreath, an eagle displayed, emerald.

SUPPORTERS.) Two wolves, pearl, with each a plain collar and chain, topaz.

(MOTTO.) "Suivez raison."

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Cowdray, near Midhurst, in the county of Suffex.

FIENES, Viscount SAY and SELE.

THIS noble and ancient family is descended from

John, baron of Fienes, hereditary constable of Dover-castle, and warden of the Cinque-ports, who was father of James, and he of John, who had issue,

INGELRAM DE FIENES, who was slain at the battle of Acon, in the Holy-land, A. D. 1190, 2d Richard I. He married Sibyl de Tyngrie, daughter and heir to Faramus de Boloign, nephew to Maud, queen of England, wife of king Stephen; from which match proceeded,

WILLIAM DE FIENES, his son and heir, who, in 8th of John, obtained that king's mandate to the sheriff of Somersetshire, to make livery unto him of the manor of Mertoc, whereunto Sibyl his mother had quitted her claim in open court. Which manor, as part of the honour of Eustace, some time earl of Boloign, William earl of Boloign, grandson to Eustace, gave to the said Faramus in fee; and in 2d of Henry III. paid a fine to the king of two hundred marks, for livery of the manor of Wendover, in the county of Bucks. Which manor was likewise given to the before-specified Faramus, his grandfather, by king Henry II. This William having given to the canons of Missenden certain lands in Wendovre, died in 25th of Henry III. for then his son and heir, called Ingelram, had livery of his lands; his relief, with all other the debts of William his father, being pardoned in respect of his special services. This

INGELRAM DE FIENES, in 32d of Henry III. being to receive the honour of knighthood by bathing, &c. had an allowance of his robes, and all other accoutrements for that solemnity, at the king's charge: and in 33d of Henry III. doing his homage, had also livery of his lands in Northamptonshire. In 37th of Henry III. he had command to send Baldwin de Fienes, his brother, well fitted with horse and arms, into Gascoign, there to stay in the king's service; as also William, his own son, to be educated with prince Edward: and furthermore, to provide eighty sufficient men at arms, besides those forty for whom the king had formerly written: and the next year following, was in his service beyond sea. And in 47th of Henry III. in consideration of his long continued and laudable services, obtained the custody of the lands of William de Beauchamp, of Bedford, then deceased, to hold until the heir shall accomplish his full age. Moreover, in consideration of his great fidelity and constancy to the royal interest in the time of the barons wars, so soon as the king recovered his liberty and rightful power by that victory at Evesham, in the 49th of his reign, he obtained his precept, that all those his lands, whereof he had been dispossessed in the time of those troubles, should forthwith be restored to Robert de Amnese, his bailiff.

This Ingelram Fienes had two sons, whereof Sir Giles Fienes, ancestor to the present family, was second; but the eldest,

WILLIAM DE FIENE, succeeded his father, and in 54th of Henry III. preparing for his journey to the Holy-land, constituted William de Amnese, his attorney, to transact all business for him in his absence; giving power also to Reginald de Fienes, his brother, to constitute any other attorney during the space of five years. In 22d of Edward I. he had command to fit himself with horse and arms, and to attend the king at Portsmouth, on September 1, thence to sail with him into Gascoigne. And it seems, that on the differences which were about that time between king Edward and the king of France, he favoured the French; whereupon his lands in England were seized. But in 27th of Edward I. making his peace, command was given for the restoring them again. And 30th Edward I. he departed this life, being then seized of the manor of Clapham, in the county of Surry, as also of the manor of Wendovre, in the county of Bucks, &c. and Mertock, in the county of Somerset, leaving John Fienes his son and heir, twenty-six years of age, as saith the inquisition. But by the fine rolls it appeareth, that proof could not be made of his age, according to the custom of England, in regard he was born beyond sea: yet by reason that William his father had done his homage to the king, and died a loyal subject, his homage was also accepted, and livery made to him of all his lands.

in

In 10th of Edward II. this

JOHN DE FIENES having lands in Flanders, wherein much damage had been done by the inhabitants of St. Omers, he obtained the king's letter to the mayor and commonalty of that town, to make him satisfaction, in which letter king Edward calls him his kinsman. And 18th of Edward II. his lands in England having been seized, in respect of his residence within the power of France, on security given for his fidelity, restitution was made of them, until farther order should be given therein; but we find no issue from him.

Those of the name now existing, descend from

SIR GILES FIENES afore said, who was of Oldcourt, in Suffex, in 7th of Edward II. in right of his wife Sibil, daughter and heir of William Filliol, by whom he had issue

JOHN FIENES, his son and heir, who died in 5th of Edward III. and by Joan his wife, daughter and heir of John Jordeyn, forester of the fee of Twichen, in the forest of Windsor, had issue

JOHN DE FIENES, who had to wife Maud, sister and heir of John Monceaux, of Herst-Monceaux, in Suffex; and dying in 25th of Edward III. left issue

SIR WILLIAM FIENES, knight, who died in 34th Edward III. and having married Joan, youngest daughter to Geoffrey, lord Say, and at length coheir to William her brother, his posterity thereby shared in the inheritance of that family; being succeeded by William Fienes, his son and heir: which

SIR WILLIAM FIENES was a knight, and was sheriff of Surry and Suffex, in 20th of Richard II. as also in 1st of Henry IV. and in 6th of Henry IV. was found to be son of William Fienes (son of John Fienes) and Joan his wife, third sister and coheir to William de Say. He had to wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of William Batisford, by Margery, heir to Simon Peplesham, by whom he had issue two sons, Roger Fienes, and James Fienes; whereof the elder left a son Richard, who marrying Joan, daughter and heir of Thomas, lord Dacre, was declared lord Dacre, in 37th of Henry VI. which determined in an heir female, married to Sampson Lennard, esquire, whose issue by her were lords Dacre.

But we return to James Fienes, second son, of whom we are now to treat: which

JAMES FIENES, being very serviceable to king Henry V. in his wars in France, obtained a grant from that victorious king, in the sixth year of his reign, of the lordship of De la Court le comte, within the bailiwick of Caux, in Normandy, part of the possessions of the lord of Lymers; and likewise of all those lands lying within the bailiwick of Roven, and Caux, which did belong to Roger Bloset and his wife. And the year after, upon the surrender of Arques, he was constituted governor there. In 8th of Henry VI. he attended the king into France, for the better defence of those parts.

In 18th of Henry VI. being esquire for the body to that king, he had a grant of one hundred pounds yearly pension, to be paid by the prior of Lewes out of a certain rent due by him unto the exchequer. Moreover, in 23d of Henry VI. being then a knight, he had a grant from Henry Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, of a yearly pension of twenty pounds sterling, issuing out of the manor of Rotherfield, in the county of Suffex. And in 25th of Henry VI. by reason that Joan his mother was third sister and coheir to William de Say (a descendant of the former barons Say) by a special writ, bearing date at St. Edmundsbury, March 3, had summons to that parliament then held there, by the title of lord Say and Sele. Whereupon, the third day after, in consideration of his eminent services, performed as well beyond the seas, as in this realm of England, he was in open parliament there, by the assent of the lords spiritual and temporal, advanced to the degree and dignity of a baron of this realm, by the same title of lord Say and Sele. And for farther corroboration of that title and honour, on November 1, next following, had a full confirmation and quit-claimer thereof, from John, lord Clinton, as also of the arms of Say; which, by reason of the descent of the said John, lord Clinton, from Idonea, the eldest sister of the before-specified William de Say, did or might belong unto him.

After which, viz. February 24, he obtained a grant of the office of constable of Dover, and warden of the Cinque-Ports, and to the heirs male of his body: and having been made lord chamberlain to the king, as also one of his council, June 18, the same year, in consideration of his exercise of that office, he had a grant of one hundred marks per annum, to be received out of the customs of wools in the port of London, also on August 7, next ensuing, he was made constable of the Tower of London, during the minority of Henry, son and heir to John, duke of Exeter; and on October 30, 28th of Henry VI. was constituted lord treasurer of England.

But about the octaves of Easter following, the parliament being adjourned to St. Edmundsbury, the commons there laid treason to his charge, as also to the duke of Suffolk, and some others, who had assented to the release of Anjou, and delivery of Maine, to the French. Whereupon the king, to appease them, banished the duke, and sequestered this James, lord Say, from his office of treasurer: and shortly after, on the insurrection of the Kentish men, under the command of Jack Cade, the king, to qualify their passions, committed him to the Tower of London, in regard he discerned how much they clamoured against him. But this riotous mob entering the city of London, and finding their numbers increase, fetched him thence to Guild-hall, and there arraigned him before the lord-mayor, and other the king's justices, notwithstanding his request to be tried by his peers; whence hurrying him to the standard in Cheapside, they cut off his head, and carried it on a pole, causing his naked body to be drawn drawn at a horse's tail into Southwark, to St. Thomas of Waterings, and there hanged and quartered.

This his untimely end happened on July 4, in 29th of Henry VI. leaving Sir William Fienes, his son by Emeline his wife, daughter of — Cromer, of Willingham, (and by her mother, one of the coheirs of Tryllow) then about twenty-four years of age: which Sir WILLIAM FIENES, by special writ, was summoned to parliament the same 29th of Henry VI. Before the end of which year, being seized of an estate in tail (to himself, and the heirs male of his body) of the office of constable of Dover-castle, and warden of the Cinque-ports, by virtue of a patent thereof to James his father, he granted all his right and title thereunto to Humphry, duke of Buckingham, and to his heirs male.

In 30th of Henry VI. he was retained to serve the king in his wars in France, with twenty men at arms, and eighty archers; and the next year with forty-nine men at arms, and nine hundred archers, in Aquitain; continuing in those parts to the 38th of that king's reign.

In 1st of Edward IV. he obtained a grant of the office of constable of Porchester-castle, in the county of Southampton, for life, and the like of Pevensey-castle, in the county of Suffex. And being one of the lords who attended that king into the North, the same year was made vice-admiral to Richard Nevil, the great earl of Warwick, then high-admiral of England. And in 10th of Edward IV. was one of the lords that fled with the king into Flanders; and on his return landed with him at Ravenspur, in Holderness, but soon after was slain in the battle at Barnet.

This William married Margaret, the daughter and heir to William Wickham, son and heir to Sir Thomas Wickham, knight, son of William Perot, by Alice his wife, daughter of William Champneis, by Agnes his wife, sister to William of Wickham, bishop of Winchester, and founder of New-college, in Oxford. By which match he had the lordship of Broughton, near Banbury, in the county of Oxford, and had summons to parliament from 29th of Henry VI. (as is observed before) to 9th of Edward IV. inclusive.

It is said by Leland, in his Itinerary, that the last of the lords Say, which was this William Fienes, (for after him, for divers descents, none had summons to parliament) being in renown, was twice taken prisoner, whereby he suffered much, and was forced to mortgage the greatest part of his lands, so that the barony became extinct; and that the heirs male of the family were only called Fienes.

Consonant whereto,

HENRY FIENES, the son and heir of this last mentioned Sir William Fienes, (residing at Broughton) tho' he used the title of lord Say, had never summons to parliament. He died August 1, 16th of Edward IV. leaving issue, by Anne his wife, daughter of Sir Richard Harcourt, of Stanton-Harcourt, in the county of Oxford, knight, Richard, his son and heir, then two years of age: which

RICHARD FIENES afterwards married Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Crofts, of Chipping-Norton, in the county of Oxford, esquire, and by her had one son, Edward Fienes, and three daughters; of whom Elizabeth was wife to William D'Anvers, of Culworth, in Northamptonshire, esquire, and, by her, ancestor to the present baronet of that name. Which

EDWARD FIENES took to wife Margaret, daughter of Sir John Danvers, of Dantley, in the county of Wilts, knight, and having made his will, June 12, A. D. 1527, died at Broughton, in the county of Oxford, as appears by inquisition taken at Ivilcher, September 25, in 21st of Henry VIII. seized of the manors of Burnham, and Brerie, in the county of Somerset; leaving Richard his son and heir, of the age of eight years and fourteen days, at the taking of the inquisition.

Also two daughters.

1. Elizabeth, who became the wife of Francis Barentine, esquire.

2. Diana.

This last mentioned

RICHARD FIENES, married Ursula, daughter of Richard Farmer, of Easton-Neston, in Northamptonshire, esquire, ancestor to the earl of Pomfret; and deceased, leaving by her,

RICHARD FIENES, his son and heir, who married Elizabeth, the daughter of Sir William Kingmill, knight, and, A. D. 1592, was knighted; but by reason of that discontinuance of summons to parliament of his great-grandfather, grandfather, and father, (tho' the two first had used the title of lord Say) he obtained letters-patent from king James I. whereby the said title of baron Say and Sele, was fully recognized and confirmed to him, and the heirs male of his body, August 9, A. D. 1603, 1st of James I. and it appears by inquisition after his decease, taken at Oxford, May 28, in 11th of James I. that he died seized of the manors of Broughton, and the advowson of the church of Bloxham-Fenys, alias Bloxham-Wickham, and the hundred of Bloxham; the manors of Bloxham-Beauchamp, North-Newington, and Shutteford, in Oxfordshire; and the manor of Norton, with the appurtenances, in Weston, in Gloucestershire: and that William Fienes, by Elizabeth his wife, was his son and heir, and of the age of twenty-eight years, the said 28th of May: which

(First Viscount.) WILLIAM FIENES (as the said inquisition farther shews) in 43d of queen Elizabeth, in his father's life-time, married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Temple, of Stow, in the county of Buckingham, esquire: and by letters-patent, dated July 7, 22d of James I. was created viscount Say and Sele. By his said wife he had four sons,

1. James Fienes.

2. Nathaniel Fienes.

3. John Fienes.

4. Richard Fienes, ancestor to the present lord viscount Say and Sele.

Also five daughters,

1. Bridget, married to Theophilus, earl of Lincoln.

2. Elizabeth, married to Richard Norton, esq.

3. Constance, married to Sir Francis Boynton, of Barmpton, in the county of York, baronet.

4. Susan, married to Thomas Earle, esquire, son of Sir Walter Earle, knight.

5. Anne, married to Sir Charles Wolseley, of Wolseley, in the county of Stafford, baronet.

On the restoration of king Charles II. he was made lord privy seal; and dying April 14, A. D. 1662, was succeeded in his honours by his eldest son, (Second Viscount) JAMES FIENES, who took to wife Frances, one of the daughters and coheirs of Edward Cecil, viscount Wimbledon; and March the 11th, A.D. 1677, was appointed lord-lieutenant of Oxfordshire. He died March 15, A.D. 1683, having had issue three sons, James and William, who died in their infancies; and another William, who died in France, before he arrived at man's estate; as also two daughters, Elizabeth, married to Sir John Twisleton, of Barlow, in the county of York, knight; and Frances, to Andrew Ellis, of the county of Flint, esquire.

Whereupon the title of viscount Say and Sele devolved on (Third Viscount) WILLIAM FIENES, the only surviving son of Nathaniel Fienes, second son to the before specified William, viscount Say and Sele, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir John Eliot, of Port-Eliot in the county of Cornwall, knight.

Which William Fienes took to wife Mary, one of the daughters of his uncle Richard Fienes, fourth and youngest son of the aforesaid William, viscount Say and Sele; and by her had issue his only child Nathaniel, of whom his mother died in childbed October 23, A.D. 1676. The said William married secondly, September 8, A.D. 1685, a daughter of John Walker, of Banbury in the county of Oxford, by whom he had no issue, and was succeeded by his only son, (Fourth Viscount) NATHANIEL, viscount Say and Sele, who took his seat in the house of peers, May 3, A.D. 1699, and died unmarried the 10th of January, A.D. 1709-10. Whereupon the title devolved on

(Fifth Viscount) LAURENCE FIENES, son of John Fienes, third son of William, viscount Say and Sele: which

John Fienes married Susanna, the daughter and sole heir of Thomas Hobbs, of Amwell in the county of Hertford, esquire; and had issue six sons and four daughters, viz. John, Thomas, and Henry, who all lived to men's estate, but died unmarried; William, who married Cecile, daughter of — Ellis, esquire, widow of Richard Langley, esquire, and grand-daughter of James, lord viscount Say and Sele, but left no issue; Laurence, the viscount of whom we treat, took his seat in the house of peers, February the 24th, A.D. 1709-10; and Richard, who died young.

The four daughters were, Susanna, married to Thomas Filmer, esquire; Hannah, to John Knight, of Broughton in the county of Oxford; Elizabeth, who died young; and Martha, who died unmarried in May, A.D. 1738.

No issue male surviving of this branch, except Laurence, who succeeded to the title of viscount Say and Sele, as before-mentioned, and died in September, A.D. 1742; having survived Cecile, his lady, who died at her house in Mare-street, Hackney, April the 10th, A.D. 1741. We shall now take notice of the descendants of Richard, fourth and last son of William, viscount Say and Sele, and uncle of this Laurence: which RICHARD FIENES married two wives, first the daughter and heir of Andrew Burrell, of the isle of Ely, esquire, and had issue surviving him.

1. Faramus Fienes, who died without issue.
2. William Fienes, who married Prudence, only surviving daughter of William Coldwell, prebend of Ely, and vicar of Wisbech in that isle, by whom he had two daughters; and died October 6, A.D. 1689, aged thirty-five, and was buried in the church of Wisbech aforesaid.

Also four daughters.

1. Elizabeth, married first to William Danvers, of Broughton, in the county of Oxford; secondly, to John Brawn, of the county of Gloucester.
2. Mary, to William lord Say and Sele, father of the late viscount, as is already mentioned.
3. Anne, to doctor Beaumont Percival, of Harding in the county of Flint.

4. Arabella.

5. Alice, married to John Horn, of Winchester, in the county of Southampton.

He married secondly Susanna, daughter of Sir William Cobb, of Adderbury, in Oxfordshire, by whom he had issue one son, RICHARD FIENES, who having taken holy orders, was rector of Akely, in Buckinghamshire; and, by Penelope his wife, daughter of George Chamberlain, of Wardington in the county of Oxford, esquire, left issue one son and four daughters, viz.

Richard Fienes, now lord viscount Say and Sele.

1. Susanna, married to — Gordon, of Greenwich, esquire.
2. Penelope, married to Richard Wickham, of Strateley in the county of Oxford, esquire.
3. Elizabeth, married to the reverend Mr. Henry Quartley, rector of Wicken in Northamptonshire.
4. Cecilia. The son

(Sixth Viscount) RICHARD, viscount Say and Sele, married, January 28, A.D. 1754, Isabella, daughter of Sir John Terrel, of Buckinghamshire, baronet, relict of John Pigot, of Tatterfal in the county of Buckingham, esquire.

(TITLES.) Richard Fienes, viscount, and baron Say and Sele.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Say (name of a family) and Sele by writ of summons to parliament, 3d of March, A.D. 1446, 25 Henry VI. which title was recognized 9th of August, A.D. 1603, 1 James I. and viscount Say and Sele aforesaid, the 7th of July, A.D. 1624, 22 James I.

(ARMS.) Sapphire, three lions rampant, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a wolf segeant, pearl, his radiant collar and chain, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two wolves, pearl, collared radiant, and chained, topaz.

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Tatterfal, near Ailsbury in Buckinghamshire.

TOWNSHEND, Viscount TOWNSHEND.

LODOWIC, or Lewis, furnamed Townshend, married in England soon after the conquest, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Haywell, and was succeeded by his son,

WALTER de TOWNSHEND, who married Maud, daughter of Sir Roger Scogan, knight, and had issue

ROGER de TOWNSHEND, who married Catherine, daughter of John Atherton, of the county of Suffex, and was father of

Sir THOMAS TOWNSHEND, who married Eleanor, daughter of William Pain, of the county of Norfolk; and departing this life, was interred in the east-part of the church of White Friars, near Fleet-street. His son and heir,

Sir ROGER TOWNSHEND, married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Thomas Gigges, of Rollirby, in Norfolk, and had issue a son and heir,

JOHN TOWNSHEND, who by his last will dated at Raynham St Mary, A. D. 1465, orders his body to be buried in the parish church of Raynham, in the middle of the body of the church, before the image of the crucifix of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was accordingly done, and the following memorial of him raised:

“Orate pro anima Johannis Townshend, filii Rogeri & Elianore, qui obiit iii. die Octobris ann. dom. MCCCCLXV.

He married first, Agnes, daughter and heir of Sir Robert Lunsford, of Rumford, in Essex; after her decease, he married secondly, Isabel—. By the former marriage, besides a daughter Joan, the wife of John Blakeney, esquire, he had a son and heir,

ROGER TOWNSHEND, who was entered at Lincolns-Inn for the study of the laws, in the reign of king Henry the Sixth, which was then so chargeable, and in such high estimation, that none but gentlemen were of the Inns of Court, as is observed by that great and famous lawyer Sir John Fortescue, chief justice of the King's-Bench in king Henry the Sixth's time. He arrived to such a degree of eminency, that he was elected one of the governors of the society of Lincoln's-Inn in the 1st, 3d, 5th, and 6th years of the reign of king Edward IV. and two years after, was chosen Lent reader to that society, to which none but persons of great learning were elected. In 12 Edward IV. he was returned to parliament for Calne, in Wiltshire, and was double reader to the society of Lincoln's-Inn in 14 Edward IV. and the same year again chosen one of the governors thereof; as also in 16 Edward IV. In 17 Edward IV. he was called to the degree of serjeant at law; and in 1 Edward V. constituted the king's serjeant at law. The year following, he was made one of the justices of the court of Common Pleas, wherein he continued till he died, his patent being renewed by king Henry VII. on his accession to the crown, who also conferred on him the honour of knighthood in his chamber at Worcester, on Whitsunday before his coronation. He enlarged his estate by his marriage with Anne, daughter and coheir of Sir William de Brewse, of Wenham-hall, in the county of Suffolk, knight, who deceased on the 31st of October, in 5 Henry VII. They had a numerous issue, whereof six sons and five daughters lived to men and women's estate, and were honourably disposed of.

1. Thomasine was wife of Sir Thomas Woodhouse, of Kimberley, in the county of Norfolk, knight of the Bath at the marriage of prince Arthur, eldest son of king Henry VII. from whom the present baronet of that name is descended.

2. Another was wedded to Anthony Castel, of Raveningham, in the county of Norfolk.

3. Anne, was betrothed to Philip Crescener, of Attilborough, in the county of Norfolk, esquire.

4. Susan, was wife of Sir Edward Windham, of Felbrig, in the county of Norfolk, knight; and

5. Catherine, married to Sir Henry Bedingfield, of Oxborough, in the county of Norfolk, knight; of the privy-council to queen Mary, and made by her governor of the Tower.

His sons were,

1. Roger Townshend.

2. John Townshend, ancestor to the present lord viscount Townshend.

3. Robert Townshend.

4. George Townshend, of Dereham-abbey.

5. Thomas Townshend, of Testerton, in the county of Norfolk.

6. Giles Townshend.

The said Sir Roger Townshend died in the eighth year of king Henry VII. and by his last will, bearing date the 14th of August the same year, orders his body to be buried in the chapel of St. Catherine, in the church of St. Mary Rainham, if he deceased there; but if he died at London, in the White Friars church in Fleetstreet. before the crucifix. He constitutes Eleanor his wife, sole executrix, and leaves her guardian to his eldest son, Roger Townshend. He was buried at Raynham, where a fair tomb was erected to his memory; but no inscription is remaining.

Robert Townshend, his third son, was of Brackinnashe, in the county of Norfolk, and betaking himself to the study of the laws at Lincoln's-Inn, was elected autumn reader of that society in 37 Henry VIII. and constituted justice of Chester; also also knighted by the king the same year, on Trinity-Sunday, at Hampton-Court, after his return from Bulloign. He was continued in his post of justice of Chester, both by king Edward VI. and queen Mary; and deceased on the 8th of February, in the third and fourth of Philip and Mary, possessed of the manor and rectory of Gayst, and advowson of the vicarage of the church, the manors of Swantons, Foxleys, and Southall, in the county of Norfolk, and the priory and house of St. Augustine, in Ludlow, which descended to Thomas, his son and heir, who was at that time twenty-two years of age, and had to wife Anne, daughter of Henry D'Oyley, of Shottisham, in Norfolk, Esq. He had also Roger Townshend, ancestor to those of the name in the county of Salop; and Sir Henry Townshend, who became as eminent as his father by the study of the law. In 21 Elizabeth, he was constituted justice of Chester; and in 35 Elizabeth was in commission with William, lord Cobham, warden of the Cinque-ports, Thomas, lord Buckhurst, &c. to inquire what persons came from beyond the seas, and adhered to the bishop of Rome, and to put the laws in execution against jesuits. In the first year of king James I. he was continued justice of Chester, and chosen one of the vice-chamberlains of that city, a post to which none but persons of honour were elected; and in the fifteenth year of the same reign, was of the council to William, lord Compton, lord president and lieutenant within the dominion of the principality and marches of Wales. He deceased in 19 Jac. I. whose issue still remain in Shropshire and Worcestershire.

ROGER TOWNSHEND (eldest son and heir of Sir Roger Townshend) in 5 Henry VIII. was nominated a commissioner by act of parliament, among other discreet persons of the county of Norfolk, justices of the peace, (as the words of the act are) for assessing and collecting a subsidy of 163,000 pounds, by a poll-tax, &c. for defraying the expence of taking Teroven and Tournay. In 10 Henry VIII. he covenanted to serve the king with ten men at arms. He was thrice sheriff of the county of Norfolk, viz. in the third, tenth, and seventeenth of king Henry VIII. and in 33 Henry VIII. chosen one of the knights for Norfolk, in the parliament then held. In 37 Henry VIII. he was knighted, on the king's return from Bulloign; and was one of the principal persons of the county of Norfolk entrusted by the king and his council, as appears by a letter from the duke of Somerset, protector of the realm, dated at the Tower of London, February 12, 1 Edward VI. wherein he signifies to the earl of Sussex, Sir Roger Townshend, Sir William Pafton, knights, the death of king Henry VIII. desiring them to take care of the peace of the county, and to call together all such who were in the commission of the peace, to execute their charge in maintaining of the peace.

This Sir Roger Townshend died without issue; so that we shall now treat of JOHN TOWNSHEND, second son of judge Townshend, who was seated at Brampton in the county of Norfolk; and having married Eleanor, daughter of Sir John Heydon, of Baconsthorp, in the same county, knight of the Bath at the coronation of king Henry VIII. had issue two daughters and four sons.

1. Richard Townshend.

2. Henry Townshend.

3. John Townshend, of Holloughton, in the county of Norfolk, esquire, who left an only daughter and heir.

4. George Townshend.

The daughters were,

1. Catherine, married to Francis Colvil, of Marshland, in the county of Norfolk, esquire.

2. Anne, the wife of Thomas Croftes, of Felmingham in the same county, esquire.

He was succeeded by his eldest son,

RICHARD TOWNSHEND, esquire, who resided also at Brampton, and died in the fifth year of king Edward VI. as appears by his will, bearing date the 20th of July the same year, (and the probate thereof February 12, A. D. 1544) at which time he was dangerously ill, and appoints Thomas Townshend, esquire, his uncle, sole executor. He married Catharine, third daughter and coheir of Sir Humphry Brown, of Ridley, in Cheshire, one of the justices of the Common Pleas, who was afterwards espoused to Sir William Roper, knight, ancestor to the Ropers of Welhall; but by her first husband had issue a son named Roger, and a daughter Elizabeth, married to Thomas Godsalve, of Buckenham, in the county of Norfolk, esquire, who deceased on August 2, in 30 Elizabeth, leaving by her Roger Godsalve, of Buckenham, his son and heir, at that time twenty years of age.

SIR ROGER TOWNSHEND, esquire, son and heir of Richard, resided at Raynham, and became famed for his prudence, valour, and other accomplishments. He enlarged his estate by divers purchases of manors, lands, &c. in the counties of Middlesex, Norfolk, and Essex, as appears by several authorities. And in the memorable intended invasion by the Spaniards, in the year 1588, shewing an undaunted spirit and bravery, Charles lord Howard, lord high admiral, conferred the honour of knighthood on him, the lord Sheffield, and two others, who had likewise signalized themselves in that great fight at sea; having power from the queen so to do.

He lived but two years afterwards, departing this life in the flower of his age, at a seat he had purchased of Thomas Sutton, esquire, at Newington, in the county of Middlesex, and was buried in the parish church of Cripplegate, London, June 30, 1590. His lady was Jane, youngest daughter of Sir Michael Stanhope, of Shelford, in the county of Nottingham, ancestor to the present earls of Chesterfield and Stanhope; by whom he left two sons, John, and Robert Townshend: she lived a widow till about seven years after his decease, when she was married to Henry Berkley, lord Berkley, viz. on March 10, A. D. 1597.

Robert Townshend, youngest son of Sir Roger, was knighted at the Charter-house by king James I. on May 11, A. D. 1603; and took to wife Anne, daughter of William lord Spencer, but died without issue, having been elected for Castle-rising, and Orford, to all parliaments from 42 Elizabeth, to the last parliament of king James I.

JOHN TOWNSHEND, esquire, the eldest son, was elected to parliament for Castle-rising in Norfolk, in 35 Elizabeth; and four years after, when the earl of Essex had concerted the invading of the Spanish dominions, in the year 1596, he followed the example of his father, going in person in the service of his country, in that expedition; and and for his signal valour in entering the town of Cales, was knighted by the general.

After his return, he was the same year elected to parliament one of the knights for the county of Norfolk; and in the 35th of Elizabeth, for the borough of Castle-rising in the same county; also in the 43d of Elizabeth, for the borough of Orford in Suffolk; and was a leading member in the first parliament called by king James; being appointed, among others of the principal members, to consider of the grievances of the nation; and in a committee for a conference with the lords, concerning wardships; as also in other special affairs, as the Journals of the house of commons shew. During the sitting of this parliament he had the misfortune of falling into a quarrel with Sir Matthew Brown, of Beachworth castle, in Surry, which ended in a duel fought between them on horseback, on Hounslow-Heath, wherein they were both mortally wounded, Sir Matthew dying on the spot, and Sir John Townshend soon after, on August 2, A. D. 1603, in the first year of king James I. He was possessed of a very great estate, as appears by two inquisitions taken after his death, at Thetford, one in the 8th of June, and one on the last of November the same year, wherein it was found that Roger Townshend, his son and heir, was eight years of age, and that he died possessed in the county of Norfolk of the manors of Reynham, and Sherbornes in West Reynham, the manor and castle of Rudham, with the rectory, the lordship of Holloughton, the site of the priory of Coxford, the manors of Ingaldethorpe, Scales, Barwick, Haviles, Reyton, Halles-Payne and Morehouse, Scales, Horsham, with the rectory and advowson of the vicarage of the church, Buckenhams in Barwick, Eatshall and Stanhoe, Sherburnes in Stanhoe, Stinton-hall, Stibard, Pandles, and Barnier, with other lands and tenements. He left a daughter, Elizabeth, who was married to John Spelman, esquire, and a second son, Stanhope Townshend, who went a volunteer in the service of the States of Holland against the Spaniards; and being wounded in a duel in the Low-countries, it occasioned his death, tho' he lived to come into England, dying at London, unmarried.

His eldest son,

Sir ROGER TOWNSHEND, was created a baronet by king James I. by letters-patent bearing date April 16, A. D. 1617, in the 15th year of his reign, and the ninety-eighth in order of creation. He rendered himself so conspicuous, and was so well esteemed in his country, that in the third year of king Charles I. A. D. 1627, he was unanimously elected one of the knights in parliament for the county of Norfolk; was sheriff of that county in the fifth year of king Charles I. and served in all other offices suiting his degree. He resided for the most part of his life in the country, an eminent example of all christian virtues; and is mentioned with honour by Sir Henry Spelman, and other writers of those times; being universally esteemed for his piety and charity, having nobly endowed several churches with impropriations, to the yearly value of some hundred pounds. He built from the ground a stately house at Raynham, now the mansion-seat of the family, and departed this life on January 1, A. D. 1636, aged forty-one years; and was buried in the church of East-Raynham. He took to wife Mary, second daughter and coheir of the famous Horatio Vere, lord Vere of Tilbury, by whom he had two sons, and five daughters; and she surviving him, was afterwards married to Mildmay Fane, earl of Westmoreland, by whom he was father of Vere Fane, earl of Westmoreland.

Her sons by Sir Roger Townshend were,

1. Sir Roger Townshend,
2. Sir Horatio Townshend,

} both baronets.

And her daughters, who were married after their father's decease, were,

1. Mary, wedded to Thomas, lord Crewe, of Steen, in the county of Northampton.
2. Jane, married to John Windham, esquire.
3. Anne, married to William Cartwright, of Ayno, in the county of Northampton, esquire.
4. Elizabeth, who died after her father's decease unmarried.

5. Vere, married to Sir Ralph Hare, of Stowhall, in the county of Norfolk, baronet.

Sir ROGER TOWNSHEND, baronet, born December 21, 1628, was in ward to the king, and dying in his minority, was succeeded by his brother, (First Viscount.) Sir HORATIO TOWNSHEND, bart. who was under age during the civil war begun A. D. 1641; but when he became possessed of the estate of his ancestors, which was one of the best of the county of Norfolk (as the inquisition taken after the death of his father shews) he was soon distinguished for his eminent abilities, and courted by all those who had the interest of their country at heart; and the part he acted during those times of confusion, was a principal means of the restoration of monarchy and episcopacy. Lord Clarendon says of him, "That he was a gentleman of the greatest interest and credit in that large county of Norfolk, and was able to bring in a good body; that he had been under age till long after the end of the war, and so liable to no reproach or jealousy, yet of very worthy principles, and of a noble fortune, which he engaged very frankly to borrow money, and laid it out to provide arms and ammunition; and all the king's friends in those parts were ready to obey him, and the lord Willoughby of Parham (whom he had brought over to his side) in whatsoever they undertook." And he says, their design in the year, A. D. 1659, for surprizing of Lynn, a maritime town of great importance in respect of its situation, was the best digested, and the most likely to succeed in restoring of the king, of any that had been formed. He took to heart the oppression of his country, and had the courage, with the lord Richardson, and Sir John Hobart, to bring an address from the county of Norfolk, which, on January 28, A. D. 1659, he presented to the members then sitting, "wherein they demanded the secluded members to be admitted, or a free parliament chosen." This forwarded the arrival of general Monk; and most counties in England followed the example, and delivered addresses to the same purpose. During the time of his being in the council of state, he contracted a friendship with the lord Fairfax, who was general of the army; and being entrusted by the king with his affairs, he delivered that lord a letter from his majesty, and brought him into the king's interest; which, as lord Clarendon writes, greatly facilitated general Monk's advance into England, and his reception into the city of York. When the long parliament was dissolved, and another called to be holden at Westminster, April 29, 1660, this Sir Horatio and the lord Richardson were elected knights for the county of Norfolk: and he was nominated by the house of commons, with six lords (sons of peers) of their body, and five other commoners, to attend the king at the Hague, "to desire his majesty to make a speedy return to his parliament, and take the government of the kingdom into his hands." He was the first named of the commoners: and arriving at the Hague, they had their audiences of the king May 16, A. D. 1660; and Sir Horatio came over with his majesty, who had a full sense of his great services; and, in consideration thereof, advanced him to the dignity of a peer of this realm, by the title of baron Townshend of Lynn Regis, April 20, A. D. 1661; and August 19 following, constituted him lord-lieutenant of the county of Norfolk, and city and county of Norwich. Also further advanced him to the title of viscount Townshend, of Raynham, in the county of Norfolk, on December 11, A. D. 1682, 34 Charles II. He departed this life in December, A. D. 1687, having married two wives.

Z z z

and

His first lady was Mary, daughter and sole heir to Edward Lewkenor, esquire, son and heir of Sir Edward Lewkenor, of Denham in Suffex, knight, who deceasing without issue, A. D. 1673, his lordship married, a short time after, Mary, daughter to Sir Joseph Ashe, of Twickenham, in the county of Middlesex, baronet, by whom he had three sons,

1. Charles, his successor.

2. Roger Townshend, who in the reign of queen Ann was elected one of the knights for the county of Norfolk, also for the borough of Yarmouth, and died May 22, A. D. 1709, unmarried, and was buried at Raynham.

3. Horatio Townshend, born June 8, 1682-3, who was member of parliament for Yarmouth, in Norfolk, and Heytesbury, in Wiltshire, also one of the commissioners of excise; and died in October, A. D. 1751, leaving issue by his wife, — Starkey, an only daughter and heir Letitia, married to Brownlow, earl of Exeter.

The eldest son,

(Second Viscount) CHARLES TOWNSHEND, took his seat in the house of peers, December 3, A. D. 1697; and June 24, 1702, was constituted lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Norfolk, and of the city and county of Norwich. In 1706, he was one of the commissioners that treated of the union between the two kingdoms; and on November 16, A. D. 1707, was appointed captain of the yeomen of her majesty's guard, and was sworn of the privy-council to her majesty the 20th of May following. In 1709 his lordship, with the duke of Marlborough, were appointed plenipotentiaries to treat of a peace with those of France, and arriving at Gertruydenburgh, had several conferences with the French ministers about a general peace; and preliminaries were signed by the plenipotentiaries of the allies, the duke of Marlborough, and his lordship, May 28, A. D. 1709; and monsieur de Torcy went with them to France: but the French monarch refusing to ratify them, his lordship continued at the Hague as her majesty's ambassador extraordinary. On the change of the ministry, A. D. 1710, his lordship not coming into the measures of the court, desired to be recalled; and thereupon it was published in our Gazette, March 7, A. D. 1710, "That the lord viscount Townshend, her majesty's ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the states-general of the United Provinces, having desired leave to return home, her majesty had appointed the lord Raby to succeed him." And, on June 13th following, he was removed from his post of captain of the yeomen of her majesty's guard. His lordship concurred in all measures for the securing of the protestant succession; and on the demise of the queen, he was, by George I. according to the power invested in him by act of parliament, nominated one of the lords-justices of Great-Britain, till he arrived from Hanover. And in pursuance of his majesty's pleasure, signified to the lords-justices, he was, on September 17, A. D. 1714, sworn principal secretary of state, and took his place at the board accordingly. Three days after his majesty's arriving, he was received with great marks of his favour. On December 12, A. D. 1716, he resigned the seal of secretary of state; and January 23, A. D. 1716-17, was appointed lord lieutenant of Ireland; but declined going over to that kingdom, and resigned on the 19th of April following. On June 11, A. D. 1720, he was constituted president of the council: and the same year was one of the lords-justices in his majesty's absence.

On February 10, A. D. 1720-21, he was again made principal secretary of state; and the 26th of May, A. D. 1723, on his majesty's going abroad, one of the lords-justices of Great-Britain; and embarking with the king, in his passage through Osnaburgh was very graciously received by the duke of York. On July 9, A. D. 1724, being elected a knight of the most noble order of the garter, he was installed at Windsor on the 28th of the same month. On June 1, A. D. 1725, he was likewise one of the lords-justices, and waited on his majesty that year at Hanover; from whence he returned to Rye with the king, after a very dangerous passage, in stormy weather. In 1727 he was again one of the lords-justices, and waited on the king, who arrived at Helvoetsluys the 6th of June, and departed this life the 11th following, at Osnaburgh; thereupon his lordship returned, and waited on his late majesty on the 19th of June. On July 24, ensuing, delivering the seals of his office of secretary of state, to his late majesty, he was pleased to deliver them to him again; after which, on September 5, he was appointed lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Norfolk, and city and county of Norwich. In 1729, he also attended the king to Hanover. And on May 15, 1730, resigned his post of secretary of state, of which our Gazette makes this mention: "Whitehall, May 16. The right hon. the lord viscount Townshend having received his majesty's permission, resigned the seals of secretary of state on Friday last." His lordship was ever indefatigable in his concern for the honour and interest of the nation; and peace being fully settled in Europe, he chose to retire to his seat in Norfolk, where he departed this life in June, 1738, aged 64.

His lordship married first Elizabeth, only surviving daughter and sole heir of Thomas lord Pelham, father of his grace Thomas duke of Newcastle, by his first wife Elizabeth, daughter to Sir William Jones. Her ladyship died on May 11, A. D. 1711, leaving issue a daughter, Elizabeth, married married to Charles, earl Cornwallis; and four sons*:

1. Charles Townshend, born June 2, 1701, who on May 15, 1739, was appointed secretary to his grace the duke of Devonshire, as lord-lieutenant of Ireland; and after that one of the tellers of his majesty's exchequer, and was chosen member for five parliaments for the university of Cambridge. He married, May 2, 1730, Albinia, daughter to colonel John Selwyn, of Matson, in the county of Gloucester; and by her (who died in 1739) had issue three sons, 1st, Thomas Townshend, born February 24, 1732-3, member in the present parliament for Whitchurch, in the county of Southampton. On the 2d of August, A. D. 1766, he was appointed one of the lords of the treasury. He married Elizabeth, daughter of — Powis, esq. and has issue one son, John Townshend, and three daughters, Georgiana, Mary, and Albinia. 2d, Charles Townshend, born 1736. 3d, Henry Townshend, born September 27, 1736, who was killed in Germany, A. D. 1760; also two daughters, Albinia, married April 25, 1752, to George, viscount Middleton, of the kingdom of Ireland; and Mary, born March 24, 1734, unmarried.

3. William Townshend, who was chosen member for Yarmouth, in that parliament which sat first on business May 10, A. D. 1722, and served in the two succeeding parliaments for the same place. On May 29, A. D. 1726, he was married to Henrietta, only daughter and heir of the lord William Paulet, by his second wife Anne, daughter and coheir of Randolph Egerton, of Betley, in Staffordshire, esquire, by his wife Anne, eldest daughter and coheir of Henry Murray, esquire, by Anne his wife, viscountess Bayning. Having been aid-de-camp to his majesty, he was on December 7, 1728, appointed groom of the bed-chamber to his royal highness Frederic prince of Wales. He was also usher of his majesty's exchequer, and member of parliament for Great-Yarmouth in Norfolk, to the time of his decease, January 29, 1737-8, having had issue† by his lady, who died in January, A. D. 1755, one son Charles, who was appointed secretary to his majesty's embassy in Spain, September 17, A. D. 1751; and was appointed one of the lords of the admiralty in 1766; he serves in the present parliament for Yarmouth, in Norfolk; and also three daughters, Caroline, married to Frederic Cornwallis, bishop of Litchfield; Anne, born Nov. 10, 1730, married to Charles Hedges, esq. (this lady died 1758) and Dorothy, born Sept. 6, 1737, married to Miles Allen, esquire.

4. Roger Townshend was captain of a troop of horse in general Wade's regiment; and, on the death of his brother William, was chosen member of parliament for Great-Yarmouth aforesaid; also was chosen there in the succeeding parliament; and in 1747 served for Eye in Suffolk. On July 9, 1743, he was appointed aid-de-camp to his majesty, and was that year at the battle of Dettingen; and afterwards, the 5th of January, A. D. 1744-5, made governor of the forts and batteries of Yarmouth. On February 28, A. D. 1747-8, he was made receiver-general and cashier of his majesty's customs, being then member of parliament for Eye in Suffolk. He died August 7, A. D. 1760.

His lordship married secondly, in July 1713, Dorothy, daughter of Robert Walpole, of Houghton, in Norfolk, esquire, and sister to Sir Robert Walpole, afterwards earl of Orford, who left him a widower, March 29, A. D. 1726, by whom he had issue four sons†, and two daughters.

1. George Townshend, born Oct. 29, 1715, who taking to a maritime life, has distinguished himself in several actions during the former war with France; and, in 1747, being commodore of a squadron of his majesty's ships in the West Indies, took a large fleet of French merchant ships; and on the 4th of February, 1755, was appointed rear-admiral of the White in his majesty's navy; and in 1766, admiral of the Blue.

2. Augustus Townshend, who made several voyages to China, as chief super-cargoe and captain in the service of the East India company; in which station he died at Batavia, unmarried, in 1746, having then the command of the Augusta.

3. Horatio Townshend, who died unmarried in February, A. D. 1764.

4. Edward Townshend, born May 11, 1727, prebend of Westminster, and deputy clerk of the closet to his majesty, and after that was appointed dean of Norwich, and died such, Jan. 27, 1764. By his lady, Mary, daughter of brigadier-general Price, whom he married in 1747, he has left issue one son Edward, and five daughters, Mary, Elizabeth, Henrietta, Charlotte, and Lucy.

Of his lordship's two daughters, by this second marriage, Dorothy is married to Dr. Spencer Cowper, dean of Durham, only brother of William, earl Cowper; and Mary, born Aug. 20, 1720, wedded to the honourable colonel Edward Cornwallis, member of parliament for the city of Westminster, and brother to Charles, late earl Cornwallis.

(Third Viscount) CHARLES TOWNSHEND, born July 11, A. D. 1700, the eldest son, was, in his father's life-time, summoned to the house of peers, by the stile and title of baron Townshend, of Lynn-Regis, in the county of Norfolk, May 24, A. D. 1723, in the ninth of George I. and took his place according to his grandfather's patent of creation. Also on the same day, his majesty was pleased to appoint him one of the gentlemen of his bed-chamber, in the room of the lord Teynham, deceased. And on June 15, A. D. 1730, his majesty appointed his lordship lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Norfolk, and of the city of Norwich and county thereof, at the desire of his father the lord viscount Townshend, who resigned to him. And also the same day granted to his lordship the office of master, or treasurer of his majesty's jewels; which, on succeeding his father in his honours and

* A London register gives us two more, Horatio, son of Charles, lord viscount Townshend, and Elizabeth, born August 13, 1699.

William, of ditto, born June 9, 1702.

† We find the following two children entered in a London register.

Frederic, son of William Townshend and Henrietta, born March 8, 1731-2.

Henrietta, of ditto, born December 4, 1735.

† There is an entry made in a London register of another son,

Richard, born September 8, 1721.

estate, he resigned in 1723. In May 1723, his lordship married Audrey, daughter and sole heir of Edward Harrison, of Balls, in the county of Hertford, esquire, who had been governor of Fort St. George, in the East Indies; and by her had issue a daughter, Audrey, who is unmarried, and four sons,

1. George Townshend.
2. Charles Townshend, who was chosen member for the town of Yarmouth, in the parliament which sat first on business, November 12, A. D. 1747, as also in the two last parliaments. In June, A. D. 1749, he was appointed lord of trade and plantations. In 1756, lord of the admiralty. In 1757, treasurer of the chambers. In 1760, secretary of war. March 2, 1763, first lord of trade. In 1764, paymaster of the forces; and, on the 2d of October, A. D. 1766, was appointed treasurer of the exchequer, and one of the lords of the treasury; in which former capacity he departed this life, Sept. 4, 1767, greatly lamented by all those who know how to set a proper value upon extraordinary merit. In 1755, he married Caroline, eldest daughter and coheir to John, duke of Greenwich, widow of Francis, earl of Dalkeith, and mother, by him, to the present duke of Buccleugh. His issue are Thomas-Charles Townshend, born June 22, A. D. 1758; William-John Townshend, born March 29, A. D. 1761; and Anne, born June 29, A. D. 1756.

3. Edward Townshend died of the small-pox, June 29, A. D. 1731.

4. William Townshend, who was killed at Ticonderago, in the service of his country, July 25, A. D. 1759.

We now come to the eldest son,

(Fourth and present Viscount) GEORGE TOWNSHEND, born February 28, A. D. 1723-4, who was chosen knight of the shire for the county of Norfolk, in the parliament which met the 3d of August, A. D. 1747, being then colonel of a company, and aid de camp to his royal highness William, late duke of Cumberland; both which he resigned in 1750. He was also chosen for the same county in the last and the present parliament, till his seat was vacated by his accession to the peerage, upon the death of his noble father, in 1764; two years before which he was appointed lieutenant-general of the ordnance, an honour he has enjoyed ever since.

His lordship is also colonel of the twenty-eighth regiment of foot, and of the western battalion of the Norfolk militia; and on the 6th of March,

A. D. 1761, was raised to the rank of major-general.

On the third of August, A. D. 1767, he was appointed lord-lieutenant of Ireland, in which kingdom he landed on the 14th of Oct. following. The first year of his presiding in that important post, will be ever memorable in the Irish history, as productive of a bill for septennial parliaments, which passed both houses there, and was recommended to the consideration of the English parliament.

In December, A. D. 1751, he married Charlotte, only surviving issue of James Compton, earl of Northampton; which lady is now baroness Ferrers, of Chartley, in her own right (see the account of her ladyship as a peeress.)

Their issue have been,

1. George Townshend, born April 18, A. D. 1753.

2. John Townshend, born January 19, A. D. 1757.

And three daughters,

1. Charlotte,
2. Caroline,
3. Frances, born March 18, 1761,

} died young.

(TITLES.) George Townshend, viscount Townshend, of Raynham, baron Townshend of Lynne-Regis, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, April 16, A. D. 1617, (15th James I.) baron Townshend of Lynne-Regis, in the county of Norfolk, by letters patent, April 20, A. D. 1661, (13 Charles II.) and viscount Townshend, of Raynham, in the county of Norfolk, December 2, A. D. 1682, (34 Charles II.)

(ARMS.) Sapphire, a chevron, ermine, between three eschallop shells, pearl.

(CREST.) On a wreath a buck, diamond, attired proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side a buck, as the crest, on the sinister a greyhound, pearl.

(MOTTO.) Hæc generi incrementa fides.

(CHIEF SEATS.) Raynham hall, in the county of Norfolk; Denham hall, in the same county; and Rabley, in Middlesex.

[The page contains extremely faint, illegible text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side. A circular stamp is visible in the center of the page.]

THYNN E, Viscount WEYMOUTH.

BY the name of Boteville the ancestors of this noble and ancient family held lands in the manor of Stretton in Shropshire, for many generations, from the time of king John; in whose reign the two brothers, Jeffry and Oliver Boteville, of considerable rank in Poitou, came into England, in order to assist him against his barons.*

Geoffry BOTEVILLE, the elder brother, was the first that settled at Stretton, on the lands given him by the then earl of Arundel, which have been ever since called Botevilles-Lye, and are still in the possession of one of that name. This Geoffry was by king John constituted governor of Belvoir-Castle, which had been taken from the said earl. In the said parish of Stretton did this family reside, from the said Geoffry's time, till Sir John Thynne, the elder, settled at Longleat in Wiltshire, retaining still his ancient lands in Shropshire. His only son,

WILLIAM BOTEVILLE, died A. D. 1256, leaving one son,

Sir JOHN BOTEVILLE, who was knighted soon after the 20th of Edward I. his name occurring in an old roll among the knights of Shropshire, who attended that king at the siege of Caerlaverock-Castle.

Sir ADAM BOTEVILLE, the son of this Sir John, was also a knight, but attainted of treason in 15 Edward II. for taking part with Thomas, earl of Lancaster, at the battle of Borough-bridge. This was a great blow given to the family, which they never well recovered. His son,

John Boteville, was father of Thomas Boteville, who was father of,
Richard Boteville, whose son,
William Boteville, was father of,
Richard Boteville, whose son,
John Boteville, of Stretton, Esq; was called John of the Inne, from his mansion in Stretton, in the latter end of Edward IV. from which the name of Thynne is derived.

Francis Thynne, the herald, who drew up the pedigree of this family (now in the library of Longleat) has not mentioned any of the matches of his ancestors, before the said John Boteville, who married Joan, daughter of — Boulder, by whom he had issue three sons, William (or Ranulphus, according to Mr. Edmondson) Roger, and Thomas; which last died without issue.

Roger Thynne, second son, was father of William, who was father of Thomas Thynne, of Deverell, in the county of Wilts, who married Elizabeth, daughter of — Done, and was living A. D. 1625, very aged, as the pedigree affirms.

Ranulphus Thynne, of Stratton, in the county of Salop, (eldest son of the said first John le Thynne) died in 6 Henry VIII. A. D. 1515, and was buried with solemnity at Stretton. He married Joan, daughter of John Higgons the younger, of Stretton, by whom he had issue, Thomas Thynne, of Stretton, and William Thynne, master of the household to Henry VIII. father to Francis Thynne, one of the Lancaster heralds, whose manuscript collections sufficiently shew his great skill in the antiquities of his country, which are in the Cotton library, and in the hands of John Antis, Esq; the late worthy garter king at arms. The sisters of this Francis, were, Elizabeth, who married Thomas Pigot, Esq; Anne, who married Richard Maudley, Esq; and Isabel, who married George Paget, Esq;

THOMAS THYNNE, of Stretton, the youngest brother, married Margaret, daughter, and, at length, heir of Thomas Heynest, of Stretton Esq; His son

Sir JOHN THYNNE was knighted by the duke of Somerset, in the camp before Rocksburgh in 1 Edward VI. having been in the great battle of Musselburgh, and the siege of Leith in Scotland. In the first year of queen Elizabeth he served in parliament for Wiltshire, and afterwards for Heytesbury in that county. He was the founder of the family-seat at Longleat in the county of Wilts. By his last testament, dated at Longleat the 6th of May, A. D. 1580, (the probate whereof is on the 12th of November following) he orders his body to be buried in the church of Deverell-Longbridge in the county of Wilts, and that a convenient tomb be made for him and his late wife in the said church, according to a plot thereof, made and signed with his own hand, and to the value of 100 l. He bequeaths to John Thynne, his eldest son, the present possession of his house at Longleat, with the inheritance thereof; as also of all

* Matthew Paris.

† Which Thomas Heynes married Jocosa Gatacre, daughter and heir of Humphrey Gatacre, and his wife Eleanor Blyke; which Eleanor, was daughter and heir to Richard Blyke, whose father Richard, was son of another Richard other manors, according to a conveyance made by him in his life-time, and constitutes him sole executor, provided he gives security for the performance of his will, in the sum of 10,000 l. And ordains the lord-treasurer of England, (whom he trusts will take it on him, in respect of the friendship that had been between them of old time) together with Sir Amias Paulet, knt. overseers. He further wills, that Francis, Thomas, Harry, Charles, Edward, William, and Egremont, his sons, enjoy all such lands and annuities, which, by his deed, or this his will, he had conveyed and assured to them. And bequeaths to Elizabeth, his daughter, two thousand marks; also to Catherine, and Gresham, his daughters, a thousand marks each; and to every other of his daughters, a thousand marks; likewise to Dorothy Colles, the daughter of his son-in-law John Collis, and Anne his wife, 100 l.

Blyke, who married Catharine Fylilode, daughter and heir to Egidicus Fylilode, whose father of the same name, married the daughter and heir of John Astley, Esq; who was son and heir to John Astley, lord of Astley, in Shropshire.

He bequeaths to Dorothy, his wife, the third part of all his plate and household-stuff at Longleate, and Corseley in Wilts, and the two other third parts, to him, her, or them, of his blood, that after his decease, ought to have the lawful possession of his freehold at Longleate. And that all his said plate, hangings, bedding, &c. remain and be heir looms to such persons, as shall or ought to have the freehold of his house at Longleate; and that an inventory be made thereof within one month after his decease, to be filed to his will, and to remain on record with the probate of his will. He died on the 21st of May, A. D. 1580. At his funeral sixty gowns were given to so many poor men, which cost 72 l. 12 s. Sixty-one mourning suits were given to so many servants; also cloaks were given to a great number of gentlemen for mourning gowns, which came to a great sum of money. He was attended by the heralds with pennons, and a great number of escutcheons, &c. The whole sum came to 320 l. 8 s. 3 d. as appears from the bill indorsed by Sir John Thynne, and was in those days a great sum. His body was carried to the church of Deverell-Langbridge in a waggon, there being then no hearses.

He married for his first wife Christiana, daughter of Sir Richard Gresham, lord-mayor of London, and sister and heir to Sir Richard Gresham, who founded and endowed Gresham-College, and built the Royal-Exchange in London, by whom he had issue,

1. John Thynne, his son and heir.
2. Francis Thynne, of Kemsford in the county of Gloucester, who married Alice, daughter of Arthur Kocker, in Staffordshire, esq; and had a son of his own name, who was seated at Hildesley in Gloucestershire, and married Eleanor, daughter of Richard Rogers, of Bristol, esq; Their only daughter and heir, Eleanor, was alive in 1620.
3. Thomas Thynne, of Billson in Staffordshire.

Also three daughters.
Anne, married to John Cole, of Devonshire, and of Barton, in Somersetshire, Esq; the heiress of which family, not long after, brought a very considerable estate to the family of Portman, of Somersetshire.

2. Dorothy, was married to John Strangwaies, of the county of Dorset, Esq;

3. Catherine, married to Sir Walter Long, of Wraxhall, in Wilts.

Sir John Thynne, their father, had a second wife, Dorothy, daughter to Sir William Broughton, and sister to Sir Thomas Broughton, knight, by whom he had his other children mentioned in his will. Of which,

1. Henry Thynne, was seated at Kingswood, Wilts.

2. Charles Thynne, at Chedder, in Somersetshire.

3. Edward Thynne, married Theodosia, daughter of Roger Manners, by whom he had a son, Edward.

4. William Thynne, married Alice Talbot, and had issue a daughter Dorothy, who became the wife of — Wrightston, of Hampthill, in Bedfordshire. And a son, William Thynne, who married Mary, daughter of Anthony Wooly, of Hambden, Gloucestershire.

5. Egremont Thynne, is mentioned as the youngest son in the will; but Mr. Edmondson, I suppose not without some reason, has made him the eldest.

This Sir John Thynne was succeeded by his eldest son,

Sir JOHN THYNNE the younger, who was knighted at the Charter-house, London, May 11, A. D. 1603, 1 Jac. I. and died the 21st of November, A. D. 1604. He married Jane*, daughter of Sir Rowland Hayward, twice lord mayor of London, and coheir of her mother, Joan, daughter and heir of William Tyllsworth, Esq; This lady added Cawse-castle, and the manor of Stratton, in Shropshire, and other lands, to the estate of the family.

He had three daughters.

1. Dorothy, the wife of — Roscarrock, in Cornwall, Esq;

2. Christian, married to Sir Francis Legh, of Adington, in the county of Surrey, ancestor to the late Sir Francis Legh, baronet, of that place. And two sons.

Thomas and John.

The eldest,

THOMAS THYNNE, seated at Longleate, A. D. 1623, married two wives, first Mary, daughter of George, lord Audley, and Lucia his wife, daughter and heir of Sir James Mervin, of Fontell, in the county of Wilts, by whom he had three sons.

1. John Thynne, who died without issue.
2. Sir James Thynne, who married Isabella, daughter of Henry Rich, earl of Holland, but died without issue at Richmond, in Surry, October 12, A. D. 1670.

3. Sir Thomas Thynne, who married] Steuart, daughter of Dr. Walter Balquanquill, dean of Durham, and master of the Savoy, by whom he had two daughters, Steuart, married to Sir Edward Bainton†, of Bromham Bainton, in the county of Wilts; and Elizabeth, the wife of John Hall, of Bradford, in the same county, Esq; and an only son, Thomas Thynne, seated at Longleate, who was contracted to Elizabeth Percy, heiress of the noble family of Percy, on which account, he

* Collins says Joan.

† This family anciently spelt the name Bainton, with the addition of Bromham, in the county of Wilt; which estate is in the possession of Sir Edward Baynton, bart. of Spye-park, in the same county, who spells his name different, but is of the same family, by the female line, as the Bayntons of Oxfordshire and Gray's Inn, who are of the male line.

was barbarously murdered by count Conningmarke, Feb. 12, A. D. 1682.

There is a tomb of white marble for the said Thomas Thynne, Esq; in Westminster-Abbey, whereon his effigies is cumbent, and on the front, cut in relievo, the figure of him in his coach, with three assassins, one stopping the horses, and a second securing the footman behind, whilst a third shoots him; as was his cruel case.

It was performed at the cost of his executor and brother-in-law John Hall, Esq; and a Latin inscription was prepared, and intended to be engraved on it; but Dr. Sprat, then bishop of Rochester, and dean of Westminster, having the perusal thereof, he thought some passages in it offensive to the then government, and therefore would not suffer it to appear on the monument; so that there is only this inscription:

THOMAS THYNNE, of Longleat in the county of Wilts, Esq; who was barbarously murdered on Sunday the 12th of February, 1682.

The inscription the bishop of Rochester would not permit, as before-mentioned, is as follows:

Juxta hoc Marmor,
Immaturo fato extinctus, jacet
THOMAS THYNNE, de Long-Leate in Agro Wiltoniensi, Armiger:
Vir, illustri generi haud dispar,
Cui magnas facultates Familia,
Majorem animum Natura dederat.
Religionem a Romanensium corruptelis vindicatam,
Et jura Patriæ, ac Civium Libertatem,
Non semel suæ fidei a Comprovincialibus commissa,
Nec minus Majestatem Imperii Britannici,
Summo studio coluit & propugnavit.
Uxorem duxit Elizabetham Comitissam de Ogle,
Antiquissimæ ut & Illustrissimæ familiæ de Percy, Northumbriæ Comitum Filiam & Heredem
Unicam.
Hinc illæ Lacrymæ.
Summæ Felicitatis summa Invidia semper est Comes,
In unius Caput conjurarunt
Germanus, Suecus, & Polonus,
Nomina marmore indigna:
Quorum duo erant e satellitio Caroli Comitiss
De Conningmarke.
Heu! quam nefarium scelus moliebantur
Homines ad vim & cædem delecti?
Cui Patrando unus non suffecerat populus,
Tres Armati, equis insidentes, & tenebris cooperti, Unicum inermem, Curru sedentem, & nihil mali suspicientem,
Quatuorque plumbeis adoriuntur globis in viscera
displois,
Totidem emigranti animæ exitum aperuere.
Sed Scelus a tergo sequitur Vindicta,
Sicarii non sine numine deprehenfi
Manifesti criminis, quod Germanus jussit,
Polonus exequabatur, in subsidiis collato Sueco,
Damnati laqueo omnes periire:
Quin & ipse Comes de Conningmarke Sceleris non solum ut conscius, sed & author postulatus,
Et a turpi fuga retractus, capitis judicium subiit:
Verum juratorem suffragiis crimine solutus evasit;
In quem tamen ex reis duo ad mortem
Usque facinus rejecerunt,
Tertius silere maluit.

We come now to the issue of Thomas Thynne, by his second wife Catherine Howard, daughter of Charles Howard, son of Thomas viscount Rindon.

By this lady, who was buried in Westminster-Abbey, May 23, 1650, he had issue one daughter, Elizabeth, married to Sir Thomas Nott, of Richmond in Surry, and three sons; of the eldest William, and the youngest Theophilus, we have nothing but the names; most probably they died young; of the middle one Sir Henry Frederic Thynne, we shall have occasion to speak as father to the first peer in this noble family. But we must not omit a collateral branch descended from John Thynne, second and youngest son of John Thynne and Jane Haywood, already observed.

This JOHN THYNNE, was seated at Church-Stretton, in Shropshire, A. D. 1623, and married Susannah, daughter of Robert Rawson, of Shrewsbury, in Shropshire, by whom he had issue one daughter, Dorothy, and three sons, John, Walter, and Thomas. The eldest and youngest both had issue. THOMAS, married Mary Goodfellow, and was by her father of two sons, Thomas and James, and one daughter, Mary, who became the wife of ———— Urrey, of London. JOHN, the elder brother, married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Sir Henry Manwaring, knight. His eldest son John Thynne, married Judith, daughter and coheir of John Balston, of Shelly, in Nottinghamshire, Esq; and by her had issue two sons, John and Thomas, and two daughters, Judith and Elizabeth.

We return to SIR HENRY FREDERIC THYNNE, who was born March 1, A. D. 1613, and raised by king Charles I. to the dignity of a baronet, July 15, A. D. 1641. He departed this life at Kempsford, where he had been seated; and his remains with those of his lady were there deposited, and a plain stone laid over them.

By his wife, Mary, daughter to Thomas lord Coventry, he had four sons and two daughters. Catherine married to Sir John Lowther, afterward lord Lonsdale; and Mary married to Sir Richard How, of Wishford, in Wilts, bart. The sons were,

1. Thomas Thynne.
2. James Thynne, who died unmarried in 1709.
3. Henry Frederic Thynne, of whom hereafter as great grandfather to the present viscount.
4. John Thynne.

The eldest son,

(First Viscount) THOMAS THYNNE, inherited not only the great estate of his father, but also that of Thomas Thynne, Esq; who was murdered the 22 d of February, A. D. 1681-2, by virtue of an entail made by Sir James Thynne, his uncle. He was born in the year 1638, the day he would never let any of his family know. He was educated at school under the famous William Burton, who wrote the Commentary on Antoninus's Itinerary, &c. and under him he acquired a taste of the Roman antiquities of this kingdom, which never after left him. His other schoolmaster was Dr. Triplet, another eminent man, who published lord Falkland's book of infallibility. But the very learned and pious Dr. Henry Hammond, and Dr. Fell, (a late bishop of Oxford) were afterwards the chief directors of his studies; the latter especially, whilst he was at Christ Church in Oxford.

When Sir Heneage Finch was made lord keeper, this Thomas Thynne, Esq; then seated at Drayton in Shropshire, was in his place returned one of the members of parliament for the university of Oxford, ford, the 16th of January, A. D. 1673; and was one of the representatives for Tamworth, whilst he continued a commoner. In November A. D. 1679, he was chosen honorary steward of Sutton-Coldfield in the county of Warwick. In consideration of his great merits he was created baron Thynne of Warminster in the county of Wilts, and viscount Weymouth in the county of Dorset, December 11, A. D. 1682, 34 Car II. with limitation for want of issue male, to James, and Henry-Frederick Thynne, his brothers. He married Frances, eldest daughter of Heneage, earl of Winchelsea, and of Mary his wife, daughter of William duke of Somerset, by the lady Frances Devereux, his wife, sister and one of the coheirs of Robert earl of Essex, her brother. By which match he had an only son, Henry, and two daughters, Devereux, who died an infant, and Frances, married to Sir Robert Worsley, of Appledrecombe in the county of Southampton, bart. by whom she was mother of the lady Carteret, and of Thynne Worsley, esquire. She died April 2, A. D. 1750.

On June 18, A. D. 1702, his lordship was sworn of her majesty queen Anne's most honourable privy council, and took his place at the board accordingly: and was again sworn of the privy council for Great Britain, March 8, A. D. 1711, according to the act of union. On July 6, A. D. 1711, he was appointed custos rotulorum of Wiltshire; and March 31, A. D. 1712, keeper of her majesty's deer, and woods, in the forest of Deane. This Thomas, lord viscount Weymouth, was a person of strict piety, honour, and integrity. Among other his charities, he settled, by deed for ever, on the vicarages of Deverill-Longbridge, and Monkton-Deverill, an augmentation of thirty pounds per annum. He died the 28th of July, A. D. 1714, in the seventy-fourth year of his age, and was buried at Deverill-Longbridge.

His only son Henry, born February 8, A. D. 1675, had to wife Grace, daughter and sole heir to Sir George Strode, knight, serjeant at law, and of Leweston, in the county of Dorset, second son of Sir John Strode, of Parnham, in the same county, by Ann his wife, eldest daughter of Sir John Wyndham, ancestor to the present earl of Egremont; by this lady, who died April 3, A. D. 1725, he had two daughters, Frances, the wife of Algernon Seymour, lord Piercy and duke of Somerset. He died June 4, A. D. 1754. 2d, Mary, married to William Greville, lord Brook, and died in the nineteenth year of her age, March 29, 1720, and was mother to Francis, now earl Brook and earl of Warwick. And the said Henry their father dying without issue male, aged thirty-three, on December 20, A. D. 1708, the title, on the decease of his father Thomas, lord viscount Weymouth, descended to,

(Second Viscount.) Thomas Thynne, father of the present lord, grandson to Henry Frederic Thynne, younger brother to the first viscount: we must therefore return to the said

HENRY FREDERIC THYNNE, who was under the particular care of his uncle Henry Coventry, esquire, who, when he became principal secretary of state, made him his under secretary, or first clerk in his office: and afterwards he was appointed one of the clerks of the privy council, library keeper of the royal library at St. James's, and treasurer to Catherine, queen dowager of king

Charles II. Upon Mr. secretary Coventry's death in 1686, he was sole executor to him by his will, which enriched him very much: and he had upwards of ten thousand pounds with his wife Dorothy, daughter and coheir of Francis Philips, of the Inner-Temple, esquire, an eminent counsellor, who had a seat at Sunbury, near Hampton-Court, and was the son of Ambrose Philips, esquire, cousin-german, by his mother, to Sir Robert Sawyer, knight, attorney-general to king Charles II. whose sole daughter and heir, Margaret, was married to Thomas Herbert, earl of Pembroke.

THIS GENTLEMAN had been for many years much afflicted with the gout, which at last put an end to his days, in the year 1705, at London, being aged about sixty years. He was buried near his lady at Sunbury, where they had an estate, leaving by her two sons, and two daughters; Thomas, and John, Dorothy, and Mary.

He bequeathed in his last will three thousand pounds for charitable uses, which the lord Weymouth, his brother, laid out for lands in East Pennard, in the county of Somerset, and settled as part of the annual income belonging to the new church, erected on Rottenbury Common, near Longleate.

Dorothy, his eldest daughter, born Jan. 27, 1692, was married to John How, esquire, only son of John How, of Stawel, in Gloucestershire, esq.

Mary, the youngest daughter, died of the small pox, at her uncle the lord Weymouth's house, in St. James's-square, in 1710.

John Thynne, the youngest son, died of the small-pox, at Bristol, in 1708.

THOMAS THYNNE, esquire, eldest son, born at Little-Holland-house, at Kensington, was about the age of eighteen when his father died, and then at Eaton school, where he had spent some years. Soon after he was removed to Christ-church college, in Oxford; and about two years after that, his uncle, the lord viscount Weymouth, who was his godfather and guardian, sent him to travel. At his return, after an absence of two years, A. D. 1709, he, as the last heir male of this noble family, obtained in marriage Mary Villiers, daughter to Edward, earl of Jersey.

He died at London of the small-pox, on April 24, A. D. 1710, and was buried at Deverill-Longbridge, leaving his lady big with child; who, on May the 21st following, was brought to bed of a son, Thomas, late lord viscount Weymouth. By his father's will he was not to be in possession of his lands, &c. till he arrived to the age of twenty-four, which he never attained to; but in the meantime his guardians purchased for him, and his heirs, out of his father's money, the manor of Backwell, near Bristol, lands in Dorsetshire, and the noble house at Cosham, with lands, &c. and Toghill farm, at Colston, in the county of Wilts.

His widow, in December, A. D. 1711, was married to George Granville, esquire, who was immediately after created, by queen Anne, lord Lansdown; and deceased on January 17, A. D. 1734-5, leaving several daughters by him.

THOMAS THYNNE, only son and heir of the said Thomas Thynne, esquire, succeeded to the title and estate of his grandfather's elder brother, Thomas, viscount Weymouth, who died in 1714, as before-mentioned.

Which Thomas, lord viscount Weymouth, on December

1. The first part of the document is a list of names and addresses, which are arranged in two columns. The names are written in a cursive script, and the addresses are written in a more formal, printed style. The list includes names such as "John Doe", "Jane Smith", and "Robert Brown", along with their respective addresses in various cities and states.

1. The first of these is the fact that the
2. second of these is the fact that the
3. third of these is the fact that the
4. fourth of these is the fact that the
5. fifth of these is the fact that the
6. sixth of these is the fact that the
7. seventh of these is the fact that the
8. eighth of these is the fact that the
9. ninth of these is the fact that the
10. tenth of these is the fact that the 101

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
LIBRARY
540 EAST 57TH STREET
CHICAGO, ILL. 60637

Other countries, such as the United States, Canada, and the United Kingdom, have also been affected by the pandemic. The World Health Organization (WHO) has declared the pandemic a global health emergency, and many countries have implemented strict measures to control the spread of the virus. The impact of the pandemic has been significant, with millions of people losing their lives and billions of people experiencing economic hardship. The pandemic has also highlighted the importance of public health and the need for international cooperation in addressing global health challenges.

[illegible]

December 6, A. D. 1726, was married to Elizabeth Sackville, eldest surviving daughter to his grace Lionel duke of Dorset: which lady died on June 29, A. D. 1729, whilst his lordship was on his travels. His lordship returned to England the same year: and, December 4, A. D. 1739, was appointed keeper of Hyde park, and ranger of St. James's park. He married, secondly, in July 1733, Louisa, daughter of John, lord Carteret, afterwards earl of Granville, and by her ladyship, who died December 25, 1736, and was interred at Longbridge Deverill, had issue three sons,

1. Thomas Thynne, his successor.
2. Henry-Frederic Thynne, born November 17, A. D. 1735, member in the present parliament for Weobly, in Hertfordshire.
3. James Thynne, born December 16, A. D. 1736, who died March 19, 1741, and was buried at Longbridge Deverill.

His lordship dying on Saturday, January 2, A. D. 1750-51, in the forty-first year of his age, was buried at Horningham, Wilts; and the honour of the family devolved upon his eldest son, (Third and present Viscount) THOMAS THYNNE, born September 13, A. D. 1734, who was on his travels in 1753. He was appointed lord of the bed-chamber to his present majesty in 1760, and master of the horse to queen Charlotte in 1764. In May 1765, he was appointed lord lieutenant and general governor of Ireland, and sworn of his majesty's most honourable privy council; but his lordship resigned this high post a few weeks after, without ever visiting that kingdom.

He married May 22, A. D. 1759, Elizabeth Cavendish Bentinck, eldest daughter to William, late duke of Portland; and by her ladyship he had issue one son,

- Thomas Thynne, born June 25, 1765:
- And four daughters,
1. Louisa, born March 25, A. D. 1760.
 2. Charlotte, born November 7, A. D. 1761, who died May 19, A. D. 1764.
 3. Henrietta, born November 17, 1762.
 4. Sophia, born December 19, A. D. 1763.
- Also two sons still born, June 25, A. D. 1766.

(TITLES.) Thomas Thynne, viscount Weymouth, baron Thynne of Warminster, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet 15th of July, A. D. 1641, (17 Charles I.) baron Thynne of Warminster, in the county of Wilts, and viscount Weymouth, in the county of Dorset, December 11, A. D. 1682, (34 Charles II.)

(ARMS.) Baruly of ten, topaz and diamond.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a rein-deer, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side a rein-deer, topaz, gorged with a plain collar, diamond; on the sinister a lion, ruby.

(MOTTO.) J'ay bonne cause.

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Longleat, in the county of Wilts; and at Botsfield, in the county of Salop.

St. JOHN, Viscount BOLINGBROKE.

WE have two families in England, of the name of St. John, who have the honour of seats in the upper house of our British parliament, and both descendants of one common ancestor. Baron St. John of Bletsho claims family precedency as the elder branch; therefore in our account of his lordship, we are naturally led to trace their ancestry as high as any authentic records will countenance our enquiries. Viscount Bolingbroke takes place of the elder branch as a peer of superior rank; therefore his lordship claims the first place in this work. His descent is from OLIVER ST. JOHN, second son of Sir Oliver St. John, by Margaret, daughter and heir of Sir John Beauchamp, of Bletsho, (who was afterwards duchess of Somerset) and younger brother to Sir John St. John, from whom the present baron St. John of Bletsho, derives his descent.

This Oliver St. John had the lordship of Lidiard Tregoz, part of his mother's inheritance; and was, as Leland writes in his Itinerary, a stout black man, and died at Fontarabia in Spain, in 1497. His last will and testament is as follows:

Ex Registr' vocat Horn in Cur' Prærog' Cant'

In the Name of GOD, Amen. This is the laste will of me Olyver St. John, esquier, sonne to the excellent dutchesse of Somersett. First, I bequeath my soule to Almighty GOD, and to our lady seynt Mary, and to the saynts of heven; and my body to be buried in the quier afore saynt Andrew, in the parish church of Stoke. Also I will, that my wife have durying her life, all my lands and tenements in Legeard Tregoes, and Polton, with the manor of Borwode and Whatfield-hall, which is myne by the resonne and gift of my lady my modre, with a place which I purchased in the lordshippe of Hachsmore, called Hillisthing in Dorsetshire. Also I will, that my wife have all suche lands as be myne, by the reason and gift of the kyng's grace, as Hatfeld Peverell, with the ternyns and wayes south, with Dapford and Depford Strond, otherwise called West Grenewich. Also I will, that she have the lordship of Garseynton; and that after her decease all the foresaid lordshippes, landes and tenements returne unto my sonne John, and to his heirs. Also I will, that my wife have the lordship of Lollan, the which I purchased to geve and sell, as in fee simple. Moreover I will, that Rauf Rochford have all such landes and tenements as I purchased within the lordship of Sowth Stoke, and North Stoke. Also I will, that my wife have all my goodes, movcable and unmoveable, and that she occupie as myne executrix, sole by herself, and to dispose all my goodes for the helth of my soule, as she thinks best. Thre being witnesses, master Richard Bullock, John Wrieth, Henry Bigate, and Rauf Rochford, with other yeomen; and made the seconde day of Marche, in the year of oure Lord God MCCCCLXXXVI.

B b b b and

The probate is dated the 10th of April, 1492. The inquisition taken after his decease, sets forth, That he died in the wars of Fontenabia in Biscay, the 1st of September, in the 24th of Henry VIII. leaving John, his son and heir, aged eight years. He was in the inquisition denominated of Ewell, in the county of Surry; and died seised of the manors of Lydiard Tregose, in Wiltshire; the manor of Warrington, in Oxfordshire; the manors of Hatfield Peverel, and Oermynis, in Essex; and manor of Deptford, called West-Greenwich, in Kent.

His wife was Elizabeth, daughter to Henry lord Scroop of Bolton, by whom he had a son, John, and three daughters. Elizabeth married to Gerald Fitz-Gerald, earl of Kildare; Eleanor, to Thomas Grey, marquis of Dorset; and Margaret, lady abbess of Shafton.

JOHN ST. JOHN was knighted by king Henry VII. having in 2 Henry VIII. brought forces to the aid of the king against the earl of Lincoln, Lambert Simnel, and their adherents, in the battle of Stoke, near Newark upon Trent, the 16th of June, when they were defeated, and the earl of Lincoln slain. And Margaret, countess of Richmond, mother to that monarch, who died on the 29th of June, in the first year of her grandson's reign, king Henry VIII. by her last will, dated 6th of June, 1508, 23 Henry VII. styling herself Margaret, countess of Richmond and Derby, and mother to king Henry the seventh, constitutes this Sir John St. John, who was then her chamberlain, one of her three executors; and the king, her son, supervisor, desiring him "To shew his special favour, help, and assistance, to her said executors, and to every of them."

She was foundress of Christ's and St. John's colleges in Cambridge, having left the issues and profits of her estate for that purpose, which was wisely applied by the executors, who were (as our historians relate) true to the trust and confidence reposed in them, in doing their part, by pursuing the foundress's intention. This Sir John St. John died in parts beyond the seas, 1st of September, 4 Henry VIII. leaving John, his son and heir, seven years of age, whom he had by Jane his wife, daughter and heir to Sir John Ewarby, by Catherine his wife, daughter and coheir to Sir Hugh Annesley, of Mapledurham in the county of Oxford. Also a second son, Oliver St. John, who was seised at Lambeth, in Surry, and married Margaret Love, of Winchelsea, in Suffex, by whom he had three sons, Sir Oliver St. John, Nicholas St. John, seised at Winchelsea, and John St. John.

His eldest son,

JOHN ST. JOHN, was in ward to Sir Richard Carew, of Bedington in the county of Surry, knt. who married him to Margaret, one of his daughters, by which lady he had three sons, Nicholas, William, and John. Whereof the eldest, Nicholas, was seised at Lydiard Tregose, married Elizabeth, daughter to Sir Richard Blount, of Mapledurham, in Oxfordshire, and by her had five sons and five daughters.

The latter were, Catherine, married to Edmund Webbe, Esq; Eleanor, married Sir Thomas Cave, knight. Jane, married Nicholas, of Manningford, in Wilts. Elizabeth, married Sir Richard St. George, knight, Norrey king of arms. Dorothy, married — Eggeck.

The former, John St. John, his heir, was sent to study the law in the Inns of court, and happening into a quarrel with one Bell, captain of the guard to queen Elizabeth, and champion of England, killed him in single duels, for which he was forced to leave the kingdom. He first served in the army under Sir Francis Vere, and Sir Horace Vere, in Flanders, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, where he had the honour of knighthood conferred on him. In 1600, by Elizabeth, he was sent with his regiment into Ireland, against the Spaniards, who had invaded there, and taken possession of Kingsale, and gave great proof of his courage and conduct at the battle of Kingsale, and performed other memorable services against the rebels. He was president of Munster, vice-president of Connaught, and master of the ordnance in that realm.

In 1613, on the meeting of the parliament, the 18th of May, there was a dispute in the election of a speaker of the house of commons, Sir John Davis being proposed by the protestants, and Sir John Everard by the papists: on which occasion Sir Oliver St. John, master of the ordnance, voted for Davis, who had a great majority; but the papists placing Everard in the chair, Sir Oliver St. John told him, if he would not leave the chair, they should be obliged to pull him out; and accordingly he and others gently removed him, and placed Davis in the chair. On the 3d of April, 1616, he was appointed lord deputy of Ireland, but did not go over for that kingdom till August following.

Over the choir-door, in Christ church, Dublin, it is thus written:

The Right Honourable Sir Oliver St. John, Knt. descended of the Noble House of the Lord St. Johns of Blesso, Deputy General of Ireland, who took the Sword of State and Government of this Kingdom into his Hands, August 30, 1616.

Sir Richard Cox, in his preface to the second part of the History of Ireland, gives this account of him, "That he was of a generous temper, and not inferior to any of his predecessors, in a sincere concern for the protestant religion, and the

the good of the kingdom; but he happened in an ill time, as did also his father, the worthy lord Falkland, whilst the Spanish match was in agitation. So that both these brave men, by the clamour of the Irish, and the prevailing power of their popish enemies; came away in disgrace.

However, Sir Oliver was not manag'd in his own vindication; and therefore wrote to the king, that he met a cloud of malicious enemies instead of good subjects; and that even some of the privy-council were spies upon him, and took occasions to lessen him, tho' they had no provocation for it; but his examination of a certain patent, according to his majesty's special order, and his righting the church against their depredations. And tho' the king in answer, assured him, "That his reputation stood without blemish; yet, his enemies afterwards not only prevailed by getting the lord Falkland to succeed him, but were so importunate for his coming over, that his majesty from Newmarket, on January 28, 1620, answered them, "That it were dishonourable to serve one in that eminent station so unkindly without a crime;" and adds this postscript, "He was never wont to be my fashion, so disgrace any ancient minister of mine before he was heard." He was sworn of the privy-council to king James in both realms; and in the government of Ireland behaved without any blemish on his character, except from the papists, who endeavoured to blacken him; and desiring to resign, he arrived in England in May, A. D. 1622, and was found so deserving, that on the 2d of June following he was created a peer of Ireland, by the title of viscount Grandison, of Limonick (by reason of his descent from an heir female of that house) with limitation, for want of issue male, to the issue of Sir Edward Villers, his nephew (half brother to the duke of Buckingham) whose son, Sir George Villers, accordingly enjoyed the honour, and was father of Barbara Villers, Duchess of Cleveland.

On the accession of king Charles the First to the throne, he was in the first year of his reign, the 13th of August, constituted high-treasurer of Ireland; and by letters patent, dated May, 21, 2 Car. I. was advanced to the dignity of a baron of this kingdom, by the title of baron Tregoeze, of Highworth, in the county of Wilts. The next year, 3 Car. I. he obtained a grant from that king, of the manors of Battersea and Wandsworth, in the county of Surry. He married Joan, daughter to Henry Roydon, of Battersea, Esq; and widow of Sir William Holdcroft, knight, and departing this life without issue on the 30th of December, A. D. 1630, 6 Car. I. being then aged seventy years; his dignity of baron Tregoeze, became extinct; and his brother's son, Sir John St. John, baronet, was heir to his estate.

Which

Sir JOHN ST. JOHN, his brother, had the estate at Lydiard, and having married Lucy, daughter and heir to Sir Walter Hungerford, of Farley-Castle, Wilts. (afterwards the wife to Sir Anthony Hungerford,) had issue by her, four sons.

1. Walter St. John, who died young.
 2. John St. John, who died young.
 3. John St. John, his heir.
 4. Oliver St. John, who died young.
- Also seven daughters.
1. Barbara, married to Sir Edward Villiers, by whom she was mother to three of the name of Villiers, viz. viscount Grandison.

2. Lucy, married to Sir Allen Apsley, knight, baronet of the Tower.
3. Joan, married first to Robert Ayte, and afterwards to Sir Charles Pleydell, knight.
4. Catharine, married to Sir Giles Mompeston, knight, of Sarum, in the county of Wilts.
5. Anne, married to Sir George Ayliffe, of Grettingham, in the county of Wilts.
6. Eleanor, married to Sir William St. John, of Hightley, in Glamorganshire, knight.
7. Martha, who died young.

John St. John, the only surviving son of the last Sir John, succeeded at Lydiard Tregoeze, and was knighted at Whitehall, February 2. A. D. 1608. He was created a baronet at the first institution of that order, May 22, A. D. 1611, being the seventeenth in precedence by creation. His uncle, the lord Grandison, gave him his estate at Battersea, and Wandsworth, &c. and being zealously attached to the interest of the royal party, in the civil war, had three of his sons slain in the king's service. William, his second son, was killed at the taking of Cirencester, in Gloucestershire, under prince Rupert; Edward, the third son, at the battle of Newberry, in Berkshire; and John, the fifth son, in the North. He married first Anne, daughter to Sir Thomas Leighton, of Feckingham, in the county of Worcester, secondly, Margaret, the widow of Sir Richard Grubham, knight, and had issue by the former, seven sons, and three daughters.

1. Anne, married first to Sir Henry Lee, baronet, secondly, to Henry Willmot, earl of Rochester.
2. Lucy, married to Richard How, Esq;
3. Barbara, married to Egerton.

His sons were,

1. Oliver St. John, who died in the life-time of his father, having married Catharine, daughter and co-heir to Florio, lord Vere, of Tibury, (which lady, after his decease, married John, baron Poulet) and had issue Sir John St. John, baronet, who died three months before he came of age, having succeeded his grandfather in his honours; and a daughter, Mary.

2. William St. John, slain in behalf of Charles I.
3. Edward St. John, as observed above.
4. Nicholas St. John, died unmarried.
5. John St. John, who shared the fate of his two elder brothers; he married Dorothy, daughter of Sir George Ayliffe, of Grettingham, but had no issue.

16. Sir Walter St. John, ancestor to the viscounts St. John.

17. Henry St. John, who married Catharine, daughter of Oliver St. John, lord chief justice of the Common Pleas, and left issue an only daughter, Anne, married to Anthony Bowyer, of Camberwell, in Surry, Esq;

Sir WALTER ST. JOHN, the sixth son, succeeded his nephew, Sir John St. John, baronet at Lydiard Tregoeze, and in the estates of Battersea and Wandsworth. He served for the county of Wilts. in two parliaments, in the reign of king Charles II. as also in that of the second year of king William and queen Mary. He had his chief residence at Battersea, and was famed for his piety, and all moral virtues. Dr. Patrick, bishop of Ely,

Ely, so justly celebrated for his many religious discourses, and his commentaries on the bible, was his domestic chaplain, and in January, A. D. 1659, dedicates to him his Mensa Mystica, wherein he acknowledges the civilities he had received from him and his lady, and tells us how commendably they lived. This Sir Walter St. John died on July 3, in the year 1708, at his seat at Battersea, in the eighty-seventh year of his age, and was interred in the parish church there; leaving issue by his wife Johanna, another daughter of the lord chief justice St. John, an only son, Henry, lord viscount St. John, and two daughters, Barbara, married to Sir John Top, bart. and Anne, to Thomas Cholmondley, of Vale-Royal in Cheshire, Esq; Which,

(First Viscount St. John.) HENRY ST. JOHN, having served his country in parliament the space of twenty-one years, was the 2d of July, in George I. created baron St. John of Battersea, and viscount St. John, of that part of Great Britain called England, with limitation to John St. John, his second son, by his second wife, and the heirs male of his body; and in default of issue male, to his third son, Holles St. John; and in default of issue male, to his son by his first lady, Henry St. John viscount Bolingbroke. His lordship died in the ninetieth year of his age, in April, A. D. 1742.

He married to his first wife Mary, second daughter and coheir to Robert Rich, earl of Warwick, by whom he had an only son, Henry lord viscount Bolingbroke; and by his second wife, Angelica-Magdalene, daughter to George Pillesary, treasurer-general of the marines, and super-intendant of all the ships and galleys of France, under Lewis XIV. his lordship had three sons, and a daughter, Henrietta, married to Robert Knight, of Barrels in the county of Warwick, Esq; created lord Luxborough of the kingdom of Ireland, and one of the members for Castle-Rising in Norfolk.

His lordship's sons by his second lady, who died at Battersea, in August 1736, were,

1. George St. John, who was secretary to the English plenipotentiaries in the congress at Utrecht, and died at Venice, in January, 1715-16.

2. John St. John, successor to his father's honours.

3. Holles St. John, who died A. D. 1738, unmarried.

(Second Viscount St. John.) JOHN ST. JOHN, the second surviving son, succeeded his father in his honours; and died in France in February, and his body was brought to England in March, A. D. 1748-9, to be interred with his ancestors.

He married first on the 17th of April, A. D. 1729, Ann, daughter and coheir of Sir Robert Furness, of Waldershare, in Kent, bart. which lady died July 11, A. D. 1747, and was buried at Lydiard Tregoze. He married secondly, Hester, eldest daughter of James Clarke, of Warton, in Hertfordshire, Esq; By this lady, who died March 8, 1752, and was buried at Wootton-Waven, in Warwickshire, he had no issue.

His lordship had served in the first parliament of the late king for Wootton-Basset, and in 1740, was appointed comptroller of the customs.

His issue by his first wife, were three daughters.

1. Louisa, married to William Bagot, Esq; eldest son of Sir Walter Bagot, bart.

2. Ann, died young.
3. Louisa, died young.
And three sons.

1. Frederic St. John, successor to his father as viscount St. John, &c. and to his uncle as viscount Bolingbroke, &c.

2. Henry St. John, member in the present parliament for Wootton-Basset, lieutenant-colonel in his Majesty's service, and groom of the bed-chamber to his late royal highness Edward duke of York.

3. John St. John.

We must now return to the half uncle of these children.

(First Viscount Bolingbroke.) HENRY ST. JOHN, who having distinguished himself in the house of commons, soon after queen Anne's accession to the throne, was made secretary at war; which post he resigned in 1708; and two years after was made secretary of state, and one of the privy-council: On July 7, A. D. 1712, in the eleventh of that reign, he was created baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, in the county of Wilts, and viscount Bolingbroke, in the county of Lincoln, with remainder, for want of issue male, to Sir Henry St. John his father, and the heirs male of his body; also October 24, A. D. 1713, was constituted lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Essex: but in 1714, the first of George I. his honours were forfeited by his attainder; however, he was restored in blood the 28th of May, A. D. 1723, and came to England. He died December the 15th, A. D. 1751, in the seventy-ninth year of his age.

He married, to his first wife, Frances, daughter and coheir of Sir Henry Winchcomb, of Bucklebury, in the county of Berks, bart. and to his second, Mary Clara des Champs de Marilly, widow of the marquis de Villeta, in France; but had no issue by either.

A monument is erected to his memory, of grey and black marble, standing against the church wall of Battersea, near the altar: on the top is his shield, impaling his and her coats of arms; and from the top falls a rich marble curtain, partly drawn up, which discovers a double urn of a brownish yellow: underneath is spread a sheet of black marble, with inscriptions in gold letters; on the right thereof is her busto, and on the left his lordship's. The inscriptions are as follows:

Here lies

HENRY ST. JOHN,

In the Reign of Queen Anne
Secretary of War, Secretary of State, and Viscount Bolingbroke.

In the Days of King George I. and King George II.

Something more and better.

His attachment to Queen Anne

Exposed him to a long and severe persecution;

He bore it with Firmness of Mind,

He passed the latter Part of his Time at home,

The Enemy of no national Party;

The Friend of no Faction.

Distinguished under the Cloud of a Proscription,

Which had not been entirely taken off,

By Zeal to maintain the Liberty,

And

his lordship. The attention was attracted to his lordship on the right hand, is described, and the black marble with inscription. It is a brownish yellow: underneath it is a black marble, which lies over a dark green drawn up, which lies over a dark green from the top of the wall, and the wall itself, impaling his and his coat of arms of Battersea, near the altar, on the top of and black marble, lying against a wall. A monument is erected to his memory, and

John St. John, brother to Mr. Father's and lived at Venice in Italy, 1718 John St. John, who was secretary to the king in August 1730, were by his second lady, who died and died in London in February, and his was brought to England in March, a. d.

to be interred with his ancestors.
e married him on the 24th of April, a. d.
Agnes, daughter and coheiress of Sir Robert de Walsingham, in Kent, baron which lady died in A. d. 1247, and was buried at Walsingham. She married secondly, Hester, daughter of James Clarke, of Warron, who died in 1247. By this lady, and was buried at Warron.
In Warron, he had no issue.
This lady lived in the 12th parliament for Warron, and in the 12th parliament.

And to restore the ancient Prosperity of Great-Britain.

In the same Vault

Are interred the Remains of

Mary-Clara des Champs de Mareilly
Marchioness of Villette*, and Viscountess Bolingbroke,

Born of a noble Family,

Bred in the Court of Lewis XIV.

She reflected a Lustre on the former.

By the superior Accomplishments of her Mind;

She was an Ornament to the latter,

By the amiable Dignity and Grace of her Behaviour.

She lived

The Honour of her own Sex,

The Delight and Admiration of ours.

She died

An Object of Imitation to both,

With all the Firmness that Reason,

With all the Resignation that Religion

Can inspire.

"Her fortune, says Voltaire, was scarcely any thing; she had little else besides expectations; and has often told me, 'she reproached her aunt for doing so little for her family.' Her uncommon understanding, however, made up for this deficiency; and madam de Maintenon, in her letters lately published, styles her, 'The most sensible person among her female relations.'"

We are sorry that impartiality obliges us to say, that his lordship carried himself so ambiguously in his public walk, and betrayed the confidence of every party with which he was connected, so notoriously, that the privacy of his latter days was not the result of his own choice. His abilities were never disputed, were always courted, till the perversion of them destroyed their value. In a literary way his parts were conspicuous; but even here he quarrelled with nature, and turned them to the worst of purposes. Conscious that he could not support his own positions, he left others the task of publishing a monument of his infidelity, which will damn his memory to all posterity, so long as the press shall be contaminated with fresh editions of his impious and detestable . . .

* She was the relict of the marquis de Villette, and niece to the celebrated Madame Maintenon, wife to Lewis XIV.

By his decease, the titles of viscount Bolingbroke, and baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, devolved upon his nephew,

(Second and present Viscount.) FREDERIC

ST. JOHN, at that time viscount St. John, &c. and he was introduced into the house of peers under his new honours, February 12, A. D. 1754. He was appointed lord of the bed-chamber to his present majesty, in January, A. D. 1768.

His lordship was married in September, A. D. 1757, to Diana, eldest daughter of Charles, late duke of Marlborough. By her ladyship, (who was appointed one of the ladies of the bed-chamber to her present majesty upon the first establishment of her household, but was succeeded therein by the countess of Hertford, January 7, 1768) he has had issue,

1. George St. John, born March 5, A. D. 1761.
2. Frederic St. John, born December 20, 1763.
3. Charlotte, died young.

(TITLES.) Frederic St. John, lord viscount Bolingbroke, and lord viscount St. John, baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, and baron St. John of Battersea, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet May 22, A. D. 1611, (9 James I.) baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, and viscount Bolingbroke, July 7, A. D. 1711, (11 Queen Anne); and baron St. John of Battersea, in the county of Surry, and viscount St. John, July 2, A. D. 1716, (2 George I.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, on a chief, ruby, two mullets pierced, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a mount proper, and therefrom a faulcon rising, with bells, or, and ducally gorged, gules.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two eagles, with wings expanded, topaz, crowned ducally, ruby, and upon each breast a pair of horses hames, tied at the bottom and top, proper, within which is party per pale, pearl and ruby.

(MOTTO.) Nec quære nec spernere honorem.

(CHIEF SEATS.) Battersea, Surry; Lydiard Tregoze, Wilts.

By his decease, the titles of viscount Bolingbroke, and baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, devolved upon his nephew,

(Second and present Viscount.) FREDERIC

ST. JOHN, at that time viscount St. John, &c. and he was introduced into the house of peers under his new honours, February 12, A. D. 1754. He was appointed lord of the bed-chamber to his present majesty, in January, A. D. 1768.

His lordship was married in September, A. D. 1757, to Diana, eldest daughter of Charles, late duke of Marlborough. By her ladyship, (who was appointed one of the ladies of the bed-chamber to her present majesty upon the first establishment of her household, but was succeeded therein by the countess of Hertford, January 7, 1768) he has had issue,

1. George St. John, born March 5, A. D. 1761.
2. Frederic St. John, born December 20, 1763.
3. Charlotte, died young.

(TITLES.) Frederic St. John, lord viscount Bolingbroke, and lord viscount St. John, baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, and baron St. John of Battersea, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet May 22, A. D. 1611, (9 James I.) baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, and viscount Bolingbroke, July 7, A. D. 1711, (11 Queen Anne); and baron St. John of Battersea, in the county of Surry, and viscount St. John, July 2, A. D. 1716, (2 George I.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, on a chief, ruby, two mullets pierced, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a mount proper, and therefrom a faulcon rising, with bells, or, and ducally gorged, gules.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two eagles, with wings expanded, topaz, crowned ducally, ruby, and upon each breast a pair of horses hames, tied at the bottom and top, proper, within which is party per pale, pearl and ruby.

(MOTTO.) Nec quære nec spernere honorem.

(CHIEF SEATS.) Battersea, Surry; Lydiard Tregoze, Wilts.

By his decease, the titles of viscount Bolingbroke, and baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, devolved upon his nephew,

(Second and present Viscount.) FREDERIC

ST. JOHN, at that time viscount St. John, &c. and he was introduced into the house of peers under his new honours, February 12, A. D. 1754. He was appointed lord of the bed-chamber to his present majesty, in January, A. D. 1768.

His lordship was married in September, A. D. 1757, to Diana, eldest daughter of Charles, late duke of Marlborough. By her ladyship, (who was appointed one of the ladies of the bed-chamber to her present majesty upon the first establishment of her household, but was succeeded therein by the countess of Hertford, January 7, 1768) he has had issue,

1. George St. John, born March 5, A. D. 1761.
2. Frederic St. John, born December 20, 1763.
3. Charlotte, died young.

(TITLES.) Frederic St. John, lord viscount Bolingbroke, and lord viscount St. John, baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, and baron St. John of Battersea, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet May 22, A. D. 1611, (9 James I.) baron St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, and viscount Bolingbroke, July 7, A. D. 1711, (11 Queen Anne); and baron St. John of Battersea, in the county of Surry, and viscount St. John, July 2, A. D. 1716, (2 George I.)

BOSCAWEN, Viscount FALMOUTH.

IN the reign of king John the ancestors of this noble family were in possession of the lordship and manor of Boscawen Rose, in Cornwall, from which place, according to the custom of ancient times, they assumed the surname which their descendants have borne ever since.

The first mentioned in the visitation of the heralds in the office of arms, is

HENRY DE BOSCAWEN, who had two sons,
1. Robert de Boscawen.

2. Alan de Boscawen, who had issue John, the father of Mirable, his only daughter and heir.

ROBERT DE BOSCAWEN, eldest son of Henry, was living in the reign of king Henry III. and left issue,

HENRY DE BOSCAWEN, living in 21 Edward I. A. D. 1292; who, by his wife Hawise, relict of William de Trewoef, had issue,

HENRY DE BOSCAWEN, his son and heir, living in 1 Edward III. A. D. 1327; who, by Nicha de Lulyn his wife, was father of

JOHN DE BOSCAWEN, who came to the estate in 8 Edward III. 1332; he married Joan, daughter and heir of John de Tregothnan, with whom he had that estate, and had issue by her two sons,

1. John de Boscawen, his son and heir.

2. Otho de Boscawen.

Also a daughter,

Amy, married to John Chiderton.

The said

JOHN DE BOSCAWEN succeeded his father, in 31 Edward III. A. D. 1356. He wedded Joan, daughter and heir of Otho de Albalanda, lineally descended from Osbert de Albalanda, living in 1313, 7 Edward II. who bore for his arms, gules, three bends argent. By this match a great estate accrued to their son and heir,

JOHN BOSCAWEN, who, by Rose his wife, daughter of William Brett, esquire, had issue,

HUGH BOSCAWEN, his son and heir, that succeeded him in his estate; and married Joan, daughter of Robert Trenowith, and heir of her mother Maud, daughter and heir of — Tregarick, of an ancient family in Cornwall. His son and heir was

RICHARD BOSCAWEN, living in 6 Edward IV. 1465, who, by his wife Maud, daughter and heir of Laurence Haslep, of Trewonall, in Cornwall, esquire, (by Eleanor his wife, daughter and heir of William Trevilla, of the same county) had issue Bennet Boscawen, esquire, who died without issue, and JOHN BOSCAWEN, of Tregothnan, in the county of Cornwall, esquire, who, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Nicholas Loare, living in 22 Edward IV. had issue three sons and five daughters.

1. Jane was first the wife of Richard Trevenor, and, after his decease, of — Courtenay.

2. Christian, married first Thomas Ninnis; secondly, Walter Burlace.

3. Isabell, married Sampson Mannington.

4. Elizabeth, married Richard Curtis.

5. Grace, married Richard Kempe, of Blisland.

His sons were,

1. John Boscawen, of Tregothnan, esquire.

2. Hugh Boscawen.

3. Laurence Boscawen, who died unmarried.

Which John Boscawen, esquire, the eldest son, died on the last of February, in 15 Henry VIII. as is evident from the inquisition taken after his decease, which sets forth, that he was son and heir of John Boscawen, and of Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Nicholas Loare, esquire, and he of Richard Boscawen; and that he died possessed of the manors of Tregarreck, with the appurtenances; and of lands and tenements in Trevele, Tregithvant, and Trenorta, in the county of Cornwall; leaving Thomas Boscawen, his son and heir, (by his wife Margaret, daughter of Thomas Iretharfa, esquire, and coheir of Edward Courtney, earl of Devon) who was six months old at his father's decease, and died in his infancy. Whereby

HUGH BOSCAWEN, brother and heir of John Boscawen, father of the said Thomas, was heir to the estate; which said Hugh Boscawen, esquire, married Philippa, daughter and coheir of Nicholas Garminow, of the county of Cornwall, esquire; by whom he had issue seven sons;

1. John Boscawen, died young.

2. John Boscawen, who succeeded to a great part of the estate of his father; and died the 4th of May, in 6 Elizabeth, possessed of the manors of Tregarreck, Trevilla, and Nonsabellan, with thirty messuages in Boscawen, and the appurtenances thereunto belonging in Tregonye, Penbyrth, Trefraow, &c. as appears by inquisition taken the 12th of July, in 6 Elizabeth.

3. Nicholas Boscawen, of Tregothnan, was his brother and heir, of whom we shall have occasion to treat as ancestor to the viscounts Falmouth.

4. William Boscawen died without issue.

5. Hugh Boscawen, born A. D. 1550, married Mary, daughter and heir of Thomas Tredynick, by whom he had issue Hugh Boscawen, aged twenty-four in 1620; and a daughter Margaret, wife of William Bird, of Foy.

6. George Boscawen, married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Thomas Carnarthen, esquire, by whom he had issue three sons, Hugh, aged twenty-three in 1620; Edward, aged twenty, who died in 1649, and was buried at Penkivel; and John.

7. Edward,

7. Edward Boscawen died, without issue, February 15, A. D. 1619, aged sixty-three, and was buried at Penkivel.

NICHOLAS BOSCAWEN, the third son, succeeding to the estate of his brother John, had to wife Alice, daughter and heir of John Trevanion, esq; by whom he had issue, Hugh Boscawen, his son and heir.

And two daughters,

1. Grace, who died unmarried.

2. Radigund, the wife of Richard Cole, of Buckish, in Devonshire, and, secondly, of Sir William Cook, of Highnam, in Gloucestershire, knt.

The father of these children died May 1, 1626, aged eighty-five; and the mother September 17, 1580. They were both buried at Penkivel: and

HUGH BOSCAWEN, their son, having succeeded his father as lord of the manor and borough of Tregony, &c. was chosen one of the knights of the shire for the county of Cornwall, in that parliament summoned to meet at Westminster in 16 Charles I. and also in that parliament which restored king Charles II.

He married Margaret, daughter of Robert Rolle, of Heanton, in Devonshire, and by this lady, who died in December, A. D. 1635, had issue eight sons and three daughters.

1. Joan, born A. D. 1624.

2. Margaret, born A. D. 1631, married to Robert Car, but died without issue.

3. Alice, born A. D. 1633.

The sons were,

1. Nicholas Boscawen, born 1623, who joined the parliament army with a regiment of horse of his tenants. He died without issue. It is reported of this gentleman, that he accepted of a challenge from Sir Nevill Grenville for single combat, at the battle of Lansdown, in which Sir Nevill fell.

2. Hugh Boscawen, born 1625, who died in June, 1701, and was buried at Penkivel with his wife Margaret (daughter and coheir of Theophilus Clinton, earl of Lincoln) who had departed this life thirteen years before. Their issue were eight sons, who all died without issue. 1. Hugh, born July, A. D. 1649, who married Ann, daughter of Wentworth Fitzgerald, earl of Kildare, which lady married, secondly, Francis Robarts, and by him was mother to John Robarts, earl of Radnor. She died May 4, 1715.

2. Theophilus, born 1656. 3. William, 1657. 4. Edward, 1658. 5. Robert, 1659. 6. Charles, 1661. 7. Samuel, 1662. 8. Nicholas, 1664. Also two daughters, Margaret, born 1654, who died unmarried; and Bridget, born March 1, 1693, who at length was the only surviving daughter and heir. She married Hugh Fortescue, of Filleigh, in Devonshire; whose son and heir, Hugh Fortescue, was summoned as baron Clinton, in right of his mother.

3. Robert Boscawen, born 1626, who died young. 4. Charles Boscawen, born 1627, who died without issue. 5. Edward Boscawen, of whom hereafter. 6. Robert Boscawen, born 1630, died young. 7. John Boscawen, born 1634. 8. Samuel Boscawen, born 1635, who died 1663.

EDWARD BOSCAWEN, esquire, the fifth son, served for Tregony in that parliament which met January 27, A. D. 1658-9, which dissolved themselves, and ordered a new parliament to meet April 25, A. D. 1660, which restored king Charles the Second. He was one of the leading members of the house of commons in the reign of king Charles II. and one of the twelve commoners, who, with six of the house of peers, were appointed to examine and state the public accounts, the king having promised his two houses of parliament, that he would constitute commissioners for taking the accounts of the several sums of money assigned to carry on the war with the Dutch, to the end that his majesty and people might be satisfied in the faithful application thereof. He served in parliament for the borough of Tregony, from the restoration of king Charles II. to the last year of his reign. He married Jael, daughter to Sir Francis Godolphin, knight of the Bath, and sister to Sidney earl of Godolphin, lord high treasurer of Great-Britain, by whom he had four sons and two daughters; Dorothy wedded to Sir Philip Meadows, knight-marshal, and one of the comptrollers of the accounts of the army; and Anne married to Sir John Evelyn, of Wotton in Surry, bart. She died January 20, A. D. 1752.

This gentleman, who was born in 1628, departed this life October 31, A. D. 1685; the three youngest of their four sons, Edward, William, and Edward, died young. Both parents and children were interred at Kensington; and the only surviving son,

(First Viscount.) HUGH BOSCAWEN, succeeded to the estates, &c. In the reign of queen Anne he was a member in several parliaments for the county of Cornwall, and boroughs of Truro and Penryn; and was groom of the bed-chamber to his royal highness prince George of Denmark, and attended in that post at his funeral, November the thirteenth, A. D. 1708. He was constituted warden of the Stannaries thirtieth of April, A. D. 1708; and on the accession of George I. he was made comptroller of his majesty's household, and sworn of the privy-council, October 12, A. D. 1714. On the thirteenth of June, A. D. 1720, in the sixth of that reign, he was created baron of Boscawen-Rose, and viscount Falmouth in the county of Cornwall. On the third of April, A. D. 1724, he was appointed vice-treasurer of Ireland, &c. and on his resignation of that post, was constituted lord warden of the Stannaries: he was also captain of St. Maw's castle, and recorder of the towns of Tregony and Penryn. His lordship, who died suddenly at Trefusis in the county of Cornwall, on the twenty-fifth of October, A. D. 1734, was a true Englishman; had the interests of his country much at heart, and steadily pursued them. He was zealously attached to the Hanover succession and family, both before it took place, and ever after. The services he exerted in that respect cost him immense sums of money, particularly on the noble stand he made in his own county in the rebellion in 1715, being the chief in preserving the quiet and peace of the county of Cornwall. His attendance in parliament was very regular and constant: and in private life, as a husband, father, master, and friend, he was kind, indulgent, punctual, and exemplary. He was beneficent by nature, compassionate, and ready to forgive injuries, and had a peculiar generosity to those who were in distress and and want. He treated all ranks of people on an equality, and at the same time supported his character and dignity. He understood, and behaved as a man, who considered himself as such, and was not a stranger, in any respect, where good offices and humanity were requisite and necessary.

He was married April 23, A. D. 1700, in king Henry the Seventh's chapel in Westminster-abbey, to Charlot, eldest of the two daughters and co-heirs of Charles Godfrey, esquire, (by Arabella Churchill his wife, sister to that great general John duke of Marlborough) and had issue by her (who was one of the maids of honour to queen Mary, consort to king William, and surviving his lordship, died in the seventy-sixth year of her age, March 22, A. D. 1754) eight sons, and ten daughters.

1. Charlotte, born August 5, A. D. 1702, married to Henry Moor, earl of Drogheda, whom she survived, and died April 3, A. D. 1735, and was buried at Twickenham, Middlesex.

2. Anne, born February 17, A. D. 1703-4, O. S. married to Sir Cecil Bishop, baronet, and dying May 6, A. D. 1747, was buried at Parham in Suffex.

3. Diana, born December 18, A. D. 1704, who died young.

4. Mary, born November 12, A. D. 1705, wedded in August, A. D. 1732, to John Evelyn, esquire, eldest son and heir of Sir John Evelyn, of Wotton in Surry, baronet. She died, and was buried at Wotton.

5. Harriot, born April 25, A. D. 1708,

6. Betty, born April 20, A. D. 1709,

7. Eleanor, born February 18, A. D. 1714-15.

8. Arabella, born February 13, A. D. 1715-16,

9. Lucy, born May 6, A. D. 1719, married to Sir Charles Frederic, knight of the Bath.

10. Catherine, born December 11, A. D. 1720, who died June 5, A. D. 1736, and was buried at Bedington.

The sons were,

1. Hugh Boscawen, successor to the honours, &c.

2. Charles Boscawen, born June 12, A. D. 1710, who dying young, was buried at St. Michael Penkivel.

3. Edward Boscawen, of Penrose, near the Land's-End, Cornwall, born August 19, A. D. 1711; who during the two last wars shone forth conspicuously in defence of his country.

After having passed the subordinate offices on board his majesty's fleet, he was appointed, July 15, A. D. 1747, rear-admiral; also that year on an expedition to the East-Indies, August 29, was constituted general and commander in chief of his majesty's forces by land and sea employed in that service.

On the twenty-second of June, A. D. 1751, he was appointed one of the lords of the Admiralty, and on the tenth of February, A. D. 1755, vice-admiral of Cornwall. On the thirty-first of January, A. D. 1758, admiral of the Blue; and on the ninth of March, A. D. 1759, he was appointed commander in chief in the Mediterranean; on the tenth of November, A. D. 1759, he was appointed general of marines.

He was elected for the borough of Truro in the parliament summoned to meet June 25, A. D. 1741, also in the next parliament summoned to meet August 13, A. D. 1747, likewise chosen for Saltash, but made his election for Truro; and in the parliament, which first met May 31, A. D. 1754, was again elected for Truro. He died January 10, A. D. 1761, and was buried at Penkivel.

He married Frances, daughter of William Evelyn Glanville, of St. Clere, in Kent, esquire, by whom he left issue two daughters, Frances, born March 7, A. D. 1746, and Elizabeth, born May 23, A. D. 1747, who, on the second of April, 1766, was married to Henry, the present duke of Beaufort. Also three sons, 1. Edward Hugh Boscawen, born September 13, A. D. 1744.

2. William Glanville, born August 11, A. D. 1751.

3. George-Evelyn, born May 6, A. D. 1758.

4. George Boscawen, born December 1, A. D. 1712, who was elected a member for Penryn, in the parliament summoned to meet June 25, A. D. 1741; also in the next parliament, summoned to meet August 13, A. D. 1747; and was member in the late parliament for the same place; in the present he sits for Truro in Cornwall. In 1728, he had a commission of ensign in the guards; and had afterwards a company of the guards, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, having behaved with great bravery at the battles of Dettingen and Fontenoy. In 1745 he was constituted deputy-governor of the islands of Scilly; and October 14, A. D. 1749, was appointed one of his majesty's aid-de-camps; also on March 17, A. D. 1752, was promoted to the command of a regiment of foot then in Ireland. He is now lieutenant-general and colonel of the twenty-third regiment of foot, and brigadier-general on the Irish establishment. He married in February, A. D. 1742-3, Anne, daughter of John Morley-Trevor, of Glynd, in Suffex, esquire, and sister and coheir of John Trevor, esquire, by whom he has two sons, George, born September 4, A. D. 1745; and William, born August 27, A. D. 1752, and two daughters, Anne, born October 10, A. D. 1744, maid of honour to queen Charlotte; and Charlotte, born May 31, A. D. 1747.

5. John Boscawen, who served as a member for Truro, in the two last parliaments, and also with his brother in the present parliament for the same place. He was groom of the bedchamber to his late royal highness the duke of Cumberland, is colonel of the forty-fifth regiment of foot, and ranks as brigadier-general on the Irish establishment, and major-general in England since March 4, A. D. 1761. He married in December, 1748, Thomasina, daughter of Robert Surman, of Valentine-House in Essex, esquire, by whom he hath a son, William-Augustus-Spencer, born January 7, A. D. 1749, of whom she died in child-bed on the seventeenth following.

6. William-Frederic Boscawen, born September 18, A. D. 1717, who died unmarried.

7. Henry

[Faint, mostly illegible text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

[Faint, mostly illegible text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

7. Henry Boscawen, born April 18, A. D. 1722; who died unmarried.

8. Nicholas Boscawen, born August 16, A. D. 1723, was created at Cambridge doctor in divinity, June 15, A. D. 1753, at the time the duke of Newcastle, chancellor of the university, was there. He is now dean of St. Buryan, and chaplain in ordinary to the king. He married Jane, daughter of — Woodward, and relict of — Hatton, of Stratford upon Avon; Warwickshire, and by her had issue Hugh Boscawen, born March 25, A. D. 1755, who died on the 21st of April in the following year; and Nicholas Boscawen, born March 25, A. D. 1756.

This first viscount Falmouth, father of these eighteen children, departed this life in October, A. D. 1734, and was interred at St. Michael Penkevil. His eldest son,

(Second and present Viscount.) HUGH BOSCAWEN, succeeded to the honour, &c. of the family. When a commoner, he was member for Truro, in Cornwall, in the parliament summoned to meet on November 28, A. D. 1727; and after he became viscount Falmouth, was constituted captain of the yeomen of his majesty's guard. On the breaking out of the rebellion 1745, his lordship had such an interest in the county of Cornwall, that 6387 persons signed an association to appear armed in the best manner they could, under his command (being empowered by his majesty to form into troops or companies, such who were willing to associate themselves) or under some other officer or officers, commissioned by him, in order to defend his majesty's sacred person and government, preserve the peace of their county, their religion, liberties, properties, and every thing dear to them as Englishmen; and at the hazard of their lives and fortunes, oppose all invaders, rebels, and traitors whatsoever. Which association his lordship presented to his majesty at St. James's, December 18 following; and also presented an address from the borough of Penzance, whereof his lordship was recorder, to the same effect. In the same month his lordship, at his own expence, raised a regiment of foot, to serve against the rebels then in arms in North-Britain. And on March 18, A. D. 1755, his lordship was constituted major-general of his majesty's forces, and lieutenant-general, February 8, A. D. 1759, and vice-admiral of Cornwall, A. D. 1761. His lordship is also of the privy-council.

His lordship married on the 6th of May 1736, Hannah-Catherina-Maria, widow of Richard Ruffel, Esq; and daughter of Thomas Smith, of Worplesdon in the county of Surry, Gent. by Hannah Smith, his wife, who was an heiress, and both which families were lineally descended from Robert Smith, Esq; of Curdley, and Peelhouse, in the county palatine of Lancaster, who was the father of William Smith, bishop of Lincoln, Chancellor of the university of Oxford in 1500, founder of Brazen Nose College in 1511, and first president of the principality of Wales, but has no issue living by her ladyship.

(TITLES.) Hugh, viscount Falmouth, and baron-Boscawen-Rose.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Boscawen-Rose, and viscount Falmouth, in Cornwall, 13 June, A. D. 1720, (6 George I.)

(ARMS.) Ermine a rose, ruby, barbed and seeded, proper.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a boar passant, ruby, armed, bristled, and unguled, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two sea lions, pearl, gutty de larmes, i. e. spotted with blue drops.

(MOTTO.) In cœlo quies.

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Tregothan, near Truro, in the county of Cornwall.

BYNG, Viscount TORRINGTON.

OF this noble family, which was antiently seated in Kent, the first lineal ancestor we can trace was

THOMAS BYNG, who was seated at Wrotham, in Kent, in the reign of king Henry VII. and married Joan, daughter and heir of Thomas Hicks, by whom he had issue John his son and heir, with nine other sons, and a daughter, Rebecca, married to Henry Goddard, of Ruking, in Kent.

JOHN BYNG, esquire, his son, in 1535 having married Agnes, daughter to ——— Spencer, of the county of Essex, had issue two sons and three daughters,

1. Robert Byng, was seated at Wrotham, in Kent.
2. Thomas Byng, was of St. Peter's college, in Cambridge, and master of Clare-hall, and doctor of the civil laws. In 1572, the 14th Elizabeth, he was vice chancellor of the university of Cambridge; as also in 1578.

In 18 Elizabeth he was in the commission with William, lord Burleigh, lord high treasurer of England, Richard, bishop of Ely, and others, to visit St. John's college in Cambridge. In 36 Elizabeth, A. D. 1594, he was constituted regius professor of the civil law in the said university. He was seated at Grantchester, in Cambridgeshire; and in 1571, was married to Catherine, daughter of ——— Randolph, esquire, by whom he had several sons; of which Andrew, the second, was archdeacon of Norwich, the king's Hebrew professor at Cambridge, and was particularly recommended by king James I. to be master of Corpus Christi college in that university, by his letter of the 26th of March, A. D. 1618, as knowing personally, he says, his great worth, as he would be an honour and ornament to the university, if they made choice of him.

Henry, the eldest son of Thomas, was born in Westminster, 22d of July, A. D. 1573; and the sponsors at his baptism were Henry Percy, earl of Northumberland, Dr. Gabriel Goodman, dean of Westminster, and the lady Isabella Nevill. He was serjeant at law, and counsel to the university of Cambridge; who, by Catherine his wife, daughter of Thomas Clench, of Holebrook, in Suffolk, esquire, son of John Clench, one of the justices of the Queen's-Bench, in the reign of queen Elizabeth, he had issue several children; of which Henry and Edward married two sisters, daughters and coheirs of Arthur Coke, esquire, son to Sir Edward Coke, lord chief justice, by the lady Bridget Paston.

John, another of the sons of Henry, was counsellor at law, and counsellor to the university of Cambridge. He married Grace, daughter and coheir to Thomas Goad, L. L. D. regius professor of the civil law, in the university of Cambridge, and left issue John, born at Grantchester, in Cambridgeshire, in 1663, married to Frances, daughter of Thomas Shortyng, gent. by whom he left issue two daughters, Winifred, married to Richard Burr, doctor in divinity; and Catherine, to Henry Osborne, surgeon and citizen of London.

We now return to

ROBERT BYNG, of Wrotham, esquire, before mentioned, direct ancestor to the present lord viscount Torrington. He served for the borough of Abingdon, in the first parliament of queen Elizabeth, A. D. 1552; and in the 34th year of her reign was sheriff of the county of Kent. He married to his first wife Frances, daughter and heir of Richard Hill, esquire, by whom he had three sons,

1. George Byng.
2. John Byng, } who died without issue.
3. Francis Byng, }

And by his second wife, Mary, daughter of William Maynard, esquire, he had issue three sons; of which William Byng was governor of Deal-Castle; and a daughter, Anne, married to David Polhill, of Otford, in Kent, esquire.

The said Robert Byng, esquire, died on the 2d of September, A. D. 1595, in the 37th of Elizabeth, (as appears by inquisition of the court of wards) seized of the manors of Wrotham, Charlton, Rusthall in Spelhurst, by Tunbridge, Stodmer-hill, and Stock-hill manors in Yalding, and Stanstead manor, with Leyborne Wood, in Leyborne, leaving issue George Byng, his son and heir, thirty-nine years old: which

GEORGE BYNG, who succeeded him, was chosen member of parliament for Rochester, in the county of Kent, 27 Elizabeth, and for the port of Dover in the 1st of James I. He married Jane, daughter of William Cromer, of Dunstall, in Kent, esquire, by whom he had three sons and four daughters; whereof Elizabeth the eldest, was married to Thomas Polhill, of Wrotham, esquire, and the said George dying, A. D. 1616, was succeeded by GEORGE BYNG, his son and heir, born at Wrotham in 1594; who, in 1617, was married to Catherine, daughter to Sir John Hewit, of Headly-hall, in the county of York, knight, (which family is since seated at Waersly, in the county of Huntingdon) by whom he had issue a son, John, and a daughter Elizabeth, married to ——— Man, of Kelmscot, Oxfordshire, esquire.

JOHN BYNG, esquire, his son and heir, conveying away Wrotham, was the last of this family there. He married Philadelphia, the daughter of ——— Johnson, of Loans, in Surry, by whom he had several children; of which

(First

(First Viscount) GEORGE BYNG, the eldest, born at Wrotham, January 27, A. D. 1663, was created lord viscount Torrington. He went a volunteer to sea in 1678, at the age of fifteen, with the king's letter, given him on the recommendation of the duke of York.

In 1681 he quitted the sea service, upon the invitation of general Kirk, governor of Tangier, and served as cadet in the grenadiers of that garrison, till on a vacancy which quickly happened, the general (who always patronised him with great friendship) made him ensign of his own company, and soon after a lieutenant.

In 1684, after the demolition of Tangier, the lord Dartmouth, general of the sea and land forces, appointed him lieutenant of the Oxford, from which time he constantly kept to the sea service, remaining likewise an officer in the army several years after.

In 1685, he went lieutenant of his Majesty's ship the Phoenix, to the East-Indies, where engaging and boarding a Zinganian pirate, who maintained a desperate fight, most of those that entered with him were slain, himself greatly wounded, and the pirate sinking, he was taken out of the sea with scarce any remains of life.

In 1688, being first lieutenant to Sir John Ashby, in the fleet commanded by the lord Dartmouth, fitted out to oppose the designs of the prince of Orange, he was, in a particular manner, entrusted and employed in the intrigues then carrying on amongst the most considerable officers of the fleet in favour of that prince; and was the person confided in by them to carry their secret assurances of obedience to his highness, to whom he was privately introduced at Sherburn, by admiral Russel, afterwards earl of Orford. After his return to the fleet, the lord Dartmouth sent him with captain Aylmer and captain Hastings, to carry a message of submission to the prince at Windsor, and made him captain of the Constant Warwick, a ship of the fourth rate.

In 1690, he commanded the Hope, a third rate, and was second to Sir George Rooke in the battle of Beachy.

In the years 1691 and 1692, he was captain of the Royal Oak, and served under admiral Russel, who commanded in chief his majesty's fleet.

In 1693, that great officer distinguished him, in a particular manner, by promoting him to the rank of his first captain; in which station he served in the campaigns of 1694, and 1695, in the Mediterranean, where the designs of the French against Barcelona were prevented; and also the next year, 1696, in the Channel, to oppose the intended invasion of king James with a French army from the coast of France, which, upon the appearance of the fleet, was laid aside.

In 1702, a war breaking out, he accepted the command of the Nassau, a third rate, and was at the taking and burning the French and Spanish fleet at Vigo.

In 1703, he was made rear-admiral of the red, and served in the fleet commanded by Sir Cloudesley Shovel in the Mediterranean, who detached him, November 28, with a squadron of five ships to Algiers, where he renewed and improved our treaties with that government. In his return home he was in danger of perishing in the great storm which he met with in the channel.

In 1704, he served in the grand fleet in the Mediterranean, and commanded the squadron that attacked and cannonaded Gibraltar; and by landing and heading the seamen, the 23d of July (whose valour was very remarkably distinguished on this occasion) the town was taken. He was also in the battle of Malaga, which followed soon after, and for his behaviour in that action, queen Anne honoured him with knighthood; of which it was published in our Gazette, No. 4064. "St. James's, October 22, 1704. This day her majesty was pleased to confer the honour of knighthood upon George Byng, Esq; rear-admiral of the red squadron of her majesty's fleet, as a testimony of her approbation of his behaviour in the late action with the French in the Mediterranean." On the 18th of January following he was appointed vice-admiral of the blue; and immediately after, the French having two strong squadrons in the Soundings, besides great numbers of privateers, which annoyed our trade, he was sent with a squadron to cruize against them, in which he was so successful, that he took above twenty of their largest privateers, in about two months time, with the Thetis, a French man of war of fifty guns; and cleared those seas of the enemy.

In 1705, upon the election of a new parliament, he was returned a Burgess for Plymouth, which place he represented in every succeeding parliament to A. D. 1721, when he was created a peer; and one of his sons was afterwards constantly chosen there in his life-time. During that summer he commanded in chief a squadron in the channel, and blocked up the French fleet in Brest, with a much inferior strength.

In 1706, king Charles, late emperor, being closely besieged in Barcelona, by sea and land, by the duke of Anjou, and the place reduced to great extremity, and our fleet in the Mediterranean being too weak to relieve it, he was appointed to command a strong squadron fitting out in England; in the hastening of which service he used such diligence and activity, and joined our fleet with such unexpected dispatch, that the saving of that city was entirely owing to it. He assisted in the other enterprizes of that campaign, and commanded the ships detached for the reduction of Carthagen, and Alicant, which he accomplished.

In 1707, he served in the second post under Sir Cloudesley Shovel, at the siege of Toulon; and narrowly escaped shipwreck in his return home, when that great officer was lost. For being the next ship to him, and finding the admiral's lights all out of a sudden, he was apprised of his misfortune, and with an admirable presence of mind, immediately set his topsails, put out the same lights the admiral had, and steered a different course, and the fleet followed him.

He was constituted admiral of the blue January 26, A. D. 1707-8, and soon after commanded the squadron that was fitted out to oppose the invasion designed against Scotland by the pretender, with a French army from Dunkirk; which he fortunately prevented, by arriving off the Frith of Edinburgh, before their troops could land, and obliged them to betake themselves to flight; returning to Dunkirk, April 6, A. D. 1708; and their troops were in so distressed a condition, that all the hospitals and convents of Dunkirk, Furnes, and and Bergue, were too small for the accommodation of their sick.

For this important service, April 21, A. D. 1708, Sir Patrick Johnston, at London, in the name of the magistrates of Edinburgh, presented him with the freedom of that city in a gold box, with the arms of the city on the side, and on the cover whereof were engraven the following words, viz. "The lord provost, bailiffs, and town council of Edinburgh, did present these letters of bourgeoisie to Sir George Byng, admiral of the blue, in gratitude to him for delivering, under her majesty's auspicious influence, this island from a foreign invasion, and defeating the designs of a French fleet at the mouth of the Frith of Edinburgh, 13 March, 1708."

This present was accompanied with a letter from Sir Samuel Mackellan, lord provost of Edinburgh, wherein he desires the admiral to accept of it as a mark of their high respect to him, who had been the happy instrument of so seasonable a deliverance of the island, for which his memory would be honoured by future ages. All which is set forth in our Gazette, April 26, 1708, No. 4430.

On his return from this expedition, the queen was pleased to offer him the place of one of the prince's council in the Admiralty, which he then declined.

He continued to command all that summer in the channel; and upon the marriage of the queen of Portugal, who arrived at Spithead, September 25, A. D. 1708, her majesty went immediately on board the Royal Anne, where Sir George Byng received her, and had the honour of conducting her to Lisbon, where a commission was sent to him to be admiral of the White.

In 1709, he commanded in chief her majesty's fleet in the Mediterranean; and after his return to England, was, November 8, A. D. 1709, made one of the commissioners of the Admiralty, and continued so till, near the time of the queen's death, when not falling in with the measures of the ministry, he was removed. But on the accession of his late majesty king George, he was restored to that employment.

In 1715, a rebellion breaking out in the kingdom, encouraged by the pretender in person, and secretly supported with arms and warlike stores, from France, he was appointed to command a squadron in that critical juncture; with which he kept such a watchful eye along the French coast by examining ships, even in their ports, and obtaining orders from the court of France, to put on shore at Havre de Grace, great quantities of arms and ammunition he had detected were shipped for the pretender's service; that in reward of his services the king created him a baronet, gave him a ring of great value, and other marks of his royal favour.

In 1717, upon the discovery of some secret practices of the ministers of Sweden against this kingdom, he was sent with a squadron into the Baltick, and prevented the Swedes appearing at sea.

In 1718 he was made admiral and commander in chief of the fleet, and sent with a squadron into the Mediterranean, for the protection of Italy, according to the obligation England was under by treaty, against the further invasion of the Spaniards, who had the year before surprized Sardinia, and had this year landed an army in Sicily. Whereupon he gave a total overthrow to their fleet on the coast of Sicily, for which action he was honoured with a letter from the king, written with his own hand; and received congratulatory letters from the emperor, and the king of Sardinia, and was further honoured by his imperial majesty with his picture set in diamonds. He remained some time in those seas, for composing and adjusting the differences between the several powers concerned, being vested with the character of plenipotentiary to all the princes and states of Italy. In that year and the next, he supported the German arms in their expedition to Sicily, and enabled them, by his assistance, to subdue the greatest part of that island. When matters tended to an accommodation, in 1720, by the king of Spain's accession to the quadruple alliance, and a convention was signed at the Hague for a cessation of hostilities, such confidence was placed in him, and regard shewn to his proceedings, that it was expressly mentioned in the treaty, that nothing therein should derogate from any stipulations he might have made by virtue of his plenipotentiary powers, which should be in full effect, notwithstanding the said treaty: and when in consequence of the convention concluded between him and the generals of the Imperial and Spanish armies, the kingdoms of Sicily and Sardinia were to be evacuated by the Spaniards, he arbitrated so equally between them, that the king of Spain expressed his great satisfaction in his conduct to the British court. He afterwards proceeded to Sardinia, to be present at the surrender of that island to the duke of Savoy, stipulated by the quadruple alliance, in exchange for Sicily; in which affair, as well as all his other concerns in those parts, his behaviour was very acceptable to that prince, whose acknowledgments were accompanied with his picture set in diamonds.

After the performing so many signal services, he attended his majesty, by his command, at Hanover, where he arrived the middle of August, A. D. 1720, and was received with the most gracious expressions of favour and satisfaction. On October 21, A. D. 1720, he was constituted rear-admiral of Great Britain, and treasurer of the navy; and on January 20, A. D. 1720-21, was sworn of his majesty's most honourable privy-council, at St. James's; and September 1, A. D. 1721, was created a baron, and viscount.

The preamble of his lordship's patent is as follows:

As the grandeur and stability of the British empire depend chiefly upon knowledge and experience in maritime affairs, we esteem those worthy of the highest honours, who, acting under our influence, exert themselves in maintaining our dominion over the sea. It is for this reason, that we have determined to advance to the degree of peerage, our trusty and well-beloved counsellor, Sir George Byng, knight and baronet, who being descended from an ancient family in Kent, and educated from his youth in the sea-service, hath through several posts arrived to the highest station and command in our navy, by the strength of his own abilities, and a merit distinguished by our predecessors, and ourselves, in the many important

tant services, which he has performed with remarkable fidelity, courage and success. In the late vigorous wars, which raged so many years in Europe; wars fruitful of naval combats and expeditions, there was scarce any action of consequence wherein he did not bear a principal part, nor were any dangers or difficulties so great, but he surmounted them by his exquisite conduct, and a good fortune that never failed him. Particularly when a storm was gathering in France, and it was uncertain upon what part of the coast it would fall, with wonderful sagacity and diligence he flew to the very place of danger, rescuing our capital city of Scotland from the imminent attack of a French Squadron, which had many rebels, and numerous forces, on board; and by his very appearance defeated the vain hopes of the enemy, compelling them to relinquish their disappointed enterprize, and to seek their safety by a flight towards their own ports, attended with loss. With no less vigilance he repressed, not long since, the like machinations of the same traitors in the ports of France, who were so disconcerted at his presence, as to abandon the schemes they had projected; for which prudent service we conferred on him the dignity of baronet, the first mark of our royal favour. Moreover, lately, when new contentions were springing up in Italy, and the discord of princes was on the point of embroiling Europe again in war, he did with singular felicity and conduct, interpose with our Squadron, crushing at one blow the laboured efforts of Spain to set up a power at sea, and advanced the reputation of our arms in the Mediterranean to such a pitch, that our flag gave law to the contending parties, and enabled us to settle the tranquillity that had been disturbed. It is just, therefore, that we should distinguish with higher titles, a subject who has so eminently served us and his country, both as monuments of his own merit, and to influence others into a love and pursuit of virtue.

Know ye therefore, &c.

In 1725 he was installed one of the knights companions of the Bath, on the revival of that most ancient and honourable order.

In 1727 his late majesty, on his accession to the crown, placed him at the head of his naval affairs, by making him first lord commissioner of the admiralty: and in that high station he died, on the 17th of January, A. D. 1732-3, in the seventieth year of his age, and was buried at Southill in Bedfordshire.

We shall end our account of this lord with an extract of his character from a book published after his decease, An account of the expedition of the British fleet to Sicily. In which the author, who was well known to him, says, "To give some description of his person, he was of a slender constitution, but well supplied with spirits, which did not display themselves so much in gaiety of conversation (for he was modest in his nature) as in activity in all the duties and functions of life, or business, in which he was indefatigable; and by a continued habit of industry had hardened and inured a body, not naturally strong, to patience of any fatigue. He had made no great proficiency in school-learning (which the early age of going to sea, seldom admits of) but his great diligence, joined with excellent natural parts, and a just sense of honour, made him capable of conducting difficult negotiations and commissions, with proper dignity and address. The late king, who knew his abilities, used to say to his ministers, when they applied for instructions to be sent to him for his guidance on certain important occasions, that he would send him none, for he knew how to act without any; and indeed all the measures he took abroad were so exact and just, as to square with the counsels and plan of policy at home. The cause of the emperor being become the cause of his master, he served the interests of that prince with a zeal and fidelity that stood a pattern to his own subjects. He lived in such harmony with the imperial vice-roys and generals, as has been seldom seen among fellow-subjects united in command, the want of which has proved the ruin of many important expeditions. He was incapable of performing his duty in a cold or negligent manner; and when any service was committed to his management, he devoted his whole time and application to it; nor could any fatigue or indisposition of body ever divert or interrupt his attention from any point that required present dispatch. To this it might be in great measure owing, that he was never unfortunate in any undertaking, nor miscarried in any service that was entrusted to his direction. For whoever will trace upwards to the springs and causes of public or private events, shall find (except where the immediate finger of Providence is visible) that what is usually called ill-luck, is generally the effect of negligence or imprudence. He always proceeded upon solid principles, and left nothing to fortune, that could be accomplished by foresight and application. His firmness and plain-dealing were so apparent to the foreigners who treated with him upon business, that it contributed much to the dispatch and success of his transactions with them; for they could depend upon what he said, and as they saw he used no arts or chicanes himself, and had too discerning a spirit to suffer them to pass unobserved in others, they often found it their best policy to leave their interests in his hands and management, being very sure of a most impartial and punctual performance of whatever he engaged in. His reputation was so thoroughly established in this particular, that in the frequent disputes and altercations which arose between the Savoyards and Germans in the course of the war, and between the latter and the Spaniards, at the conclusion of it, wherein little faith or confidence was given to the promises or asseverations of each other, he was the common umpire between them, always stemming and opposing any extravagant or unjust demands, (which the overbearing temper of the German general was very apt to suggest, where he had the superior hand) and reconciling, as much as possible, the violences of war with the rules of honour and justice. When he departed from Italy to attend his late majesty at Hanover, the king, among many gracious expressions, told him, That he had found out the secret of obliging his enemies, as well as friends; and that the court of Spain had mentioned, with great acknowledgments, his fair and friendly behaviour in the provision of transports, and other necessities, for the embarkation of their troops, and in protecting them from many violences and oppressions that had been attempted. No wonder, that a man endowed with such talents, and such such a disposition, left behind him in Italy, and other foreign parts, the character of a great soldier, an able statesman, and an honest man."

His lordship married, in Covent-Garden church, March 5, A. D. 1691, Margaret, daughter of James Master, of East Langden, in the county of Kent, esquire, by Joice his wife, daughter of Sir Christopher Turner, of Milton in the county of Bedford, knight, one of the barons of the Exchequer, by whom he had eleven sons, and four daughters, of which those that survived him were, Sarah, who was married to John Osborn, eldest son of Sir John Osborn, of Chicklands in Bedfordshire, baronet; and

1. Pattee Byng, } successively viscounts Tor-
2. George Byng, } ington.

3. Robert Byng, born in 1703, chose member of parliament for Plymouth in 1727; was appointed one of the commissioners of his majesty's navy, June 21, A. D. 1731; and in 1739, governor of Barbadoes, where he died in 1740, leaving issue, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Jonathan Forward, esquire, three sons; George, Robert, and John, born in Barbadoes in 1740. The eldest son George, was seated at Wrotham in Middlesex, and marrying Anne, second daughter of William Conolly, of Ireland, esquire, by Anne his wife, daughter of Thomas, earl of Strafford, has issue George Byng, born May 17, A. D. 1764, and Anne Elizabeth, born February 14, A. D. 1762. The second son, Robert Byng, was smothered in the black hole, in the unfortunate affair at Calcutta, in the East-Indies, A. D. 1756, and the youngest died in Italy, A. D. 1764.

4. John Byng, born at Southill in 1704, brought up in the sea service; and in 1727, had the command of the Gibraltar man of war, stationed in the Mediterranean. After several services, on March 13, A. D. 1741-2, being commander of the Sutherland man of war, he was appointed governor and commander in chief in and over his majesty's island of Newfoundland, in America, fort of Placentia, &c. On August 10, A. D. 1745, he was appointed rear-admiral of the Blue. Also the same year, when the rebellion broke out in Scotland, he was sent admiral of the fleet to cruize on that coast. In 1748, he was constituted rear-admiral of the Blue; and in 1750, vice-admiral of the Red. He was chosen member for Rochester in January 1751, on the death of Sir Chaloner Ogle, knight; also in the late parliament, which first met May 31, A. D. 1754. This unfortunate commander was shot agreeable to the sentence of a court-martial on board his majesty's ship the Monarque, in Portsmouth harbour, March 14, A. D. 1757.

5. Edward, born in 1706, bred up in the army, married in 1730, Mary, daughter and heir of John Bramston, of Screens in Essex, esquire, by Mary, daughter and heir of John Pennington, of Chigwell, in the same county, esquire; he died 1756.

(Second Viscount.) PATTEE BYNG, born at Southill in Bedfordshire, in 1699, had a troop of horse in the royal regiment of horse-guards in 1716. In 1718, being with his father in his expedition into the Mediterranean sea, he was dispatched by him to England, with an account of his victory over the Spanish fleet, on the coast of Sicily, and arrived at Hampton-Court, August 31, 1718. And returning soon after to Naples, and Sicily, he attended him in that expedition; and in the beginning of the year 1720, was sent by him to the court of Vienna, on the proposals made by the general of the Spanish army, for its quitting Sicily, which he could not consent to, till the king of Spain had acceded to the quadruple alliance.

His father being called up to the house of peers in 1721, he was elected member of parliament for Plymouth, in his room; and served for the same borough in the next parliament, called in 1722. On the eighteenth of April, A. D. 1724, he was by George I. appointed treasurer of the navy, on his father's resignation of that office; in which he was continued by his late majesty in 1727; and was chosen one of the knights of the shire for the county of Bedford, in the parliament then called. In 1732 he was sworn of his majesty's most honourable privy-council; and on December 29, A. D. 1744, was appointed joint vice-treasurer and paymaster-general of Ireland, and was of the privy-council in that kingdom. On resignation of that office, he was, February 22, A. D. 1745-6, constituted captain of the yeomen of his majesty's guard; in which post he died January 23, A. D. 1746-7, and was succeeded in his honours by George his brother and heir.

His lordship married, January 9, A. D. 1724, Charlotte Montagu, youngest daughter of Charles duke of Manchester, by whom he had two sons, George, and Frederick, deceased, and one daughter, Caroline, also deceased.

(Third Viscount.) GEORGE BYNG was born in 1701. In 1719 he served as a volunteer under count Mercy, general of the Imperial army in Sicily, and was dangerously wounded there, at the battle of Francavilla. He arrived at Whitehall, May 14, 1720. sent express, by the admiral his father, with an account of the signing, May 16, N. S. the convention for a suspension of arms, and of the evacuation of Sicily and Sardinia by the Spaniards. Afterwards having been a captain in his majesty's foot-guards, he was in January, 1740-41, constituted second major in the third regiment of foot-guards, and captain of a company, with the rank of colonel; and on April 17, A. D. 1743, appointed first major in the said regiment: also September thirteenth following, lieutenant-colonel of the said regiment. In July, 1744, he was constituted colonel of a regiment of foot; and, after a gradual rise, was, on October 10, A. D. 1747, appointed lieutenant-general of his majesty's forces. He married, in 1736, Elizabeth, daughter of ——— Daniel, esquire, son of Sir Peter Daniel, knight, by whom he had two sons, George and John. And departing this life April 7, A. D. 1750, was succeeded by his eldest son, (Fourth and present Viscount.) GEORGE BYNG, who married Lucy, daughter of John Boyle, earl of Cork, and has issue one daughter, Lucy Elizabeth, born October 27, A. D. 1766.

(TITLES.) George Byng, viscount Torrington, baron Byng of Southill, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, November 15, A. D. 1715, (2 George I.) baron Byng of Southill, in com. Bedford, and viscount Torrington, in com. Devon. by letters-patent, September 1, A. D. 1721, (7 George I.)

(ARMS.)

The first of these is the fact that the United States is a young nation, and that its history is a history of growth and expansion. The second is the fact that the United States is a nation of immigrants, and that its history is a history of the struggle for assimilation and the creation of a new American identity. The third is the fact that the United States is a nation of diverse peoples, and that its history is a history of the struggle for equality and the recognition of the rights of all citizens. The fourth is the fact that the United States is a nation of free people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for liberty and the protection of the rights of the individual. The fifth is the fact that the United States is a nation of peace-loving people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for peace and the avoidance of war. The sixth is the fact that the United States is a nation of progress-loving people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for progress and the improvement of the human condition. The seventh is the fact that the United States is a nation of idealistic people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for idealism and the realization of the American dream. The eighth is the fact that the United States is a nation of brave people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for bravery and the defense of the nation. The ninth is the fact that the United States is a nation of hardworking people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for hard work and the achievement of the American dream. The tenth is the fact that the United States is a nation of patriotic people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for patriotism and the defense of the nation.

The first of these is the fact that the United States is a young nation, and that its history is a history of growth and expansion. The second is the fact that the United States is a nation of immigrants, and that its history is a history of the struggle for assimilation and the creation of a new American identity. The third is the fact that the United States is a nation of diverse peoples, and that its history is a history of the struggle for equality and the recognition of the rights of all citizens. The fourth is the fact that the United States is a nation of free people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for liberty and the protection of the rights of the individual. The fifth is the fact that the United States is a nation of peace-loving people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for peace and the avoidance of war. The sixth is the fact that the United States is a nation of progress-loving people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for progress and the improvement of the human condition. The seventh is the fact that the United States is a nation of idealistic people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for idealism and the realization of the American dream. The eighth is the fact that the United States is a nation of brave people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for bravery and the defense of the nation. The ninth is the fact that the United States is a nation of hardworking people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for hard work and the achievement of the American dream. The tenth is the fact that the United States is a nation of patriotic people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for patriotism and the defense of the nation.

The first of these is the fact that the United States is a young nation, and that its history is a history of growth and expansion. The second is the fact that the United States is a nation of immigrants, and that its history is a history of the struggle for assimilation and the creation of a new American identity. The third is the fact that the United States is a nation of diverse peoples, and that its history is a history of the struggle for equality and the recognition of the rights of all citizens. The fourth is the fact that the United States is a nation of free people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for liberty and the protection of the rights of the individual. The fifth is the fact that the United States is a nation of peace-loving people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for peace and the avoidance of war. The sixth is the fact that the United States is a nation of progress-loving people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for progress and the improvement of the human condition. The seventh is the fact that the United States is a nation of idealistic people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for idealism and the realization of the American dream. The eighth is the fact that the United States is a nation of brave people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for bravery and the defense of the nation. The ninth is the fact that the United States is a nation of hardworking people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for hard work and the achievement of the American dream. The tenth is the fact that the United States is a nation of patriotic people, and that its history is a history of the struggle for patriotism and the defense of the nation.

FITZ-GERALD, VISCOUNT LEINSTER.

293

(ARMS.) Quarterly, diamond and pearl, in the first a lion rampant of the second.

(CREST.) On a wreath, an antelope passant, ermine, horned, tusked, flashed, mayned, and hoofed, topaz, langued, ruby.

(SUPPORTERS.) On the dexter side, an antelope ermine, horned, mayned, and hoofed, as in the crest, standing on a ship gun, proper; and on the sinister side, a sea-horse, proper, finned, topaz, on a like gun.

(MOTTO.) Tuebor.

(CHIEF SEAT.) At Southill, in the county of Bedford.

FITZ-GERALD, Viscount LEINSTER.

THE genealogy of this antient and honourable family, dignified for their good services in the conquest of Ireland, is originally deduced from Otho, or Othier, a noble baron in Italy, descended from the Great Duke of Tuscany, and has flourished in sundry ages, in the most renowned countries in Europe, one of the family being patriarch of Jerusalem; and of this family were several barons of Offaley, before they were earls of Kildare; and of it were the earls of Desmond, March, and Macclesfield, and the lord Grandison, and barons of Bromley; and some have been knights of the garter.

OTHO, before-mentioned, (a noble baron in Italy, father of these families) was father of WALTER, who came into England with William the Conqueror, and was a baron and constable of the castle of Windsor, as also by the Conqueror made keeper of the forest of Berkshire; and at the time of the general survey, A. D. 1078, was possessed of several lordships in Surry, Berks, Bucks, Dorset, Middlesex, Wilts, and Hants. He married Gladys, daughter of Rywall ap Conyn, by whom he had three sons; from the youngest, who was William of Windsor, the earl of Plymouth, and the lord Windsor, maternally descended; Robert, the second, surnamed of Windsor, was baron of Eston or Estaines, in Essex*.

GERALD, who was the eldest son, built the castle of Pembroke, and was sometimes surnamed Fitz-Walter; and marrying Nesta, daughter to Rhese Gruffyth, prince of South Wales, (concubine to king Henry I. and sister to Griffith ap Rhese ap Theodore or Tewdor; and mother of Robert Fitz-Stephen, progenitor of the Fitz-Stephens in Ireland) by her had three sons, William, Maurice, and David; which last was bishop of St. David's.

From William descended, in a direct male line, the Gerrards, lords Gerrard of Bromley, extinct A. D. 1683; the Gerrards, earls of Macclesfield, extinct A. D. 1702, and several other families of the name of Gerrard in England.

MAURICE, the second son (with Robert Fitz-Stephen his half-brother) was one of the adventurers, who with Richard Strongbow, earl of Pembroke, in the year 1169, went into Ireland, where, in the year 1170, he had given him by the said Strongbow, great store of lands, amongst which was the barony of Offaley, for his good services in opening the way for subjecting that dominion to the crown of England.

In the year 1172, he was one of the governors of Ireland, when he slew O'Rourke, prince of Meath, who rebelled against Hugh Lacy; and had four sons.

1. Gerald Fitz-Maurice.
2. William Fitz-Maurice, who obtained from king Henry II. the barony of Naas. He married Helen, sister to Richard, earl of Pembroke, and dying A. D. 1177, left an only daughter, Emma, married to the lord Saunders of Naas, whose heir general marrying into the family of Preston, viscount Gormanston, the barony of Naas centered in that family.

3. Alexander Fitz-Maurice, } died without
4. Maurice Fitz-Maurice, } issue.

Also a daughter, Nesta, married to Harvey Mount-Maurice.

GERALD FITZ-MAURICE, the eldest son, with his brother Alexander, were with their father in that memorable sally out of Dublin, in which he and his brother, though they were in the rear, yet were so vigorous in the pursuit, as to be with the foremost, and overthrew and killed many of their enemies. In 1205, he was made baron of Offaley; and is said to be chief justice of Ireland, but we do not find it mentioned in any of the Irish historians. He deceased at Sligo, in 1205, the seventh of king John; and by Catherine his wife, daughter of Hamon de Valbins, lord justice of Ireland in 1197, left issue two sons, Maurice, his successor; and Gerald Fitz-Gerald, who left no issue.

MAURICE FITZGERALD, who succeeded, was ordered by the mandatory letter of king Henry III.

* The seniority of these sons is disputed, William being made the eldest in the earl of Plymouth's pedigree, and Gerald the youngest.

dated

dated November 26, A. D. 1216, first of his reign, to be put in possession of Manooth, and all the other lands which his father died seized in Ireland; whereby, it is presumed, he then attained his full age. In an antient manuscript, he is said to be the person that first brought the orders of friers minors, and preachers, into Ireland; the former whereof was confirmed in 1215, and the latter the year following. In 1229, or (according to Hollinshed) the year before, the king understanding the good services of this family, ever since their first arrival in Ireland, constituted him lord justice of the kingdom. He afterwards went to the aid of the king with great power, and returning to Ireland on the 2d of September, A. D. 1232, resumed the sword as lord justice.

In which year, on the defection of Richard earl of Pembroke, 17 Henry III. this Maurice Fitzgerald, then justice of Ireland, received a letter from Peter (de Rupibus) bishop of Winchester, who bore the chief sway at court, that the said earl was, for treason, banished the realm of England, and requiring him, and Walter de Lacy, to take him, living or dead, (if he came into Ireland) in reward whereof the king would bestow all the earl's lands in that realm upon them: also, on an assurance that they were resolved to effect his desires, the bishop sent them over a patent to that purpose. Whereupon they immediately entered on the earl of Pembroke's lands and castles with a military power. This drew the earl into Ireland, who raised what forces he could, and laid siege to Limerick, which was yielded to him at the end of four days. Thereupon this Maurice Fitzgerald sent to him, that they could not suffer his proceeding in that manner, without being branded with the ignominy of traitors, and desired a truce for so long time as they might send into England, to know whether the king would defend the realm or not. This drew on conferences in a certain meadow for that purpose, when Geoffery de Marisco upbraided the earl of Pembroke with cowardice for consenting to it, and that if he acceded thereto, he would forsake him. But the next morning Maurice Fitzgerald demanded the truce, telling him plainly, that in case he would not agree thereto, he would adventure battle with him. Whereupon the earl of Pembroke putting his men in order, exhorted them to go on with courage, and afterwards boldly charging into the midst of his enemies, was there slain.

The lord justice, soon after this, viz. 19 Henry III. was so much in favour, that he obtained a free commerce between both kingdoms, the king sending over to him the following writ.

Rex, dilecto & fideli suo Mauritio filio Giraldi, Justiciario suo Hiberniæ, salutem: vestra non ignorare debet discretio, quod dignum est, & id volumus, quod terra nostra Angliæ, & terra nostra Hiberniæ, communes sint ad invicem, & quod homines nostri Angliæ & Hiberniæ, hinc inde negotiari possunt, ad commodum & emendationem terrarum prædictarum. Et ideo vobis mandamus, quod homines de terra Hiberniæ volentes emere blada in Hibernia ducenda, in Angliam, in nulla impediatis vel impediri permittatis; quin libere, & sine impedimento id facere possunt. Teste rege apud Westm. 2. die Jun. &c.

Et vide ibidem de Galeis (i. e. gallies or ships) de Hibernia in Angliam mittendis, to aid the king.

About this time, he was sent for into England, to satisfy the king concerning the death of Richard, earl of Pembroke, killed as before recited. And conceiving Gilbert, earl of Pembroke, to be disaffected to him on that account, though he knew himself to be innocent thereof, offered to put himself on his trial; nevertheless, for the love of peace, and to stand upon terms of amity with him, he told the king, he would found a noble monastery for the health of the soul of the said earl Richard. With which the king was so well satisfied, that calling the earl of Pembroke before him, he offered his mediation for this reconciliation, affirming, at the same time, that if he refused it, he should be unworthy of his grace and favour. Whereupon a fair accord between them was made.

In 1235, 20 Henry III. he opposed Cormac Mac Art O'Melaghlin, then in rebellion, and took him prisoner in Athlone: and the next year built the castle of Ardmagh; founded a Dominican convent in the friery at Sligo.

In 1242 he erected the castle of Sligo, placing in it able warders. In 1244, king Henry lying at Ganock in Wales, and sending to him for aid against the Welch, he (though not so soon as the king, from his ill situation, expected) conducted the forces over himself, landed in the isle of Anglesey, and joined the king's army at Chepstow, and performed the work he went about; for by his assistance the Welch were defeated, and the king victualling and manning his castles, returned crowned with victory; and the lord justice into Ireland, with great honour.

On his lordship's arrival, in 1245, he found Ulster, on the death of Hugh Lacy, earl of that province, over-run by O'Donel; to restrain whose proceedings he marched into those parts; and by the assistance of Cormac Mac Dermoid M'Rory, who joined him with a considerable party, invaded Tyrconnel O'Donel's territory, where he routed the Irish, and slew many of their chiefs, among whom was Moyleslaghlon O'Donel, called king of Keyvale: and, after several expeditions into that country, fortified and manned his castle of Sligo, forced O'Neile to give hostages, to keep the king's peace, and left him secured in the said castle; he gave Cormac, his assistant, the moiety of Connaught; and returned with great booty. But these, and other services, having not rooted out the king's resentment, for his omission in not coming so expeditiously into Wales as he expected, he removed him from the office of lord justice: Mauritium, Hiberniæ justiciarium, eo quod fite et tarde auxilium ab Hibernia Domino Regi duxerat periclitanti, a Justiciaria deposuit, as Florilegus and Hollinshed write: Sir John Fitz-Geoffery succeeded him, November 4, A. D. 1245.

He afterwards took on him the habit of St. Francis, and died May 8, A. D. 1247, 42 Henry III*. Miles strenuus & facetus, nulli secundus, as Matt. Paris writes, fol. 398. He was buried amongst

* There has been some disputes whether he left two or three sons; the pedigree in the duke of Leinster's custody, and others, set forth, that he had only two sons, Thomas his heir, and Maurice: yet in another drawn in the reign of king William, Maurice amongst the friers minors at Youghall. Which convent he founded in 1231, 16 Henry III.

He left but two sons,

1. Thomas Fitzgerald.
2. Maurice Fitz-Maurice, who was appointed lord justice of Ireland, on the death of Sir James Audley, the 23d of June, A. D. 1272, and so continued till the 16th of November that year, when king Henry III. died.

He died at Rols in 1286, leaving by his wife Emilia Longspee, daughter of William the first earl of Salisbury, an only son, Gerald Fitz-Maurice, and a daughter, Emilia, married in 1276 to the lord Thomas de Clare, second son of Richard de Clare, earl of Gloucester.

Gerald, the only son of Maurice Fitz-Maurice, is said to be drowned between Ireland and Wales, in the time of Sir Robert de Ufford, lord justice of Ireland; but in 1285, he is mentioned to be betrayed by his followers, and made prisoner; and that he died at Rathmore the year after, which was the same year his father died: and it is probable he survived him; for dying without issue, he left his estate to his cousin John, son of his uncle Thomas, as appears by an inquisition in 4 Edward II. wherein it was found that John de Verdon, in the reign of Henry III. enfeoffed Maurice Fitzgerald, and Agnes de Valentia his wife, in the manors of Adare, Crom, &c. in the county of Limerick; that he died without issue by the said Agnes, and enfeoffed John Fitz-Thomas in the manors of Manooth, Radunegan, and Legh.

We now return to,

THOMAS FITZ-MAURICE, the eldest son of Maurice, lord Offaley, who died in 1257, and was surnamed the Great. He married Eleanor, daughter of Sir William Morrie, son of Sir Geoffrey Morrie, with whom the Fitzgeralds got their estates in Kerry; and dying at Youghall, the 26th of May, A. D. 1260, was buried in the Dominican friery there, which (his father having founded) he had finished at his own charge, leaving one son, John of Callan, from whom all the Fitzgeralds in Munster, and some in Leinster, are descended. Which

JOHN FITZ-THOMAS, was the founder of the abbey of Tralee, in the county of Kerry, for friers preachers; and being killed at Callan, in Desmond, by MacCarthy, against whom the Fitzgeralds had raised a great army, in 1261, 45th of Henry III. was buried in the said friery, with his son Maurice †, slain at the same time.

He married to his first wife Margery, daughter of Sir Thomas Fitz-Anthony, with whom he got all the lands of Decies and Desmond, with all the bailiwicks, returns of the sheriffs, &c. together with the custody of the castle of Dungarvon, (which castle and manor, on the 17th of April, A. D. 1543, were by act of parliament annexed to the crown) all which were confirmed to him by king Edward I. whilst he was earl of Chester, by charter, dated at Bermondsey, November 7, 44 Henry III.

By his said first wife he had issue Maurice, his only son; and marrying, secondly, Honora, daughter of Hugh O'Conner, the first Irish woman any of the family ever married, had by her four sons.

1. Gilbert, called by the Irish Gibbon, from whom descended the White Knight, otherwise called Clan Gibbon, whose country contained twenty-four miles in length, and twelve in breadth; and also Mac Gibbon of Mohawnagh.

2. John, ancestor to Sir John Fitzgerald of Clenglesse, the knights of the Glyn and Valley, (whose territories contained sixteen miles in length and nine in breadth) and to the families at Femierstown and Towngeebey.

3. Maurice, who was the first knight of Kerry, alias, the Black Knight, of whom many families are descended, as the Fitzgeralds of Alloone, in the county of Kildare, who flourished there till the troubles of 1641, and are now extinct; those of the Gurteens in the county of Kilkenny, stiled barons of Burn-Church; and also (says an authentic manuscript) Edmund Mac James, dean of Cloyne, who was a layman, and had a daughter, who by Edmund Mac Morrish, seneschal of Imokilly (sprung from a bastard son of the knight of Kerry) was mother of John Fitz-Edmund, of Cloyne, seneschal also of Imokilly, whose posterity were men of great eminence and worth.

4. Thomas, ancestor to the Fitzgeralds, of and about the island of Kerry; to Mac Roebuck, of Noghauls; and, as some say, to the Fitzgeralds of Mornane, in Kerry; and to divers other families there, and in the county of Limerick.

MAURICE FITZGERALD, only son, by the first wife, who was killed with his father, married first Joanna, daughter and heir to John lord Cogan, of Belvoir, and secondly Matilda de Barry. The first wife brought into the family the estates of Carrigileene, Carrigrona, Castlemore, Moyallow, Rathgrogan, &c. And in 1310, 3 Edward III. an inquisition was taken of the lands and manors of Adare, Crom, Athleacath, Wriggedy, Grene, and Estgrene, in the county of Limerick; and of the manors of Manooth, Rathynegan, Leygh, Geashill, and Rathmore, in the county of Kildare; parcel of the lands of Maurice Fitzgerald, together with the feoffment of Juliana de Cogan, by

Maurice is said to be his heir, Thomas ancestor to the earl of Desmond, and Gerald, grandfather of John, created earl of Kildare. But we must not rely on the said pedigrees further than as they are consonant to chronology, history, and records. Therefore, notwithstanding what has been wrote in favour of the house of Desmond, &c. it will evidently appear, that the earl of Kildare was the eldest branch, which (besides other authorities) is evinced from the unerring testimony of his descendants bearing the coat-armour, plain, and without any addition; it being a standing rule in ancient times, as is well known to all who are acquainted with the differences then used, to distinguish the cadets from the principal branch of any family, that they either alter their tinctures, or add bordures, orles, bends, chiefs, &c. for that purpose; whence, the duke of Leinster's ancestor, who bore the coat, plain and unaltered, is sufficiently proved to be the chief of the family; the earls of Desmond bearing the field, ermine, by way of difference, and the earl of Kerry, a chief, ermine. Therefore, considering all circumstances, we have followed the pedigree in the custody of the duke of Leinster.

† Chronology would induce us to believe that this John and Maurice were brothers, and as such set down in the duke of Leinster's pedigree, and in an ancient manuscript, in the valuable collection of the bishop of Clogher, now deposited in the college library; and there being only the space of four years between their grandfather Maurice's death and their own, it seems improbable that Maurice should be the son of John, and at that time also a father: yet, a record in the aforesaid collection assures us, that Thomas (son of Maurice) claimed to be the king's sheriff in the counties of Cork, Waterford, and Kerry, as heir to his grandfather John Fitz-Thomas.

which she enfeoffed him in the said lands. By her he had an only son Thomas, nicknamed Nappagh, Simiacus, or the Ape, an appellation given to him on the following account. Being only nine months old when his father and grandfather were killed at Calan, as before related, and being nursed at Tralee, those who attended him, in their first astonishment on the news of their deaths, ran out of the house, and left the child alone in the cradle, when a baboon or ape, kept in the family, took it up, and carried it to the top of the steeple of the abbey of Tralee; from whence, after carrying it around the battlements, and shewing it for some time, he, to the surprize of the spectators, brought it down safe, and laid it in the cradle: and, by this accident, he ever after retained the sobriquet of the Ape. The said

THOMAS FITZGERALD, in April 1295, was constituted lord justice of the kingdom, and being captain of all Desmond, was so great and powerful a man, that he is frequently stiled prince and ruler of Munster: he founded the house of Eremites at Dungarvan, and claimed, as already observed in a note, p. 297, to be the king's sheriff of the counties of Cork, Waterford, Kerry, &c. founding his pretensions on the before-mentioned record to his grandfather, John Fitz-Thomas, whose heir he was. He married Catharine (or rather) Margaret, daughter to John, lord Barry, of Oletan; and departing this life at Awny, in 1296, or (as Henry of Marlborough relates, in 1298, was interred in the middle of the choir of the friary at Youghall, leaving (as some say) two sons, Maurice, created earl of Desmond, and John, ancestor, to the family of Mac Thomas, of the Decies and Connelloe. But there is great reason to conclude, that when this Thomas was succeeded as lord justice of Ireland, by John Wogan, on the 18th of October, A. D. 1295, he sat as lord Offaley in the parliament held by him at Dublin; and accordingly, in the duke of Leinster's pedigree, is made the seventh who bore that title, and to have issue two sons, besides daughters, viz.

1. John Fitzgerald, who succeeded him, and was the eighth lord Offaley, created earl of Kildare.

2. Maurice Fitzgerald, created earl of Desmond: and this seems most probable, by the earls of Kildare bearing the monkeys for their supporters and crest, in a grateful remembrance of the said Thomas's preservation, which never was done by any of the earls of Desmond: and the late earl of Kildare, alluding to this event, did sometimes use, as a motto over the crest, the words Non immemor beneficii. Believing this to be evident, we shall just observe that Maurice, the second son, was created earl of Desmond in 1329, 3 Edward III. by patent, dated at Gloucester, August 27; whose conduct was so meritorious, and whose abilities to serve the king were so eminent, that July 20, A. D. 1355, he was appointed lord justice of Ireland, during his life; but he died in the castle of Dublin, on the 25th of January following; and was so just a man, that he spared not his very relations, when they were criminal, as Sir Richard Cox relates in his history of Ireland. The male line of this branch of the family became extinct in 1632.

JOHN FITZ-THOMAS, eldest son of Thomas, lord Offaley, of whom the duke of Leinster is lineally descended, had great variance with William Vescey, lord of Kildare, in 1291, 20 Edward I. who was lord justice of Ireland in that king's reign; having many complaints against him, by his oppressions of the country, and neglect of its defence against the Irish; and finding the council reflected on his male-administration, he endeavoured to excuse his own conduct, by charging this John, lord Offaley, "With being as fierce as a lion when any private injury was offered, but as meek as a lamb when the public was concerned."

This occasioned great disputes between them, related in Hollinshead's Chronicle, and obliged the lord Offaley to appeal to the king; who, to examine and adjudge the matter impartially, sent for both of them into England, (some say, they went of their own accord) where each having addressed the king, (according to the custom of that age) he challenged the lord justice to clear himself by combat, in the following terms: "But for so much as our mutual complaints stand upon the one his yea, and the other his nay, and that you would be taken for a champion, and I am known to be no coward, let us, in God's name, leave lying for varlets, bearding for ruffians, facing for crackers, chatting for twatlers, scolding for callets, booking for scriveners, pleading for lawyers; and let us try, with the dint of sword, as become martial men to do, our mutual quarrels. Wherefore, to justify that I am a true subject, and that thou Vescey; art an arch-traytor to God and to my king, here in the presence of his highness, and in the hearing of this honourable assembly, I challenge the combat."—The audience expressed their satisfaction by a loud acclamation; and the challenge being accepted by Vescey, was admitted by the king; but Vescey conveyed himself into France to avoid the trial; which when the king understood, he pronounced his lordship innocent, and bestowed on him Vescey's manors and lordship of Kildare, Rathangan, and divers others, saying, "That although he had conveyed his person into France, yet he had left his lands behind him in Ireland."

His lordship returned to that kingdom with the congratulations of all his friends; and in 1294, with John Delamere, took Richard Bourk, earl of Ulster, and William Bourk, prisoners in Meath, and confined them in the castle of Ley; whence they were afterwards delivered by order of parliament at Kilkenny. In 1295, by the lord justice Wogan's procurement, an agreement was made between him and the said earl; whereby it was covenanted, that he should give to the earl of Ulster three thousand marks to be thus discharged, viz. to assign Slegagh, with all its appurtenances, in Connaught, for one thousand marks; and all his silver vessels and plate, in satisfaction of another thousand; and his son and heir, Thomas, to marry the earl's daughter, in discharge of the other thousand. In the same year he marched with a great army into Meath; and the next year went to assist the king in Scotland, who sumptuously entertained them in Roxburgh-castle. In 1299 he was again summoned to attend the king with horse and arms in his best array for war, against the Scots, and to be with him at Withwelaun the 1st of March: also in 1300, with Peter de Bermingham, the lord justice Wogan, and others, others, went a third time into that kingdom, to assist his majesty; from whence they returned the next year. In 1307 he accompanied Sir Edmund Butler (after earl of Carrick) his son-in-law, into Connaught and Offaley, when they dispersed the rebellion then raised in those parts, and relieved the castle of Ley: and in 1312 was sent general into Munster, to suppress the Irish in arms against the government, when he knighted Nicholas Fitz Maurice, and Robert Clonkull, at Adair, in the county of Limerick: also May 25, A. D. 1315, when Edward Bruce, brother to Robert, king of Scotland, entering the north of Ireland with an army of 6000 men, and joining with the Irish, ravaged the country, and causing himself to be crowned king of Ireland; at Dundalk; his lordship, in order to stop those proceedings, attended his said son-in-law, then lord justice, against the Scots; and that year, the differences then subsisting between him and the earl of Ulster, were happily adjusted, and finally determined, at the instance of the lord justice, who brought about their reconciliation, that by the union of the king's good subjects, the haughty invader of the kingdom might the sooner be expelled, or conquered; which being done, and an army raised, the lord justice, accompanied with his lordship, and others, the lords and gentlemen of Leinster and Munster, gave Bruce battle near Ardfkoll; but being defeated, and Roger, lord Mortimer, also, with an army of 1500 men, overthrown soon after; and the Irish, on the news of these defeats, rising and wasting the country, from Arklow to Leix, the lord Offaley, with other lords, faithful subjects to the king, renewed their promise of allegiance, and for the confirmation and assurance thereof, delivered hostages to be kept within the castle of Dublin, and resisted the injurious attempts of the Scots to the utmost of their power; whom, together with the Irish, they frequently defeated, with the slaughter of many of them; so that Bruce was at length obliged to send for his brother Robert, king of Scots, to his assistance; who landing at Carrickfergus, in May 1316, besieged and took that castle; and the lord Offaley marching against him, to frustrate his designs, king Edward II. as well to reward his services past, as to engage him to his interests for the time to come, created him, by patent, 14 May, A. D. 1316, earl of Kildare; which the learned Selden, in his titles of honour, tells us, 'is the most ancient form of creation he had seen,' and is as follows:

Edwardus, Dei Gratia, Rex Angliæ, Dominus Hiberniæ, et Dux Aquitaniæ, Archiepiscopis, Episcopis, Abbatibus, Prioribus, Comitibus, Baronibus, Justitiariis, Vice-Comitibus, Præpositis, Ministris, et omnibus Ballivis et Fidelibus suis, salutem. Sciatis quod Nos pro bono et laudibili Servizio quod dilectus et fidelis noster Johannes Filius Thomæ de Hibernia, Celebris Memoriz Domino Edwardo quondam Regi Angliæ, Patri nostro et Nobis hæcenus impendit, et Nobis impendet in futurum, dedisse, concessisse et hac Charta nostra confirmasse eidem Johanni, Castrum et Villam de Kildare, Ipsumque Præfuisse in Comitum ejusdem Locis: Habendum et tenendum eidem Johanni et Hæredibus suis Masculis de Corpore suo legitime procreatis, unâ cum Fæodis Militum, Advocationibus Ecclesiarum, Abbatiarum, Prioratum, Hospitalium et aliarum Do-morum Religiosarum in Comitatu de Kildare, Homagiis, Servitiis libere Tenentium, Firmariorum et Betagiorum, Wardis, Maritagiis, Releviis, Escactis, Molendinis, Stagnis, Vivariis, Aquis, Ripariis, Piscariis, Boscis, Moris, Mariscis, Pratis, Pascuis, Pasturis, Libertatibus, liberis Consuetudinibus et omnibus aliis ad prædicta Castrum et Villam pertinentibus; excepto officio Vicecomitis Comitatus de Kildare et hiis quæ ad officium Vicecomitis ibidem pertinent, quæ Nobis et Hæredibus nostris volumus remanere; de Nobis et Hæredibus nostris per Servitium duorum Fæodorum Militum in perpetuum. Et si idem Johannes obierit sine Hærede Maculo de Corpore suo legitime procreato, tunc prædicta Castrum et Villa cum Terris, Redditibus, Feodis Militum, Advocationibus Ecclesiarum, Abbatiarum, Prioratum, Hospitalium et aliarum Domorum Religiosarum, Homagiis, Servitiis libere Tenentium, Firmariorum et Betagiorum, Wardis, Maritagiis, Releviis, Escactis, Molendinis, Stagnis, Vivariis, Aquis, Ripariis, Piscariis, Boscis, Moris, Mariscis, Pratis, Pascuis, Pasturis, Libertatibus et liberis Consuetudinibus, et omnibus aliis ad prædicta Castrum et Villam pertinentibus, ad Nos et Hæredes nostros integre revertantur. Quare Volumus et firmiter Præcipimus, pro Nobis et Hæredibus nostris, quod prædictus Johannes habeat et teneat sibi et Hæredibus suis Masculis de Corpore suo legitime procreatis, prædicta Castrum et Villam cum Terris, Redditibus et aliis Pertinentiis suis Pertinentiis suis sub Honore et Nomine Comitis de Kildare; simul cum Fæodis Militum, Advocationibus Ecclesiarum, &c. (ut supra) et omnibus aliis ad prædicta Castrum et Villam pertinentibus, quoquo modo, excepto officio Vicecomitis Comitatus de Kildare, et hiis quæ ad officium Vicecomitis ibidem pertinent, quæ Nobis et Hæredibus nostris volumus remanere, de Nobis et Hæredibus nostris per Servitium duorum Fæodorum Militum in perpetuum. Et si idem Johannes obierit sine Hærede Masculo de Corpore suo legitime procreato, tunc prædicta Castrum et Villa, cum Terris, Redditibus, &c. ad Nos et Hæredes nostros integre revertantur, sicut prædictum est.

Hiis Testibus, Venerabilibus Patribus W. Cantuar. Archiepiscopo, totius Angliæ Primate; J. Norwicensi et W. Exoni, Episcopis; Johanne de Britannia, Comite Richmond; Hugone le Despenser Seniore; Rogero de Mortuo Mari de Wigmore; Hugone le Despenser Juniore; Rogero de Mortuo Mari de Chirk; Johanne de Cromwell Senescallo Hospitii nostri, et aliis. Datum per Manum nostram 14^o. Die Maii 1316. Per ipsum Regem.

He lived to enjoy this honour but a very short time, dying at Laraghbrine, near Manooth, September 10, the same year, and was interred in the Franciscan friery of Kildare; having, amongst other pious acts, built the abbey of Eremites of St. Augustine's order at Adaire, on the southern part of the river Mage, in the county of Limerick, to which he gave the town of Modulleghy, and other lands in Adaire, which grant was confirmed by the king, December 13, A. D. 1317. He also founded in the same town of Adaire, a monastery of friers of the order of the Blessed Trinity, bearing blue and red crosses on their breasts.

He married Blanch, daughter to John lord Roch of Fermoy and Boolcastle, by whom he had two sons and two daughters;

1. Gerald Fitz-John died, unmarried, in his father's life time.

2. Thomas Fitz-John Fitz-Gerald, successor to the honours.

3. Joan, married in 1302 to Sir Edmond Butler, lord deputy in 1312, and after earl of Carrick, ancestor to the earls and dukes of Ormond.

4. Elizabeth, married to Nicholas Netterville, Esq; ancestor to the viscount Netterville.

THOMAS FITZ-JOHN, the second earl of Kildare, a prudent and wise man, on the day after Palm-Sunday, A. D. 1316, made, by the king's command, leader of the army, consisting of thirty thousand men, against Edward Bruce and the Scots; but the lord Roger Mortimer landing about the same time at Youghall, and by his letters desiring the engagement might be deferred until he joined them with his forces, no battle ensued; for Bruce being advertised of their design, retired about the beginning of May into Ulster; and in 1318 his army was defeated, himself killed, and an end put to the Scottish invasion in Ireland. This Thomas, earl of Kildare, was appointed lord justice in 1320; when he received a grant from the king, to cause all such of his Irish tenants to be obedient to the laws of England, as would be governed by them. In February, A. D. 1326-7, he was again made lord justice by King Edward III. in which high office he departed this life at Manooth in the county of Kildare, (the family-seat) on Thursday in Easter-week, viz. April 9, A. D. 1328, and was buried in the chapel of our Lady, before the altar, in the abbey of the Friars Minors in Kildare.

On August 16, A. D. 1312, he married, at Greencastle in Connaught, Joan de Burge, third daughter to Richard, earl of Ulster; which lady, July 3, A. D. 1329, re-married with Sir John Darcy, lord justice, by whom she had a son, named William, born at Manooth in 1330, her husband being then in England; and she dying on April 23, A. D. 1359, was buried in the church of Kildare by her lord, to whom she bore three sons.

1. John Fitz-Thomas, died in 1323, in the ninth year of his age.

2. Richard, heir and successor to his father.

3. Maurice, who succeeded his brother Richard.

RICHARD FITZ-THOMAS, the third earl of Kildare, died when about twelve years of age, (as it is found in the Red Book of Kildare) at Rathangan, July 7, A. D. 1329, and was buried in the Grey, or Franciscan abbey of Kildare, on the right-hand of his father; so that his brother,

MAURICE FITZ-THOMAS, became heir, and was the fourth earl. Being under age on his accession to the honour, the lands of Kildare, Manooth, Adaire, Cromagh, and Estgrene, were seized into the king's hands, June 3, A. D. 1334, and granted by him to Sir John Darcy, who had married his mother. He no sooner arrived to years of maturity, but he signalized himself in the defence of his country against the O'Dempseys, who had raised a rebellion in Leinster. He pursued them so close, in 1339, that many of them were drowned in the river Barrow; and the greatest booty, that ever was taken in that country, was brought by him to Dublin. He continued to defend the Pale until the earl of Desmond, in 1345, refusing to come to the parliament held in Dublin, he assisted him to withstand Ralph Ufford, the lord justice; but, after Desmond's lands were seized, and his party subdued, he was allured, on promises of indemnity, to come to the said lord justice, at whose command he was insidiously apprehended by Sir William Burton, as he was sitting among the king's counsellors in the court of Exchequer at Dublin, and imprisoned in the castle; where he remained till May 26, A. D. 1346, when he was discharged by Sir Roger Darcy, the new lord justice, on the recognizances of twenty-four lords and gentlemen. After which he performed many eminent services; for in November, the same year, he, with the lord justice Bermingham, invaded the territory of O'More with fire and sword, and after a brisk engagement, pursued them so effectually, that they submitted to the king's clemency, and gave hostages for their future behaviour: also, in May, 1347, he went with his barons and knights to serve king Edward III. at the siege of Calais, where he had, amongst other horsemen in his auxiliaries to the king out of Ireland, twenty-seven hoblers, and was made leader of the army; in which station his services were so signal, that he was knighted by the king, after his return into England; and on March 30, A. D. 1360, constituted lord justice of Ireland.

He was accordingly sworn the next day, and was again made custos of the realm, March 2, A. D. 1371-2; also a third time appointed to govern Ireland, by a commission bearing date February 16, A. D. 1375-6, until the return of Sir William Windsor. He was a person of great piety, and was among the principal benefactors to the priory of St. Woolstan's: and dying August 15, A. D. 1390, was buried in the church of the fraternity of the Holy Trinity in Dublin. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Bartholomew Burghersh, knight of the Garter, by Elizabeth, his wife, second daughter of Theobald de Verdon, who died in 1316, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester, and widow of John de Burge, son of Richard, earl of Ulster; which Theobald was third son, and at length heir to John de Verdon, by Margaret, daughter and coheir to Gilbert Lacy, who died before his father Walter, lord of Meath, brother to Hugh, earl of Ulster. By this lady the earl of Kildare got some lands in the county of Meath; and had issue four sons, besides daughters, viz.

1. Gerald Fitz-Maurice, who succeeded to the honour.

2. John Fitz-Maurice, supposed to have died young.

3. Richard Fitz-Maurice, who died unmarried in his father's life-time. And,

4. Thomas Fitz-Maurice, the father of Gerald, from whom (as is said) the family of Fitz-Gerald, of Palline in the county of Limerick, derive their descent; and having also a natural son, William, from him descended the family of Fitz-Thomas.

GERALD FITZ-MAURICE, the fifth earl of Kildare, was taken prisoner in 1398, by Callogh Mac Murrough O'Connor, and the horsemen of Offaley, who delivered him to his father Murrough O'Connor, prince of Offaley, to be kept his captive, until he

he should be ransomed; which was afterwards done. He was appointed lord justice, September 7, A. D. 1405, on the death of James, earl of Ormond: and in October, 1406, being succeeded in that office by Sir Stephen Scroop, his lordship and the earl of Desmond accompanied him in 1407, and preyed on the lands of Mac Murrough, whom they subdued, taking also O'Nolan and son; and from thence hastening towards Callan, in the county of Kilkenny, put to flight the rebellious scepts of the O'Carrols and Burks; O'Carrol and eight hundred of his men being slain. In 1408, he built the White Castle in New Leighlin; but that year, when Thomas, earl of Lancaster, the king's son, and lord-lieutenant, landed at Carlingford, and was met in his way to Dublin by the earl of Kildare, he arrested his lordship, and three more of his family, as they came to meet him, whereby he lost all his goods by the lord lieutenant's servants, and he was imprisoned in the castle of Dublin, until he paid three hundred marks for the recovery of his liberty. On what account this befel him, or how he had incurred the displeasure of the lord lieutenant, history is silent; yet probably it was, because he and Adam O'Nolan did not permit the king to present a fit person to the prebend of Maynooth, in the cathedral church of St. Patrick, Dublin. He departed this life in 1410, and was buried in the friery of Kildare, leaving issue by Margaret his wife, daughter and heir of Sir John Rochfort, knight, (who had been granted in ward to his father, in 4 Richard II.) two sons and one daughter.

1. John Fitz-Gerald, his successor.

2. Thomas Fitz-Gerald, who left no children.

The daughter was,

Joan, first married to Jenice Grey, by whom she had no issue, and secondly to James, the fourth of that name, earl of Ormond; and dying in London, August 3, A. D. 1430, was buried in the church of the hospital of St. Thomas D'Acres there.

JOHN FITZ-GERALD, the eldest son, and sixth earl of Kildare, was commonly called the crooked, or Crouch-Back; and being accused of having communication with the prior of Kilmainham, was arrested at Slane, or rather at Clane, in the county of Kildare, with Sir Christopher Preston, and Sir John Bedlow, and imprisoned in the castle of Trim, on the feast of St. John, A. D. 1418. He built the castles of Maynooth, and Kilkea; and October 21, A. D. 1426, had a liberate to receive twenty marks for the charges he had been at in resisting the Irish enemies and English rebels, on the frontiers of the Pale. He deceased October 17, A. D. 1427, and was buried in the monastery of All-Saints in Dublin, leaving, by his wife Margaret, daughter of ——— De la Herne, an only son,

THOMAS FITZ-GERALD, the seventh earl of Kildare, who, in 1454, was appointed lord-deputy of the kingdom; as he was again the year following, and continued in the government until 1459, when Richard, duke of York was made lord-lieutenant, whose deputy he was appointed in 1460; also king Edward IV. coming to the throne, continued him lord-justice by patent, dated by the council at Dublin, April 30, A. D. 1461; and on May 1, he was sworn in Christ-church; and, in 1463, was constituted lord chancellor by act of parliament, with the fee of forty pounds per annum, and ten shillings per diem.

In 1464, he and his countess founded an abbey of Grey Friars, of the order of St. Francis, commonly called the Poor Abbey, in the eastern part of the town of Adaire. They also built the church of the abbey at their own charge, gave two chalices of silver, and the great bell to that convent. But, in 1467, with the earl of Desmond, and Edward Plunket, esquire, he was attainted of high-treason by act of parliament, for liances, fosterage, and alterage with the king's Irish enemies, furnishing them with horse and arms, and supporting them against the king's subjects. The earl of Desmond, against whom the accusation seemed principally to be levelled, suffered death. However, his lordship was afterwards enlarged, pardoned, and restored in blood by parliament: and (the lord-deputy, John, earl of Worcester hastening to England) he was made lord-justice; and in the same year deputy to the duke of Clarence, in which office he continued until 1475. Having called two parliaments, the first at Drogheda, wherein the English statute of the sixth of Richard II. That women consenting to ravishers should forfeit their inheritance, and all other English statutes made before that time, were confirmed. He held the second parliament at the Naas, on Friday after the feast of St. Andrew the apostle, A. D. 1472, 12 Edward IV.

On March 25, A. D. 1478, or rather 1477, (as appears from a note of the obits of the earls of Kildare, taken out of a book belonging to Gerald, earl of Kildare, and Elizabeth Grey his countess) he departed this life, and was buried by his father, in All-Hallows, near Dublin. He married, as is found in some pedigrees, Dorothea, daughter of Anthony O'More, of Leix, before the earldom fell to him, by whom he is made ancestor to the families of Blackhall, Osbert's-town, Timothire, or Cluonblague, &c. and we find of Sir Shane (John) Fitz-Gerald, and William, sons of Thomas, earl of Kildare; but the wife by whom he had his successor was Joan, daughter to James the seventh earl of Desmond, by whom he had four sons, and a daughter, Eleanor, married to Henry Mac Owen O'Neile, chief of his name.

The sons of Thomas, earl of Kildare were,

1. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, his successor.

2. Sir Thomas Fitz-Gerald, who, by statute in parliament, held at Trim, in 2 Richard III. was made lord chancellor of Ireland for life: and in the reign of king Henry the VIIth, having promoted the designs of Lambert Simnel, had, on the 8th of December, A. D. 1480, pardon for all treasons and offences. Yet soon after, continuing his adherence to that impostor, he accompanied him into England, where the king's forces, at Stoke, near Newark upon Trent, entirely routed them, and this Sir Thomas was slain, June 6, A. D. 1487. He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Robert, lord viscount Gormanston, and by her left issue Sir Maurice Fitz-Gerald, of Lacagh, his heir, ancestor to the family at Lacagh.

3. James Fitz-Gerald, married Eleanor, daughter of the White Knight, and had issue four sons, Gerald, Edmund, Richard, and Shane; whereof Edmund had, Richard, of Mulloghmast, in the county of Kildare, who had Bryan, who left Oliver, of Mulloghmast, ancestor (as presumed) to the family at Johnstown, in the county of Westmeath; 2. Edmund of Birton, father of Piers the father of Gerald, of Birton.

4. Maurice Fitz-Gerald, was ancestor to the Fitz-Geralds, of Thomastown and Caherassa in the county of Limerick.

The lady Joan, countess of Kildare, surviving their father, lived his widow until 1486, when she was buried near the choir in the church of the abbey of Adaire, which she and her lord had founded.

GERALD FITZ-GERALD, the eldest son of earl Thomas, was the eighth earl of Kildare; and the same year he succeeded his father, was constituted lord-deputy to Richard, duke of York, son to king Edward IV. Whereupon he held a parliament at Naas on Friday after the feast of St. Peter and the Virgin. The next year, 1479 (by some placed in 1472) the society of St. George, or the order of the Garter, was established in Ireland, consisting of thirteen of the most honourable persons in the counties of Kildare, Dublin, Meath, and Louth, of which he was the first knight elected. Of this order the earl was appointed captain, and his successors were annually to be elected at Dublin on St. George's day, out of the said number, under whose command were two hundred armed men, and a poundage was laid on all merchandize imported and exported, for their support (hides, and the goods of freemen of Dublin and Drogheda, excepted). The intention of the institution was, to defend the said counties from the incursions of the rebellious Irish, and enemies to the English government. But the society was dissolved by act of parliament in 1494.

On August 12, 1480, he was again made deputy to Richard duke of York for four years, by the duke's patent under the king's privy-seal. On Monday after the feast of the translation of St. Thomas the Martyr that year, he held a parliament at Dublin, which forbade the carrying of hawks out of the kingdom, without great custom; and that the Pale should have no correspondence with the Irish. Also, being attended with the mayor, bailiffs, and many citizens of Dublin, he went out a hosting into the O'Moore's country. And remaining chief governor at the death of king Edward IV. was continued by Richard III. in 1483, as deputy to his son Edward; and the year after was deputy to John de la Pole, earl of Lincoln.

On the accession of king Henry VII. to the throne, in 1485, he was continued deputy to Jasper, duke of Bedford, the lord-lieutenant; and being a man of great esteem with that monarch, he gave him a gold chain, as a mark of his favour, and made him a knight of the Garter.

In 1490 were sent him out of Germany, as a great rarity, six hand-guns, or muskets, which his guard, during the time that they stood centry, bore before his habitation (called Thomas Court) near Dublin; but in 1496, he being declared a traitor by Edward Poynings, then deputy of Ireland, was sent prisoner to England; where his enemies, finding that the king favoured him, concluded their last article with this sharp expression, That all Ireland was not able to rule him; whereupon the king replied, "Then he shall rule all Ireland," and made him lieutenant thereof.

In 1501, he was deputy to Henry duke of York, and in 1504 and 1509 lord-lieutenant.

This great nobleman had been at several times, thirty-three years chief governor of Ireland, which he could never have been entrusted with, had he not been a person of singular parts, as is observed by Camden, Brouce, and others. During his administration, the kingdom was in a better condition, than before his time, being so famous for his many great and successful victories, that his reputation kept the rebels in awe. He also secured the Pale, by castles and fortifications, built in commodious places upon the borders, amongst which were those of Rathville, Lincarrig, Trillick, dermot, and Athy; and whenever the Irish made an insurrection, he chastised them, by destroying their fortified places, razing and levelling their castles to the ground, and dispersed colonies for the security of the land in proper places; rebuilt ruined towns, and was so frequently advanced (as Sir Richard Cox observes, in his History of Ireland, p. 199) to the chief government of the kingdom for good reasons, being a man of great interest and courage, and his very name more terrible to the Irish than an army. He was of a tall stature, and goodly presence, very liberal and merciful, of strict piety and religion, mild in his government, open and plain, sensible of injuries, and when offered, in his mood, desperate both of word and deed; but yet, not so easily displeased, as appeared; an instance whereof is related by Stanishurst: that being in a rage with certain of his servants, one of his horsemen offered Mr. Boyce (a retainer to him) an Irish hobby, on condition he would pluck an hair from the earl's beard. Boyce accepted the offer; stepped to the earl (with whose good nature he was well acquainted) and said, "So it is; and if it like your good lordship, one of your horsemen promised me a choice horse, if I snip one hair from your beard." "Well, quoth the earl, I agree thereto; but if thou pluck any more than one, I promise thee to bring my fist from thine ear." He was well beloved of the English, and a man of singular parts and valour, evident by his long administration of the government. He departed this life September 3, 1513, at Kildare, being carried thither from Athy, where he fell sick, as he was on his march towards Lemewanan, otherwise called O'Canan's castle, attended by the mayor of Dublin, and a great company. His death was occasioned by a shot he had received a little before, against the O'Mores of Leix. By his last will he bequeathed his best gown, of cloth of gold purpurated, for to make sacerdotal vestments; and bestowed the town of Capporo to the maintenance of that canon, who should celebrate his obsequies. He is said also to have repaired the church of Cashel, which he had burned.

He married two wives; Alison, daughter and coheir of Sir Rowland Eustace, of Harrestown in the county of Kildare, knight, created baron of Portlester, March 4, 1642, 2 Edward IV. and for many years lord high-treasurer and chancellor of Ireland, to which post he was advanced by king Edward IV. May 1, 1461, and died December 19, 1496, (by Maud his first wife, daughter of Jenico d'Artoys, and widow of John, third son of Sir John Dowdal, of Newtown, knight) and by her, who died of grief November 22, A. D. 1495, during his confinement in England, and lies buried among the friars minors of the order of St. Francis, near Kilcullen, built by her father in 1460, and where he also lies buried. His lordship had issue Gerald, his successor, and six daughters, viz.

1. Elianor, first married to Donald Mac Fin-cene Mac Garthy Reagh, of Carbury, styled in those days prince of Carbury, by whom she had four sons. The said Elianor had to her second husband Caluacus O'Donel, lord of Tyrconnel, and the whole county of Donegal; but by him had no surviving issue; and outliving the misfortunes which attended her family, had a grant from king Henry VIII. dated at Dublin, September 20, thirty-eighth of his reign, of a pardon for all treasons, felonies, murders, forfeiture of lands, and other crimes by her committed, before July 3, in the thirty-seventh year of his reign.

2. Margaret, married to Piers, earl of Ormond, the eighth who enjoyed that title, by whom she was mother of James, the ninth earl of Ormond, and of Richard, created viscount Montgarret.

3. Elizabeth, married to Christopher, lord Slane, (son and heir to James, lord Slane, who died in 1492, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Wells, lord chancellor, and widow of Christopher, lord Killeen) who January 13, A. D. 1513-14, was appointed lord-treasurer of Ireland, and died in that office at London, August 2, A. D. 1517. 9 Henry VIII. leaving James, lord Slane, who after married the lady Alice Fitz-Gerald, his daughter-in-law, and two daughters, Elianor and Catharine, married to Sir Christopher Barnwall, of Crick's town, knight.

Of his lordship's other three daughters, Alice, Eustachia, and Joan, there is no further mention, than that one of them was married to Con O'Neile, her first cousin, who in 1480 was naturalized by act of parliament, and whose father and himself, says Morrison, waxing bold upon the power of the earls of Kildare, tyrannized over the people, and despised the titles of earls, marquesses, dukes, or barons, in regard of that of O'Neile.

The earl of Kildare's second wife, whom he married in 1496, was Elizabeth, eldest daughter to Oliver St. John, of Lidiard Tregoze, in the county of Wilts, esquire, and of Elizabeth his wife, daughter to Henry lord Scroop, of Bolton, and by her, who survived him, and died seized of the manors of Carlingford and Coly, in the county of Louth, &c. June 28, A. D. 1516, had issue seven sons.

1. Henry Fitz-Gerald, heir to his mother in the aforesaid lands; but dying July 2, the same year, was succeeded by his next brother,

2. Thomas Fitz-Gerald, then aged eighteen years and more, who died soon after, in 22 Henry VIII. unmarried; so that

3. Sir James Fitz-Gerald, the third son, became heir. He was seated at Leixlip, in the county of Kildare, was a knight of the order of St. John of Jerusalem; and, in 1526, deputy of Ireland to his brother, the earl of Kildare. He was seized of divers lands in England, by livery granted to him in 24 Henry VIII. also of the manor of Leixlip in fee, with divers messuages and lands, parcel of the possessions of the monastery of Leixlip, which were forfeited to the crown by his attainder. He married the daughter of the White Knight, lord of Clangibbon, and had an only daughter, the wife of O'Toole, of Imayle.

4. Oliver Fitz-Gerald, married Meawe, daughter of Caher O'Conner, chief of his name, and was ancestor to the family of Belloagh, and Killiegh, in the King's county; having issue three sons, Henry, Thomas, and Gerald.

5. Richard Fitz-Gerald, by inquisition in 30 Henry VIII. was found to have been seized in fee of Creagh, Power's Court, and Tassaghroo, in the county of Dublin, with divers other lands. He married Maud, daughter to George Darcy, of Platen, esquire, and widow of James Marward, baron of Skrine.

6. Sir John Fitz-Gerald was a knight of the same order with his brother Sir James, and left no issue.

7. Walter Fitz-Gerald also left no children by his wife Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Robert, lord Dunfanny.

These last five unfortunate brethren were all attainted of treason, and executed the second of February, 28 Henry VIII. with their nephew, Thomas, earl of Kildare, as related hereafter.

The earl, their father, had also a natural daughter, Catharine, the wife of Peter Talbot, of Malahide, in the county of Dublin, esquire, and by him was mother of Sir Thomas Talbot, of the same place, ancestor to the family yet existing there.

We now proceed with

GERALD FITZ-GERALD, the only son of Gerald, the eighth earl of Kildare, by his first wife, and who succeeding his father, was the ninth earl. He is said to have been one of the fairest men then living, and was called by the vulgar, Garret Mac Alifon. He was constituted lord high treasurer of Ireland, February 18, A. D. 1503-4; which office he resigned to Christopher, lord Slane, his brother-in-law, when, on his father's decease, (whose footsteps, in subduing the Irish, and preserving the peace of his country, he indefatigably pursued) he was appointed lord justice of the kingdom by assent of the council, according to an act of parliament, in 10 Henry VII. for electing the lord treasurer, in case of a vacancy by death; and the king afterwards, by patent, constituted him lord deputy. In 1504, at the battle of Knocktough, he led the body of reserve, and being left at a distance, to be ready if relief was wanted, could not, when he once saw the battle join, stay to wait as his father had appointed him, but charged with the foremost in such a brave and resolute manner, as deserved applause; yet, by quitting his post, all the English carriage was taken by the Irish horse, and a few of the English gentlemen became prisoners. In the winter of 1513, the Irish ravaging the country, his lordship, impatient at their insolence, in the beginning of 1514, marched with his army into Leix (now Queen's county) where he vanquished O'More, and pursuing him and his party, drove them into the woods. He after took the castle of Cavan, and having killed O'Reilly, and many of his followers, chased the remainder into their inaccessible bogs and fastnesses, and burning and destroying them there, returned to Dublin with his men, laden with booty. This service was extremely well received by the king and his English subjects, of which his lordship was advertised by Wolsey; and the next year going to England, to confer confer with his majesty touching the parliament intended to be shortly held (January 25 following, at Dublin, wherein a subsidy was granted to the king) was, June 13, succeeded in the government by William Preston, viscount Gormanston, who, on his return, resigned that post to him before the end of the year, being then constituted lord-deputy.

He was so much favoured by the king, that he obtained a grant, dated at Westminster, October 10, the same year, to him and the heirs male of his body, of the customs, subsidies, tonnages, poundages, and other profits, &c. arising, and accruing out of the towns and ports of Strangford and Ardglash, and the creeks and members thereof in the county of Downe. Yet soon after he incurred the king's displeasure, by conniving at James, earl of Desmond, then proclaimed rebel and traitor, contrary to the king's private orders for apprehending him; instead whereof, he admonished him to come to no place where he might meet him, or have any power upon him: but the king pardoning this offence, his lordship, in 1536, made an inroad into Imaly (the county of Wicklow) and there in a skirmish slew Shane O'Toole, and sent his head to John Richard, mayor of Dublin. Thence he marched into the King's county, where he was joined by several noblemen of English extraction, of the provinces of Munster and Leinster, particularly by Piers, earl of Ormond, and James, eldest son to the earl of Desmond; with which supply being sufficiently strengthened, he undertook the siege of Lemewan castle, which the garrison defended for a week, and then by night deserted, leaving it to be demolished (as it was) by the lord-deputy.

This good success encouraged him to make an attempt on the town of Clonmel, in Tipperary, with so much celerity, that the townsmen (being surprized) immediately surrendered upon conditions.

And having thus finished this expedition, he returned in December to Dublin in triumph, laden with hostages, booty, and honour; and there held a parliament, February 25, in 7 Henry VIII. by virtue of the king's commission, which continued, by several prorogations, until Thursday after Michaelmas, A. D. 1517, wherein a subsidy was granted to the king, and an act made, "That no man should be compelled, by privy-seal, to answer any complaint in England, until the accusers enter into a recognizance in the chancery of Ireland, to pay the defendant his costs and damages, if he be acquitted." Which so much abated that vexatious course of proceeding, as it is now quite out of use.

In 1518, he made a great slaughter in the province of Ulster, where he took the castle of Dunderum by storm, and burnt the fort of Dungannon; but having many enemies, who combined against him, he was the next year sent prisoner to London, where he was accused of enriching himself by unjust seizure of the king's revenues and crown lands, and through the malice of cardinal Wolsey was condemned; but the king pardoned him, and restored him to his honours.

In 1524, he was again made lord deputy of Ireland, as he was in 1532, when he removed Alan, archbishop of Dublin, from his place of lord chancellor, making George Cromer, archbishop of Armagh, chancellor in his room; and the same year, falling with his army into the county of Kilkenny, and bringing from thence many preys belonging to the earl of Ossory and his friends, (because James, lord Butler, eldest son to the said earl, was made high treasurer of Ireland) these things, amongst others, afforded cause to the earl's adversaries to charge his administrations as corrupt, which, in conclusion, was almost destructive to him and his whole family; for, in 1533, John Allen, master of the Rolls, and others, being sent on a message into England, by the privy-council of Ireland, made great complaints against him; and their accusation at length prevailing with the king, his majesty commanded the earl to hasten to London, which he accordingly did, leaving Thomas, his son, who was about twenty-one years of age, deputy in his stead; but afterwards the said young lord, upon a false report, that his father then a prisoner in the Tower, was beheaded, killed the archbishop of Dublin, defied the king and his authority, proclaimed open war, and destroyed and burnt all before him, none resisting, until the Butlers raised their country; so that he, and five of his uncles, whom he had drawn to take his part, were thereupon attainted, and, upon the king's sending an army, were all either taken or submitted, and, through the malice of their enemies, who all exasperated the king against them, and said, there would never be quietness in Ireland, so long as any of the Geraldines were left alive, were all put to death, February 2, 1535-6; and the old earl dying before them of grief in the Tower of London, was there buried.

The following inscription was found on a chest, under the earth, in the chapel there, when a grave was dug to bury the corpse of Ralph Hopton, servant to the earl of Oxford, and son to Sir Owen Hopton, lieutenant of the Tower, in 1580.

Here lieth the Corpes of the L. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, Earle of Kyldare, who deceased the 12th of December, in the Year of our Lord Mcccc xxxiij. on whose Sole Jesu have Mercey.

The earl married, to his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter to John, lord Zouche, of Codnove, a woman of rare probity of mind, and every way commendable; and by her, who died suddenly at Lucan, to the great grief of her lord, on October 6, A. D. 1517, (and was buried with great solemnity near his mother, in the monastery of Friars Observants, at Kilcullen) he had issue Thomas, the tenth earl of Kildare, who suffered with his uncles.

Also four daughters,

1. Catharine, married to Jenicho, viscount Gormanston, to whom she was first wife, and by him, who died October 14, A. D. 1570, was mother of Christopher, his successor in that title, and of several daughters, whereof Catherine was the first wife of Thomas, lord Slane.

2. Alice, married to James, lord Slane, who had no issue by her.

3. Mary, married to Brian O'Conner, of Offaly.

4. Eli-

4. Elizabeth, married to O'Carrol, prince of Elye O'Carrol.

THOMAS FITZ-GERALD, the only son, and tenth earl of Kildare, who suffered with his uncles, was born in England in 1513. He was of a tall stature, comely proportion, and an amiable countenance; of a flexible and kind nature; endowed with many accomplishments and good qualities; and had it not been for the aforelaid unfortunate step, would have proved a worthy branch of this noble family. He is said by Stainhurst, in his Chronicle of Ireland, (against the authority of other writers) never to have bore the title of Kildare; but notwithstanding that assertion, he must have been so, by surviving his father before he was attainted.

He married Frances, second and youngest daughter of Sir Adrian Fortescue, knight, by his first wife Anne, daughter and heir of Sir William Stonor, of Stonor, in Oxfordshire, by Anne his wife, eldest daughter and coheir to John Nevil, marquis of Montacute, and Isabel his wife, daughter and heir of Thomas Ingoldsthorp, esquire. But his lordship had no issue.

THE EARL HIS FATHER married to his second wife, in 1519, the lady Elizabeth Grey, fourth daughter of Thomas, marquis of Dorset, by Cicely his wife, daughter and heir of William Bonville, lord Bonville and Harrington: and by her had two sons and three daughters, viz.

1. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, who being at length restored to the honour, was the eleventh earl of Kildare.

2. Edward Fitz-Gerald, whose son Gerald was earl of Kildare, of whom mention will be made hereafter.

The daughters were,

1. Margaret, who was deaf and dumb, and died unmarried.

2. Elizabeth was the third and last wife of Edward, lord Clinton, created earl of Lincoln; who leaving her a widow, without issue, January 16, A. D. 1584-5, she erected to his memory a monument on the east side of St. George's chapel, at Windsor; and on her ladyship was composed this following sonnet, by the earl of Surry:

From Tuscan came my ladies worthie race,
Faire Florence was sometime hir ancient seat:
The Western Ile, whose pleasant shore doth face
Wild Gamber's clifles, did give hir livelie heat,
Fostered she was with milke of Irish breste,
Hir fire an Earle, her dame of Prince's blood,
From tender yeares in Britaine she dooth rest
With King's child, where she tastes costlie food.
Hunsdon did first present hir to mine eie,
Bright is hir hiew, and Geraldine the light,
Hampton me taught to wish hir first for mine:
And Windsor, alas, dooth chase me from hir sight,
Hir beaultie of mind, hir vertues from above,
Happie is he that can obtain hir love.

3. Cicely, the youngest daughter, of whom king Henry VIII. in his letters to the lord deputy St. Leger, July 5, 1544, makes this mention, "And whereas the lady Sycile, daughter to the late earl of Kildare, hath certain plate in her hands, late belonging to her said father; we are contented and pleased that she shall enjoy the same to her own use, as of our free gift."

GERALD FITZ-GERALD, the eldest son, by the second marriage, born Feb. 25, 1525, being at the time of his brother's execution about ten years of age, was, by the care and sedulity of his nurse, (who then attended him lying sick, at Donoare, in the county of Kildare, of the small-pox) conveyed into the custody of Thomas Leverous, foster-brother to his father, and then his own tutor (afterwards bishop of Kildare) who diligently and tenderly conveyed him to his sister's, the lady Mary O'Conner, in Offaley, where he remained until he was perfectly recovered; and, after some removes, was privately carried into Mac Carthy Reagh's country in Munster, to his aunt Elianor, then the widow of Donald Mac Carthy Reagh, a lady of great virtue and piety, liberality, and magnanimity of spirit, who being solicited to marry with O'Donel, lord of Tyrconnel, and considering the distress of her young innocent nephew, would not incline to his request, and consent to be his wife, but that he should safely protect and preserve her nephew, which being agreed to, she took him with her into the county of Donegal, and into the territory of the said O'Donel, lord of Tyrconnel, where he found kind reception for about a year: but the king being very averse to his whole family, and offering large sums of money for his apprehension, which some of that country, and her husband, amongst the rest, were willing to embrace; his aunt, a wary and prudent lady, having notice of their intentions, sent him with his tutor, and Robert Walsh, sometime his father's servant, in a disguised manner, and in an open boat, to Dumbarton in Scotland, whence he was transported into France; and there his tutor having reason to misdoubt the sincerity of the French, (Sir John Wallop, the English ambassador, demanding him in his master's name, in pursuance of a new league made between the two kings, wherein it was stipulated, that the subjects of either kingdom should not be protected or kept, if demanded) removed him secretly into Flanders, where he had no sooner conveyed him, but one James Sherlock, an Irishman, servant to the ambassador Wallop, sent as a spy, to watch their motions, arrived there: upon which Leverous waited on the governor, to desire his protection from Sherlock's villainous intentions, to betray the innocent child in that place of refuge: whereupon the governor sent for the man, had him examined, and finding him unable to make any warrantable defence, imprisoned him, till the generous youth interceded for his enlargement. Thence they travelled to Brussels, where the emperor kept his court; and there again he was demanded by the English ambassador; but the emperor answered, that he had nothing to do with him, and, for aught he knew, he intended to make but a short stay in his country; and sent him to the bishop of Liege, allowing for him, for his support, a pension of one hundred crowns a month. The bishop gave him an honourable entertainment, and placed him in an abbey of monks for the greater safety of his person; whence, after half a year's stay, cardinal Reginald Pole, his kinsman by his mother, being advertised where he was, sent for him to Rome, received him very kindly, and gave him an education becoming his quality, by placing him first under the care of the bishop of Verona, and the cardinal of Mantua, and after, with the duke confer with his majesty touching the parliament intended to be shortly held (January 25 following, at Dublin, wherein a subsidy was granted to the king) was, June 13, succeeded in the government by William Preston, viscount Gormanstown, who, on his return, resigned that post to him before the end of the year, being then constituted lord-deputy.

He was so much favoured by the king, that he obtained a grant, dated at Westminster, October 10, the same year, to him and the heirs male of his body, of the customs, subsidies, tonnages, poundages, and other profits, &c. arising, and accruing out of the towns and ports of Strangford and Ardgliss, and the creeks and members thereof in the county of Downe. Yet soon after he incurred the king's displeasure, by conniving at James, earl of Desmond, then proclaimed rebel and traitor, contrary to the king's private orders for apprehending him; instead whereof, he admonished him to come to no place where he might meet him, or have any power upon him: but the king pardoning this offence, his lordship, in 1516, made an inroad into Imaly (the county of Wicklow) and there in a skirmish slew Shane O'Toole, and sent his head to John Richard, mayor of Dublin. Thence he marched into the King's county, where he was joined by several noblemen of English extraction, of the provinces of Munster and Leinster, particularly by Piers, earl of Ormond, and James, eldest son to the earl of Desmond; with which supply being sufficiently strengthened, he undertook the siege of Lemewan castle, which the garrison defended for a week, and then by night deserted, leaving it to be demolished (as it was) by the lord-deputy.

This good success encouraged him to make an attempt on the town of Clonmel, in Tipperary, with so much celerity, that the townsmen (being surprized) immediately surrendered upon conditions.

And having thus finished this expedition, he returned in December to Dublin in triumph, laden with hostages, booty, and honour; and there held a parliament, February 25, in 7 Henry VIII. by virtue of the king's commission, which continued, by several prorogations, until Thursday after Michaelmas, A. D. 1517, wherein a subsidy was granted to the king, and an act made, "That no man should be compelled, by privy-seal, to answer any complaint in England, until the accusers enter in to a recognizance in the chancery of Ireland, to pay the defendant his costs and damages, if he be acquitted." Which so much abated that vexatious course of proceeding, as it is now quite out of use.

In 1518, he made a great slaughter in the province of Ulster, where he took the castle of Dunderum by storm, and burnt the fort of Dungannon; but having many enemies, who combined against him, he was the next year sent prisoner to London, where he was accused of enriching himself by unjust seizure of the king's revenues and crown lands, and through the malice of cardinal Wolsey was condemned; but the king pardoned him, and restored him to his honours.

In 1524, he was again made lord deputy of Ireland, as he was in 1532, when he removed Alan, archbishop of Dublin, from his place of lord-chancellor, making George Cromer, archbishop of Armagh, chancellor in his room; and the same year, falling with his army into the county of Kilkenny, and bringing from thence many preys belonging to the earl of Ossory and his friends, (because James, lord Butler, eldest son to the said earl, was made high treasurer of Ireland) these things, amongst others, afforded cause to the earl's adversaries to charge his administrations as corrupt, which, in conclusion, was almost destructive to him and his whole family; for, in 1533, John Allen, master of the Rolls, and others, being sent on a message into England, by the privy-council of Ireland, made great complaints against him; and their accusation at length prevailing with the king, his majesty commanded the earl to hasten to London, which he accordingly did, leaving Thomas, his son, who was about twenty-one years of age, deputy in his stead; but afterwards the said young lord, upon a false report, that his father then a prisoner in the Tower, was beheaded, killed the archbishop of Dublin, defied the king and his authority, proclaimed open war, and destroyed and burnt all before him, none resisting, until the Butlers raised their country; so that he, and five of his uncles, whom he had drawn to take his part, were thereupon attainted, and, upon the king's sending an army, were all either taken or submitted, and, through the malice of their enemies, who all exasperated the king against them, and said, there would never be quietness in Ireland, so long as any of the Geraldines were left alive, were all put to death, February 2, 1535-6; and the old earl dying before them of grief in the Tower of London, was there buried.

The following inscription was found on a chest, under the earth, in the chapel there, when a grave was dug to bury the corpse of Ralph Hopton, servant to the earl of Oxford, and son to Sir Owen Hopton, lieutenant of the Tower, in 1580.

Here lieth the Corpes of the L. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, Earle of Kyldare, who deceased the 12th of December, in the Year of our Lord Mcccc xxxiii. on whose Sole Jesu have Mercey.

The earl married, to his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter to John, lord Zouche, of Codnovre, a woman of rare probity of mind, and every way commendable; and by her, who died suddenly at Lucan, to the great grief of her lord, on October 6, A. D. 1517, (and was buried with great solemnity near his mother, in the monastery of Friars Observants, at Kilcullen) he had issue Thomas, the tenth earl of Kildare, who suffered with his uncles.

Also four daughters,

1. Catharine, married to Jenicho, viscount Gormanston, to whom she was first wife, and by him, who died October 14, A. D. 1570, was mother of Christopher, his successor in that title, and of several daughters, whereof Catherine was the first wife of Thomas, lord Slane.

2. Alice, married to James, lord Slane, who had no issue by her.

3. Mary, married to Brian O'Conner, of Offaley.

4. Eli-

4. Elizabeth, married to O'Carrol, prince of Elye O'Carrol.

THOMAS FITZ-GERALD, the only son, and tenth earl of Kildare, who suffered with his uncles, was born in England in 1513. He was of a tall stature, comely proportion, and an amiable countenance; of a flexible and kind nature; endowed with many accomplishments and good qualities; and had it not been for the aforelaid unfortunate step, would have proved a worthy branch of this noble family. He is said by Stainhurst, in his Chronicle of Ireland, (against the authority of other writers), never to have bore the title of Kildare; but notwithstanding that assertion, he must have been so, by surviving his father before he was attainted.

He married Frances, second and youngest daughter of Sir Adrian Fortescue, knight, by his first wife Anne, daughter and heir of Sir William Stonor, of Stonor, in Oxfordshire, by Anne his wife, eldest daughter and coheir to John Nevil, marquis of Montacute, and Isabel his wife, daughter and heir of Thomas Ingoldsthorp, esquire. But his lordship had no issue.

THE EARL HIS FATHER married to his second wife, in 1519, the lady Elizabeth Grey, fourth daughter of Thomas, marquis of Dorset, by Cicely his wife, daughter and heir of William Bonville, lord Bonville and Harrington: and by her had two sons and three daughters, viz.

1. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, who being at length restored to the honour, was the eleventh earl of Kildare.

2. Edward Fitz-Gerald, whose son Gerald was earl of Kildare, of whom mention will be made hereafter.

The daughters were,

1. Margaret, who was deaf and dumb, and died unmarried.

2. Elizabeth was the third and last wife of Edward, lord Clinton, created earl of Lincoln; who leaving her a widow, without issue, January 16, A. D. 1584-5, she erected to his memory a monument on the east side of St. George's chapel, at Windsor; and on her ladyship was composed this following sonnet, by the earl of Surry:

From Tuscan came my ladies worthie race,
Faith Florence was sometime his ancient fear:
The Western Ile, whose pleasant shore doth face
Wild Gamber's cliffs, did give him livelie heat,
Fostered she was with milke of Irish brest,
His fire an Earle, her dame of Prince's blood,
From tender yeares in Britaine she dooth rest
With King's child, where she tastes costlie food.
Hunsdon did first present him to mine eie,
Bright is his hew, and Geraldine the light,
Hampton me taught to wish his first for mine:
And Windsor, alas, dooth chase me from his sight,
His beaultie of mind, his virtues from above,
Happie is he that can obtain his love.

3. Cicely, the youngest daughter, of whom king Henry VIII. in his letters to the lord deputy St. Leger, July 5, 1544, makes this mention, "And whereas the lady Sybile, daughter to the late earl of Kildare, hath certain plate in her hands, late belonging to her said father; we are contented and pleased that she shall enjoy the same to her own use, as of our free gift."

GERALD FITZ-GERALD, the eldest son, by the second marriage, born Feb. 25, 1525, being at the time of his brother's execution about ten years of age, was, by the care and sedulity of his nurse, (who then attended him lying sick, at Donoare, in the county of Kildare, of the small-pox) conveyed into the custody of Thomas Leverous, foster-brother to his father, and then his own tutor (afterwards bishop of Kildare) who diligently and tenderly conveyed him to his sister's, the lady Mary O'Connor, in Offaley, where he remained until he was perfectly recovered; and, after some removes, was privately carried into Mac Carthy Reagh's country in Munster, to his aunt Elinor, then the widow of Donald Mac Carthy Reagh, a lady of great virtue and piety, liberality, and magnanimity of spirit, who being solicited to marry with O'Donel, lord of Tyreconnel, and considering the distress of her young innocent nephew, would not incline to his request, and consent to be his wife, but that he should safely protect and preserve her nephew, which being agreed to, she took him with her into the county of Donegal, and into the territory of the said O'Donel, lord of Tyreconnel, where he found kind reception for about a year: but the king being very averse to his whole family, and offering large sums of money for his apprehension, which some of that country, and her husband, amongst the rest, were willing to embrace; his aunt, a wary and prudent lady, having notice of their intentions, sent him with his tutor, and Robert Walsh, sometime his father's servant, in a disguised manner, and in an open boat, to Dumbarton in Scotland, whence he was transported into France; and there his tutor having reason to misdoubt the sincerity of the French, (Sir John Wallop, the English ambassador, demanding him in his master's name, in pursuance of a new league made between the two kings, wherein it was stipulated, that the subjects of either kingdom should not be protected or kept, if demanded) removed him secretly into Flanders, where he had no sooner conveyed him, but one James Sherlock, an Irishman, servant to the ambassador Wallop, sent as a spy, to watch their motions, arrived there: upon which Leverous waited on the governor, to desire his protection from Sherlock's villainous intentions, to betray the innocent child in that place of refuge: whereupon the governor sent for the man, had him examined, and finding him unable to make any warrantable defence, imprisoned him, till the generous youth interceded for his enlargement. Thence they travelled to Brussels, where the emperor kept his court, and there again he was demanded by the English ambassador; but the emperor answered, that he had nothing to do with him, and, for aught he knew, he intended to make but a short stay in his country; and sent him to the bishop of Liege, allowing for him, for his support, a pension of one hundred crowns a month. The bishop gave him an honourable entertainment, and placed him in an abbey of monks for the greater safety of his person; whence, after half a year's stay, cardinal Reginald Pole, his kinsman by his mother, being advertised where he was, sent for him to Rome, received him very kindly, and gave him an education becoming his quality, by placing him first under the care of the bishop of Verona, and the cardinal of Mantua, and after, with the duke of Mantua, Leverous also being admitted, thro' the cardinal's procurement, a member of the English house in Rome, called St. Thomas's hospital. After about eighteen month's continuance with the bishop, he was sent for by the cardinal to Rome, (at which time the duke of Mantua gave him an annual pension of three hundred crowns) in whose house after he had continued for about three years, under the tuition of the best instructors, he travelled, with the cardinal's approbation, to Naples, where becoming acquainted with the knights of Rhodes, he accompanied them to Malta, and thence to Tripoli, on the coast of Barbary, then belonging to those knights, where he abode six weeks with Mountbrison, the governor, serving valiantly against the Turks; and returned, with a rich booty, first to Malta, and then to Rome, after being absent near a year. The cardinal, highly satisfied with his valour and success, augmented his pension of three hundred crowns, to three hundred pounds; and shortly after preferred him to the service of Cosmo, duke of Florence, who made him master of his horse, with the yearly pension of three hundred ducats, on the same terms the other pensions were granted, viz. during life, or until he was restored to his honours and estate.

He continued in his service three years, and in that time took a tour to Rome, when accompanying one day the pope's nephew, cardinal Farnese, to hunt the stag, he accidentally, in the chase, fell into a very deep pit; but, in the fall, forsaking his horse not far from the bottom, caught hold of some roots, by which he hung, until, quite tired with the pain, he was forced to quit his hold, and falling upon his horse (dead in the pit) stood there, up to the ankles in water, about the space of three hours. When the chase was ended, his hound missing his master, and finding the scent of his track, pursued it to the pit, where he stood howling over him, until the cardinal perceiving the dog, hastened to his relief; and sending to a neighbouring village for ropes and other necessaries, caused one of the company to be let down in a basket, by which he was extricated from the pit, and preserved most providentially from destruction.

He remained abroad until he heard of king Henry VIIIth's death, and then came to London, in company with some foreign ambassadors, and his friend and preserver father Leverous. Being at a ball, or masque, in king Edward's court, and one of the comeliest young men of that age, he was fallen in love with by Mabel, daughter of Sir Anthony Brown, knight of the garter; and marrying her, was, by means thereof, received into favour by king Edward VI. who, in 1552, honoured him with knighthood; and by letters-patent, dated at Westminster, April 25, that year, restored him to the lordships and manors of Maynooth, Portlester, Moylagh, Rathangan, Kilkea, &c. But when queen Mary came to the crown, and cardinal Pole returned to England, by his intercession, he was restored by her to the titles of earl of Kildare, and baron of Offaley, by letters-patent, dated at her manor of St. James's, May 13, A. D. 1554, with the creation fee of twenty pounds yearly, to be received by him and his heirs male for ever, out of the customs of the port of Dublin, at the feasts of St. Michael and Easter, by equal portions.

Also by letters-patent, dated the 1st of May, the 1st and 2d of Philip and Mary, his lordship obtained a grant of all such honours, castles, manors, lordships, lands, tenements, rents, reversions, advowsons, and other hereditaments whatsoever, within the realm of Ireland, which came, or ought to have come, to the possession of the kings Henry VIII. and Edward VI. or unto either of them, or to the said queen, by the attainder of his father.

The earl having received so many and great favours from the crown of England, proved himself a grateful and obedient subject, by many services he performed.

His lordship married Mabel, second daughter of Sir Anthony Brown, knight of the garter, and master of the horse to king Edward VI. (by Alice his wife, daughter to Sir John Gage, knight of the garter) and sister to Sir Anthony Brown, created viscount Montacute by queen Mary, in 1554, and by her (a lady of great worth and virtue, who resided whilst a widow in the fair house of Maynooth, and dying August 25, A. D. 1610, was buried in Kildare) had issue three sons and two daughters:

1. Mary, born September 13, A. D. 1556, and in 1584 married to Christopher Nugent, the ninth baron of Delvin, and died October 1, A. D. 1610.

2. Elizabeth, married to Donatus, fourth earl of Thomond, to whom she was second wife.

The sons were,

1. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, lord Offaley, born at Maynooth, December 28, A. D. 1559; and being a young nobleman of great expectations, these verses were made on him:

Te Pulchrum Natura fecit, Fortuna, Potentem; Te faciat Christi norma, Giralde, Bonum.

He married Catharine, daughter of Sir Francis Knowlles, treasurer of queen Elizabeth's household, and knight of the garter (by Catharine his wife, daughter of Sir William Carey, by the lady Mary Bolleyn his wife, daughter and coheir of Thomas, earl of Wiltshire and Ormond) and sister to Sir William Knowlles, created by king Charles I. earl of Banbury. His lordship dying in England before his father, was buried in the abbey-church of St. Alban's, Hertfordshire, the 30th of June, A. D. 1580. He left issue by his lady, who survived him, (and was secondly the wife of Sir Philip Boreler, of Watton Wood hall, in the county of Hertford, knight) an only daughter and heir, Lettice, married to Sir Robert Digby, of Cole's hill, in the county of Warwick, knight, who carried into that family the lordship of Geashil, in the King's county, which was confirmed to her and her heirs, by award of king James I. July 11, A. D. 1619; by which king she was also created baroness of Offaley, for life; and was mother of Robert, created lord Digby, of Geashil, in Ireland, whose descendants are existing.

2. HENRY FITZ-GERALD, who succeeded his father in honour and estate, and was the twelfth earl of Kildare, being twenty-three years of age at the time of his father's death.

He married Frances Howard, second daughter to Charles, earl of Nottingham, by his wife Catharine, Catharine, eldest daughter of Henry Carey, lord Hunsdon (brother to his elder brother Gerald's wife's mother), by whom he had issue two daughters.

1. Elianor, who died young before him; and,
2. Bridget, married to Roger O'Donnell, created earl of Tyrconnel, and baron of Donegal, with limitation of the honours to his brother Geoffrey, by letters patent of King James I. dated September 27, 1603; and secondly to Nicholas, Viscount Kingland.

The said Frances, countess dowager of Kildare, re-married with Henry Brook, lord Cobham, and died without issue by him in 1628.

To the said Henry, earl of Kildare, who died 1597.

WILLIAM FITZ GERALD, his brother, became heir, and was the thirteenth earl. His lordship being in England when the earl of Essex was going over to Ireland to prosecute the war against Tirôen, in the end of March, 1599, attended him; but the weather proving very tempestuous, the earl of Kildare, and some gallant gentlemen who accompanied his ship in a small bark, chosen of purpose for speed, were unfortunately cast away in April, and drowned in their passage. And his lordship dying unmarried, we now return to Edward Fitz-Gerald, esquire, younger brother to Gerald, the eleventh earl of Kildare, who with him was restored by act of parliament.

Which EDWARD FITZ GERALD, born January 17, 1528, being in England with his mother at the time of his father's death, was, by the interest of her friends, preferred to the post of lieutenant of the gentlemen pensioners; and taking to wife Mabel, daughter and heir of Sir John Leigh, and widow of Sir John Paston, of Norfolk, knight, had two sons and three daughters, viz.

1. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, who succeeded his cousin in the earldom and estate, by virtue of the aforementioned entail.

2. Thomas Fitz-Gerald, father of George the sixteenth earl.

The daughters were,

1. Elizabeth, maid of honour to queen Elizabeth, and after married to Sir John Hill, knight.
2. Lettice, first married to Sir Ambrose Copinger, and secondly to Sir John Pointz, knight; and,

3. Douglas, the first wife of Sir Francis Aungier, knight, made master of the rolls, and one of the privy-council of Ireland, October 6, 1609, created lord Aungier, baron of Longford, by patent, dated at Dublin, June 29, 1621, and continued in his employment of master of the rolls by king Charles I. April 16, 1625.

GERALD FITZ GERALD, eldest son of Edward Fitz-Gerald, succeeding to the title in 1597, was the fourteenth earl of Kildare. He commanded a regiment of foot in the queen's wars against Tirôen; and in September 1599, when the earl of Essex left the kingdom, commanded 50 horse, and 150 foot, in and about the Naas: Also, July 7, 1601, the forces of Kildare, under his command, were appointed by the deputy to lie at Athy, or elsewhere, at his lordship's discretion, and that the sheriff of the county should command them under him. He was one of the council to Sir George Carew, president of Munster; and by her majesty's letters, dated at Oatlands, August 31, 1600, 42 Elizabeth, was appointed governor of Offaley, with the stipend of a mark a day; also enjoyed a pension of ten shillings a day.

It appears by inquisition, taken at Dunboyne, September 10, 1612, that his lordship departed this life on the birth of February 1612, 9 Jac. I. and after his funerals were solemnized at Maynooth, his body was, November 15, 1612, from thence carried to Kildare, and deposited with his ancestors in the choir of that church. He married, by dispensation of the pope, Elizabeth, daughter of Christopher Nugent, the ninth baron of Delvin, by the lady Mary Fitz-Gerald, his cousin-german, daughter to his uncle Gerald, the eleventh earl of Kildare, and had issue an only son, GERALD FITZ GERALD, his successor, 15th earl of Kildare, who was at the time of his father's death only seven weeks old, being born December 26, 1612, and October 21, 1618, pursuant to his majesty's letters, dated at Westminster, July 8, preceding, was given in ward to Esme Stuart, earl of March, afterwards duke of Lenox, with order that his lordship should be married to one of the lord Aubigny's daughters; but he dying at Maynooth, November 19, 1620 (evident by inquisition taken at Navan, September 6, 1621) was buried in Kildare.

Therefore we now return to his uncle, THOMAS FITZ GERALD, who married Frances, daughter of Thomas Randolph, post-master-general to queen Elizabeth, and both lie buried in the church of Walton upon Thames in Surry; where, on a blue marble, on the south side of the chancel, is this inscription.

Hic jacet Thomas Vir, quondam stipendiarius Giraldis Kildara Comitis, Nobilis ortus erat. Hic jacet et Francisca Uxor, Randolpha Proles, Antiquo Armigerum Stemmata quatuor fuit. Lætas uterque satis nobili lugendus Amicos. Quam vere voluit spectat uterque Deum.

And on a black marble monument, against the south wall, over the gravestone, is

In farther Memory of the same THOMAS FITZ GERALD, Esquire, and Frances the eldest Daughter of Thomas Randolph, Esq. Post-Master of England.

Stay (gentle reader) stay, and read in ill-fram'd lines
The life and death of two (well suited) mynides:
To poore they gave, of rich they did not borrow;
To all they lent, where want expressed sorrow;
To see a friend, to friend their faith approv'd;
Of foe, of friend, of both they were belov'd.
Their earth was heav'n, where blessed angels sing,
Their church was Christ, whose death sure life us brings.
In fine, so liv'd, so lov'd, so dy'd, and rest,
As friends, as doves, as saints, and so are blest:
Pass on this way, thus live, thus dye, which done,
Two lives thou gain'st, when others have but one.

C. M.
Though, future times, your malice will not credit,
Present truth subscribes to, such was their great merit. 1619.

They had issue three sons and four daughters,

1. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, } who both died young.
2. John Fitz-Gerald, }
3. George Fitz-Gerald, who succeeded to the honours.

The

The daughters were,

1. Anne.
2. Lettice, married to John Morris of Thistleworth, in the county of Middlesex, esq.

And the other two died young.

GEORGE FITZ-GERALD, 16th earl of Kildare, was born in 1611, and coming to the titles and estate when only eight years nine months old, was given in ward to the earl of March, by the king's letter from Westminster, January 23, 1620-1; and August 3, 1622, the earl had a grant of his wardship on paying the fine of one thousand marks, Irish. That nobleman took care to have him educated in the communion of the church of England, in which this great family hath ever since continued; but he dying before his ward came of age, the custody of him fell to his lady, the duchess of Lenox, who assigning him to Richard Boyle, first earl of Cork, he received the wardship of him by king Charles the 1st's letter, dated May 10, 1629, at Westminster (and by patent at Dublin, June 26), paying the yearly sum of 47l. 16s. 6d. And soon after proposed a marriage to him with his daughter, the lady Joan; to which his lordship consenting, and the king's approbation being necessary, his majesty, by letter from Baginbun, August 15, 1629, directed to the said earl of Cork, and the lord chancellor Elye, his justices, gave his assent thereto, as the marriage was for the support of so noble and ancient a house; and to the end it might receive no manner of impediment or delay, required them to call before them Richard Talbot of Malahide, and all such other persons as were seized of any manors, lands, hereditaments, to the use of his lordship, and the heirs male of his body, to signify under his or their hand and seals, that he or they would join with him in making a jointure to fit and indifferent persons, to the use of himself and the said lady Joan, and the longer liver of them, in such manner, as by certain articles of agreement lately passed between Catharine, duchess of Lenox, and the said earl of Cork, was already agreed on: and accordingly the marriage took effect on the 15th of August, A. D. 1603.

His lordship, who had upon many occasions, particularly in the years 1641 and 1647, been instrumental in suppressing two Irish rebellions, died before the restoration of king Charles II. and had issue by his said lady, Joan, fourth daughter to Richard earl of Cork, who died March 11, 1656, and was buried in her father's tomb, in the cathedral church of St. Patrick, three sons and six daughters, viz.

1. Richard Fitz-Gerald, lord Offaley, baptized in St. Warburgh's church, February 4, 1632-3, and died an infant.

2. Wentworth Fitz-Gerald, who succeeded to the honour and estate.

3. Robert Fitz-Gerald, grandfather of James, viscount (and duke of) Leinster.

The daughters were,

1. Elizabeth, baptized December 23, 1631, died young.

2. Jane, a twin with her sister Elianor, both baptized May 15, 1634, also died young.

3. Elianor, married February 16, 1656, before Ridgeway Hatfield, mayor of Dublin, to Sir Walter Borrowes, then of Grangemellan in the county of Kildare, baronet.

4. Catherine, was a lady of great piety and virtue, and dying unmarried in an advanced age, May 1, 1714, left the earl of Kildare, her nephew, all her personal estate.

5. Frances, married July 28, 1656, before Benjamin Worsley, esquire, justice of the peace, to Sir James Shaen, then of Bishopstone, in the county of Westmeath, and after of Killmore, in the county of Roscommon.

6. Elizabeth, married first to Callaghan, earl of Clancarthy, and secondly to Sir William Davis, chief justice of the King's Bench, died in July 1698.

WENTWORTH FITZ-GERALD, who succeeded his father, being the 17th earl of Kildare, was made February 11, 1660-1, captain of a troop of horse, and March 27, 1661, appointed governor of the Queen's county and that of Kildare. On the 8th of May that year, he took his seat in the house of peers, and the same day was nominated one of the committee of privileges.

His lordship, who departed this life in the prime of years, in great reputation, on the 5th of March, A. D. 1663-4, married Elizabeth Holles, second daughter of John, earl of Clare, and of Elizabeth his wife, eldest daughter and coheir to the celebrated and valiant Horatio, lord Vere of Tilbury, with whom he had a fortune of 6000l. and by her, who during her widowhood resided at Kilkea, and dying June 33, 1666, was buried by him (according to her request in her will) had issue one son, John lord Offaley, who succeeding him, was the 18th earl of Kildare, and three daughters, viz.

1. Mary, who died in her infancy.

2. Anne, married first to Hugh Boscawen, of Tregothan, in the county of Cornwall, esquire; and secondly to Francis Roberts, esquire, uncle to Charles Bodville, earl of Radnor. She died on the 4th of May, 1715, and was buried in Westminster Abbey the 15th.

3. Eleanor, baptized the 21st of January, A. D. 1663, buried in Christ Church, the 21st of March, 1665.

JOHN FITZ-GERALD, 18th earl of Kildare, born in 1661, being an infant at his father's death, was left under the guardianship of his mother; after whose decease he was committed to the care of Elizabeth, countess-dowager of Clare, his grandmother; and whilst he continued under age, was considered by king Charles II. as a person deserving his favour, by the services and sufferings of his family.

When he came of age, he attended his highness James duke of York, with his royal consort, and the lady Anne, his daughter, to the university of Oxford; and it being the duke's pleasure that some of his retinue should be created doctors of the civil law, there was a convocation celebrated in the morning of the 22d of May, 1682, wherein his lordship was the first complimented with that degree. After king James came to the crown, he underwent the same hardships with the rest of the protestants of Ireland, having his estate, to the value of 6800l. per annum, and 200l. a year in England, sequestered by the parliament held in Dublin, 1689.

He married to his first wife Mary, eldest daughter to Henry O'Brien, lord Ibrackan, son and heir apparent to Henry earl of Thomond, by the lady Catherine Stuart, his wife, sister and sole heir to Charles duke of Richmond and Lenox, by whom he had a son James, who died young. To his second (pursuant to articles of marriage, dated the 10th and 11th of June, A. D. 1684) Elizabeth Jones, eldest daughter and coheir to Richard, earl of Ranelagh; but by her, with whom his lordship received a fortune of ten thousand pounds, he had no issue; and departing this life, at his seat of Caversham, in the county of Oxford, on the 19th of November, A. D. 1707, was buried the 4th of December, in the duke of Richmond's vault in king Henry VII's chapel, in Westminster-abbey, to whom succeeded his first cousin,

ROBERT FITZ-GERALD, late earl of Kildare, son of his uncle, Robert Fitz-Gerald, esquire, brother to his father Wentworth, the 17th earl of Kildare. Which Robert Fitz-Gerald, Esq; was baptized in the parish of St. Werburgh, the 17th of August, A. D. 1637; and about the time of the restoration of king Charles II. being of great activity and spirit, was an eminent instrument, among others, of wresting the government from the hands of the usurpers, and putting it into that happy condition, as it remained many years in perfect peace and prosperity; not only maintaining itself, which it never did before that signal event, but also to ease the exchequer in England of great payments, to which it was liable before, for the support of the kingdom.

On the 15th of April, A. D. 1661, pursuant to his majesty's directions from Whitehall of the 19th March preceding, he was constituted comptroller of the musters and checks of the army in Ireland, with the fee of twenty shillings a-day; which having been omitted to be effectually inserted in the establishment of the kingdom, the king, on the 6th of November, A. D. 1667, directed it to be done, and the arrears to be duly paid and satisfied. He was also sworn (with his brother Wentworth) of his majesty's privy-council, and made captain of a troop of horse. In 1674, he was joined with his nephew in the government of the county of Kildare; of which, in 1680, he was made custos rotulorum. He lived in great honour and esteem at Grangemessan, of which place, February 13, A. D. 1674, he took a lease from his brother-in-law, Sir Walter Boffowes, for 999 years.

On the 6th of August, A. D. 1677, he had the degree of doctor of laws at Oxford, on the recommendation of James, duke of Ormond, chancellor of the university. When king James came to the crown, he was stripped of all his offices and employments, and his troop, purchased by himself, for which he had refused two thousand pounds some time before, disposed of to another. Having been bred from his infancy in England, he had a perfect abhorrence of popery; and although king James, the lord Tyrconnel, and divers others, had several times offered him many advantages of grandeur and power; yet such was his steady adherence to the protestant religion, and interest of his country, that they were often heard to say, "He would force them to ruin him, which they were sorry for."

He died on the 31st of January, A. D. 1699, having married, August 4, A. D. 1663, Mary, only daughter and heir to Colonel James Clorworthy,

* The following account of this gentleman's sufferings before and his behaviour after king William's landing, may not be unacceptable to our readers, but was too prolix to be admitted into the body of the work:

The lord Tyrconnel not only disarmed the protestants, and took their horses from them, but made an attempt on the lives of the most eminent persons in Dublin, taking one morning from their houses, this Mr. Fitz-Gerald, with several others, who were carried through the streets, in a most insolent manner, to the lord chief justice Nugent's, who ordered them to Newgate, and were confined in the most common and nasty room in that wretched prison; and although it was represented their lives would thereby be endangered, they were answered, It was good enough for them. Accordingly Mr. Fitz-Gerald remained there twenty-one weeks, until, by frequent applications and importunities, an order of council was obtained to discharge him on bail; when, giving considerable bonds for his security, he was permitted to live with some ease in his own house for about five months: yet, lest he might hold correspondence with the citizens, who were still suspected to have great store of concealed arms, a regiment of foot was quartered in three houses within pistol-shot of his; and although he was deprived of his estate and employments, to the value of 3300l. a year, yet he wanted nothing of necessary provisions for his subsistence, sent him from persons then and after unknown to him. On the confirmation of king William's landing in Ireland, leave was promised him to stay at his house under a guard; but he was hurried out of it by an insolent militia officer, assisted with seven citizens, without allowing him one moment to put his affairs in order, and carried to the castle, where he met with Dr. King, and Dr. Foy, (two eminent divines, and afterwards bishops) in the guard-room, brought thither some hours before on the same account: and, after some deliberation, he was ordered to be confined in the college, in which, at that time, were above 50 prisoners of all degrees.

When the news of king James's defeat at the Boyne had reached Dublin, the city was in the utmost confusion, occasioned by rumours of being to be burned, and the castle blown up, and in it all the protestant inhabitants; on which alarm Mr. Fitz-Gerald bestirred himself, and it may justly be said, that by his conduct and courage he prevented so terrible a disaster; having desired Sir Robert Gore, with two or three servants, to go to the castle, and carry a letter to Mr. Spike, who kept the keys of it for king James; and required him to deliver them to Sir Robert, with which he complied. After this, accompanied by the bishop of Limerick, dean Burke, and eight or nine gentlemen more, he marched out of the college towards the city, and at the end of the lord Charlemount's house was commanded by a sentinel to stand; but he pushing forward, demanded by whose order he stood there? Whereunto he answered, by his officer's; that the guard was at hand, and that he would fire upon them if they advanced nearer; upon which, Mr. Fitz-Gerald seizing his sword, and marching forward, he no sooner was perceived with the sword in his hand, but the windows and doors flew open, men, women, and children crying aloud, "Here's captain Fitz-Gerald, we are now safe; every one then believing him to be so, and the town free from danger. On coming to the custom-house, he with great care and diligence secured the papers of the revenues; and leaving men to guard that place, he proceeded into the city, and after calling at the Castle, where he was satisfied all was well, found several crowds of people gathered about the middle of Castle-street, contriving how to plunder the houses of the papists, with whom he so argued on the situation of affairs, as to prevail with them to have better thoughts, and to assure him they would act nothing that night, but by his directions. When he had advanced as far as the Tholsel, he met Sir Thomas Newcomen, and other principal citizens, who had been some time in the streets to prevent disorders; who assured him, colonel Luttrell, the governor, and his deputy, both fled about 7 o'clock, one of the company averring he heard him say, that Captain Fitz-Gerald would soon have his place, which in a few hours proved true. And many of the townsmen joining, with such arms as they could get, a rabble of at least 50 men were gathered near Skinner's-Row, and in the midst of them a gentleman with all the keys of the city in his hands; Mr. Fitz-Gerald demanded, by what authority he kept those keys? To which he replied, his authority was better than his. Whereupon, closing with him, he took the keys from him, and the gentleman being asked why he would dispute it with captain Fitz-Gerald, begged his pardon, and told him, that not only he, but all his party, were seeking him, worthy, of Monnimore, in the county of Londonderry, (who died in February, A. D. 1658-9) second brother to John, lord viscount Massareen, and had issue by her, who died the 31st of March, A. D. 1713, four sons and six daughters, viz.

1. James Fitz-Gerald, who died young.
2. George Fitz-Gerald, who succeeded his father, but died unmarried, when near twenty-seven years of age.
3. Robert Fitz-Gerald, who succeeding to the title, was the nineteenth earl of Kildare.
4. James Fitz-Gerald, who died young.

to present him with the keys. This done, the several parties of protestants joining, to the number of near 100, he ordered 60 of them, with corporals of his own making, to the several gates of the city, and ten to the mint-office; after which he went to the main guard, where finding a militia officer on duty, and about 30 men with their arms loaden and matches lighted, it was a long time before he would admit of a parley, threatening every moment that his men should fire; but, at length, Mr. Fitz-Gerald discouraging him at some distance, declared to him the danger he incurred of putting the whole town in blood, when the king was so near, and that he could have no hopes of mercy, but by giving up his guard to him. Whereupon he delivered his pike to him, and his men laid down their arms, which he immediately put into protestant hands. He then went to the castle, where he found an easy admittance, having sent thither several protestants before, under the command of Sir Robert Gore, to guard the place: and having placed his guards, and ordered the rounds, he went to a friend's house in the city, accompanied with the bishop of Limerick, dean Burke, and several gentlemen, who had formerly been in his own troop; who sent letters to his majesty, then near Drogheda, with an account of their proceedings.

The first of their letters was scarce signed when Mr. Fitz-Gerald was informed, that at least 1000 French were in arms, who had returned from the camp; and at the same time he had a letter from alderman Blackhall, informing him, the town was a firing in his quarters; whereupon he drew out the guard, (having hastily signed the letter to the king, and sent it by counsellor Dixon) and, with about thirty men, went to the place where the danger seemed greatest: on which those men, hearing the whole city was in arms with him, took to their heels on his first appearance, and fled out of the town; but happening to find the man that was putting fire to the thatched houses in Kavenstreet, he seized him before much damage ensued, who being a French soldier, and obeying the orders of his major, he was released after two days confinement. About break of day some hundreds of the rabble, in several places of the town, being got together, declared, they were resolved to take the protestants goods out of the papists houses, and then burn the houses; adding, they had been ruined and imprisoned by the Irish rogues, and now would revenge themselves, and plunder all the papists. To prevent this he reasoned with them strongly, asked them if they knew him; and if they had forgot what he had done for them last night, in disarming the guard, and preserving them, when they had no arms to defend themselves! This pacified some of them; but whilst he was speaking, others broke open colonel Sarsfield's house, and there he was obliged to exercise his authority with cane and sword; and from four o'clock till seven in the morning was in unheard of danger, every one of this rabble believing he robbed him of his due, in denying him leave to break into papists houses, to search for protestants goods; and yet, by God's great goodness, there was not a life lost in the town.

About seven in the morning he directed several letters, and sent messages to all the old privy counsellors, to the few protestants of the late council, and to most of the eminent clergymen in town, who assembled on this occasion; and after he had made them a short speech, they returned him thanks, and chose a committee of five to manage affairs till the king's pleasure was known; which number being increased to nine, by the coming in of some eminent persons, they consulted of what was fit to be done for the keeping of order and peace in the city; but whilst they were thus employed, there was a fresh alarm, that the French were returning, and within a mile of the town. Upon which he drew out a considerable body of men, dispatched three horsemen to scout four miles about the country, and sent a letter to the chief officer of the vanguard of the king's army, as follows:

The daughters were,

1. Mary, in 1684 was married to John, created lord viscount Allen, and dying in 1692, was mother of Joshua, lord Allen.

2. Catharine, married August 19, A. D. 1707, to Dr. Dive Downes, bishop of Cork and Ross, and by him, who died November 13, A. D. 1709, was mother of Robert Downes, esquire, chosen, 1735, member of parliament for the town of Kildare.

3. Frances, married to Michael Tisdal, of Martray, alias Mount Tisdal, in the county of Meath, esquire.

S I R,

' This town is now at his majesty's service, only the rabble is very numerous, and we are afraid will be disorderly; and it is feared, that some parties of king James's forces, who are within six miles, will return and rifle the town; we therefore intreat you to come, or send some party of the forces under your command, to relieve and assist us with all expedition, and secure his majesty's subjects from any further inconveniencies.

Fitz-Gerald.

Dublin, July 3d, at Noon, 1690.

' To the Chief Officer, commanding any Body of their Majesties Horse, Foot, or Dragoons, in their March to Dublin.
' Haste, Haste, Haste, for his Majesty's Service.

This letter came to the king sooner than that which was sent by Dixon, though dispatched eight hours before it. His majesty received the news of the city's being in his hands, with great satisfaction, and said, "I see I have some good friends at Dublin, and am much obliged to Mr. Fitz-Gerald; pray tell him (being on horseback) I can't now write to him, but will take care to send him some horse as soon as I can, and desire he will go on with taking care of the place as he has done."—The committee of nine, with great compliments and civility, let him know, that it was fit he should be governor of the city and castle, and delivered him the following paper, in the nature of a commission:

"Whereas the city and castle of Dublin have been deserted by the late governors, appointed by king James; and it is necessary that some care be taken to supply that office; we therefore desire, that the honourable Robert Fitz-Gerald would take upon him, and execute the office of governor of the said city and castle, till his Majesty's pleasure be known."

July 4, about ten o'clock, Sir Robert Southwell arrived with great expressions of kindness from the king, assuring them, that before dinner there would be two regiments of horse with them; and calling Mr. Fitz-Gerald aside, said many kind things to him from the king, concluding his discourse with these words; "His majesty bids me assure you he is your true friend by this token;" taking out of his pocket a small medal of silver, which Mr. Fitz-Gerald had formerly sent to the king, that he might rely upon any intelligence, which came by that token to him. About an hour after Sir Robert Southwell's arrival, there came a body of horse, under the command of the lord Averquerque and major general Scrammore, with the duke of Ormond, as a volunteer; and the day after, the king's blue Dutch guards marched into the town; to whom Mr. Fitz-Gerald delivered up the castle, not having slept three hours in three nights, being much fatigued and in danger all that time. When his majesty came from the camp to church on the Sunday following, (July 6,) he presented him the keys of the city and castle, which he was graciously pleased to return with this expression, "Sir, they are in very good hands, and you deserve them well, and may keep them." However, about a week after colonel Floyd, whose regiment was the first English foot that came into Dublin, took upon him the command of the castle.

On the 9th of July, A. D. 1690, king William being encamped at Cromlin, gave commissions to the bishop of Meath, the lord Longford, Mr. Fitz-Gerald, and four others, to save all forfeited goods, and to see that the corn upon the estates of all the absentees were safely kept, or disposed of for his majesty's use: and a privy council being established, he was appointed a member thereof on the 1st of December, the same year, and the next day signed the first proclamation, published by the lords justices and council, "Forbidding all their majesties subjects of Ireland to use any trade with France, or to hold any correspondence or communication with the French king, or his subjects."

4. Margaret,

4. Margaret, married December 16, A. D. 1712, to Toby Hall, of Mount-hall, had two sons and one daughter.

5. Elizabeth, married to Henry Standford, of Castlereagh, in the county of Roscommon, Esq; who died the 9th of September, A. D. 1735, leaving by her, who died in Dublin, November 21, A. D. 1734, seven sons and one daughter.

6. Anne, who died unmarried, November 13, A. D. 1709.

ROBERT FITZ-GERALD, beforementioned, third surviving son, became heir to John the last earl, and was the nineteenth earl of Kildare: on the 5th of May, A. D. 1709, he took his seat in the house of peers in Ireland.

In May, 1710, he was sworn of the privy-council to queen Anne; and November 28, following, with William, archbishop of Dublin, and Thomas Keightly, esquire, had the custody of the great seal, on the death of Richard Freeman, Esq; lord chancellor (who died on the 20th) until the arrival of his successor Sir Constantine Phipps. On September 9, 1714, he was sworn one of the lords justices of the kingdom; also, on the 9th of October following, one of the privy-council to George I.

On the accession of his late majesty, he was again sworn of the privy-council; and by charter, dated at Dublin, October 22, A. D. 1733, was constituted one of the incorporated society for promoting English protestant schools in Ireland.

He departed this life at his seat of Cartown, February 20, A. D. 1743-4, in the 69th year of his age, much lamented, having ever been a true patriot of his country, studious to promote its welfare, extensive in his charity, and truly exemplary in all stations of life. His corpse was interred the 27th, in the family vault in Christ Church, very privately, as he directed in his will, bearing date the day before his death, whereby he ordered none should attend his funeral, but a few of his servants, and left divers legacies to his friends, &c. with the following charitable bequests, viz. for the use of the charity school of Castledermot, five hundred pounds; for building a charter school at Maynooth the like sum of five hundred pounds; for building another charter school at Strangford five hundred pounds; for the use of the poor boys and girls of St. Andrew's parish Dublin, five hundred pounds; to the poor of the parishes of Manooth, Castledermot, Athy, and Kildare, fifty pounds each; and two hundred pounds for rebuilding the church of Rathangan.

On the 7th of March, A. D. 1708-9, his lordship married Mary O'Brien, eldest daughter to William, earl of Inchiquin, and had issue four sons and eight daughters.

1. William Fitz-Gerald, born January 24, A. D. 1714-15, died an infant.

2. George Fitz-Gerald, born October 11, A. D. 1720, died young.

3. James Fitz-Gerald, lord Offaley, his successor in honour and estate.

4. Charles Fitz-Gerald, born December 16, A. D. 1724, died at the age of nine years.

The daughters were,

1. Mary, born December 24, A. D. 1715.

2. Elizabeth, born May 11, A. D. 1717.

3. Henrietta, born June 11, A. D. 1719.

4. Catherine, born October 2, A. D. 1723, died April 8, A. D. 1728.

5. Anne, born December 31, A. D. 1726.

6. Frances, baptized January 8, A. D. 1727-8. These six daughters all died young, and with their three brothers were buried in Christ Church.

7. Margaretta, born July 2, A. D. 1729, was married in 1748 to Wills Hill, earl of Hillsborough.

8. Charlotte, born April 3, A. D. 1734, died October 18, A. D. 1740.

This further account of his lordship is on a noble monument in Christ Church, Dublin.

ROBERT, Earl of KILDARE,

The 19th of that Title in Succession.

And in Rank, the first Earl of Ireland,

Married the Lady Marie O'Brien,

Eldest Daughter of William Earl of Inchiquin,

By whom he had issue four sons and eight daughters,

Of which Number

Only James, the present Earl, and the Lady Margaretta, Survived Him.

Together with the Titles, he inherited the Virtues

Of his Noble Ancestors,

And adorned every Station he possess'd.

Truth, Honour, and Justice,

Directed the whole Course of his Life.

The Daily Devotions of his Family,

And the Publick Worship in the Church,

Were by his regular Attendance

Cherish'd and Recommended.

Tho' possess'd of a great Estate,

He manag'd it with particular Prudence and Oeconomy,

In order to give a freer Course to his many and great Charities.

He was a disinterested Lover of his Country,

Without any Affectation of Popularity;

And was belov'd by all, Not because he sought it;

But because he deserv'd it.

He was

A most Tender and Affectionate Husband,

An Indulgent and Prudent Father,

And a sincere and steady Friend.

His Disconsolate Relict,

In Testimony of her Gratitude and Affection,

And the better to recommend to his Descendants

The Imitation of his Excellent Example,

Caused this Monument to be erected.

He died the 20th Day of February,

A. D. 1743, in the 69th Year of his Age.

(Present Viscount.) JAMES FITZ-GERALD, the present and 20th earl of Kildare, and also duke of Leinster, was born the 29th of May, A. D. 1722, after a polite education at home, set out on his travels in foreign parts the 20th of February, A. D. 1737-8, from whence he arrived September 5, A. D. 1739. In October, A. D. 1741, being returned member for the borough of Athy, he took his seat in the house of commons on the 26th of that month; was chose a governor of the work-house of the city of Dublin, the 27th of December, A. D. 1742; and is one of the trustees of the linen manufacture for the province of Leinster. Soon after his lordship succeeded to the title and estate, he came into England, and on the breaking out of the late rebellion, offered to raise a regiment at his own expence, for his majesty's service.

His lordship was married on Saturday, February ary 7, 1746-7, to Emelia, daughter of his grace, Charles duke of Richmond, Lenox, and Aubigny. And his late majesty, taking into consideration his noble and ancient descent, was pleased to create his lordship a viscount of the kingdom of Great Britain, by the stile and title of viscount Leinster, of Taplow, in the county of Buckingham, by letters patent, bearing date, February 21, A. D. 1746-7, 20 George II.

He was also created marquis of Kildare, and earl of Offaley in Ireland, by patent, March 3, A. D. 1761; and by patent, bearing date November 26, A. D. 1766, was advanced to the dignity of a duke in Ireland, by the stile and title of duke of Leinster.

His lordship has had a numerous issue, seven daughters,

1. Caroline-Elizabeth-Mabel, born June 21, 1750, died an infant.

2. Emily-Maria-Margaretta, born March 15, 1752.

3. Henrietta-Catherine, born December 8, 1754, died young.

4. Caroline, born April 1755, died young.

5. Charlotte-Mary-Gertrude, born May 29, 1758.

6. Louisa-Bridget, born June 8, 1760, died young.

7. Sophia Sarah-Mary, born September 26, 1762.

Also eight sons,

1. George Fitz-Gerald, born in December 1747, died unmarried October 26, 1765, and buried at St. Martin's in the Fields, Westminster.

2. William-Robert Fitz-Gerald, now called Marquis of Kildare, born March 2, 1748-9

3. Charles Fitz-Gerald, born June 30, 1756.

4. Henry Fitz-Gerald, born July 30, 1761.

5. Edward Fitz-Gerald, born October 15, 1763.

6. Robert Fitz-Gerald, born January 15, 1765.

7. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, born March 15, 1766.

8. ———, born in January, 1767.

(TITLES.) James Fitz-Gerald, viscount Leinster, of Taplow, in the kingdom of Great-Britain.

(CREATIONS.) Viscount Leinster, of Taplow, in the county of Buckingham, February 21, 1746-7, 20 George II.

(ARMS.) Pearl, a saltire, ruby.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a monkey at gaze, proper, environed about the middle, and chained, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two monkeys environed and chained, as the crest.

(MOTTO.) Crom a boo.

(CHIEF SEATS.) Cartown, in the county of Kildare, ten miles from Dublin; which seat, with its appurtenances, some time the residence of the Talbots and the Ingoldsbies, his father purchased January 27, 1738-9, from Thomas Ingoldby, of Walldridge, in the county of Bucks, esquire, and greatly improved it, by additional buildings, which he desired, in his will, might be finished according to the plan made thereof. Dullardstown, alias Leinster-lodge, likewise in the county of Kildare, two miles from Athy, and thirty-one from Dublin.

W. E. N. I. 1700

[illegible]

N O E L, Viscount W E N T W O R T H.

THIS noble family, in the female line, claims descent from

JOHN DE WENTWORTH, second son of William de Wentworth, by Habel, daughter and coheir of William Pollington, seated at Elms-hall, in Yorkshire. The gentleman was himself seated in that place, which came into the family by his mother, and marrying Joan, daughter and coheir of Roger Briffett, of North Elms-hall, in the same county, had issue, JOHN WENTWORTH, who married Agnes, daughter and coheir of William Dransfield, of West Britton, in Yorkshire, and had issue six sons.

1. John Wentworth.
2. Thomas Wentworth,
3. William Wentworth,
4. Ralph Wentworth,
5. Henry Wentworth,
6. Richard Wentworth, ancestor to the Wentworths of South Britton, where he was originally seated.

The eldest son,

JOHN WENTWORTH, married Margaret, daughter of Richard Beaumont, of Whitby-hall, in Yorkshire, esquire, and had issue three sons.

1. John Wentworth, from whom the Wentworths of Elms-hall and Kirby derive their descent.

2. Richard Wentworth, from whom the Wentworths of West Britton descend.

3. Roger Wentworth, whose descendants attained the honour of earl of Cleveland, and baron of Wentworth of Nettlested, as will be seen.

This youngest son,

ROGER WENTWORTH, was in such esteem with Henry lord Scroop, of Masham, that he had a legacy by the last will of that lord, bearing date June 23, A. D. 1415, and afterwards marrying Margery, daughter and heir of Sir Philip Spencer, of Nettlested, in Suffolk, knight, and widow of John, baron Ross, who was slain, with the duke of Clarence, on Easter-eve, March 22, 9 Henry V. without having had any issue. This lady was a young widow, and had in dowry at the time of his second marriage the castle of Helmesley, with the lordship thereunto belonging; as also the manors of Haugh and Lynton, in the county of York; the manors of Chilham and Wulryngton, in Kent; the manor of Braundeston, and the third part of the manor of Stoke-Danbury, in Northamptonshire; the manor of Preston-Beaufet, in the county of Buckingham; the manor of Barkeston, called Pellhouse-place, with two parts of the manor of Redmylde, in the county of Leicester; as also sixty-three pounds fourteen shillings and four-pence annual rent, issuing out of the fee-farm rent of the city of York; and eight bovates of land in Eykering, within the county of Nottingham. She died on the 20th of April, 18 Edward IV. having also survived her second husband, by whom she had issue two sons:

1. Sir Philip Wentworth of Nettlested, knight.
2. Henry Wentworth, of Codham, in Essex, ancestor to the Wentworth of Horsley Codham and Bocking.

Also two daughters.

1. Margaret, married to William Hopton, esquire.

2. Elizabeth, married to John Caltrop, esquire.

The eldest son,

SIR PHILIP WENTWORTH, in 35 Henry VI. was a knight; and in that year was commissioned, with others, to treat of a truce with the Scots; which was brought to a conclusion, and to last from the sixth of July, 1457, to the sixth of July, 1459. In 38 Henry VI. when certain rebels, adherents to Richard, late earl of Warwick, had entered the town of Sandwich, and done great damage there, and in some parts of Suffolk, he was, with the duke of Norfolk, and others of distinction, of the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, commissioned to summon such of his liege people in the said counties, as they thought most fit to go against the said rebels to suppress them. This Sir Philip married Mary, daughter to John Clifford, of Westmoreland, by whom he had issue Sir Henry Wentworth, of Nettlested, his son and heir. The said

SIR HENRY WENTWORTH, in 14 Edward IV. was in that expedition into France: on which account he received eighty-one pounds eighteen shillings for himself, four men, and twenty-four archers. On January 17, 1477, 18 Edward IV. he was made one of the knights of the Bath, with others of distinction, at the marriage of Richard duke of York, the king's second son, with the daughter and heir of John Moubray, duke of Norfolk, and then but five years of age. In 4 Henry VII. he was commissioned to examine what numbers of archers, armed and arrayed, could be provided at the king's expence in the county of Suffolk, and to certify the number thereof; the king being about to send an army for the relief of Brittany. Also in 7 Henry VII. he was commissioned, with Thomas, earl of Surry, and others, to confer with the king's subjects in the county of York about raising a supply for the maintenance of the fleet and army he was sending against the French.

He married Anne, daughter to Sir John Say, knight, by whom he had issue,

Sir Richard Wentworth, his son and heir.
And three daughters,

1. Dorothy, married to Sir Robert Broughton, knight.

2. Margery, married to Sir John Seymour, knight, father by her of Edward, duke of Somerset, lord protector of king Edward VI. and the realm.

3. Elizabeth, married to Sir Roger Darcy, of Danbury, in Essex, knight, and secondly to Sir Thomas Windham, knight. Which

Sir RICHARD WENTWORTH was made one of the knights of the Bath at the coronation of Henry VIII. and was sheriff of the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, in the first and eighth years of that reign: and in 12 Henry VIII. attended on the king and queen to Canterbury, and from thence to the interview with the French king at Hardres.

He married Anne, daughter of Sir James Tirrell, of Gipping, in Suffolk, knight, by whom he had issue, Thomas Wentworth, his son and heir.

And three daughters.

1. Dorothy, married to Lionel Talmash, of Helmingham, in Suffolk, esquire, ancestor to the earl of Dysert.

2. Margery, married to Christopher Glenham, of Glenham, in Suffolk.

3. Thomasin, married to Richard Punder, of Ipswich, in Suffolk.

(First Lord.) THOMAS WENTWORTH, being in that expedition made into France in 15 Henry VIII. and having valiantly behaved himself at the taking of Bray and Montdidier, received the honour of knighthood, with several other persons of distinction, in the chief church of Roy, on All-hallows-day. After which, in consideration of his great merits, he was summoned to parliament by writ among the peers of the realm, December 2, in 21 Henry VIII. and the year following was among those lords who subscribed that declaration sent to the pope, representing, that if he did not confirm the divorce of king Henry VIII. from his queen, he would endanger his supremacy in England. In 24 Henry VIII. he attended on the king to his interview with the French king at Bologna; and in 37 Henry VIII. was commissioned to array all men able to bear arms in the county of Suffolk.

In the reign of king Edward VI. he was lord chamberlain of the household, and one of the privy council; and accompanied William, marquis of Northampton, in 2 Edw. VI. to suppress the Norfolk rebels, headed by Kett the tanner. The following year he obtained a grant from the king of the manors of Stepney and Hackney; which was confirmed, in 1 Elizabeth, to his son, Thomas lord Wentworth, by act of parliament. And dying in his place of lord chamberlain, on the third of March, A. D. 1550, 5 Edward VI. was buried the seventh of the same month in Westminster-abbey. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Adrian Fortescue, Knt. by Anne his wife, heir to Sir William Stonore, Knight, by whom he had a numerous issue, nine daughters and eight sons. The former,

1. Anne, married to Sir John Poley, of Badley, in Suffolk, knight.

2. Cicely, married to Sir Robert Wingfield, knight.

3. Mary, married to William Cavendish, Esq.

4. Margaret, married thrice: first to John, baron Williams; secondly, to Sir William Darcy; and thirdly, to Sir John Crofts, knight.

5. Joan, married to Henry, lord Cheney.

6. Dorothy, married to Paul Withypool, Esq.

7. Elizabeth.

8. Catherine.

9. Margery.

The sons were,

1. Sir Thomas Wentworth.

2. Sir Henry Wentworth, knight, who married his first cousin Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Christopher Glenham, knight.

3. Richard Wentworth, who married Margaret Roydon.

4. Philip Wentworth, who married a daughter of Sir Richard Corbet.

5. John Wentworth.

6. Edward Wentworth.

7. James Wentworth.

8. Roger Wentworth.

(Second Lord.) THOMAS LORD WENTWORTH, in the life-time of his father, was in that expedition made into Scotland in 1 Edward VI. when the Scottish army was defeated at Musselborough; in which battle having worthily behaved, he, a few days after, on the 28th of September, received the honour of knighthood in the camp beside Roxborough. In 6 Edward VI. he had summons to parliament among the peers of the realm; and being about the same time made deputy of Calais, was shortly after removed from that trust, by reason of his youth and inexperience, as Heyward writes in his history of Edward VI.

Adhering to queen Mary, he was on her accession sworn of the privy-council, and again made deputy of Calais; and so continued till the surrender thereof to the duke of Guise, in the fifth year of that reign; for which he was (though a prisoner in France) indicted of high treason: but queen Mary's death happening soon after, he, on the 22d of April, in the first year of queen Elizabeth's reign, was brought to his trial in Westminster-hall: and, being heard, was acquitted by his peers. After which, in 15 Eliz. he was one of the lords who sat in judgment on trial of the duke of Norfolk; also in 29 Eliz. on trial of the queen of Scots: and departed this life in 1590, leaving issue by Anne his wife, daughter of Sir John Wentworth, of Gosfield in Essex, knight, two sons, and a daughter, Elizabeth, married to William, son and heir to Sir Francis Hynde, of Madingley, in Cambridgeshire, knight.

William, his eldest son, married Elizabeth, daughter to William lord Burleigh; but dying without issue in the life time of his father.

(Third Lord.) HENRY WENTWORTH, the youngest son, succeeded to the title and estate, which he enjoyed but a short time, dying in 36 Eliz. leaving issue by Anne his wife, daughter to Sir Owen Hopton, knight, lieutenant of the Tower in the reign of queen Elizabeth, widow of Sir William Pope, knight, two sons.

1. Thomas Wentworth, his heir.

2. Henry Wentworth.

Also a daughter, Jane, wife of Sir John Finnet, of Westkele, in com. Lincoln, knight.

(Earl of Cleveland.) THOMAS LORD WENTWORTH, his son and heir, was made knight of the Bath, Bath at the creation of Henry prince of Wales. And in the reign of king James behaved himself with such extraordinary prudence, that he gained the esteem of that monarch. He was among those lords, who, in the year 1621, petitioned his majesty concerning the advancement of English gentlemen to be peers of Scotland or Ireland, in prejudice to the peers of England and their children; which though distasteful to the king, yet he so far complied, that he after made no new creation.

He was likewise greatly favoured by king Charles his successor, who advanced him, on the fifth of February, in the first year of his reign, to the title of earl of Cleveland, in the county of York. And having served in the wars in the Low-countries, he commanded under the duke of Buckingham, in his expedition into France; and afterwards was made captain of the band of pensioners; in which place, and other employments, he manifested his exemplary loyalty throughout the whole course of the civil wars, valiantly behaving himself in several encounters with the rebels; particularly at the defeat of Sir William Waller, in 1644, at Cropredy, where he routed his army, and took several prisoners: but on the 27th of October the same year, at the second battle of Newberry, having charged the left wing of the rebels horse, and forced them back in great confusion, and being immediately charged by another body, whom he also defeated; he engaged himself so far, that by the badness of his horse, which fell under him, he was unfortunately taken prisoner, and so continued a considerable time; though it was ordered by the parliament, on the thirty-first of March following, that he should be exchanged for colonel Jones: yet it appears he was a prisoner on the ninth of July, A. D. 1646; when it was ordered that he should have liberty, on bail, to go into the country for three weeks for his health: at the expiration of which, he had his liberty allowed him a month longer; and on the third of September was released, on engaging his honour to the lieutenant of the Tower, to render himself again, if required by the parliament. Being afterwards remanded back into custody, he had again his liberty allowed him for three months, by order of parliament, on the sixth of September, A. D. 1648, on engagement of his honour to surrender himself then, if required. This long imprisonment could not deter him from again espousing the royal cause; for we find he accompanied his majesty into Scotland in the year 1650; where, soon after his arrival, he, with several other noble gentlemen, were ordered to depart the kingdom, for refusing to take the covenant: but being to have money to transport himself, which they neglected to furnish him with, he staid with his majesty till the battle of Worcester, wherein he behaved with great gallantry; and, having rallied some scattered forces, charged the enemy as they were entering the town, which, though ineffectual, was the means to facilitate his majesty's escape, who had otherwise been in danger of being taken in the town. After which, this courageous nobleman (though above sixty years of age) made his escape from Worcester; and having marched twenty-one days together upon a trotting horse, had the ill luck to be again taken prisoner at Woodcote in Shropshire, from whence he was conveyed to the Tower of London. However, he lived to see the restoration of king Charles II. and accompanied his majesty in his triumphant entry through London, at the head of three hundred noblemen and gentlemen: and on the death of the earl of Norwich, in the year 1662, he was again made captain of the band of pensioners; which place he enjoyed till his death, on the twenty-fifth of March, A. D. 1667, in the seventy-sixth year of his age, and was buried at Tuddington, in Bedfordshire.

By Anne his first wife, daughter of Sir John Crofts, of Saxham, in Suffolk, knight, who was buried at Tuddington on the seventh of January, A. D. 1637, he had issue three sons;

1. Thomas, lord Wentworth.
2. William Wentworth, } who both died
3. Charles Wentworth, } young.

Also three daughters;

1. Anne, who died an infant.
2. Mary, who died unmarried.
3. Anne, married to John lord Lovelace.

His second lady was Catherine, daughter and coheir to Sir John Wentworth, of Gosfield, in Essex, Bart. and by her, who was also buried at Tuddington on the second of December, A. D. 1651, he had an only daughter, Catharine, married to William Spencer, of Cople, in Bedfordshire, but died without issue.

THOMAS LORD WENTWORTH, his eldest son, was summoned to parliament in 16 Car. I. as baron of Nettlested; and behaved himself with extraordinary bravery during the civil wars against the rebels; also, in the year 1652, was sent into Denmark to solicit assistance on his majesty's behalf: but dying in the life-time of his father, on the seventh of March, A. D. 1664, without issue male, the titles of earl Cleveland, &c. became extinct; and the barony of Wentworth descended to his only daughter and heir,

(Fifth L.) HENRIETTA WENTWORTH, who dying unmarried on the twenty-third of April, A. D. 1686, it devolved on (Sixth L.) ANNE WENTWORTH, daughter to Thomas, earl of Cleveland, and wife to John lord Lovelace, before-mentioned. Which lady departed this life on the seventh of May, A. D. 1697, having had one son and three daughters.

1. Anne Lovelace, died unmarried.
2. Margaret Lovelace, married to Sir William Noel, Bart.
3. Dorothy Lovelace, to Mr. Henry Drax, of Barbadoes, merchant, and died without issue.

JOHN LORD LOVELACE, her son and heir, died without issue male on the 26th of September, A. D. 1693; having married Martha, one of the daughters and coheirs of Sir Edward Pye, of Bradenham, in com. Bucks, Bart. and by her had a son, John, who died an infant; and three daughters, whereof Anne and Catharine dying single, the former on the thirty-first of March, A. D. 1691, and the latter on the twenty-second of June, A. D. 1693.

(Seventh L.) MARTHA LOVELACE, second daughter, being the sole heir of the said John lord Lovelace, the barony of Wentworth devolved on her; who at the coronation of queen Anne, attended as baroness Wentworth, of Nettlested; which title was adjudged to her in parliament by descent, descent, and confirmed in 1702. She was married to Sir Henry Johnson, who died without issue by her, on the 29th of September, A. D. 1719; and she surviving him, died a widow aged about 85, July 18, A. D. 1745; whereby the barony became vested in the descendants of Sir William Noel, of Kirkby-Mallory, in com. Leicester, Bart. by Margaret his wife, eldest daughter of John lord Lovelace, and of Anne his wife, daughter of Thomas Wentworth, earl of Cleveland, and baron Wentworth, of Nettlested, as will be seen in our account of this branch of THE NOEL FAMILY, descended from JOHN NOEL, only son * of Andrew Noel, of Dalby, in the county of Leicester, by his second wife Dorothy, daughter of Richard Conyers, of Wakerley, in Northamptonshire.

He married Ann, daughter and heir of John Fowler, of Wellesborough, in Leicestershire; and in her right, was after the death of his father-in-law, seated at that place. His issue were, a daughter, Elizabeth, married first to Ralph Alderley, of Alderwas, in Staffordshire; and secondly, to Richard Floyer, of Hinks, in the same county.

Also four sons.

1. William Noel.
 2. Edward Noel,
 3. John Noel,
 4. Andrew Noel,
- } who died without issue.
- The eldest son,

WILLIAM NOEL, was sheriff for the county of Leicester, A. D. 1604, and for Warwick, A. D. 1621. He died A. D. 1641, and was buried at Kirby. He married Frances, daughter and coheir of John Fulwood, of Fordhall, in the county of Warwick, by Catherine, eldest daughter and coheir of Thomas Daubridgecourt, esquire, and by her had issue four sons and four daughters.

1. Anne, married Thomas Grey, of Longley,
 2. Frances, married Henry Kendall, of Smithby,
 3. Eleanor, married James Stafford, of Huncote,
 4. Grace, married Richard Corbet, of Shropshire.
- } Leicestershire.

The sons were,

1. William Noel, who married Frances, daughter of Richard Creshold, but died without issue, A. D. 1645, and was buried at Chipping Barnet.
2. Verney Noel, ancestor to the present lord viscount Wentworth.
3. Edward Noel, rector of Sibston, in Leicestershire, who married Elizabeth, daughter of John Priestgrave, rector of Broughton Ashby, in the county of Leicester, and had several children.
4. Henry Noel, seated at Pickering Grange, who died without issue A. D. 1694.

The eldest son,

SIR VERNEY NOEL, was created a baronet by patent, bearing date July 6, A. D. 1660, and having enjoyed that honour ten years, he departed this life A. D. 1670, and was interred at Kirkby Malory.

He married Elizabeth, daughter of Wolston Dixie, of Bosworth, in Leicestershire, and had issue an only son and successor,

SIR WILLIAM NOEL, Bart. who was seated at Kirkby Malory aforesaid, and died A. D. 1681. He married two wives; first, Margaret, eldest daughter of John lord Lovelace, and Anne Wentworth, baroness Wentworth in her own right, under which Margaret, the present viscount Wentworth, claims the barony. He married secondly, Frances, daughter of Humble lord Ward, and by her had issue a son, William Noel, and two daughters, Elizabeth and Frances, which William and Elizabeth died in their infancy.

His issue by the former lady were two sons,

SIR THOMAS NOEL, Bart. who married Anne, daughter of William Whitlock, esquire, and dying without issue, A. D. 1688, was buried at Hurley in Bucks. He was succeeded in honour and estate by his brother and heir, SIR JOHN NOEL, Bart. who married Mary, daughter and coheir of Sir John Cloberry, of Winchester, Knt. and by her had issue a daughter, Anne, married to Francis Monday, of Markheaton, in com. Leicester, esquire.

Also two sons,

1. Sir Cloberry Noel, Bart.
2. William Noel, Esq. one of the king's council, and member in two parliaments for Stamford in Lincolnshire, and recorder of that corporation. In two parliaments also he was chosen for Westlow in Cornwall; and in 1750, was made chief justice of Chester; and in 1757, justice of the Common Pleas, and dying A. D. 1762, was buried at Bradenham, Bucks.

He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Trollope, of Casewick, in Lincolnshire, Bart. by whom he hath issue, Mary, married to Thomas Hill, of Cleveland-court, St. James's, esquire; Anne, died unmarried; Frances, married to Bennet Sherrard, earl of Harborough, and died December 13, A. D. 1760, and Elizabeth.

The eldest son,

SIR CLOBERY NOEL, Bart. was elected one of the knights of the shire for the county of Leicester in the first parliament of king George II. and married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Rowney, of Oxford, esquire, who represented that city in several parliaments; and dying July 30, A. D. 1733, was buried at Kirkby Malory, leaving issue six sons, and a daughter, Mary.

1. Edward, now lord Wentworth.
2. Cloberry Noel, a clergyman, who died without issue, and was buried at Kirkby Malory.
3. Thomas Noel, captain of one of his majesty's men of war, who died and was buried at Gibraltar.
4. John Noel.
5. William-James, who died under age.
6. Rowney Noel, a clergyman.

The eldest son,

(Eighth Lord Viscount.) EDWARD NOEL, succeeded to the barony of Wentworth, of Nettlested, in 1745, and was created viscount Wentworth, of Wellesborough by patent, May 5, A. D. 1762.

His lordship married Judith, daughter of William Lamb, of Farndish, in com. Northampton, esquire; and has issue Thomas, his son and heir, born November 18, A. D. 1744, and three daughters, Judith, Elizabeth, and Sophia-Susanna.

The first of these is the fact that the Government has been unable to secure the necessary funds to carry out its policy of non-interference. This is due to the fact that the Government has been unable to secure the necessary funds to carry out its policy of noninterference. This is due to the fact that the Government has been unable to secure the necessary funds to carry out its policy of non-interference.

[illegible]

COURTENAY, VISCOUNT COURTENAY.

317

(TITLES.) Viscount Wentworth, of Welleborough, and baron Wentworth, of Nettledon, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baronet, July 6, A. D. 1660, (12 Charles II.) baron Wentworth, of Nettledon, by summons to parliament, December 2, A. D. 1629, (21 Henry VIII.) viscount Wentworth, of Welleborough, May 5, A. D. 1762, (2 George III.)

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and fourth, topaz, fretted ruby, a canton ermine for Noel; second, diamond, a chevron between three leopards faces, topaz, for Wentworth; third, Ruby on a chief, indented diamond, three martlets pearl, for Lovelace.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a buck at gaze, pearl, attired topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two gryphons, pearl, collared topaz.

(MOTTO.) PENSES. A. BIEN.

(CHIEF SEATS.) At Welleborough, and Kirby Malory, Leicestershire.

COURTENAY, Viscount COURTENAY.

THIS truly ancient and noble family in the female line is doubly descended from Godfrey, earl of Eu, and Brion, natural son to Richard I. duke of Normandy; for before the year 1190, the heiress of the younger branch carried considerable honours into the Courtenay family; and the heiress of an elder branch added still higher dignity to the same family, about fifty years afterwards: we are therefore naturally led to treat of the descendants of

GODFREY EARL OF EU, just mentioned. He was the father of

GILBERT, or HELVIN, who married Herlena, or Arlotte, mother of king William the Conqueror, and had two sons;

1. Richard, ancestor to the house of Clare.
2. Baldwin, which

BALDWIN DE BRIONIS, or DE MOLIS, obtained from king William the Conqueror, the barony of Okehampton; the custody of the county of Devon, and the government of the castle of Exeter in fee. He married Albreda, daughter of Richard, surnamed Goz, count of Avranches, by Emma, sister to William the Conqueror, and had issue three sons and two daughters.

1. Odela, who died without issue.
2. Emma, of whom presently.

The sons were,

1. Richard de Brionis, surnamed de Redvers.
2. Robert, of whom we know nothing.
3. William, of whom we know nothing.

Before we treat of the eldest of these three sons, we must follow the descendants of the youngest daughter Emma, till they became blended with the Courtenays. This lady married first, William Avenal, and secondly, William de Abrancis, by the latter she was mother of

ROBERT DE ABRANCIS, who, upon the resignation, and by the interest of his uncle Richard, obtained a grant of the barony of Okehampton, the office of hereditary sheriff of Devon, and the government of Exeter castle; he married a daughter of Godwyn Dole, and had an only daughter and heiress, Maud, who married two husbands; first, Deincourt; secondly, Robert Fitz-Edith, natural son to king Henry I. by each of these gentlemen she had a daughter; by the former, Hawise, by the latter, Matilda; and these two ladies married two brothers of the Courtenay family. Hawise, Sir Reginald de Courtenay, and Matilda, his brother William.

We now return to

RICHARD DE BRIONIS, surnamed REDVERS, eldest son of Baldwin de Brionis. He resigned the barony of Okehampton, the custody of Devonshire, and the government of the castle of Exeter, in favour of his nephew Robert de Abrancis, already mentioned, and was made earl of Devon, by king Henry I. who also granted to him the Isle of Wight in fee. He died, A. D. 1137, and was buried at Brightley abbey, but afterward removed to Ford abbey. By his wife Adeliza, daughter and coheir of William Fitz-Osborne, earl of Hereford, he had issue one daughter, Hadewise, the wife of Will. de Romara, earl of Lincoln, and three sons.

1. Baldwin de Redvers.
2. William de Redvers, surnamed de Vernon.
3. Robert de Redvers.

The eldest son,

BALDWIN DE REDVERS, succeeded as earl of Devon upon the death of his father, A. D. 1137, and dying A. D. 1155, was buried at Quarrera. He married Lucia, daughter of Dru de Balun, and had issue a daughter Maud, married to Ralph Avenill, and three sons.

1. Richard de Redvers, of whom and their descendants separately.
2. William de Redvers, of whom and their descendants separately.
3. Henry de Redvers, who dying in the lifetime of his father without issue, was buried at Quarrera.

The eldest son,

RICHARD DE REDVERS, succeeded as earl of Devon, A. D. 1155, and by his wife Dionysia, daughter daughter of Reginald, earl of Cornwall, had two sons successively earls of Devon, and dying A. D. 1162, he was succeeded by his eldest son, BALDWIN DE REDVERS, who was the fourth earl. He married Alice, daughter of Ralph de Dolt, but dying without issue, his younger brother,

RICHARD DE REDVERS, became fifth earl; he married Emma, daughter of Robert de Pontearches, but dying also without issue, the honours of the family devolved upon his uncle already mentioned,

WILLIAM DE REDVERS, surnamed de Vernon, who married Mabel, daughter of Robert, earl of Mellent, and had two daughters.

1. Joan, married first to William Brewere; secondly, to Hubert de Burgh, but bore issue to neither.

2. Mary, who married Robert de Courtenay, baron of Okehampton, and at length, as will be seen, brought the earldom of Devonshire into this family.

Also a son,

BALDWIN DE REDVERS, who married Margaret, daughter of Warin Fitzgerald, and by her who died A. D. 1252, had one son; and dying himself in the life-time of his father, September 1, A. D. 1216, that son, SIR BALDWIN DE REDVERS, upon the demise of the grandfather, September 14, A. D. 1216, succeeded, and was the seventh earl of Devon. In 1240, he was created earl of the Isle of Wight: he died 1245, and was buried at Bramere, in the county of Southampton. By his wife Amicia, (daughter of Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester) who died A. D. 1282, he had one son and two daughters.

1. Baldwin, his successor.

2. Margaret, a nun.

3. Isabel, successor to her brother.

SIR BALDWIN DE REDVERS, became earl of Devon and Wight, and marrying Avis, daughter of Thomas earl of Surry, had an only son, John de Redvers, who died before him. Upon the decease of this earl in 1261, his sister,

ISABEL, (married to William de Fortibus, earl of Albemarle and Holderness) succeeded to the honours of the family, and was admitted countess of Devon and Wight: she had issue three sons, John, Thomas, and William, who all died infants; and two daughters, Anne, who died unmarried; and Aveline (twice married, first to Ingram de Percy, secondly to Edmund earl of Lancaster) who died without issue, both in the life-time of their mother. By the death of this countess, A. D. 1293, who had thus survived all her children, the earldom of the Isle of Wight, which honour had been conferred upon her father, became extinct; but the honours of the other earldom devolved upon the descendants of MARY DE REDVERS, aunt to her father, and the only one of the family descended, from the sixth earl, whose posterity survived at that time. Having now paid all due respect to the female line, we must turn our eyes to the male line.

The ANCESTRY of the VISCOUNTS COURTENAY, in the MALE LINE.

These noblemen claim descent from ATHON (son of a Chastelain of Castle Renaud or Reynard) who fortified the town of Courtenay in Gâtinois, part of the Ile of France, and from thence assumed the name of Courtenay, which has continued in the family ever since. He had an only son, JOSCELINE DE COURTENAY, who married first Hildegard, daughter of Gaufride de Ferrole, count of Gâtinois, and had an only daughter, Hodierna, married to Geoffry, count de Joigny, and lord of Joinville. By his second wife Elizabeth, daughter of Guy Seigneur de Montherry and de Bray, he had issue three sons;

1. Milo de Courtenay, who continued the male line.

2. Josceline de Courtenay, who went to the Holy Land, A. D. 1101, and was by Baldwin, king of Jerusalem, appointed count of Edessa in 1118: he married two wives; by his first, a sister of Levon*, prince of Armenia, he had an only son of his own name; and by his second wife, a sister of Roger, prince of Antioch, he had a daughter, Stephania, abbess of Sancta Maria in Jerusalem. He died, A. D. 1131, and JOSCELINE his son succeeded as count of Edessa. He died, A. D. 1152, having had issue by his wife Beatrix, widow of William de Saoma, two daughters, Isabella, who died young; and Agnes, who married first Rainald de Mares, secondly Almeric, count of Joppa, and king of Jerusalem; and was mother of Baldwin IV. king of Jerusalem. Also a son of his own name, JOSCELINE, who succeeded him as count of Edessa, and was slain in the battle of Tiberias, July 3, 1187, leaving by his wife Agnes, daughter of Henry de Buffu, two daughters, Beatrix, the wife of count Alamand, and Agnes, the wife of William de Mandeleo.

3. Geoffry de Courtenay, surnamed Chaplay, who was slain in the Holy Land, A. D. 1139.

The eldest son,

MILo DE COURTENAY, founded the abbey of Fountainjean, where he was buried A. D. 1127. By Emmengarde his wife, daughter of Renaud, count de Nevers, he had issue three sons.

1. Josceline de Courtenay, who died without issue.

2. Reginald de Courtenay.

3. William de Courtenay, who came into England with his brother Reginald, and marrying Matilda, only daughter of Robert Fitz-Edith, natural son to king Henry I. had issue three sons, first, William; second, Reginald; third, Robert, who was sheriff of Cumberland, A. D. 1204, and died A. D. 1209.

The second son,

REGINALD DE COURTENAY, lord of Courte-

* Our genealogist must be mistaken in this point, for there was no prince or king of Armenia bearing the name of Livonus, or Levon, till the year 1270, which is one hundred and thirty nine years after the death of Josceline de Courtenay. This Levon, had indeed a sister, Mary, married to Frederic, son of the emperor Frederic II. The second wife is said to be the sister of Roger, prince of Antioch. At this time Boemund II. was prince of Antioch: who had an uncle, Roger, duke of Apulia, who died A. D. 1112.

may, Montargis, &c. came into England with Eleanor, queen to king Henry II. A. D. 1151, and having married Hawise, eldest granddaughter of Robert de Abrancis, baron of Okehampton, (as we have already related) in her right, became hereditary sheriff of Devon, and baron of Okehampton. By this lady, who died July 30, A. D. 1209, and was buried in Ford-abbey, he had issue, as will be seen presently. But we must observe, that this Reginald married, first, a sister of Guy de Donjon, descended from the counts of Corbeil, and by her had two daughters; the youngest was married to Avolon de Saligny, of Auxerre; and the eldest, ELIZABETH, married Peter, the youngest son of Lewis le Grosse, king of France; which Peter, on her obtaining from her father the feigneries of Courtenay, Montargis, &c. took the name and arms of Courtenay, and was ancestor of the Courtenays of France, who claim the rank of princes of the blood next the house of Bourbon.

By his second lady, this baron Okehampton had issue a daughter, Egoline, married to Gilbert Bassett, baron of Hedington, and three sons; of the two youngest, Reginald and Henry, we only know the names; but the eldest,

ROBERT DE COURTENAY, (upon the death of his father, Sept. 27, A. D. 1194, who was buried at Ford-abbey) succeeded as baron Okehampton, &c. but was dispossessed of his office of sheriff of Devon, and of the government of Exeter castle, in 1232. In 1214, we find him governor of Bruges (now Bridgenorth.) He died July 26, A. D. 1242, and was buried at Ford-abbey. By his wife MARY, (whose descendants became heirs to the family of Redvers, as has been seen, and must be taken notice of again) he had issue a daughter, Hauise, married to John de Nevil, and two sons, of which the youngest, Sir William Courtenay, Knt. surnamed de Musberrie, married Joane, daughter of Thomas Bassett, but died without issue.

The eldest son,

SIR HUGH COURTENAY, knight, succeeded as baron of Okehampton. He married Eleanor, daughter of Hugh le Despencer, father of Hugh, earl of Winchester, and by this lady, who died October 11, A. D. 1328, and was buried at Cowic, had issue four daughters:

1. Isabel, married to John, baron St. John, of Basing.
2. Aveline, married Sir John Gifford, Knt.
3. Egeline, married Robert Scales.
4. Margaret, married John de Moels, or Mulis.

And two sons.

1. Hugh Courtenay.
2. Sir Philip Courtenay, surnamed de Mone-don, who was slain at the battle of Shivelin, June 24, A. D. 1314. He was not married.

The father dying February 28, A. D. 1291, was buried at Cowic, in Devonshire; and the eldest son,

SIR HUGH COURTENAY, succeeded as baron of Okehampton; and upon the decease of Isabella de Fortibus, countess of Devon, Albemarle, &c. (the last person mentioned by us in the account of the Redvers family) without issue, A. D. 1293, he as her heir descended from Mary de Redvers, who was his great grandmother, succeeded to the earldom of Devon, of which he was afterwards deprived, but restored thereto February 22, A. D. 1325; he died 1340, and was buried at Cowic, where five years after was also interred his widow Agnes, daughter of Sir John St. John, Knt. and sister of John, baron St. John, of Basing. His issue by this lady were two daughters, Eleanor, married to John, lord Grey, of Cadnor, and Elizabeth, married to Bartholomew, baron Lisle; also three sons.

1. Hugh Courtenay.

2. Robert Courtenay, who was seated at Moreton, died in 1334, having had by his wife Johanna, an only son William Courtenay, who died before him.

3. Thomas Courtenay, seated at Southpole, who died in 1356, having had issue by his wife Muriel, daughter of John de Mulis, or Moels, one son, Hugh, who died without issue, and two daughters, Margaret, married to Thomas Peveral, and Muriel, to John Dinham.

The eldest son,

HUGH COURTENAY, succeeded as earl of Devon. He married Margaret, daughter of Humphry de Bohun, earl of Hereford and Essex, and grand daughter of king Edward I. and by her, who survived him till 1392, had a numerous issue, eight sons and nine daughters.

The latter were,

1. Margaret, married to John, baron Cobham.
2. Elizabeth, married first Sir John Vere, knt. secondly, Sir Andrew Lutterel, knt.
3. Catherine, married first William, baron Harrington; secondly, Sir Thomas Engaine, knt.
4. Joan, married Sir John Cheverston, knt.
5. Anne, died unmarried.
6. Eleanor.
7. Guinora.
8. Isabella.
9. Philippa.

The sons were,

1. Sir Hugh Courtenay, who was one of the founders of the order of the Garter, and summoned to parliament as a baron, A. D. 1370. He died A. D. 1374, before his father, leaving issue (by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Guy Brian, lord of Tor Brian, in Devonshire) an only son, Hugh Courtenay: which son married Matilda, a daughter of Thomas Holland, earl of Kent; but died without issue (in the same year, but) before his grandfather.

2. Thomas Courtenay, died unmarried before his father, and was buried in the church of St. Austine Friars, in London.

3. Edward Courtenay, of whom presently.

4. William Courtenay, chancellor of the university of Oxford, A. D. 1367; bishop of Hereford, A. D. 1369; bishop of London, A. D. 1375; and at last, A. D. 1381, archbishop of Canterbury. He died on the 31st of July, A. D. 1396, and his remains were deposited in the cathedral at Canterbury.

5. Sir Philip Courtenay, ancestor to the late and present viscounts, of whom we shall treat when we have paid the necessary attention to the elder branch, which has been now extinct upwards of two hundred years.

6. John Courtenay, who probably either died young, or passed his life in retirement.

7. Sir Peter Courtenay, who was raised to high honours. He was standard bearear to king Edward III. constable of Windsor castle, governor of Calais, chamberlain to king Richard II. privy counsellor, and knight of the garter. He died unmarried, A. D. 1409, and was buried in the cathedral at Exeter.

ward

8. Sir Humphry Courtenay, who died without issue.

EDWARD COURTENAY, the third son, was seated at Godlington, and had issue by his wife Emeline, daughter and heir of Sir John Dawnby, two sons,

1. Edward Courtenay,
 2. Sir Hugh Courtenay,
- } of whom distinctly.
- and dying in the life-time of his father, the eldest son.

EDWARD COURTENAY, became heir to the honours of the family, upon the demise of his cousin, Hugh Courtenay, in the beginning of the year A. D. 1377, and when his grandfather deceased in the latter end of the same year, became actually possessed thereof.

This earl of Devon was admiral for the western parts, and earl marshal of England in 1385. He was commonly called the blind earl. He married Maud, daughter of Thomas, baron Camois, by whom he had issue three sons.

1. Sir Edward Courtenay, knight of the Bath, and admiral of the king's fleet. He died in the life-time of his father, without issue, A. D. 1418, having been married to Eleanor, daughter of Roger Mortimer, earl of March.

2. Sir Hugh Courtenay, his successor.

3. James Courtenay.

He died December 5, A. D. 1419, and was buried in Ford abbey. The title, &c. devolved upon his second, but eldest surviving, son,

SIR HUGH COURTENAY, who was made knight of the Bath in 1399. He married Anne, sister to John, earl of Shrewsbury, and by her, who died in 1440, had issue two sons, of which the youngest John, died unmarried, and the eldest,

THOMAS COURTENAY, succeeded to the earldom upon the demise of his father, June 16, in 1421. He married Margaret, daughter of John Beaufort, marquis of Dorset, and earl of Somerset, and had issue five daughters,

1. Joan, married to Sir Roger Clifford.
 2. Elizabeth, married to Sir Hugh Conway.
 3. Anne,
 4. Matilda,
 5. Eleanor,
- } died young.

Also three sons,

1. Thomas Courtenay, his successor.

2. Henry Courtenay, who was attainted for his attachment to the house of Lancaster, and was beheaded March 4, in 1466, unmarried.

3. John Courtenay, slain in behalf of the Lancastrians, at the battle of Tewkesbury, May 4, in 1471, unmarried.

This earl died in 1458, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

THOMAS COURTENAY, earl of Devon, who was attainted in 1461, and beheaded in 1462. His two brothers were then alive, but his attainder prevented their succession. Thus this male branch of the Courtenay family ended with the excision of three promising young men, and the earldom of Devon ceased.

We now return to,
SIR HUGH COURTENAY, second and youngest son of Edward Courtenay, of Godlington, who was third of the eight sons of Hugh, earl of Devon, by his wife Margaret.

He was seated at Haccomb, and married three wives, first Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Cogan, and widow of Sir Fulke Fitzwarren, but she died without issue; secondly, Philippa, daughter of Sir Warren Archdeacon, knight, who bore to him an only daughter, Joan (who married, first, Nicholas, baron Carew, of Mohun's Autrey, and secondly, Sir Robert Vere) thirdly Maud, daughter of Sir John Beaumont, of Sherwell, in Dorsetshire, knight; by this lady he had issue a daughter, Margaret, married to Sir Theobald Greenville, knight.

And his son and heir,

SIR HUGH COURTENAY, was seated at Boconock, in Cornwall, who was slain at the battle of Tewkesbury. By Margaret, daughter and coheir of Thomas Carmino, of Devonshire, he had four daughters:

1. Elizabeth, married to John Trethrif, Esq.
2. Maud, married to John Arundel, of Talvern, Esq.
3. Isabel, married to William Mohun, Esq.
4. Florence, married John Trelawney, Esq.

And two sons, of which the youngest, Walter, died unmarried; and the eldest,

(First Earl.) SIR EDWARD COURTENAY, took part with Henry, earl of Richmond, against king Richard III. in 1483 was attainted; but soon after the accession of the aforesaid earl to the throne of England, by the title of Henry VII. that attainder was taken off, and that which was esteemed rebellion, being, by success, turned into loyalty, he was rewarded, by being created baron of Okehampton, and earl of Devon, by patent, dated October 26, in 1485. He died on the 28th of May, in 1509, and was buried at Tiverton.

By his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Philip Courtenay, of Molland, (a descendant of the Sir Philip Courtenay we are hereafter to treat of) he had an only son,

SIR WILLIAM COURTENAY, who was made knight of the Bath, A. D. 1497. In 1504 he was attainted for being concerned in the earl of Suffolk's rebellion. However, after the accession of Henry VIII. he obtained a warrant for the earldom of Devon, but never was created an earl. He died June 9, in 1511, and was buried at St. Paul's cathedral, London; having had issue by Catherine, a daughter of king Edward IV. (this lady died November 15, in 1527, and was buried at Tiverton) a daughter, Margaret, who died young, and a son, (First Marquis.) EDWARD COURTENAY, who was created marquis of Exeter, by patent, June 18, in 1525, but convicted of treason, and attainted, December 3, 1538, and beheaded on the 5th of January following.

He married two wives, first Elizabeth, daughter of John Grey, viscount Lisle, by whom he had no issue, but by his second wife Gertrude, (daughter of William Blount, lord Mountjoy) who died in 1557, and was buried in Wimborne minster, Dorsetshire, he had two sons, Henry Courtenay, who died young, and (Second Marquis.) EDWARD COURTENAY, who was created earl of Devon, and baron of Okehampton and Plympton, by patent, September 28, 1553. This nobleman was restored in honour and blood, blood, as marquis of Exeter, by act of parliament, on the 10th of October following.

This Nobleman, who was the last of that line, departed this life at Padua, October 4, 1556, unmarried, and was buried in St. Anthony's church, at that place.

We must now return back to,

Sir PHILIP COURTENAY, (fifth of the eight sons of Hugh, earl of Devon, and his wife Margaret) direct ancestor to the viscounts Courtenay.

He was seated at Powderham castle, in Devonshire, and in 1383, was appointed lord lieutenant of Ireland; in 1389, he was constituted steward of the Itannaries, and died July 29, 1406. By his wife Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Wake, of Bifworth, in Northamptonshire, he had issue two daughters:

1. Margaret, married to Sir Robert Cary, of Cockington, knight.

2. Agnes, married to Otes Champenoun.

Also two sons,

1. Richard Courtenay, who was chancellor of the university of Oxford, in 1406. In 1413, he was elected bishop of Norwich, and dying in 1415 was buried in Westminster abbey.

2. Sir John Courtenay: which

Sir JOHN COURTENAY died before his brother Richard, but continued the line by having two sons:

1. Sir Philip Courtenay.

2. Sir Humphrey Courtenay, who married from his wife Joan, daughter of Alexander Champenoun, of Beer Ferrers, and widow of Sir James Chudleigh, knight.

The eldest son, Sir PHILIP COURTENAY, died December 16, in 1463, having had issue by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Walter, lord Hungerford, two daughters:

1. Philippa, married to Sir Thomas Fulford, knight.

2. Anne, married first to Sir William Palton, knight; secondly, to Richard Trevin, alias Wear, esquire.

Also seven sons,

1. Sir William Courtenay, who continued the line.

2. Sir Philip Courtenay, who was seated at Molland, and by a daughter of Robert Hingeston, esquire, had issue a daughter, Elizabeth, married as already mentioned, to Sir Edward Courtenay, earl of Devon, and several sons:

3. Peter Courtenay, archdeacon, and afterwards dean of Exeter, of which see he was appointed bishop in 1477, but translated to Winchester in 1486. He died in 1491.

4. Sir Edmund Courtenay, who married first Alice, daughter and heir of John Wotton, esquire; and, secondly, Joan, daughter and heir of Edward Dymock, esquire.

5. Sir Walter Courtenay, who married Alice, daughter and heir to Walter Kilrington, alias Colebrooke.

6. John Courtenay, } died young.

7. Humphrey Courtenay, }

The eldest son,

Sir WILLIAM COURTENAY, died A. D. 1485, leaving a successor of his own name, (by his wife Margaret, daughter of William, lord Bonville) which son,

Sir WILLIAM COURTENAY, dying in 1512, left issue by his wife Cicely, daughter of Sir John Chehey, of Pincourt, knight, three sons and four daughters; the two youngest of the latter were married, the one to John Coplestone, and the other to — Danvers, esquire. Joan, the second, wedded Sir William Beaumont, of Shirwell, knight; and the eldest, Anne, became the wife of Thomas Gibbe, of Finton, esquire.

79

The sons were,

1. Sir William Courtenay.

2. Sir James Courtenay, seated at Upcot, who married a daughter of Sir John Bassett, knight.

3. Edward Courtenay.

The eldest son,

Sir WILLIAM COURTENAY, died 1535. By his second wife, Mary, daughter of Sir John Gainford, knight, he had five sons, Philip, John, Anthony, James, and Thomas: also a daughter, Mary, married to Sir John Chichester. But with these we have no concern. He married, first, Margaret, daughter of Sir Richard Edgcombe, and by her had a daughter, Cicely, married to Nicholas Francis, esquire, and four sons:

1. George Courtenay, who continued our line.

2. Sir Pierce Courtenay, who died 1552, and was buried at Chudleigh; having had issue by his wife Elizabeth, sole daughter and heir of Robert Shelstone, of Bredestow, three sons: first Carew; second Edward, who died in 1556, (leaving issue by his wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas Moor, of Taunton, two daughters, Anne and Catherine; the former married to Anthony Clifford, of Beerscombe, the latter to Jonas Calmady) third James: and four daughters, first Catherine, married to — Kempthorn; second Dorothy, married to — Cowlings; third Anne; fourth Jane, married to — Tremayn.

3. Henry Courtenay.

4. Nicholas Courtenay.

The eldest son, by this first marriage,

GEORGE COURTENAY, died before his father, but left issue by his wife, Catherine, daughter of Sir George St. Leger, knight, an only son,

Sir WILLIAM COURTENAY, who succeeded his grandfather. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Powlet, marquis of Winchester, and by her, who died 1576, and was buried at Basing, he had an only son,

Sir WILLIAM COURTENAY, who succeeded to the estate upon the demise of his father, in 1557, and dying in 1630, was buried at Powderham. He married two wives, first Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Manners, earl of Rutland; and, secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of George Sydenham, esquire: by the latter he had no issue, but by the former was father of six sons, and three daughters:

1. Margaret, married to Sir Warwick Hele, of Membury, knight.

2. Mary, married to Sir William Wray, of Trebigh, baronet.

3. Gertrude, married Sir John Fitz, of Fitzford knight.

The sons were,

1. Sir William Courtenay, who died unmarried, in the life time of his father.

2. Francis Courtenay, who continued our line.

3. Thomas Courtenay.

4. George Courtenay.

5. John Courtenay.

6. Alexander Courtenay.

The

4 M

The

The second, but eldest surviving son, FRANCIS COURTENAY, married two wives, first Mary, daughter of Sir William Pole, of Colecomb, knight, and widow of Nicholas Harst, esquire: secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Edward Seymour, of Bury Pomeroy. By the latter only he had issue.

1. Sir William Courtenay.
2. Edward Courtenay.
3. Francis Courtenay.
4. James Courtenay.

And dying in 1638, the estate devolved upon the eldest son,

Sir WILLIAM COURTENAY, who died August 4, in 1702, having had issue by his wife Margaret, daughter of Sir William Waller, knight, who died in 1693, eleven daughters and eight sons.

Of the daughters,

1. Lucy, married Hugh Stafford, of Pines, esquire.
2. Elizabeth, married John Cloberry, of Bredstone, esquire.
3. Isabella, married Sir Thomas Lear, of Lindridge, baronet.
4. Anne, died unmarried.
5. Jane.
6. Margaret, married Edmund Reynal, of Malton, esquire.
7. Mary.
8. Dorothy.

And three other daughters, whose names we cannot ascertain.

The sons were,

1. William Courtenay, who died young.
2. Francis Courtenay, grandfather to the first viscount.
3. Edward,
4. Richard,
5. James,
6. George,
7. Henry,
8. William,

The second son,

FRANCIS COURTENAY, died in the life time of his father, and was buried at Chelsea, in Middlesex. By his wife Mary, daughter of John Bovey, esquire, he had issue nine daughters:

1. Anne, married to William Walrond, Esq.
2. Elizabeth, married to Arthur Champenoun, esquire.
3. Margaret, died an infant.
4. Mary.
5. Lucy.
6. Margaret.
7. Jane.
8. Isabella.
9. Dorothy.

And three sons:

1. William Courtenay.
2. Francis,
3. Francis,

WILLIAM COURTENAY, the eldest son, succeeded his grandfather, and was appointed lord lieutenant of Devonshire in 1715. He died October 10, 1735, and was buried at Powderham, having had issue by his wife, Anne, second daughter of James, earl of Abingdon, five sons, and seven daughters.

The latter were,

1. Mary, died young.

2. Anne Sophia.

3. Eleanor.

4. Bridget.

5. Isabella.

6. Mary.

7. Elizabeth, died young.

The sons were,

1. William Courtenay, died young.
2. James Courtenay,
3. William Courtenay, the late viscount.
4. Henry Reginald Courtenay, born June 8,

1714, seated at Ford, in Devonshire. At the general election in 1754, he was elected member of parliament for Honiton in Devonshire, and also again for the same place in 1761. He married in April 1747, Catherine, daughter of Allan, lord Bathurst, and by her had issue two sons, William, born September 9, 1738, and Henry, born November 27, 1741: also two daughters, Catherine, born June 17, 1740, and Anne, born June 13, 1751.

5. Peregrine Courtenay, married Lucy, daughter of Benjamin Incedon, Esq.

(First Viscount.) WILLIAM COURTENAY, the third, but eldest surviving son, succeeded to the paternal estates, and was created a baronet; but as the patent was never sued out, the family are not entitled to that dignity. He served in a series of successive parliaments for the county of Devon, till his present majesty, in regard to the antiquity and splendor of his ancestry, was graciously pleased to give him a seat in the upper house, under the title of viscount Courtenay. The letters patent bear date May 6, 1762. He survived this mark of the royal favour only ten days, dying on the sixteenth of May, 1762. His remains were deposited at Powderham church. He married April 2, 1741, Frances, the fourth daughter of Heneage, earl of Aylesford, and by her, who died December 19, 1761, had issue five daughters:

1. Anne, who died young.
2. Mary, born March 2, 1743-4.
3. Frances, born March 10, 1746.
4. Lucy, born June 6, 1748.
5. Charlotte, born January 21, 1751.

And an only son and successor,

(Second and present Viscount.) WILLIAM COURTENAY, born October 30, 1742. In 1762, he married Frances, daughter of Thomas Clack, of Wallingford, Berks, by whom he has issue four daughters:

1. Frances, born January 6, 1763.
2. Charlotte, born February 14, 1764.
3. Isabella, born June 20, 1765.
4. Elizabeth, born September 2, 1766.

(TITLES.) William Courtenay, viscount Courtenay, of Powderham Castle, in the county of Devonshire.

(CREATIONS.) Viscount Courtenay, May 6, 1762, (George III.)

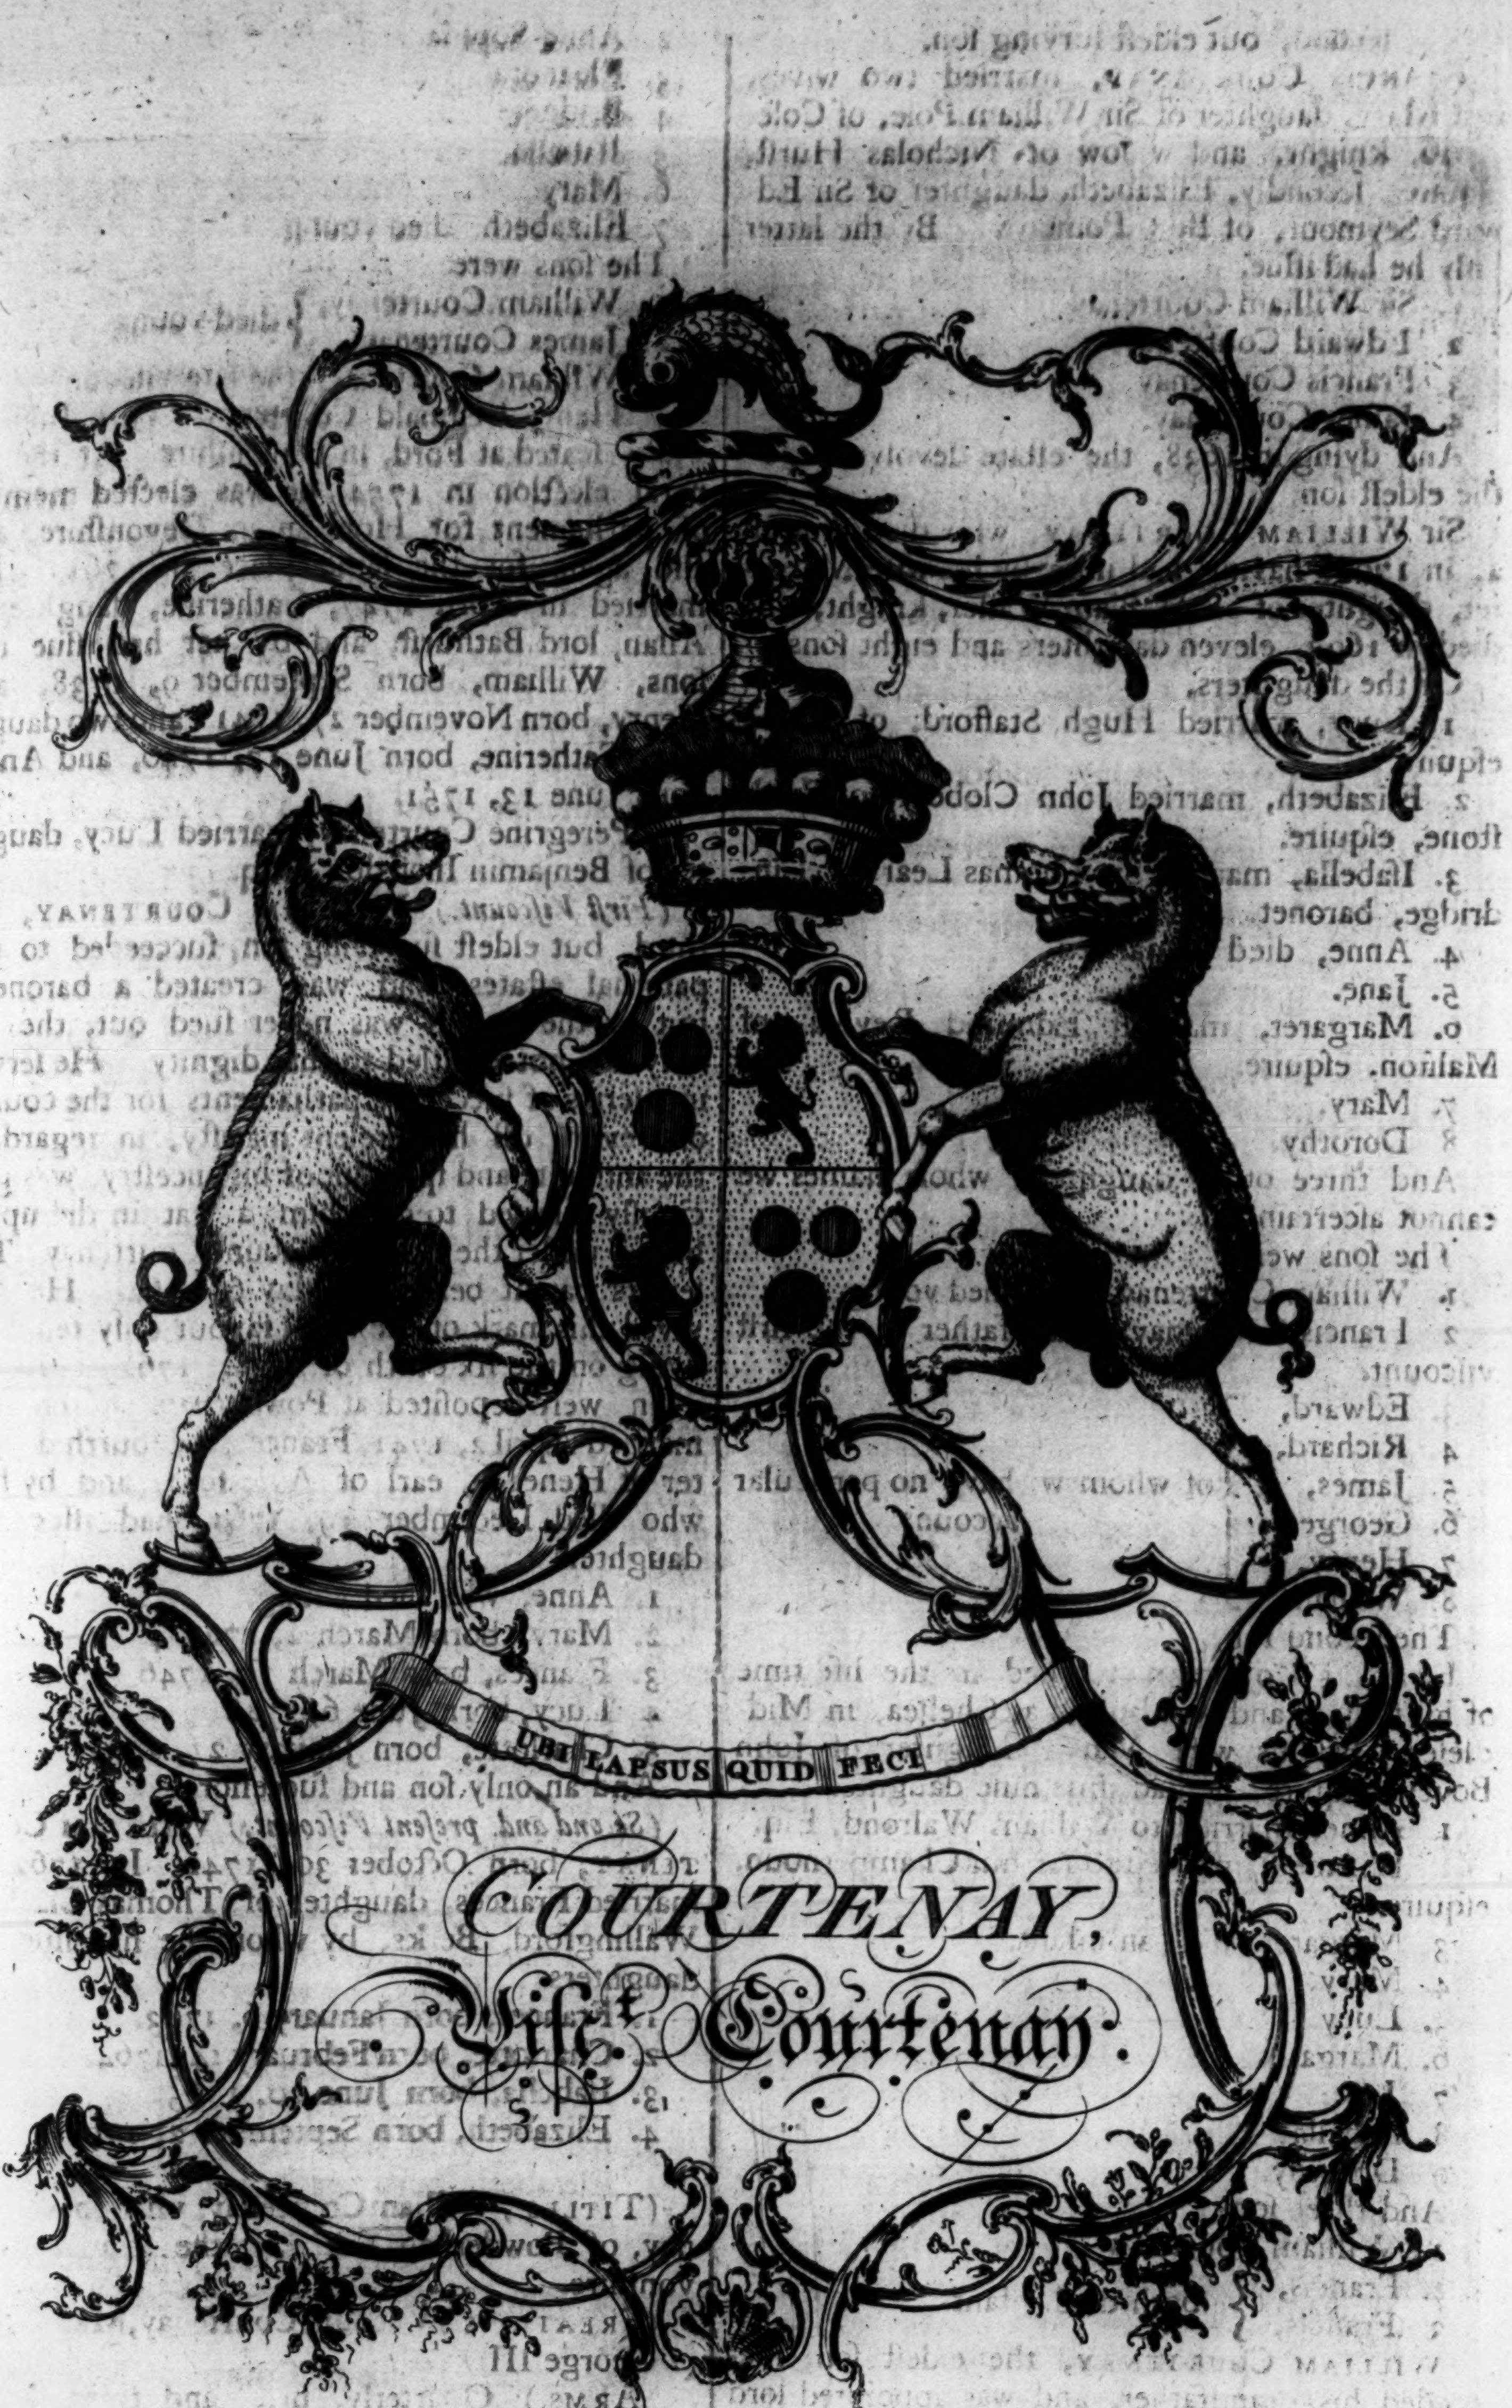

(ARMS.) Quarterly, first and third, topaz, three torteauxes, ruby, second and fourth, topaz, a lion rampant, sapphire.

(CREST.) On a wreath, a dolphin, proper.

(SUPPORTERS.) On each side, a wild boar, proper, maned and hooped, topaz.

(MOTTO.) Ubi lapsus quid feci.

WARD,

COURTENAY
Life Courtenay

DNI LAPUS QUID FRECI

WARD, Viscount DUDLEY and WARD.

THE first gentleman of this family, from whom we can lineally deduce the present Viscount, was,

SIMON WARDE, who was living in the reign of Richard II. We find that he, June 20, 1391, had the king's licence, with Sir Thomas Colville and Sir John Etton, knights, William Louthier, William Salveyn, and Henry Van Croypole, to perform feats of arms with certain persons of Scotland. And John, lord Ross, was appointed by the king to fix a camp, and to be judge of their performances. Which Simon is said to marry Margaret, of a branch of the noble family of Mortimer, and to have issue,

JOHN WARD, esquire, possessed of the manor of Kirkby-Bedon, in Norfolk; who by his wife, a daughter of John de Boscote, had issue,

JOHN WARD, his son and heir, who was also possessed of the said manor, and married Catharine, daughter of ——— Appleyard, of Dunston, in Norfolk, esquire, and was succeeded by

ROBERT WARD, his son and heir, of Kirkby-Bedon, esquire, who had to wife Alice, daughter of Robert Kemp, of Giffing, in Norfolk, esquire, and had issue,

ROBERT WARD, father of

ROBERT WARD, esquire, who married ———, daughter of Sir Giles Capel, knight, ancestor to the present earl of Essex, by whom he had issue,

HENRY WARD, esquire, who for the most part resided at Pofwyke, in Norfolk; and by Margaret his wife, daughter of William Ugge, of Porke-thorpe, esquire, had issue five sons;

1. Edward Ward.
2. Henry Ward.
3. Miles Ward.
4. Tobias Ward.
5. Thomas Ward.

EDWARD WARD, the eldest son, succeeded to the estate, and was also of Bexley, in Norfolk, where for the most part he resided; and having married Anne, daughter of John Hawes, or Hawers, of Windfarthing, in Norfolk, esquire, had issue eight children;

THOMAS WARD, eldest son, of Bexley, esquire, who married Eleanor, daughter of Thomas God-falve, of Beckenham, in Norfolk, and was father, by her, of

THOMAS WARD, esquire, whose son and heir,

EDWARD WARD, of Bexley, was created a baronet, 20 Dec. 1660, from whom the present baronet is descended.

WILLIAM WARD, the sixth son of the said Edward Ward, of Bexley, esquire, was a wealthy goldsmith in London, and jeweller to the queen of king Charles I. Having a very ample fortune, he resided at Heat, in Staffordshire; and Edward Sutton, lord Dudley, bestowed Frances, his grand-daughter and heir, on (First Lord.) HUMBLE WARD, esquire, son and heir of the said William. She was the sole daughter and heir of Sir Ferdinando Sutton, knr. of the Bath, that died in the life-time of his father Edward, lord Dudley, who departing this life June 23, 1643, the said Frances became baroness of Dudley, an ancient barony. The said Edward lord Dudley being a baron by descent from John de Sutton, who, in the reign of king Edward II. married Margaret, eldest daughter of Roger de Someri, baron of Dudley, and sister and coheir of John de Someri, baron of Dudley, who died on the feast of Thomas the Martyr, in 15 Edward II. leaving her, the said Margaret, who was then thirty-two years of age, and Joan, the wife of Thomas Botetourt, twenty-nine years of age, his sisters and next heirs. On partition of his inheritance, Margaret had for her share an assignment of the castle of Dudley, in Staffordshire; as also of the town of Dudley, in the county of Worcester, the manor of Seggesley, chase of Pen-thet, and manor of Swynford-Regis, in the county of Stafford, with divers other manors, all which descended to John, her son and heir, who, in 16 Edward III. was summoned to parliament as baron Dudley, and died in 33 Edward III. seized of the castle of Dudley, and of the town of Dudley, in the county of Worcester, as parcel and member of the castle of Dudley, held by barony, as the inquisition sets forth. The said Roger, and John de Someri, were lineally descended from John baron de Someri, of the county of Cambridge, who took to wife Hawyse, sister and heir of Gervase Paganel, baron of Dudley, in the county of Stafford, son of Ralph, son of Fulk Paganel, baron of Dudley, who was possessed of Dudley, probably by marrying the daughter of William Fitz-Auscuph, to whom the Conqueror gave the barony of Dudley.

The aforesaid Frances, baroness of Dudley, was with her husband, Humble Ward, esquire, in Oxford, when her grandfather, Edward lord Dudley, died; and thereupon, the next day, he was knighted by king Charles, viz. June 24, A. D. 1643; and, on the twenty-third of March next ensuing, advanced to the dignity of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Ward of Birmingham, in Warwickshire. This Humble lord Ward, died on the fourth of October, A. D. 1670, and was buried at Heat, in Staffordshire, his lady surviving, who lived to be very aged, departing this life in the year 1697. They had issue three sons and four daughters:

1. Edward, who succeeded to the honour and estate.

2. John, who died an infant.

3. William Ward, of Willingsworth, in the parish of Sedgeley, in Staffordshire, esquire, grandfather to the present viscount Ward.

4. Humble Ward, who died young.

The four daughters were,

1. Anne, who died unmarried.

2. Theodosia, wedded first to Sir Thomas Brereton, of Handford, in the county of Chester, and secondly, to Charles Brereton, esquire.

3. Honora, wife to William Dilke, of Maxtock-castle, in the county of Warwick, esquire.

4. Frances, to Sir William Noel, of Kirkby-Mallory, in Leicestershire, Bart.

(Second Lord.) EDWARD WARD, eldest son and heir of Humble lord Ward, took place in the house of peers, January 18, A. D. 1697; and, on the death of Frances, his mother, in 1701, succeeded to the barony of Dudley, and was buried at Himley, August 8, A. D. 1701. He married Frances, daughter of Sir William Brereton, of Handford, in com. Cest. Bart. and sister, and at length sole heir to Sir Thomas Brereton; by whom he had three sons and three daughters; Catherine, married to John Gray, of En-vill-hall, in Staffordshire, esquire, and Humbletta, to Thomas Porter, esquire. Lettice, the second daughter, died young. John, the eldest son, Humble Ward, second, and Ferdinando Dudley, the youngest, died unmarried.

William Ward, the third son, died in the life-time of his father, and was buried at Himley, May 16, A. D. 1692. He married Frances, daughter of Thomas Dilke, of Maxtock castle, in Warwickshire, esquire, by Honora, his wife, before-mentioned; by whom he had three sons:

1. Edward Dudley.

2. John Dudley, who died an infant.

3. William Dudley.

Also a daughter, Frances, hereafter mentioned.

(Third Lord.) EDWARD LORD DUDLEY and WARD, succeeded his grandfather in 1701; and, having taken to wife Diana, daughter of Thomas Howard, of Ashsted, in Surry, esquire, departed this life on the twenty-eighth of March, A. D. 1704, in his minority; leaving his lady (who died March 17, A. D. 1709) big with child of

(Fourth Lord.) EDWARD, LORD DUDLEY and WARD, who succeeded his father, and deceasing on the sixth of September, A. D. 1731, unmarried, was buried at Ashsted; and his honours and estate devolved on his uncle, (Fifth Lord.) WILLIAM LORD DUDLEY and WARD, who died unmarried at his seat at Himley, in Staffordshire, in May 1740; whereby the title of lord Dudley devolved on the issue of Frances, his sister.

Which Frances, was married to William Lea, of Hales-Owen-Grange, in the county of Salop, grandson of John Lea, of Hales-Owen (a descendant of the Lea's, of Lea-green) in the parish of Kingsnorton, in the county of Worcester; who took to wife —, the daughter of — Ive, of Kingsnorton aforesaid, and had issue by her two sons, William, and John.

William, the eldest, was sheriff of Worcestershire in the reign of king William; and died a bachelor, June 24, A. D. 1702, and was buried at Hales-Owen.

John, his brother, became his heir, and took to wife Mary, the daughter of William Deeley, of Warley-Wigorn, in Hales-Owen; which Mary died in 1720, having issue one son, William, who married Frances, sister of William Ward, lord Dudley; and by her (who died at the Grange, January 24, A. D. 1737, and was interred at Himley) had issue two sons and five daughters:

1. Anne, married to William Smith, of Ridge-acre, in Shropshire.

2. Frances, married to Walter Woodcock, esquire.

3. Mary, married to — Harvey, esquire.

4. Catherine, married to Thomas Jordan, Esq.

5. Elizabeth, married the reverend Benjamin Briscoe.

Of the two sons, William Lea, the youngest, died in his father's life time; and the eldest,

FERDINANDO DUDLEY LEA (as heir to his deceased mother) to the barony of Dudley; but died unmarried. But the barony of Ward devolved upon,

(Present Viscount.) JOHN WARD, the male heir and representative of Humble, the first lord Ward, whose third son, (as has been observed)

WILLIAM WARD, of Willingsworth, in the parish of Sedgefield, Staffordshire, died in January, in 1713-14, and was buried at Wednesbury, Staffordshire. By Anne, his wife, daughter and sole heir of Thomas Parkes, of Willingsworth, esquire, by Rebecca, his wife, who was heir of the Bodleys, left issue, William Ward, his son and heir.

And three daughters:

1. Frances, married to Robert Pigot, of Chetwynd, in Shropshire, knight of the shire for the county of Huntingdon in several parliaments.

2. Jane, married to Daniel Jeyon, esquire.

3. Rebecca, who died unmarried.

Their brother,

WILLIAM WARD, Esq; served in parliament for the county of Stafford, in the reign of queen Anne, and in the first parliament of the late king; and died on the 25th of October, in 1720. He married Mary, daughter of John Grey, of Evill, in the county of Stafford, esquire, (third son of Henry, the first earl of Stamford) by Mary, his first wife, daughter of Sir Francis Woolrych, baronet, by whom he left issue, two sons and two daughters:

1. John Ward, the peer of whom we are now treating.

2. William Ward, rector of King's Swinford, and Himley, in Staffordshire; who married Elizabeth, daughter of John Hawkes, and had issue a son and a daughter, Humble and Frances. He died July 21, 1758, and was buried at Himley.

The daughters are,

1. Frances, married to George Rooke, of St. Laurence, in Kent, esquire, son and heir of Sir George Rook, knight, admiral of Great Britain, and of the privy council to queen Anne, as also one of the lords of the admiralty.

2. Anna, who is unmarried.

JOHN

...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...

...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...

...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...

...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...

...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...

...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...

...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...

...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...

WARD, VISCOUNT DUDLEY and WARD
THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

FRANCIS DASHWOOD,

BARON LE DESPENCER,

AND

BARON T.

THE barony of Despencer, was originally by summons 23 Edward I. in favour of Hugh Despencer, afterwards earl of Winchester; and for want of male representative (see page 264) it fell to Isabel, sister and sole heir to Richard Despencer, earl of Gloucester, and baron Despencer, who died Oct. 7, 1414. She married Richard Beauchamp, lord Bergavenny; and the sole daughter and heir of this marriage, Elizabeth, (see lord Abergavenny's family) by marrying Edward Nevil, fourth son of Ralph Nevil, earl of Westmorland, brought the baronies of Bergavenny and Despencer into that family; but the latter was never used or claimed till 1604, when Mary, daughter of Henry Nevil, who married Sir Thomas Fane, (see page 513) was declared baroness le Despencer. This title continued in the Westmorland family, till the present viscount succeeded to the barony, as the son of Mary, the eldest surviving daughter of Vere, the fourth earl of Westmorland, which in the male-line became extinct upon the death of John, the late and seventh earl of Westmorland, without issue.

We must now speak of the male-ancestors of this nobleman.

His family was originally of Dorsetshire, and from thence removed into Somersetshire; of which was

SAMUEL DASHWOOD, of Rowney, near Taunton, esquire, who had two wives, but what were their maiden names is not transmitted down. However, by the second, he had issue George Dashwood, from whom Sir James Dashwood of Northbrooke, in Oxfordshire, claims descent. By the former he had issue four sons:

1. John Dashwood, from whom the Dashwoods of Essex and Suffolk derive their descent.
2. Francis Dashwood, of whom hereafter.
3. Richard Dashwood, who left issue.
4. William Dashwood, seated at Cheshunt, in Hertfordshire, and left issue. This gentleman was elected an alderman of the city of London; but paid the usual fine, to be excused serving in that office.

FRANCIS DASHWOOD, the second son, was a Turkey merchant, and an alderman of the city of London. He died A. D. 1683, having married Alice, sister of alderman Sleight, by whom he had issue three sons and four daughters.

The latter were,

1. Elizabeth, married to Thomas Lewes, esquire, alderman of the city of London.
2. Mary, to John Coppin, of Margate-street, Hertfordshire.
3. Martha, to William Roberts, of London, merchant.
4. Sarah, to Fulke Grevile, lord Brooke.

The sons were,

1. Sir Samuel Dashwood, knight, lord mayor of London, who married Anne, daughter of John Smith, of Tedworth, Hants, by whom he had George, Thomas, Elizabeth, (married to Andrew Archer, of Umperslade, in Warwickshire, esq.) Sarah, (to Richard Crawley, esq.) Jane, Annabella, Henrietta, Sophia.

* This dignity, which is by writ and patent, and is next to a bishop, (being temporal) had anciently the name of Vavafor, which by the Saxons was changed into Thane, and by the Normans to Baron.

A baron by writ is he unto whom a writ of summons in the name of the king is directed, to come to the parliament appointed to be holden at a certain time and place, and there to treat and advise with his majesty, the prelates, and nobility, about the weighty affairs of the nation.

The ceremony of a baron by writ is this: he is first brought by the king at arms in his sovereign's coat, to the lord chancellor, between two of the youngest barons, who bear the robe of a baron; there he shews his prescript, which the chancellor reads, then congratulates him as a baron, and invests him with the robe; and the writ being delivered to the clerk of the parliament, the baron is shewed to the barons by the said king of arms, and placed in their house; and from thence is this title allowed him as hereditary, to him and his heirs.

The first institutor of a baron by patent, was king Richard II. who, in the year 1388, the eleventh of his reign, created John de Beauchamp of Holt-castle, and steward of the household, baron of Kedermister, to him and the heirs male of his body, and invested him with a mantle and cap, differing from a viscount's, as follows:

A viscount's robe (which he wears in parliament, and is a fine scarlet cloth, lined with white taffata) has three guards of fur on the right shoulder, and two on the left, with a gold lace above each guard; and a baron has but two guards, and laces on each shoulder; neither has his coronation-robe (which is of crimson velvet, lined as before) but two rows of spots on each shoulder; whereas a viscount's has three on the right and two on the left; an earl three on each; a marquis four on the right, and three on the left; and a duke four on each.

His cap is the same with that of a viscount, earl, &c. but his coronet, which was given by king Charles II. (a baron not using any before that reign) is different from all other, the dukes having only leaves; the marquises, leaves and pearls of equal height; the earls have pearls on spires, much higher than the leaves; the viscounts, only pearls set close together, on the chaplet or rim; and the barons, but six pearls on the rim, and at equal distance.

The title of a baron is right honourable; but by the king or queen is usually stiled, our right trusty and well-beloved; and when of the privy-council, then with the addition of counsellor.

2. Thomas

THE ANGLICAN DASHWOOD

THE ANGLICAN DASHWOOD

THE ANGLICAN DASHWOOD

THE ANGLICAN DASHWOOD

THE ANGLICAN DASHWOOD

THE ANGLICAN DASHWOOD

2. Thomas Dashwood, who married Penelope, daughter of — Hillersden, and had issue.

3. Francis Dashwood.

Sir FRANCIS DASHWOOD, the youngest son, was four times married: first to Mary, only daughter of John Jennings, of Westminster, Gent. by whom he had issue two daughters, Mary, married to Sir Fulwar Shipwith, of Newbold-hall, in Warwickshire, baronet, and Susanna, married to Sir Orlando Bridgeman, of Ridley, in Cheshire, Bart.

He married, secondly, Mary, daughter of Vere, earl of Westmorland, and sister to John, earl of Westmorland (which lady, as we have observed, brought the barony into this family) this lady died, August 19, A. D. 1710, and lies buried at West Wycomb, in the church upon the hill, where the following inscription does honour to her memory:

Here rests, in hope

Of a glorious resurrection of the just,

The Rt. Hon. the Lady Mary Dashwood,

Eldest daughter

To the Rt. Hon. Vere Fane, earl of Westmorland, And wife to Sir Francis Dashwood, Kt. and Bart.

A lady whose high birth

Received a greater lustre from her eminent Virtues,

And whose Piety, Humility, and Prudence,

Made her Life and Character

Truly noble, truly good.

She was

A most loving and obedient Wife,

A tender and indulgent Parent,

A careful and kind Mistress to her Family:

Her diffuse charity made her a refuge for the poor,

And her devout life an illustrious example

To the best of her Sex.

Hence learn

To imitate her virtues

And lament her loss.

She left issue one son, Francis, and one daughter, Rachel, and died the 19th day of Aug. 1710, in the 35th year of her age.

The daughter, Rachel, married Sir Robert Austin, of Bexley; and the son is the peer of whom we are treating.

He married thirdly, Mary, daughter of major King, (niece to doctor King, once master of the Charter-house) by whom he had two sons:

1. John Dashwood, born August 4, A. D. 1716, who married Sarah, daughter of — Moore, of Byfleet, in Surry, esquire.

2. Charles Dashwood, born November 4, A. D. 1717, who died unmarried.

And two daughters:

1. Henrietta, born November 29, A. D. 1714, who died young.

2. Mary, married to John Walcot, of Walcot, in Shropshire.

He married lastly Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Windfor, earl of Plymouth; but by this lady he had no issue.

This gentleman was created a baronet by patent, bearing date June 6, A. D. 1707, and dying in the year 1727, was interred at West Wycomb, Bucks, and succeeded by his only son by the second lady.

(Present Viscount.) FRANCIS DASHWOOD, who was chosen member in the present parliament, A. D. 1761, for Weymouth and Melcomb Regis, and served in the two preceding parliaments for New Romney, in Kent. In 1762, he was appointed treasurer of the chamber, and afterwards one of the lords of the treasury, and under treasurer of the exchequer. On the death of John, earl of Westmorland (as already observed) he succeeded to the barony of le Despencer, in right of his mother. On the 29th of April, A. D. 1763, he was appointed master of the great wardrobe, and in 1766, one of the joint post masters general. This he soon after resigned, and is now lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Bucks, F. R. S. and L. L. D.

His lordship married Sarah, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Gould, of Iwer, Bucks, and widow of Sir Richard Ellis, baronet, but has as yet no issue.

(TITLES.) Francis Dashwood, baron le Despencer, and baronet.

(CREATIONS.) Baron le Despencer by summons to parliament, A. D. 1295, (23 Edward I.) baronet, June 28, 1707 (6 Anne.)

(ARMS.) Pearl, on a fess double cotised, ruby, three gryphons heads, erased, topaz.

(CREST.) On a wreath a gryphon's head, ermine, erased, ruby.

(MOTTO.) Pro magna charta.

(CHIEF SEATS.) West Wycomb, Bucks, and Mereworth, Kent.

DASHWOOD, B.A. 1823
DASHWOOD, who married Penelope daughter of ———, and had issue
Francis Dashwood.
Francis Dashwood, the youngest son, was

NEVILL, Baron ABERGAVENNY.

THIS noble and ancient family, according to Camden, has produced six earls of Westmorland, two earls of Salisbury and Warwick, an earl of Kent, a marquis of Montagu, a duke of Bedford, a baron Ferrers of Oversley, barons Latimer, barons Abergavenny, one queen, five duchesses, to omit countesses and baronesses, an archbishop of York, and a great number of inferior gentlemen.

They claim descent from, WALTHER, officary earl of Northumberland, in the reign of king Edgar, A.D. 969, who by Judith his wife, daughter of the earl of Champagne, had issue, UCHTRED, who was made earl of Northumberland, A.D. 980, in the life time of his father; and was murdered by Thurebrand, A.D. 1017.

He was three times married: first to Egfrid, daughter of Aldane, bishop of Durham; secondly to Sigen, daughter of Styr Fitz Ulf; and, thirdly, to Elgina, daughter of king Ethelred. By the last lady he had issue an only daughter, AGITHA, who was heiress of Raby, and other large possessions belonging to her mother. She married Maldred, son of Crinan, an eminent thane, and bore an only son and heir, COSPATRIC, who obtained the earldom of Northumberland, A.D. 1017, but was deprived thereof 1072; and dying the year following, was buried at Northumberland. His issue were two daughters, Juliana, married to Ranulph de Merley, baron of Morpeth; and Etheldreda, married to Duncan, a natural son of Malcolm, king of Scotland.

Also three sons,

1. Dolphin, who became earl of Dunbar and the marches in Scotland.

2. Waltheof, a benefactor to St. Mary's at York.

3. Uchtred. Which

UCHTRED became lord of Raby, and had issue

DOLPHIN, who was his successor as lord of Raby, and married Alice, niece and heir of Walcher, bishop of Durham, and earl Northumberland. His issue was

MILDRED FITZ-DOLPHIN, lord of Raby and Staindrope, in the county of Durham. His son, ROBERT FITZ-MILDRED, was lord of Raby, &c. and married Isabel, daughter to Geoffrey de Nevill, and heir to her brother Richard. (This lady's mother was Eunne, daughter and heir of Bertran de Bulker, at whose decease she obtained the lordship of Branspeth and Durham. Geoffrey was the son of Geoffrey Nevill, and grandson to Gilbert de Nevill, a noble Norman, who came into England with William the Conqueror.) The issue of this marriage was GEOFFREY FITZ-ROBERT, who was lord of Raby; and in testimony of his gratitude to his mother's family, for the vast inheritances which devolved upon him from them, he assumed the name of NEVILL, and by his wife Margaret had two sons:

1. Robert de Nevill.

2. Geoffrey de Nevill, who was governor of Scordeburgh castle, and justice itinerant, A.D. 1270. He died 1285. He married Margaret, daughter and heir of Sir John Longvillers, of Hornby-castle, in Lancashire, knight. From this match descended the Nevills of Hornby, whose heir female was married to Thomas Beaufort, duke of Exeter, in the reign of Henry V.

ROBERT DE NEVILL, the eldest son, lord of Raby, was governor of Norham Werke and Bamborough castles, A.D. 1258; warden of the forests north of Trent, A.D. 1261; captain-general of the forces north of Trent; sheriff of Yorkshire and governor of York castle, A.D. 1263; governor of Pickering castle, A.D. 1266; governor of Bamburgh, A.D. 1270. He married Ida, widow of Roger Bertram, baron of Mitford, in Northumberland, and had an only son of his own name,

ROBERT DE NEVILL, who died June 6, A.D. 1271, in his father's life-time, and was buried at Coverham, in the county of York; having had issue by his wife Mary, daughter and coheir of Ralph Fitz-Ranulph, lord of Middleham, (who died 1320, and was buried with her husband at Coverham) an only son,

RALPH DE NEVILL, successor to his grandfather at his decease, A.D. 1282, as lord of Raby. In 1294, 22 Edward I. he was summoned to parliament; and dying April 18, 1331, was buried at Coverham. He married first Eufema, daughter of Sir John Clavering: secondly Margaret, daughter of John de Thweng. By the former lady he had issue two sons, of which the eldest, Robert de Nevill, called the Peacock of the North, died without issue in the life-time of his father; and the second son,

RALPH DE NEVILL, succeeded to the honours and estates of the family. In the time of Edward III. we find him steward of the household, warden of the forests north of Trent, and of the Scotch marches. He was summoned to parliament from the 5th to the 39th of Edward III. and departed this life, A.D. 1367, and was buried at Durham. By his wife Alice, daughter and coheir of Hugh, lord Audley, which lady died in 1374, he had issue issue three daughters: 1st, Eufemia, married to Reginald lord Lucy. 2d, Catherine. 3d, Margaret, married to Henry Percy, earl of Northumberland.

Also six sons,

1. John de Nevill.
2. Sir William Nevill, gentleman of the bed-chamber to king Richard II.
3. Sir Thomas Nevill, who married Margaret, daughter of William Babington, and had issue Jane, married first to Thomas Thurland; secondly to Sir Gervase Clifton, knight.
4. Sir Robert Nevill, seated at Eldon.
5. Alexander Nevill, archbishop of York, A. D. 1373; who died, A. D. 1391, and was buried at Lovain.
6. Sir Ralph Nevill, seated at Candall.

The eldest son,

Sir JOHN NEVILL, lord of Raby, was knighted 1360; admiral of the fleet 1370; knight of the garter, and governor of Bamburgh-castle, 1377; lieutenant of Aquitaine, and seneschal of Bourdeaux, 1378; warden of the east marches 1387; and dying October 17, 1380, was buried at Durham. He married first Maud, daughter of Henry, lord Percy: secondly Elizabeth, daughter and heir of William, lord Latimer, of Danby; by this last lady, who died 1306, he had issue a daughter, Elizabeth, married to Sir Thomas Willoughby, and a son, John Nevill, who was summoned to parliament as baron Latimer, in right of his mother, from August 25, 1404, to 1431, when he died without issue, having married Maud, daughter of Thomas, lord Clifford, and widow of Richard, earl of Crmbridge.

By his first lady he had issue three daughters,

1. Maud, married to William, lord Scroop.
2. Alice, married to William, lord Deancourt.
3. Eleanor, married to Ralph, lord Lumley.

And two sons,

1. Ralph Nevill,
2. Thomas Nevill, who married first Joan, daughter and heir of William, lord Furnival, in whose right he became baron Furnival. He married, secondly, Anharet, sister, and, at length, heir to John, lord Strange, of Blackmere, and widow of John, lord Talbot. He died 1407, and was buried at Worktop, having only had issue by his second lady two daughters, first Maud, at length his heir, married to John Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury, and Joane, who died unmarried.

RALPH NEVILL, lord of Raby, was governor of Carlisle, in 1386; warden of the forests north of Trent, in 1389; constable of the Tower of London, in 1398; privy counsellor and earl marshal, created earl of Westmorland, by patent, January 21, 1393, 21 Richard II. He was also knight of the Garter, and dying October 21, 1426, was interred in Staindrope. He married first Margaret, daughter of Hugh, earl of Stafford, and by this lady, who died in 1370, and was buried at Bramspeth, he had issue seven daughters and two sons; from the eldest of which sons, who died before his father, descended five earls of Westmorland; the last of which was attainted in the 13th of Elizabeth, and had no male heir. But we are chiefly concerned with the issue of his second marriage, with Joan, natural daughter of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, and widow of Sir Robert Ferfers, knight. By this lady, who died in 1440, he had five daughters, and eight sons.

The former were,

1. Catherine, married to John Mowbray, duke of Norfolk; secondly to Sir John Woodville, knight, son of Richard, earl Rivers.
2. Eleanor, married first to Richard, lord Spencer; secondly to Henry Percy, earl of Northumberland.
3. Anne, married first to Humphry, duke of Buckingham; secondly to Walter Blount, viscount Mountjoy.
4. Jane, a nun.
5. Cecily, married to Richard Plantagenet, duke of York.

The sons were,

1. Richard Nevill, of whom presently.
2. Sir William Nevill, governor of Roxborough; summoned to parliament as baron Fauconberg, from 1429 to 1460, created earl of Kent, by patent, in 1461, 2 Edward IV. He was also lord high admiral of England, and knight of the Garter; and dying in 1462, was buried at Gisborough in Yorkshire. He married Joan, daughter and heir of Thomas, lord Fauconberg, and had issue three daughters, married as follows: first Joan, married to Sir Edward Redhowing, knight; secondly Elizabeth, to Sir Richard Strangeways, knight; and thirdly Alice, to Sir John Conyers, knight.

3. George Nevill, summoned to parliament as baron Latimer, from 1432 to 1438, when he died. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, by his first wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Thomas, lord Berkeley. The fourth lord Latimer descended from this marriage died in 1577, and left four daughters, coheiresses.

4. Edward Nevill, ancestor to the barons Abervenny.

5. Robert Nevill, bishop of Salisbury in 1427; bishop of Durham in 1438, died 1451.

The eldest son,

RICHARD NEVILL, was warden of the marches towards Scotland, and created earl of SALISBURY, by patent, May 4, in 1442, 20 Henry VI. We find him governor of Carlisle in 1448, lord great chamberlain of England in 1460; in which year he was beheaded by the Lancastrians at Wakefield, being then knight of the Garter, and was buried at Bisham, in Berks.

He married Alice, daughter and heir of Thomas de Montacute, earl of Salisbury. This lady was also buried at Bisham. Their issue were six daughters.

1. Joan, married to William Fitz-Alan, earl of Arundel.
2. Cecily, married first Henry Beauchamp, earl of Warwick; and secondly John Tiptoft, earl of Worcester.
3. Alice, married to Henry, baron Fitz-Hugh.
4. Eleanor, married to Thomas Stanley, earl of Derby.
4. Catherine, married to William Bonville, son of William lord Bonville.
6. Margaret, married to John de Vere, earl of Oxford.

Also three sons,

4. O. 1. Richard.

1. Richard Nevill, for an account of whom as earl of Warwick, see the note, Vol. I. page 155.

2. Sir Thomas Nevill, who was slain at Wakefield with his father.

3. John Nevill. Which third son, JOHN NEVILL, was summoned to parliament, as baron Montagu, A. D. 1461, (1 Edward IV.) summoned to parliament, as baron Nevill, 38 Henry VI. created earl of Northumberland, 4 Edward IV. resigned his earldom, and was created marquis Montagu, A. D. 1470, knight of the Garter, and chancellor of England. He was slain April 14, A. D. 1470, a little before the battle of Barnet. By his wife Isabel, daughter and coheir of Sir Edmund Inglethorp, of Borough Green in Kent, by Jane his wife, sister and at length heir to William Tiptoft, earl of Worcester, he had issue five daughters, at length coheirresses to their brother.

1. Ann, married to Sir William Stoner, of Oxfordshire, Knt.

2. Elizabeth, married lord Scroop.

3. Margaret, married first, Sir John Mortimer of Essex; secondly, Robert Horne, esquire.

4. Lucy, married to Sir Thomas Fitz-Williams of Aldwark, in the county of York, and after his decease, to Anthony Brown, ancestor to the present viscount Montagu. See Vol. II. p. 263.

5. Isabel married William Huddleston.

Also one son,

GEORGE NEVILL, who was created duke of Bedford in his father's life-time; succeeded as marquis Montagu, A. D. 1470; was degraded of all his dignities by parliament 17 Edward IV. and died 1483, without issue.

We now return to

Edward Nevill, fourth surviving son to Ralph, earl of Westmorland, by Joan his second wife, the daughter of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, fourth son of king Edward III. and who by his first wife, Blanch, (daughter and coheir to Henry, duke of Lancaster) was father to Henry IV. king of England.

Which Edward Nevill, having wedded Elizabeth, the sole daughter and heir to Richard Beauchamp, earl of Worcester, son and heir of William Beauchamp, lord Bergavenny, had livery of the lands of her inheritance in 14 Henry VI. but was kept out of the castle and manor of Bergavenny by Richard Beauchamp, earl of Warwick. Which Richard, as also his son Henry Beauchamp, duke of Warwick, enjoyed the said castle, &c. so long as they lived, by a special entail made in the reign of king Richard II. by William Beauchamp, lord Bergavenny, that on failure of issue-male of his body, by Joan his then wife, the said castle, &c. should resort unto Thomas Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, (brother to him the said William) and to the heirs-male of his body.

However, in 27 Henry VI. Henry Beauchamp, duke of Warwick, being deceased, and Anne, his sole daughter and heir, in ward to the king, upon the humble remonstrance of this Edward Nevill and his wife, they obtained livery of the said castle of Bergavenny, &c. and in the patent he is stiled lord Bergavenny. Also, two years after, was summoned by writ by that title, to the parliament held in 29 Henry VI.

This Edward Nevill had the honour of knight-hood conferred on him at Whitsuntide, in 4 Hen-

VI. and was then married; for, in that year, the lord Bergavenny was summoned to take the order of knighthood with the king himself, who was then dubbed by John, duke of Bedford, regent of France, at a solemn feast holden at Leicester; and at the same time his brethren, William, and George Nevill, lord Latimer, were knighted with him.

In 32 Henry VI. he was among other nobles in the great parliament chamber at Westminster, at the opening of a coffer, containing three seals, one of gold, and two of silver, which were in the custody of John, cardinal and archbishop of Canterbury, and chancellor, deceased, when they were delivered to Richard, earl of Salisbury, as chancellor. In the same year, he marched with Edward, earl of March (after king Edward IV.) the earl of Warwick, and others, with an army of twenty-five thousand men, and being refused admittance to the king, the battle of Northampton ensued, when the royalists were vanquished, with the loss of ten thousand men.

After Edward, earl of March, attained the crown, he was one of the lords who firmly adhered to him; and in the second year of his reign went with him towards Scotland, when several places were reduced to his obedience in the North. In 10 Edward IV. he was commissioned to muster and array all men fitting to bear arms in the county of Kent, and to march and oppose George, duke of Clarence, and Richard, earl of Warwick, traitors and rebels.

On the third of July, A. D. 1471, 11 Edward IV. he was one of the lords who, in the palace of Westminster, took the following oath:

"I Edward Bergavenny, knowledge, take, and repute you Edward, prince of Wales, duke of Cornewail, and erle Chestre, first begotten son of our sovereign lord Edward the fourth king of England and of France, lord of Ireland, to be verely and undoubted heyre to our said sovereign lord, as to the coronas and reames of England and of Fraunce, and lordship of Ireland.

"And promitte and swere, that in cas hereafter it happen you, by Goddis disposition, to overlive our said sovereign lord, I shall then take and accept you for true, very, and rightwis king of England, &c. And feiw and trowth to you shall bere, and in all things truly and faithfully behave me towards you and your heyres, as a true and faithfull subject oweth to behave hym to his sovereign lord and rightwys king of England. So help me God, and holidam, and holy evaungelists."

Elizabeth his first wife, (who was born at Hanley castle, in the county of Worcester, 16 December, A. D. 1415,) deceasing in 27 Henry VI. this Edward, lord Bergavenny afterwards married Catharine, the daughter of Sir Robert Howard, knight; but for this marriage they were both excommunicated, in regard they had carnal copulation together in the life-time of his first wife, and likewise for that he was of near kindred to her, viz. within the third degree of consanguinity. Howbeit, at length making their application to pope Nicholas V. they were absolved, and had a special dispensation for that their marriage, dated at Rome, 15 Octob. ann. dom. 1448.

He departed this life upon Thursday, 18 October, 16 Edward IV. being then seized as tenant, by the courtesy of England, of the inheritance of the said Elizabeth, of the manors of Merworth and Berlyng in Kent; Hokam, Tebinham, Berghie, Sutton, with the hundreds of Laundiche and South Grenhowe, in the county of Norfolk; of the manors of Ottelec, Lydgate, and Wrydelington, in the county of Suffolk; of the castle and manors of Ewyas Harold, in the county of Hereford; of the manors of Kidderminster, Buct, Kidderminster-Burnell, Duncleir, Purhill, Ruffale, and Inkeburowe, in the county of Worcester; of the manors of East Becheworth, Westcote, Padingden-Pembroke, and a third part of the castle of Reygate, in the county of Surrey; of the manors of Dicchening, Peccam, Rottingdon, North-Esc, in the town of Iford; of the third part of the castle and manor of Lewes, with the third part of the chace of Cleres, and forest of Worth; as also of the third part of the hundreds of Bunting-hill, Strete, Berecompe, Swanbergh, Helmeftrowe, Yousemere, Walesbone and Ponynges, with the moytie of the hundreds of Wyndham and Filhersgate, all in the county of Sussex; of the manors of Fordham, East-Hanyngfield, West-Hanyngfield, Thoriton, Rideswill, and South-Hanyngfield, in the county of Essex; and of the manors of Aston-Cantelow, Shelfield, Allesley, and Fillongley, in the county of Warwick, leaving Sir George Nevill, Knt. his second son by his first wife, his next heir, at that time twenty-six years of age: for Richard his eldest son, died before him at the castle of Raby, and was buried in the south-isle of the collegiate church at Stanedrope, in the bishoprick of Durham, under a flat marble stone, with his portraiture in brass. He had also two daughters, Alice, married to Sir Thomas Grey, Knt. and Catharine, wife of Iwarby, esquire.

And by his second wife, Catherine, who was sister to John Howard, duke of Norfolk, he had three daughters; Margaret, married to John Brook, lord Cobham; Catharine, wife to Robert Tanfeild, and Anne, to the lord Strange; as also three sons, who died young.

Sir GEORGE NEVILL, his only surviving son and heir, in 36 H. VI. was found to be one of the cousins and heirs of Sir Rowland Lenthale, knt. viz. son of Elizabeth, lady Bergavenny, daughter of Richard Beauchamp, earl of Worcester, son of Joan, sometime lady Bergavenny, one of the three sisters and coheirs of Thomas, late earl of Arundel, brother of Margaret, mother of Edmund Lenthale, esquire, son of the same Sir Rowland and Margaret.

This Sir George Nevill, lord Bergavenny, being with his father in that great battle near Tewksbury, (11 Edward IV.) wherein the Lancastrians were entirely defeated, had then the honour of knighthood conferred on him by king Edward, at Barton, near Tewksbury: and was one of the barons that attended at the coronation of king Richard III. In 5 Henry VII. being one of the chief in that army sent over to Calais, in aid of Maximilian the emperor, against the French, he returned back without performing any considerable action, in regard the emperor wanted money to carry on the war.

He died on the twentieth of September, A. D.

1492, having had issue by Margaret his wife, daughter of Sir Hugh Fenne, Knt. two daughters,

1. Jane, wife to Sir Henry Pole, lord Montacute, and

2. Elizabeth, wife of Sir Edward Berkeley, knight, to whom he gave part of his plate and jewels.

Also four sons,

1. George Nevill, his heir.

2. William Nevill, who died without issue.

3. Edward Nevill, ancestor to the present lord Abergavenny.

4. Sir Thomas Nevill, was of the privy-council, and secretary of state to king Henry VIII. He married Catherine, lady Fincham, by whom he had an only daughter and heir, Margaret, wife of Sir Robert Southwell, of Mereworth in Kent, master of the Rolls, who in her right enjoyed that manor.

The eldest son,

Sir GEORGE NEVILL, lord Bergavenny, succeeding his father, was heir of his lands. He was called by the king's writ at the Tower of London, June, A. D. 1483, 1 Edward V. to prepare himself to receive the order of knighthood against his coronation; and afterwards was made one of the knights of the Bath, on the Sunday before the coronation of king Richard III. viz. 4 July, A. D. 1483. After which he waited on the king in his progress in the North.

In 8 Henry VII. he was one of the principal persons with the king at the siege of Bulloign. And in 12 Henry VII. by his credit and power, preserved the county of Kent from joining with the Cornish rebels then in that county; and had a share in the honour of the victory obtained against them at Blackheath, the 17th of July the same year. In 21 Henry VII. being under suspicion for favouring Edward de la Pole, earl of Lincoln, at that time in banishment, he was committed to prison; but, nothing of guilt appearing against him, he was enlarged, and received into greater favour than before.

The lord Burgeyney, (as an old historian saith) for hys modestie, wys, and probitie (because the kinge found hym lyke hymselfe) always true, faythful, constant, was of hys soveraigne lorde more esteemed, favoured, and regarded, than he was before.

In 2 Henry VIII. he was made constable of Dover-castle, and warden of the Cinque Ports. In the 5th of Henry VIII. he was elected a knight of the most noble order of the Garter, and installed on the seventh of May, in the eighth stall on the prince's side. And, soon after embarking with king Henry VIII. he commanded one of the wings of the army at the siege of Ti-rovenne, and at the battle that ensued, called by our historians the battle of Spurs. After which he was at the siege of Tournay; and, on the surrender thereof, was appointed by the king, with six thousand men, to take possession of that city.

In 6 Henry VIII. he was commander in chief of five thousand men, that were sent over to strengthen the town of Calais, and other fortresses within the English pale, against any sudden attempt that might be made by the French.

In 8 Henry VIII. when the king, for the honour of his sister the queen of Scots, then come to visit visit him, had prepared two solemn days of jousts, he was one the king chose on his side. And, the year after, was one of the chief who suppressed a great riot in London.

In 12 Henry VIII. he was present at that memorable interview betwixt king Henry VIII. and Francis I. king of France, betwixt Guineas and Ardres; and, in their march, the lord Abergavenny publicly said to the king, "Sir, you are my king and sovereign, wherefore, above all, I am bound to shew you truth, and not to let for none. I have been in the French party, and they are in number double as many as you be." Whereupon he, with the earl of Essex, Edward Poyninge, and Robert Wingfeilde, were appointed to take an account of the number of the French king's attendants.

And having married Mary, daughter to Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, he was imprisoned in the Tower, in 13 Henry VIII. for concealment of words spoken by that duke, the tenth of September, 11 Henry VIII. A. D. 1519, viz. "That if the king died, he would have the rule of the realm, in spite of whosoever said the contrary, swearing, that, if the lord Abergavenny revealed this, he would fight with him." Which words were spoken in the gallery at Blechingly in Surry. But on the 11th of February following, being brought to the King's Bench at Westminster, and there confessing his indictment of misprision of treason, he was soon after discharged, and was again in the king's favour.

In 19 Henry VIII. on the conclusion of a perpetual peace between the kings of England and France, wherein the chief of both realms were guarantees, he was among those on the part of the king of England.

In 21 Henry VIII. he was summoned to parliament as premier baron of England, by the title of George Nevyle de Bergevenny, chivaler.

In 22 Henry VIII. he was one of the peers who subscribed that letter to pope Clement VII. importing, that in case he did not comply with king Henry, in that cause of his divorce from queen Catharine, he would be in danger of losing his supremacy here. And, at the coronation of queen Anne, he claimed the office of chief ladderer, which was allowed.

He died in 27 Henry VIII. and by his last will and testament, dated the same year, viz. 4 Junii, A. D. 1535, bequeathed his body to be buried in the parish-church of Birling, in Kent; and left issue, by Joan, daughter of Thomas, earl of Arundel, (his first wife) one daughter, named Elizabeth, married to Henry, lord d'Aubeny; and by Mary, his second wife, daughter to Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, had three sons,

1. Henry Nevill, his son and heir.
2. John Nevill, died young.
3. Thomas Nevill, who was married, but died without issue.

Also five daughters,

1. Catharine, wife of Sir John St. Leger, of Annerley, in Devonshire, Knt. who by her had three daughters, his coheirs.
2. Margaret, wife of John Cheney, son of Sir Thomas Cheney, Knt.
3. Dorothy, wife of William Brooke, son of George, lord Cobham.

4. Jane, wife of Sir Henry Pool, Knt.

5. Ursula, wife of Sir Warham St. Leger, Knt. president of Munster in Ireland.

Mary Brooke, alias Cobham, who had been his concubine, but then his last wife, being great with child by him at that time, and was afterwards delivered of a daughter, Mary, who became the wife of Thomas Fines, lord Dacre.

HENRY NEVILL, his son and successor, was summoned to parliament in 3 and 4 Edward VI. and in 5 Edward VI. accompanied the marquis of Northampton, and some other lords, in a solemn embassy into France; as also to present the order of the Garter to that king. After his return, on the second of March, he was committed to ward, for striking the earl of Oxford in the chamber of presence; but, on the sixth of April following, he had a special pardon for it. On Wiat's insurrection in Kent, in the reign of queen Mary, he raised forces to oppose him, and, overtaking a body of his adherents at Blacksoil-field, in the parish of Wrotham, he put them to flight, chasing them four miles, and took sixty prisoners. After which he marched after Wiat to London. In 29 Elizabeth, he was one of the peers that sat in judgment upon the queen of Scots at Fotheringhay. And, departing this life at his seat called Comfort, near Berling in Kent, on the tenth of February, A. D. 1586-7, was buried with great solemnity in the church there, on the twenty-first of March following. By the inquisition taken after his decease at Maidstone, in the county of Kent, August 22, 29 Elizabeth, the jury found, that he died seized of the manors of Birling, Ryarshe, Ealding, alias Yalding, and Luddesdon; the manor and rectory of the church of All-Saints in Birling, and the advowson of the vicarage of Birling; the manor of West Peckham, and the advowson of the church of Maplescomb in West Peckham; the manor of Wereworth, and advowson of the church; the manor and farm of Oldhaie, alias Holehaie, all in the county of Kent; and that his daughter Mary, then aged thirty-two, was his sole heir; and was married, in the seventeenth Elizabeth, to Sir Thomas Fane, knight. Her mother was Frances, daughter of Thomas Manners, earl of Rutland. She challenged the title of baroness Bergavenny, against Edward Nevill, son of Sir Edward Nevill, a younger brother to George, lord Bergavenny, father to this last-mentioned Henry, on which Sir Edward alledged, that the castle of Bergavenny was settled, both by testament and act of parliament; but the dispute was not determined until the twenty-fifth of May, 1 Jac. when, after great arguments on each part, the title of lord Bergavenny was, both by judgment of the house of peers, and order of the lords commissioners for the office of earl marshal of England, decreed for the heir-male. Whereupon, to give some satisfaction to the heir-female, the king, by his letters patent, granted the dignity or barony of Le Despenser to her and to her heirs, from whom the present earl of Westmorland is descended.

We now return to

Sir EDWARD NEVILL, younger brother of George, lord Abergavenny, before mentioned. In 1 Henry VIII. he was one of those gallant knights, who, for the more honour, and ennobling the triumphant coronation of king Henry VIII. performed jousts and and tournaments in the palace of Westminster, the king and queen being present. And, at Christmas the same year, performed jousts with the king himself at Richmond; who secretly arming himself with William Compton, (ancestor to the earl of Northampton) this Sir Edward Nevill run against this Mr. Compton, and wounded him so, that he was likely to die. The year after, he was one of the three the king chose to be challengers with himself. In 5 Henry VIII. having been at the siege of Thirovenne, and the battle that ensued, he was, for his valiant behaviour, made a knight banneret. In 6 Henry VIII. on the marriage of the king's sister with the French king, when the dauphin had proclaimed solemn jousts to be kept at Paris in the month of November, wherein he, with nine aids, would answer all comers, being gentlemen of name and arms, this Sir Edward, with the duke of Suffolk, the marquis of Dorset, and others, had the king's license to go over, and accept the challenge. And preparing themselves for the purpose, they departed, all in green coats and hoods, and landing at Calais the 20th of October, were at the coronation of the queen, and gained great honour, not only at the jousts, but also at the torney and barriers. In 12 Henry VIII. he waited on his sovereign at his interview with the French king, between Guines and Ardres, having in his retinue a chaplain, eleven servants, and eight horses. But in 13 Henry VIII. being suspected of favouring Edward duke of Buckingham in his treasonable attempts, he was forbid the king's presence. However, the year after he was again in favour, and was ordered to attend the king at Canterbury on the 27th of May, to wait the arrival of the emperor, who landing at Dover the day after, he was present at the interview between those monarchs. In 15 Henry VIII. he was one of the principal commanders of those forces sent into France under the duke of Suffolk. In 23 Henry VIII. he was one of the maskers with the king at cardinal Wolsey's, at which time the cardinal took him for the king, and offered his chair, being, as Hollinshed writes, a comely knight, that much more resembled the king's person in that mask than any other. In 24 Henry VIII. he waited on the king to Bulloign, and from thence to the interview with the French king at Sandringham. In 29 Henry VIII. he was present at the christening of Prince Edward, being one of the six gentlemen of the king's chamber, who bore a rich canopy over him. But the year following, on the 3d of November, was sent prisoner to the Tower, with Henry Courtenay, marquis of Exeter, (the king's cousin-german) and Henry Pole, lord Montacute. And being indicted on the 3d of January, "for devising to maintain, promote, and advance one Reginald Poole, late dean of Exeter, enemy to the king beyond the sea, and to deprive the king," was attainted and beheaded with the before-mentioned lords on Tower-hill, on the 9th of the same month. He was seated at Aldington-park, in Kent; and having married Eleanor, daughter of Andrew, lord Windsor, widow of Ralph, lord Scroop, of Upsal, had issue two sons,

1. Edward Nevill.
2. Henry Nevill, of Billingbeer, in Berks, from whom the Nevills of that county descended.

As also three daughters,

1. Catharine, wedded to Clement Throgmorton, of Hasely, in the county of Warwick, Esq;

2. Frances, wife of Sir Edward Waldegrave, of Borley, in Essex, knight, ancestor, by her, to the earl of Waldegrave.

3. Elizabeth, married to Thomas Heynes, of Yorkshire, esquire.

EDWARD NEVILL, eldest son and heir of the said Sir Edward, succeeded, in 29 Elizabeth, to the barony and honour of Bergavenny, and married two wives; first Catharine, daughter of Sir John Brown, knight, by whom he had issue four sons,

1. Edward Nevill.
2. Francis Nevill, who married Mary, daughter of Thomas Lukenor, esquire, and had issue Edward Nevill, who by his wife, Frances, daughter of Sir Francis Palmer, knight, had three daughters, heiresses, all married. First Anne, to Sir Richard Southwell; second Francis, to Charles Longueville, lord Gray; and the youngest to a gentleman of the name of Pooley.
3. George Nevill.
4. Sir Henry Nevill, seated at Bedminster, who by Ellen, daughter of Edward Poole, esquire, had four sons.

But by the second wife Grisfold, daughter of Thomas Hughes, of Uxbridge, in the county of Middlesex, esquire, he had no issue; and she surviving him, was afterwards married to Francis Clifford, earl of Cumberland.

The inquisition taken after his decease at Maidstone, in Kent, July 7, in 31 Elizabeth, recites, that he died on the 10th of February before; and that Edward Nevill, his son and heir, was 38 years of age, and was found to be the representative of his grandfather, Edward Nevill, brother and heir to George Nevill, lord Abergavenny, and that he died possessed of the manor and rectory of Birling, the manors of Ryashe, Ealding, alias Yalding, and Luddisdon, in the county of Kent; the manor of Kotherfield, forest of Waterdown, with the appurtenances, barony of Lewys, borough of Lewys, and the manor of Ditchling, in the county of Sussex.

(First Lord.) EDWARD NEVILL, the eldest son, in the first year of king James I. had the title of lord Bergavenny confirmed to him by the house of peers; and, the year after, claimed the title of earl of Westmorland, as heir-male; which case is recited in Coke's seventh Report, where his claim is set forth at large; but was determined against him. And having married Rachel, daughter of John Lennard, of Knoll, in Kent, esquire, ancestor to the earl of Sussex, of that name, who had sepulture at Birling, the 15th of October, in 1616, had issue six sons:

1. Sir Henry Nevill, knight, who succeeded him.
2. Edward Nevill, who died unmarried, in 1610.
3. Christopher Nevill, who took to wife Mary, one of the daughters and coheirs of Thomas Darcy, of Tolston-Darcy, in the county of Essex, esquire, from whom the present lord Abergavenny is descended.

4. John Nevill,
5. Thomas Nevill, } who died young.
6. Charles Nevill, }

Also five daughters,

4 P

1. Elizabeth,

1. Elizabeth, the wife of Sir John Grey, knt. eldest son to Henry, lord Grey, of Groby, and afterwards of Sir John Bingley, knt.

2. Mary, wife of Sir George Goring, of Denby, in the county of Suffex, knt. afterwards lord Goring, and earl of Norwich.

3. Catharine, wife of Sir Stephen Lessieur, of Chefwike, in the county of Middlesex, knt.

4. Frances, } who died young.

5. Margaret, }

This Edward, lord Abergavenny, departing this life December 1, A. D. 1622, 20 James I. had sepulture with his ancestors at Birling, the 3d of the same month.

To whom succeeded,

(Second Lord.) HENRY NEVILL, his son and heir, who first married Mary, daughter of Thomas Sackville, earl of Dorset, (lord treasurer of England) by whom he had issue Sir Thomas Nevill, knight of the Bath, who married Frances, daughter to Henry, lord Mordaunt, and died in his father's life-time, A. D. 1628, and, on the 7th of May that year, was buried at Birling, leaving issue Henry, who died in his infancy, A. D. 1639; Charles, who died, A. D. 1637, by a fall from his horse; Margaret, wife of Thomas Brooke, of Madeley, in the county of Salop, esquire; Cicely, wife of Fitz-William Coningsby, of Hampton Court, in the county of Hereford, esquire, ancestor of the present countess of Coningsby; Anne, abbess of Pontoise, in France; Elizabeth and Mary, who died unmarried.

To his second wife he wedded Catharine, daughter to Edward, lord Vaux, of Harrowden, and had issue by her two sons,

1. John Nevill, } successively barons Aber-
2. George Nevill, } gavenney.

Also three daughters,

1. Catharine, married first to Sir Robert Howard, knight, a younger son to Theophilus, earl of Suffolk, afterwards to Robert Berry, of Ludlow, in the county of Salop, esquire.

2. Frances, who died unmarried.

3. Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Stonor, in the county of Oxford, esquire.

This Henry, lord Abergavenny, was buried at Birling, the 24th of December, A. D. 1641; and his second wife was buried by him the 10th of July, A. D. 1649.

(Third Lord.) JOHN NEVILL succeeding Henry his father in this honour, took to wife Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of John Chamberlaine, of Sherburne-castle, in the county of Oxford, Esq; and died December 12, A. D. 1660, without issue.

He was succeeded by his brother,

(Fourth Lord.) GEORGE NEVILL, who married Mary, daughter of Thomas, son and heir of Henry Giffard, of Dunton Walet in Essex, doctor of physick; and had issue by her one son, George, and one daughter, Bridget, married to Sir John Shelly, baronet. And departing this life June 2, A. D. 1666, was buried on the 14th of the same month at Birling, and was succeeded by his only son, (Fifth Lord.) GEORGE NEVILL, born April 21, A. D. 1666; and having married Honora, daughter to John, lord Bellasis, of Worlaby, departed this life without issue, on March 26, A. D. 1693-4, and was buried in the church of St. Giles in the Fields, London, the 1st of April following.

Whereupon the title of lord Abergavenny descended, and came to the heirs-male of

Sir CHRISTOPHER NEVILL, second surviving son of Edward, lord Abergavenny, and Rachel his wife, daughter of John Lennard, esquire. Which Sir Christopher, being seated at Newton, St. Low, in the county of Somerset, was made one of the knights of the Bath at the coronation of king Charles I. and having married Mary, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Darcy, of Tolston Darcy, in the county of Essex, esquire, had sepulture with his ancestors at Birling, on the 7th of June, 1649, having issue by her a daughter, Anne, married to John, lord Lucas, of St. John's, Colchester; and a son,

RICHARD NEVILL, seated at Newtown St. Low, in Somersetshire; who, by his wife Sophia, left issue

GEORGE NEVILL, his son and heir, who was seated at Sheffield, in the county of Suffex; and having wedded Mary, daughter of Sir Bulstrode Whitlock, knight, left issue two sons,

1. George Nevill, }
2. Edward Nevill, } of whom directly.

The eldest brother,

(Sixth Lord.) GEORGE NEVILL, succeeded to the barony of Abergavenny, March 26, 1694-5, on the death of George, lord Abergavenny, before-mentioned. He married Anne, daughter of Nehemiah Walker, of the county of Middlesex, esquire, by whom he had issue three sons and two daughters, viz.

1. Henry Nevill, born August 16, 1701, who deceased young.

2. George Nevill, born May 16, 1702, }

3. Edward Nevill, } successively lords.

The daughters were,

1. Jane, born March 8, 1703, married to Abel Walter, of Busbridge, in the county of Surry, esquire.

2. Anne, who died unmarried, in the twenty-second year of her age, in March, 1736-7.

He departed this life in the sixty-third year of his age, on the 11th of March, 1720-1, and was succeeded by his eldest surviving son,

(Seventh Lord.) GEORGE NEVILL, who married Elizabeth, daughter to Edward Thornicroft, of the city of Westminster, esquire, (who married, secondly, John, lord Delawarr, and died in 1748) and dying without issue on the 15th of November, 1723, was succeeded by his brother,

(Eighth Lord.) EDWARD NEVILL, who married Catharina, daughter to lieutenant-general Tatton; and dying the 9th of October, 1724, in the nineteenth year of his age, and without issue, was succeeded by,

(Ninth Lord.) WILLIAM NEVILL, the late lord, son and heir of Edward Nevill, brother to George, lord Abergavenny, who died in March 1720-1, as aforesaid.

Which Edward Nevill was commander of several men of war, and, being commodore of a squadron, died in Virginia, in the Lincoln, September 12, 1701, in the 37th year of his age, leaving issue, by Hannah his wife, daughter of Mr. Jervois Thorpe, this William Nevill, and a daughter, Mary, married to Charles Chamberlain, of Smallfield-place, in the county of Surry, esquire.

Which

Which William, lord Abergavenny, on the tenth of February, A. D. 1738-9, was constituted master of the jewel-office. His lordship, in May, A. D. 1725, was married to Catharina, lady Abergavenny, widow of Edward, the late lord; and by her (who died on the fourth of December, A. D. 1729) had issue, now living, a son named George, born June 24, A. D. 1727, the late king being his godfather, and a daughter, Catharina, born June 20, A. D. 1728.

His lordship married secondly, on the twentieth of May, A. D. 1732, Rebecca, daughter of Thomas, earl of Pembroke, and by her, who died A. D. 1758, he left issue three daughters.

1. Harriot, born Nov. 17, A. D. 1734, died unmarried, A. D. 1762.

2. Mary, born June 13, A. D. 1736, died unmarried, A. D. 1758.

3. Sophia, born March 14, A. D. 1738, died unmarried, A. D. 1759.

And one son,

William, born in October, 1741.

His lordship died at the Bath, September 21, A. D. 1744, and was buried at East-Grinstead, in Sussex, October the second following; to whom succeeded in honour and estate George, his only son by his first lady.

(Tenth Lord.) GEORGE NEVILL, married February 5, A. D. 1753, Henrietta, daughter of Thomas Pelham, of Stanmer, in Sussex, esquire, and sister to Thomas Pelham, esquire, knight of the shire for the county of Sussex in the present parliament; and has issue one daughter, Henrietta, born May 24, A. D. 1756.

And two sons,

1. Henry Nevill, born February 22, A. D. 1755.

2. George Henry Nevill, born September 6, A. D. 1760.

(TITLES.) The right honourable George Nevill, lord Abergavenny.

(CREATION.) By tenure of the castle of Abergavenny, (Jure Uxoris) 27 Henry VI. A. D. 1448; and writ and summons to parliament, 5 Sept. A. D. 1450, 29 Henry VI. By descent anciently, 23 July, A. D. 1392, 16 Richard II. Originally, 23 June, A. D. 1295, 23 Edward I.

(ARMS.) * Ruby, on a saltire, pearl, a rose of the first barbed and seeded, proper.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet topaz, a bull's head, pearl, pied, diamond, armed of the first, and charged on the neck with a rose ruby.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two bulls, pearl, pied, diamond, armed, unguled, collared, and chained, topaz.

(MOTTO.) Ne Vile Velis.

(CHIEF SEATS.) At the castle of Abergavenny, in the county of Monmouth; at Eridge Park; and at Kidbrook, both in the county of Sussex, and near East-Grinstead.

* If the arms of this noble lord were enlarged to the utmost extent, according to the rules of heraldry, the following quarterings would take place.

1 Nevill.	28 Algar.	55 Gresham.	82 Grandeheof.
2 Nevill.	29 Lopus.	56 Thwaites.	83 Beauchamp.
3 Bulmer.	30 Hamlyne Plantagenet.	57 Lound.	84 Zouch.
4 Middleham.	31 Warren.	58 Savile.	85 Longespee.
5 Eudo.	32 Marshall.	59 Thornhill.	86 Eureux.
6 Glanville.	33 Marshall.	60 Rishworth.	87 Allan.
7 Glanville.	34 Clare.	61 Golcar.	88 Morville.
8 Clavering.	35 Clare.	62 Tankerley.	89 Mautbey.
9 Nigel.	36 Macmurrough.	63 Petto.	90 Lovaine.
10 Lezours.	37 Gufford.	64 Eland.	91 Beauchamp.
11 Cheney.	38 Le Despencer.	65 Ludham.	92 Patishall.
12 Beauchamp.	39 Burghersh.	66 Boston.	93 Grandison.
13 Abbot.	40 Verdon.	67 Beaufort.	94 Tregon.
14 Toney.	41 Lucy.	68 Beauchamp.	95 Cantelupe.
15 Waltheof.	42 Lucy.	69 Berkeley.	96 Ewyas.
16 Fitz-Geoffrey.	43 Clare.	70 Lisle.	97 Barry.
17 Bigot.	44 Clare.	71 Rypard.	98 Peche.
18 Grentemesnil.	45 Lucy.	72 Tyes.	99 Leche.
19 Manduit.	46 Bathurst.	73 Fitzgerald.	100 Somerton.
20 Newburgh.	47 Bassett.	74 Courcy.	101 Gerbridge.
21 Guy.	48 Quincy.	75 Courcy.	102 Sotherton.
22 Fitz-Alan.	49 Bellomont.	76 Meschines.	103 Walcot.
23 Clun.	50 Waer.	77 Roet.	104 Broome.
24 St. Hilliary.	51 Fitz-Osborne.	78 Holland.	105 Péur.
25 Albany.	52 Consul.	79 Woodstock.	106 Herdeston.
26 Bohun.	53 Fitz-Hamon.	80 Wake.	107 Penrell.
27 Meschines.	54 Fenne.	81 Stateville.	108 Nevill.

TOUCHET, Baron AUDLEY.

THERE is no manner of doubt but that this noble family came into England, at or about the time of the Conquest, for the name is inserted in the Roll of Battle-abbey, and the Chro- nicles of Normandy. The first however we meet with from whom we can lineally deduce the pre- sent lord Audley, is

ORMUS TOUCHET, who had issue

MATTHEW TOUCHET, and HUGH TOUCHET. Which

MATTHEW TOUCHET had issue

SIMON TOUCHET, of Bug Lauton, in Cheshire, who by his wife Alice de Colville, widow of Phi- lip Draicot, had issue

THOMAS TOUCHET *, who in 27 Edward I. had a charter for free warren in Tattenhale and Lauton (alias Bog-Lauton) in Cheshire, and had issue,

SIR ROBERT TOUCHET, knight, who in 8 Ed- ward II. doing his homage, had livery of his lands. And in 13 Edward II. was one of those barons, who, with the earls of Lancaster and Hereford, assembled together at Sherborn in El- medone, and swore to stand by each other, till they had amended the state of the realm. But, notwithstanding the said oath, this Robert Touchet, and many of the rest, submitted them- selves to the king. By his wife Elizabeth, daugh- ter and heir of Sir John Kime, he had an only son and heir,

SIR THOMAS TOUCHET, who gave lands in Wombruge, in the county of Salop, to the ca- nons of that place; and died in 23 Edward III. leaving issue John, his son and heir, twenty-two years of age. Which

SIR JOHN TOUCHET, in 20 Edward III. being then a knight, was in the wars of France, and at the relief of Aguillon. And in 25 Edward III. doing his homage, had livery of his lands in the county of Salop. In 33 Edward III. he was at the siege of Rheims, in Champagne, and after- wards was a principal commander in the wars of France, under John Hastings, earl of Pembroke, when in 43 Edward III. they took several towns in Anjou. But the year after, embarking with the said earl of Southampton, in order to invade France by Poictou, and coming before Rochel the twenty-second of June, to land there, and meet- ing with the Spanish fleet, there ensued a despe- rate engagement, wherein this Sir John Touchet was slain, and the earl taken prisoner, the Spani- ards being more numerous, and their ships much larger than the English. He had to wife Jane, eldest daughter of James, lord Audley, of He- leigh, and sister and coheir of Nicholas, lord Audley, and by her had a son,

JOHN TOUCHET, whose son, (First Lord.) JOHN TOUCHET, in 15 Richard III. on the inquisition taken after the death of Ni- cholas, lord Audley, his great uncle, was found to be one of his next heirs, at that time twenty years of age, viz. son of John Touchet, son of Jane, eldest sister to the said Nicholas. There- upon bearing the title of lord Audley, he was or- dered, in 4 Henry IV. (by reason of Owen Glen- dour's rebellion) to put a garrison into Llanvde- very in Wales; and the year after, was associ- ated with Richard Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, in defence of the castle, town, and lordship of Brehnoe, in Wales, for one whole year, having one hundred men at arms, and three hundred archers on horseback, assigned to them for that service. He was summoned to parliament, as baron Audley, from August 25, 1404, to 1407. He died on the nineteenth of December, 1409, seized of the manor of Saperton, and a fourth part of that of Beggeworth, in the county of Gloucester, as also of divers other manors and

* Contemporary with him was Hugh de Touchet, a bene- factor to the abbey of Leicester, by giving thereto his lands in Esswell, which king Henry II. confirmed. He was suc- ceeded by William Touchet, who in 25 Edward I. was in that expedition made into Galcoigne; and the year following, in that into Scotland. Also in 26 Edward I. obtained a charter for free warren in all his demesne lands at Burroby Cotes, and Wylewyby, in the county of Lincoln. And in 28 Edward I. at Thorp-Watervil, in the county of North- ampton. Oxindon, in the county of Gloucester; Tawell and Herpeswell, in the county of Lincoln. Also in 29 Ed- ward I. at Levenhales, in the county of Hereford; Fine- more and Shaldefwell, in the county of Oxford, and Preston, in the county of Bucks.

In 29 Edward I. he was one of the barons who subscribed (being wrote William Touchet, lord of Levenhales) that letter to pope Boniface, in answer to his claiming the sove- reignty of Scotland. Wherein they asserted, that the king ought not to send any prelates, &c. to his holiness, in any matters touching his temporalities, nor to answer in judgment in any case as should bring his rights into doubt, either in England or Scotland, which they were bound by oath to de- fend, and which, they tell the pope, they will maintain with all power, and (by God's help) defend the liberties, and customs, &c. of their forefathers.

In 31 Edward I. he was again in the wars of Scotland. So likewise in 34 Edward I. And had summons to parlia- ment, among the barons of this realm, from 28 Edward I. until 34 Edward I. inclusive.

To whom succeeded another William Touchet, who in 4 Edward II. received command to serve in the wars of Scot- land; as likewise in the eighth of the same reign. Also in 12 Edward II. was again in the wars of Scotland: but three years after, on the insurrection of Thomas, earl of Lancaster, and his defeat at Burrough-Brigg, being there taken with him, he suffered death at Pomfret.

lands in the marches of Wales, and Staffordshire, the counties of Salop, Rutland, Derby, Devon, Somerset, and Wiltshire, leaving, by Isabel his wife, James, his son and heir, ten years of age.

(Second Lord.) JAMES TOUCHET, in 7 Henry V. was in the wars of France, and in 8 Henry V. making proof of his age, had livery of his lands. Whereupon being summoned to parliament the same year as lord Audley, he attended the king in that expedition then made into France, and was with him at the siege of Molyn on the Seine. After which he returned with the king and his queen to England; and on their coronation, the twenty-fourth of February, was lord almoner, in the room of the earl of Cambridge, then absent. In 9 Henry V. he was again in the wars of France, and at the siege of Meaux; also the year after, on the decease of the king of France, he was one of the lords that attended on the royal obsequies from Boys de Vincennes to Paris, and from thence to Calais and Dover, to the interment at Westminster.

In 4 Henry VI. he was one of the lords assembled in parliament at Leicester, who made oath to acquit themselves truly, justly, and indifferently, in all manner of matters, or quarrels, for the sure keeping of the king's peace, and redressing all proceedings contrary thereto.

In 8 Henry VI. he had the chief command of some forces in the wars with France, taking ship with the king at Dover, the twenty-seventh of April; and continuing there the year following, Thomas, earl of Perth, and Edmund, earl of Mortaign, were sent to aid him, and Walter lord Fitz-Walter.

In 35 Henry VI. the king fearing an insurrection, he was commissioned, on any emergency, to summon the sheriff and posse of the county of Hereford, to suppress any designs formed by his enemies. And continuing his loyalty to the said king, he was sent, in 37 Henry VI. to encounter Richard Nevill, earl of Salisbury, who had assembled forces in behalf of the duke of York, of whose proceedings, Hall and Hollinshed, in their Chronicles, give this account: the lord Audley, according to his commission, having raised about ten thousand men, approached near to the earl, in a plain called Blore Heath, within a mile of Drayton, in Shropshire, in order to prevent his march to London. Whereupon the earl, finding it impossible to avoid an engagement, encouraged his men, and encamped on the side of a deep brook, the night before the day of St. Thecle, when the battle was fought. The lord Audley, with the vanguard of his army, passed the water; but the earl and his men, being desperate, behaved with such valour, that after a sharp encounter, the lord Audley, with most of his men were slain, before the rest of the forces could come to his assistance.

In consideration, therefore, of the many and faithful services by him performed whilst he lived (as is expressed in the patent) John, his son and heir, in 38 Henry VI. had a special livery of all his castles, lordships, and lands, without proof of his age. The said James, lord Audley, had summons to parliament among the barons, till the time of his death; and had two wives, Margaret, daughter of William, lord Ross, of Hamlake; by whom he had issue,

John Touchet, his son and heir, beforementioned.

By Eleanor, his second wife, natural daughter of Thomas Holland, earl of Kent, by Constance, daughter of Edmund de Langley, duke of York, he had issue three sons,

1. Sir Humphry Touchet, slain at Tewksbury, who took the name of Audley, from whom the Audleys of Norfolk are descended.

2. Edward Touchet, who also took the name of Audley, was elected bishop of Rochester in 1480, translated to Hereford in 1493, and to Salisbury in 1502.

3. Thomas Touchet (Audley) died unmarried. Also three daughters,

1. Margaret, wife of Henry Gray, lord Powis, son of Henry, earl of Tankerville.

2. Elizabeth, wife of Edward Brooke, lord Cobham.

3. Constance, wife of Sir Robert Whitney, knight.

(Third Lord.) JOHN TOUCHET, his son and heir, having livery of his lands, as before related, went the same year with the duke of Somerset, in order to take possession of Calais; but, on their landing with several men of arms, were refused admittance, and the duke, with much difficulty, escaped to the castle of Guisnes; but the lord Audley was taken, and carried into Calais; whither came the duke of York, (soon after king of England, by the name of Edward IV.) who engaged lord Audley in his interests.

After this, he found such esteem from king Edward IV. in the first year of his reign, that, in consideration of his laudable services before that time done (as the preamble of the patent imports) he obtained a grant of the stewardship of all the king's manors and lands lying in the county of Dorset; as also of the office of warden of his forests, chaces, and parks in that shire; likewise of the castle of Wardour, and parks thereunto belonging, in the county of Wilts. In the next year, this lord, with the earl of Kent, and others, landed in Brittany; with ten thousand men, where they took the town of Conquest, with the Isle of Rhee.

In 4 Edward IV. he was joined in commission with John Tiptoft, earl of Worcester, to treat with the ambassadors of Francis, duke of Brittany, for a truce: and in 7 Edward IV. in consideration of his great labour and expences, in the king's service, obtained another grant of the manors of Schire, and Vachery, in the county of Surry, then in the crown, by the forfeiture of James, earl of Wiltshire.

In 10 Edward IV. he was commissioned to muster all men fitting to bear arms, in the county of Dorset, to oppose George, duke of Clarence, and his adherents.

In 11 Edward IV. being present in parliament, he was one of those lords who swore fealty to prince Edward, the king's eldest son; and in consideration of his attendance on the king's person, being of his council, he obtained a pension of one hundred pounds per annum, during life.

In 14 Edward IV. he was retained to serve the king in Normandy, and other parts of France. Also the year after, on the twelfth of June, he and Galliard Dureford, lord of Duras, were constituted commanders of the army then sent into Brittany; tanny; and, on the 20th of the same month, one of the ambassadors to treat with the duke of Brittany, or his deputies, about a peace.

On the accession of Richard III. he attended among the barons at his coronation; and, in the second year of his reign, was constituted lord treasurer of England, which office he held till 1 Henry VII. and died (as Stow writes) on September 26, 1491, 6 Henry VII. but as Hollinshed, on December 26, leaving issue, by Anne, his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Itchingham, James, his son and heir, and three daughters.

1. Anne, married to Sir John Wingfield, of Letheringham, in Suffolk, knight, and by her, father to Sir Anthony Wingfield, knight of the Garter, vice-chamberlain to king Henry VIII.

2. Elizabeth, married first to William Filloll, and secondly to Sir Roger Ludlow, knight.

3. Eleanor, married to Sir Roger Lewknor, knight. (Fourth Lord.) JAMES TOUCHET, had been made knight of the Bath, in 15 Edward IV. at the creation of Edward prince of Wales: after which, in 8 Henry VII. he attended that king at the siege of Boloign; and had summons to parliament to 12 Henry VII. but in that year, taking discontent at a subsidy then granted in parliament, he joined with the Cornishmen in their insurrection, and being taken prisoner in the battle of Blackheath, he was drawn from Newgate to Tower-hill, in his own coat of arms, painted on paper, but reversed and torn, and there beheaded, June 28, whereupon he had burial in the Black-friars, near Ludgate.

He married first Joan*, daughter of Fulke Bouchier, lord Fitz-Wanne, and by her had two sons,

1. John Touchet, his successor.
2. Thomas Touchet.

By his second wife Margaret, daughter of Sir Richard Dayrel, of Lillingston Dayrel, Bucks, esquire, by Margaret his wife, daughter of Edmund Beaufort, duke of Somerset, and widow of Edward, earl of Stafford, he had issue a son, James Touchet, whose sole daughter and heir married Robert Palmer, esquire.

(Fifth Lord.) JOHN TOUCHET, (son to the fourth lord by his first wife Joan) in 4 Hen. VIII. was restored to the title of lord Audley; and in 5 Hen. VIII. attended the king at the taking of Therouenne. In 22 Hen. VIII. being one of the lords then sitting in parliament, he subscribed that memorable letter to pope Clement VII. and in 25 Henry VIII. had restitution of his father's lands.

By Mary his wife, daughter of John Griffin, of Braybroke, in the county of Northampton, Esq; ancestor to the lord Griffin, he had issue,

1. George Touchet, his successor.
2. Edward Touchet.
3. Richard Touchet, whose grandson Richard was living in the reign of James I.

(Sixth Lord.) GEORGE TOUCHET, lord Audley, died in the second year of queen Elizabeth; and having married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Bryan Tuke, knight, treasurer of the chamber to king Henry VIII. left issue,

1. Henry Touchet, his heir.

2. John Touchet, who married Mary, daughter of John Carew, of Halcomb. (Seventh Lord.) HENRY TOUCHET, lord Audley, in 28 Elizabeth, accompanied Robert, earl of Leicester, into the Netherlands, and commanded one hundred and fifty men at the fight before Zutphen, September 22, 1586, in which he behaved himself so valiantly, that, on the 7th of October following, he was made a knight banneret. And having married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Snede, of Bradwell, in the county of Stafford, knight, left issue two sons and two daughters.

1. George Touchet, his successor.

2. James Touchet, who died without issue.

The daughters were,

1. Anne, married to Thomas Brooke, of Norton, in the county of Chester, esquire.

2. Elizabeth, married to John Bradshaw, of Haigh, in the county-palatine of Lancaster; and secondly, to George Leigh, of High-Leigh, esquires.

He died 1595, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

(Eighth Lord.) GEORGE TOUCHET, lord Audley, who was some time governor of Utrecht, in the Netherlands; and sore wounded at the battle of Kinsale, in Ireland, December 24, 1601: and residing in Ireland, he was, for his great services, created earl of Castlehaven, and baron Orier, in that kingdom, by letters patent, bearing date September 6, 1617, 14 James I. He took to wife, first Lucy, daughter of Sir James Mervin, of Funtell, in the county of Wilts, knight; secondly, Anne, daughter of Edward Noel, viscount Campden. By the former lady he had issue two sons,

1. Mervin Touchet, knighted at Whitehall, 10 James I.

2. Ferdinando Touchet, made knight of the Bath, at the creation of Henry, prince of Wales, the same year, who married the widow of Sir John Rodney, of Pilton, in the county of Somerset, knight.

Also five daughters,

1. Anne, married to Edward Blount, of Harleston, in the county of Derby, esquire.

2. Elizabeth, first married to Sir John Stawel, of Stawel, in Somersetshire, knight of the Bath; afterwards to Sir Thomas Griffin, of Digley, in the county of Northampton, knight, from whom the late lord Griffin descended.

3. Mary, married to Sir Thomas Thynne, of Long-Leete, in the county of Wilts.

4. Christian, married to Sir Henry Mervin, of Petersfield, in the county of Southampton, knight, one of the admirals of the fleet.

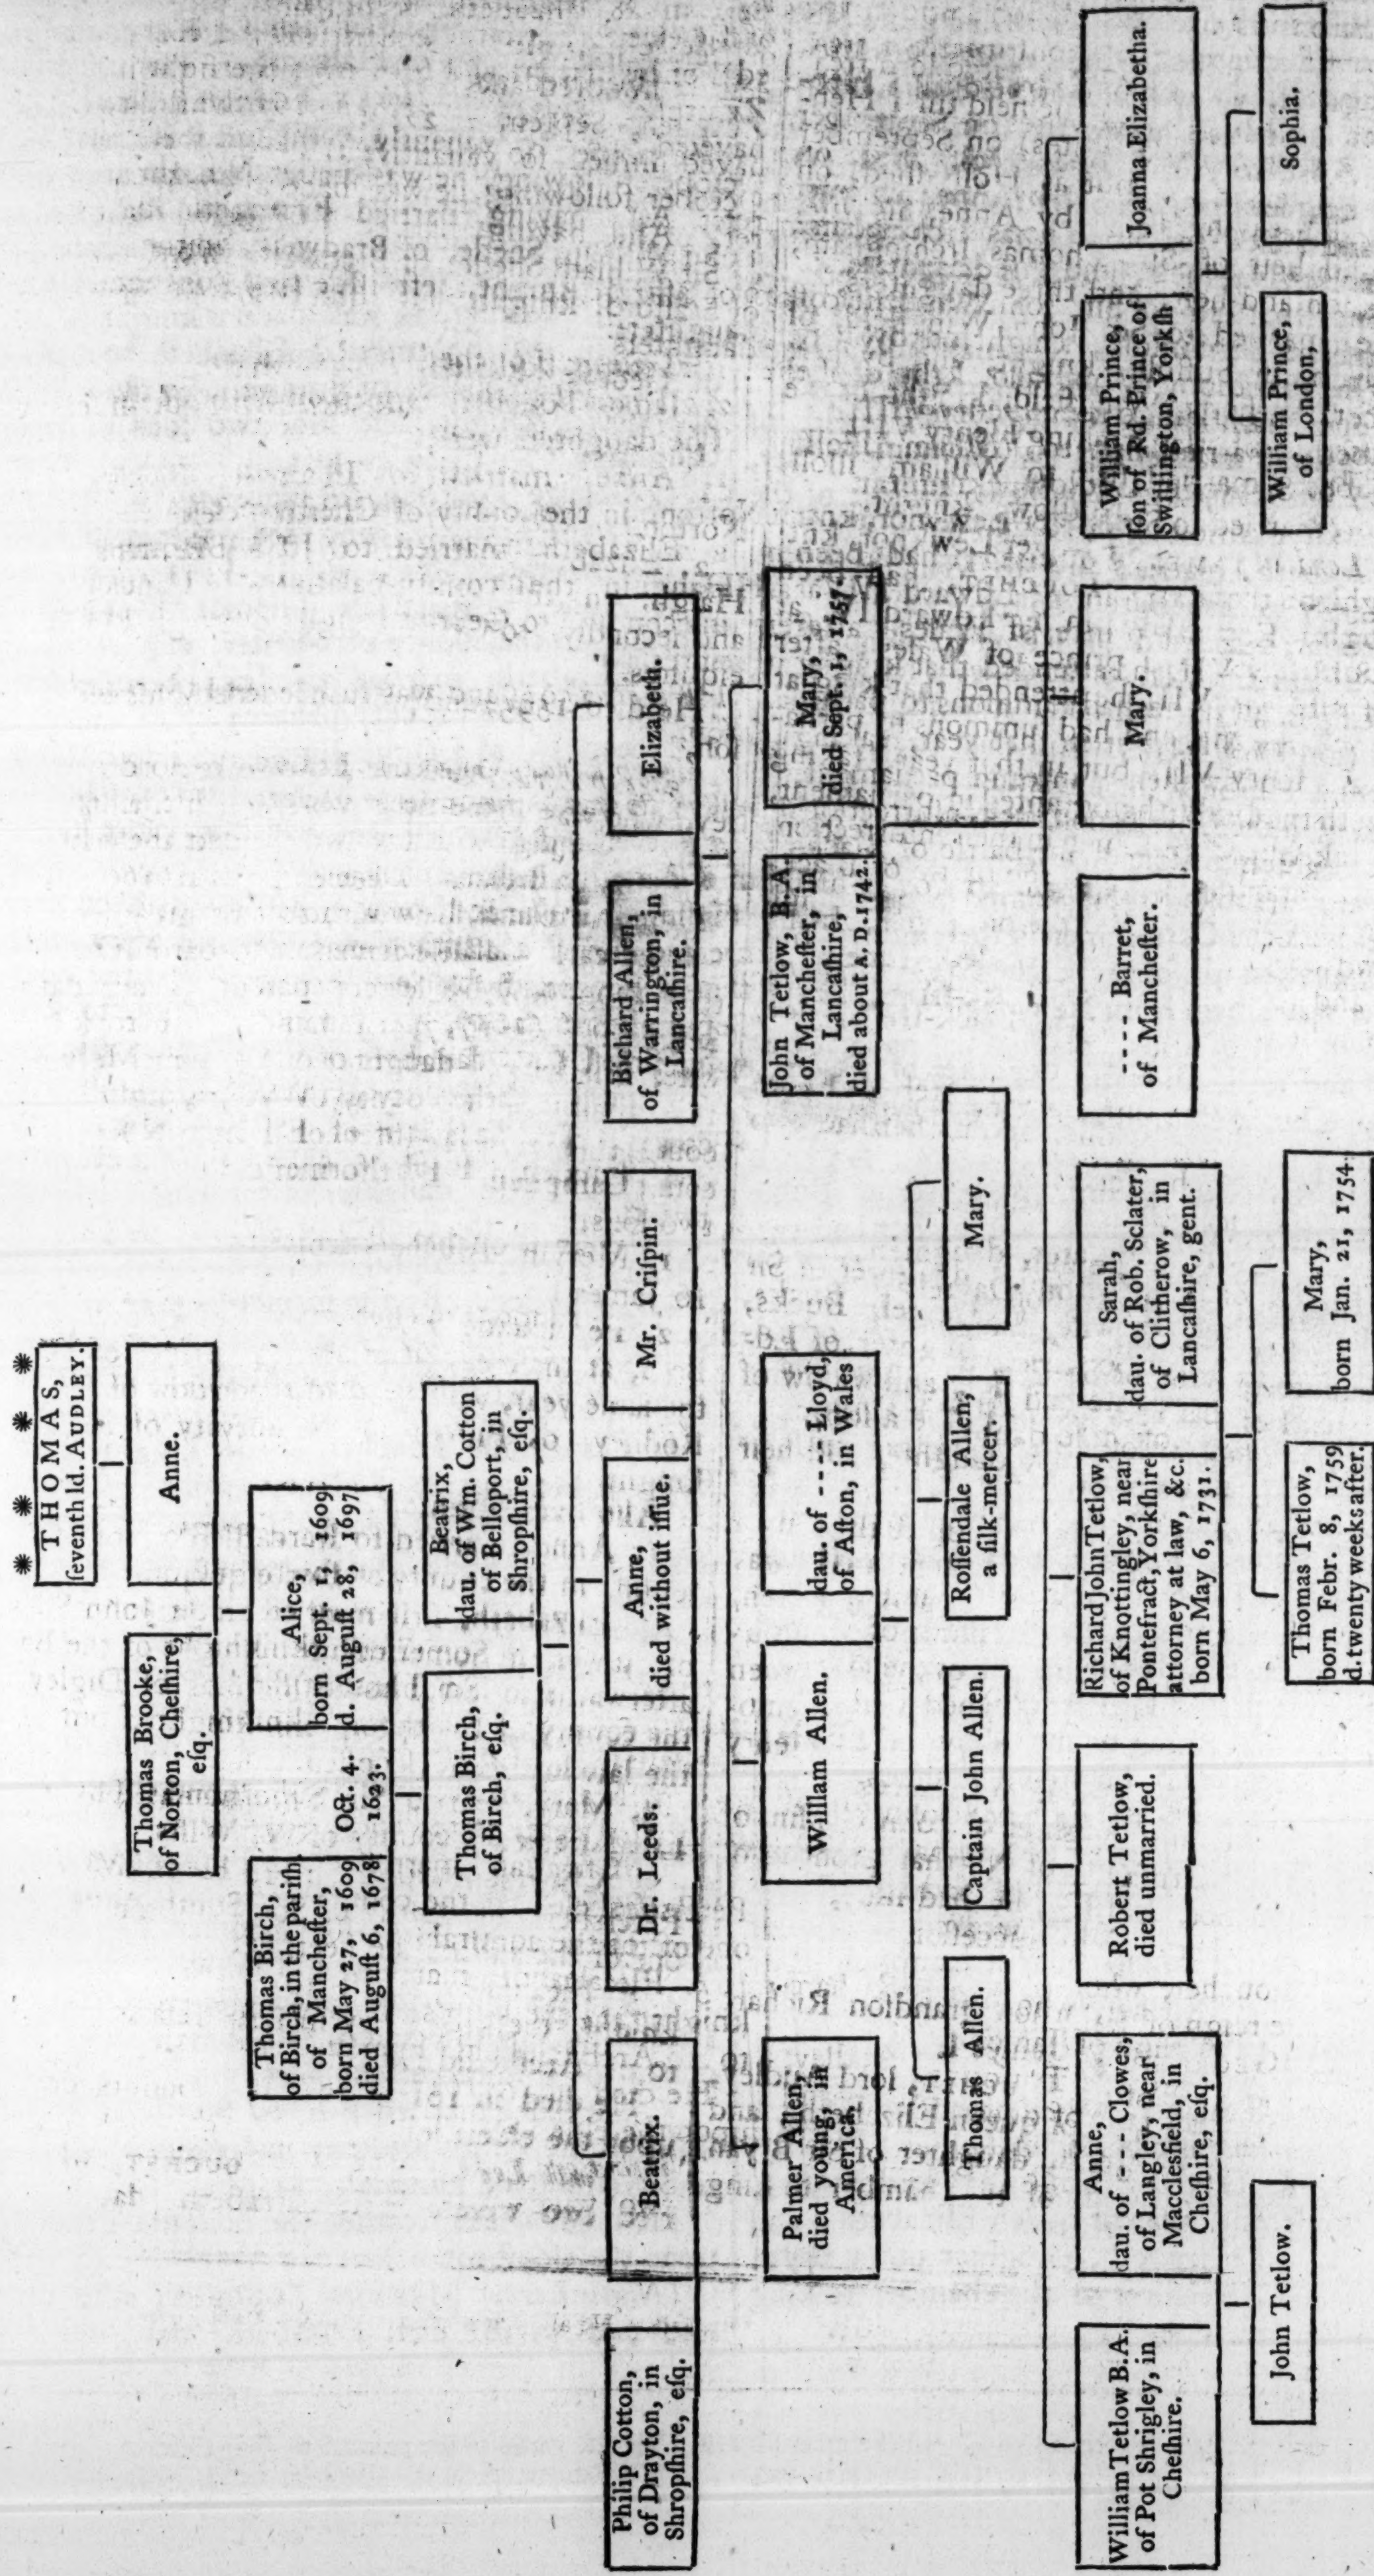

5. Eleanor, married first to Sir John Davis, knight, the king's attorney in Ireland; and next to Sir Archibald Douglass, knight.

He died in 1617, when the honours devolved upon the eldest son,

(Ninth Lord.) MERVIN TOUCHET, who married two wives, first, Elizabeth, daughter and

* Collins calls this lady his second wife, and the other his first. He also varies in the number of their children. But the pedigrees which we have been able to consult, concur in warranting Mr. Edmondson in the alteration he has made, and which we have for that reason followed.

The Descendants of THOMAS, seventh Lord AUDLEY, through his eldest Daughter, ANNE.

1870

1871

1872

1873

1874

1875

1876

1877

1878

1879

1880

1881

1882

1883

1884

1885

1886

1887

1888

1889

1890

1891

1892

1893

1894

coheir to Benedict Barnham, alderman of London; and secondly, Anne, daughter to Ferdinando, earl of Darby, widow of Grey Bridges, lord Chandos: but being accused of certain high crimes, and, by virtue of a commission of oyer and terminer, thereupon arraigned, had sentence of death passed upon him, and lost his head on Tower-hill, May 14, 1631, 7 Charles I. leaving issue by Elizabeth, his first wife, three sons and three daughters.

1. Lucy, married first to John Anketell, of Compton, in Wiltshire; secondly to Gerald Fitz-Maurice, brother to the earl of Kerry, in Ireland.

2. Dorothy, married to Edmund Butler, viscount Mountgarret.

3. Frances, married Richard Butler, brother to James, duke of Ormond.

The sons were,

1. James Touchet, heir to his father.

2. George Touchet, a Benedictine monk at Douay.

3. Mervin Touchet, successor to his brother.

The eldest son,

(Tenth Lord.) JAMES TOUCHET, was by letters patent, dated the 3d of June, 1634, restored to the title and dignity of lord Audley, and earl of Castlehaven.

In the time of the civil wars, he was a commander in Ireland, under the duke of Ormond; and in 1649 was a general of the Irish forces, and acted against Cromwell's army, till the reduction of that kingdom, when he retired to Paris. On the restoration he returned to England, and obtained an act of parliament, in 1678, for restoring the titles, forfeited by his father, to himself, and the heirs male of his body, and, in default thereof, to Mervin his brother, and, for want of issue by him, to his sisters and their heirs.

He married Elizabeth, daughter to Grey Bridges, lord Chandos; but dying without issue at Kilcash, in Ireland, October 11, 1684.

(Eleventh Lord.) MERVIN TOUCHET, his brother, succeeded him; and marrying Mary, youngest daughter to John Talbot, the tenth earl of Shrewsbury, and widow of Charles Arundel, Esq; by her had two sons and three daughters.

1. Eleanor, married to Sir Henry Wingfield, of Easton, in Suffolk, baronet.

2. Mary, } who died unmarried.
3. Anne, }

The sons were,

1. James Touchet.

2. John Touchet, who married Elizabeth, second daughter of Thomas Saville, earl of Sussex, by whom he had a daughter Mary, who was the first wife of Cadwallader, lord Blaney.

(Twelfth Lord.) JAMES TOUCHET succeeded upon the demise of his father, November 2, 1686, to the honours, &c. He married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir to ——— Bard, of Weston, esquire, by Anne, his wife, daughter to Charles Villers, earl of Anglesey, and widow of Thomas Ratchiff, earl of Sussex, and by her, who died in June, 1723, had, (Thirteenth Lord.) JAMES TOUCHET, his only child, who on August 12, 1700, succeeded him, and enjoyed the honour.

This noble lord, in 1722, taking to wife Elizabeth, only daughter to Henry, lord Arundel of Wardour, by her, who died in July, 1743, had several children; particularly a son, John Touchet, born April 1, 1723; and a daughter, Mary, married November 10, 1749, to Philip Thicknesse, esquire.

His lordship dying at Paris in November, 1749, was succeeded by his son, (Fourteenth Lord.) JOHN TOUCHET, now lord Audley, and earl of Castlehaven.

(TITLES.) The right honourable John Touchet, baron Audley.

(CREATIONS.) Baron Audley, of Heleigh-castle, in the county of Stafford, by summons, October 20, A. D. 1403, 4 Henry IV. but originally January 26, A. D. 1296, 24 Edward I.

(ARMS.) Quarterly, 1st and 4th, ermine, a chevron, ruby, for Touchet; 2d and 3d, ruby, a fret, topaz, for Audley.

(CREST.) In a ducal coronet, gold, a swan rising, pearl, ducally gorged, topaz.

(SUPPORTERS.) Two wyverns with wings expanded, diamond.

(MOTTO.) Je le tiens.

(CHIEF SEAT.) Heleigh-castle, Staffordshire.

BARRET-LENNARD, Baron DACRE.

THE ancient barony of Gillelland was originally in the family of Vaux, whereof three brothers settled in England on the Norman conquest, wherein they assisted, viz. Hubert, Ranulph, and Robert. Of these,

Hubert had the whole barony of Gillelland, a tract very large in extent, and of great command, granted to him by Ranulph de Meschynes, (who was his kinsman) on whom king William the Conqueror bestowed the whole county of Cumberland; and was succeeded therein by

Robert, his son and heir, who obtained from king Henry II. divers privileges throughout all these his lordships in Cumberland, which he enjoyed as heir to Hubert his father, viz. Soc, Sac, Tol, Theam, and Infangtheof, and freed him from the payment of the common tax called Neutgeld. This Robert founded the priory of Lanercost, in Cumberland, for the health of the soul of Hubert his father, Gracia his mother, his own, with all his ancestors and successors souls. And in 5 Stephen, gave a fine to the king of fifty-three pounds six shillings and eight pence, for livery of the manor of Hecton, &c. in Norfolk, which was of his wife's inheritance. In 15 Henry II. he paid two marks for two knights fees, (whereby he held Gillelland) upon levying the aid for the marriage of the king's daughter. And in 18 Henry II. was amerced forty shillings for scutage of those knights fees he held, in regard he was not in that expedition then made into Ireland. In 21 Henry II. he was sheriff of Cumberland; also in the same year governor of Carlisle, and held out a tedious siege against William, king of Scotland; but at length wanting provision, he was necessitated to come to this conclusion, viz. that if king Henry did not relieve him before Michaelmas, he should then render it. And dying without issue, all his estates went to

RANULPH DE VAUX, his brother, who had a son named

ROBERT DE VAUX, to whom, in the seventeenth of king John, the custody of the county of Cumberland and castle of Carlisle were committed. He had issue

HUBERT DE VAUX, who left an only daughter, named

MAUD, married to THOMAS DE MULTON, in the reign of king Henry III. whereby the barony came into that family; which was of great note in Lincolnshire and Cumberland; of which last they were hereditary foresters by descent from the Morvils, who enjoyed it from the Engains, by marrying the heir of that family. This Thomas de Multon received summons to march into Scotland with the northern lords in 42 Henry III. and dying in 55 Henry III. had issue

THOMAS DE MULTON, his son and heir, who died in the life-time of his mother, and left issue

THOMAS DE MULTON, who died A. D. 1290, whose son,

THOMAS DE MULTON, was in the Scottish wars in the service of Edward I. and II. and was summoned to parliament among the barons of this realm, from 25 Edward I. till 7 Edward II. inclusive; and left issue an only daughter and heir,

MARGARET, married to RANULPH DE DACRE, one of the most eminent persons in those parts, great-grandson to William de Dacre, sheriff of Cumberland, and governor of Carlisle, in the time of Henry III. The said Ranulph, performing his fealty to the king in 11 Edward III. (Margaret his wife then making proof of her age) had livery of her land; and dying in 12 Edward III. left four sons; of which William, Thomas, and Ranulph, died without issue; so that the honour, in 49 Edward III. descended to

HUGH, Lord DACRE, of Gillelland, the youngest son, who was then forty years of age. He was summoned to parliament from 50 Edward III. to 5 Richard II. inclusive; and was several times in the commission for guarding the West marches, and frequently in the French wars. He died in 7 Richard II. leaving

WILLIAM, Lord DACRE, his son and heir, who married Joan, daughter of William, earl Douglas, and dying A. D. 1399, left issue by his wife Ela, daughter of Alexander, lord Maxwell.

THOMAS DACRE, who in 8 Henry V. was made chief forester of Inglewood, in Cumberland; and in 2 Henry VI. was one of those lords that were appointed commissioners to treat with James I. king of Scotland, for a lasting peace. He had summons to parliament among the barons, from 14 Henry IV. to 36 Henry VI. and died January 15, in 39 Henry VI.

He had issue by Philippa, his wife, daughter of Ralph Nevill, earl of Westmorland, a daughter Joan, married to Thomas lord Clifford; and three sons,

1. Thomas Dacre, of whom presently.
2. Ranulph Dacre, slain at the battle of Tooton.
3. Sir Humphry Dacre, who was created, as will be observed in our account of his niece, baron of Gillelland, and married Maud, daughter of Sir Thomas Parr, knight. By her he was ancestor to four lords Dacre; his male line became extinct in 1634.

The eldest son,

this affair not being quite finished before her majesty's death, it was again laid before commissioners appointed in the succeeding reign; and she was then, in 2 James I. allowed and declared baroness Dacre; as is evident from the following extract of the commissioners determination:

"Whereas at the humble suit, by petition, exhibited unto his most excellent majesty, by Margaret, sole sister and heir of Gregory, late lord Dacre, and wife of Sampson Lennard, of Herstmonceux, in Suffex, for and in behalf of her interest, right, &c. to the barony of Dacre, upon the death of her said brother; it pleased his most excellent majesty to command and commit the hearing and determining thereof to us, Thomas, earl of Dorset, lord high treasurer of England; Lodowick, duke of Lenox; Charles, earl of Nottingham, lord high admiral of England; Thomas, earl of Suffolk, lord chamberlain; Edward, earl of Worcester, master of his majesty's horse; Henry, earl of Northampton, lord warden of the cinque ports: and we, according to his majesty's command, and our duties, having seriously, and with all requisite diligence, examined the pedigrees and descent of the said barony; and finding that one Hubert de Vaux, being an ancient baron of this realm, had issue Maud, his daughter and sole heir, married to Thomas de Moulton, to whom, and her posterity by him, the said dignity and honour descended, and was accordingly enjoyed; from whom lineally issued another Thomas de Moulton, who had one only daughter and heir, Margaret, married to Ranulph de Dacre; in which name the said barony, &c. continued, until the same fell upon Joan, the sole grand-child and heir of Thomas, lord Dacre, being married to Sir Richard Fynes, knight; in whose time, as well as by letters patent from king Henry VI. as by an award made by king Edward IV. the said honour and dignity was established and confirmed to the said Joan, and the heirs of her body; after whose decease, the same title, honour, and dignity, continued by divers descents in her issue, and is now lawfully descended to the said Margaret, the said petitioner, by the death of Gregory, late lord Dacre, without issue of his body, as sole sister and heir of the said Gregory, and cousin and sole heir of the body of the said Joan; do, by the privity and assent of his royal majesty, publish, declare, and adjudge, that the said Margaret ought to bear, have, and enjoy the name, state, degree, &c. of the said barony, to have and to hold to her, and to the heirs of her body, in as full and ample a manner, to all intents and purposes, as any of her ancestors enjoyed the same; and that the children of the said Margaret may, and shall have, take, and enjoy the place and precedence respectively, as the children of her ancestors barons Dacre have formerly had and enjoyed. In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names, and put our seals, the eighth of December, in the second year of our sovereign lord James, &c."

We must now treat of the family of Lennard, which for many generations held rank among those of the first note in Kent, and was long resident at Chevening, in that county; and we find

GEORGE LENNARD living there upwards of three hundred years ago, in the reign of king Henry VI. who, by Maud his wife, had issue,

JOHN LENNARD, who married Anne, daughter and heir of John Bird, of Middlesex; (another branch of which family, as it seems by their arms, which are the same, was seated at Littlebury, in Essex, in the reigns of Henry VIII. Elizabeth, &c. and thereof was that eminent civilian Sir William Bird, knight, dean of the arches, and judge of the prerogative court, Temple, James I.) by which Anne he had

JOHN LENNARD, his eldest son and heir, who took to wife Catharine, daughter of Thomas Weston, of Chepsted, in Kent; and lies buried under an altar-tomb of black marble, in Chevening church, on which, in brass, are the arms of Lennard, or, on a fess gules, three fleurs de lis of the first, quartering those of Bird, viz. quarterly, argent and sable, in the first a spread eagle of the second: and underneath,

"Hic jacet Johannes Lennard, generosus, qui obiit mense Julii, annis regnorum Regis et Reginae Philippi et Mariae secundo et tertio, ætatis 76."

He left issue two sons,

1. John Lennard.
2. William Lennard, who married Anne, daughter of John Perkins, of Richmond, in Surrey, descended, by heiresses, from the families of Chandos and Annelley.

JOHN LENNARD, the eldest son, (after a learned education) applied himself to the study of the law, under the care of his uncle Mr. Weston, one of the prothonotaries of the Common-pleas; wherein he so profited, that in the twenty-fifth year of his age, in 27 Henry VIII. he was made prothonotary of the nine shires in Wales, and clerk of the crown there; about which time he was admitted of Lincoln's-Inn, and called to the bar. In 37 Henry VIII. he obtained the office of second prothonotary of the Common-pleas; and king Edward VI. granted him a standing fee for the execution of his offices in North Wales; also enlarged his letters patent of the same. Queen Mary, in consideration of his faithful services, gave him a grant of the manor of Brafted, in Kent; and in the 4th of queen Elizabeth, he obtained the office of custos brevium of the Common-pleas, to which divers of great reputation before him had been advanced; in particular the lord Burleigh, who had it in the reigns of Edward VI. and queen Mary; likewise, in the third year of the reign of that queen, he obtained a grant for three lives of the manor of Knoll, in Kent, where he afterwards much resided; and in 13 Elizabeth, was sheriff of Kent. In the execution of his offices he was most upright and indefatigable.

He married Elizabeth, daughter of William Harman, of Crayford, in Kent, a family of consideration in those parts; by whom he had issue two sons,

1. Sampson Lennard, his successor.
2. Samuel Lennard, who was afterwards knighted, and settled himself at West-Wickham, in Kent, which he purchased about the latter end of queen Elizabeth's reign, and was ancestor of the Lennards of that place, baronets.

Also five daughters,

1. Mary, wife of Gifford Walsingham, son of Sir

Sir Thomas Walsingham, of Seadbury, in Kent; and was secondly married to Sir Thomas Gresham, of Titsey, in Surry.

2. Elizabeth, married to Sir Francis Eure, knight, second son to William, lord Eure.

3. Rachael, wife of Edward Nevill, lord Aber-gavenny.

4. Anne, married to Sir Marmaduke Darrell, cofferer to king James I.

5. Timothea, married to Sir Walter Covert, of Slaughtam, in Suffex.

